HONOLULU,NOV.9-(AP)-JAPANESE SOLDIERS IN THE PHILIPPINES SOLD GASOLINE, CIGARETTES AND CLOTHING TO FILIPINO GUERRILA FORCES THROUGH FIFTH COLUMNISTS WHO ACTED AS THE GO-BETWEENS, NAVY LT. DAVID RICHARDSON, CHIEF OF STAFF OF LEYTE GUERRILLAS, SAID TODAY.

RICHARDSON, OF MAYWOOD,CALIF., 26-YEAR OLD EXECUTIVE OFFICER OF A TORPEDO BOAT, WAS STRANDED IN THE PHILIPPINES AFTER THE AMERICAN SURRENDER IN 1942. HE BECAME AN OFFICER IN THE GUERRILLA ARMY AND HAD THE RANK OF MAJOR WHEN AMERICANS RETURNED TO LEYTE LAST MONTH.

SOME CIGARETTES SOLD BY THE JAPANESE, RICHARDSON SAID, WERE AMERICAN BRANDS WITH RED CROSS STAMPS UPON THEM, INDICATING THEY HAD BEEN SENT TO AMERICAN PRISONERS OF WAR HELD BY JAPANESE IN THE PHILIPPINES.

"JAP SOLDIERS STEAL FROM THEIR OWN COMMANDERS WHEN THEY GET A CHANCE," HE ADDED.

"SOME FIFTH COLUMNISTS DEALT FRANKLY WITH THE JAPANESE BUT WE HAD TO TOLERATE THEM BECAUSE THE JAPS PAID THEM IN GOODS WHICH WE NEEDED, SUCH AS RAZOR BLADES, TOOTHBRUSHES, SOAP AND (AMERICAN MILITARY) KAHKI."

IT IS DIFFICULT TO ESTIMATE HOW MANY JAPANESE WERE KILLED BY GUERRILLAS, BUT "I AM SURE THE LEYTE FORCE KILLED MORE THAN 1,000 AND THE OTHER ISLAND GUERRILLAS MUST HAVE BROUGHT THE SCORE UP TO 4,000."

RICHARDSON SAID MORE THAN 100 GUERRILLAS PROUDLY WORE JAPANESE UNIFORMS -- EVIDENCE THEY HAD KILLED A JAPANESE SOLDIER. THE ONLY WAY TO GET SUBSTANTIAL CLOTHING WAS TO KILL AN ENEMY.

ENEMY SUCCEEDS IN LANDING TROOPS AFTER BIG BATTLE

16 PLANES DOWNED

Yanks Advance 5 Miles Through Mountains West of Carigara.

Spencer

GENERAL MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Nov. 11—(AP) Japanese defenders of Leyte landed heavy reinforcements from four 5,000-ton cargo ships at Ormoc last night, but lost three of the transports and seven of the 15 accompanying destroyers in the effort.

Another troop-laden transport of 6,000 tons was repeatedly bombed in Mindoro strait on the western side of the Philippines, leaving it dead in the water and burning.

Number Not Disclosed

General MacArthur's daily communique gave no estimate of the number of enemy troops landed; but a headquarters spokesman said the number—which, judging from the size of the ships, could have been between 5,000 and 10,000 men—was in addition to the 35,000 men which the enemy was estimated to have in action yesterday.

The headquarters spokesman estimated the new reinforcements gave the Japanese as many men on Leyte now as they had when the American assault on the island began. The 40,000 to 45,000 Japanese are faced by a known four American divisions, whose strength has never been disclosed.

Appearance of the Japanese convoy touched off a vicious 24-hour aerial battle in which American dive and level bombers sank the enemy ships while fighters downed 16 of the defending enemy fighters and probably destroyed five more in the sky-filling dogfights above the bombers. Four American bombers and four fighters were lost.

However, the American aircraft apparently failed to arrive soon enough to prevent landing of the majority of the troops and materiel carried by the enemy transports. The spokesman admitted that a majority of both were probably landed safely.

Rain Aids Japanese

Associated Press Correspondent Richard Bergholz, writing from a Leyte air base, said a rain squall came to the aid of the Japanese convoy, preventing aerial attacks for several hours after the ships were discovered.

Later, the Japanese ships threw up a smoke screen, which also prevented high-level bombing accuracy. Shortly before noon, however, the smoke blew away and the American bombers were able to attack the ships from low level, with numerous sinkings resulting.

By this time, however, the enemy had succeeded in making his landings and the convoy was on its way back to the bases from which it had come—Luzon, Mindanao or Cebu.

The American attackers included shore-based Mitchell bombers and P-38 fighters.

American aircraft were credited with six of the sunken Japanese destroyers, and a PT boat sank the seventh.

In the ground fighting, an advance of up to five miles through mountains south and west of Carigara was credited by the daily communique to the First Cavalry Division, unmentioned in communiques for the last several days. The 24th Infantry Division, which has borne the brunt of recent fighting along the mountainous road from Pinamopoan southward toward the last Japanese strong hold at Ormoc, continued pushing forward, despite desperate Japanese counterattacks. The communique said enemy losses in these counterattacks were "severe."

On the hilly front near Patok the 96th Division ran into heavy opposition. Its rate of advance was not specified. The Seventh Division, last reported moving north on Ormoc after crossing Leyte from east to west far south of the main battle lines, was still unmentioned today as for the past several days.

Seen As Flanking Move

Apparently, the advance of the First Cavalry Division was a flanking move to support the 24th's painful drive down the Ormoc road. Japanese positions there on the hilltops have given the infantrymen vicious resistance all the way south from Pinamopoan to the U-shaped bend in the road at the village of Limon, last inhabited place mentioned in the communiques. Today's announcement did not place the First Cavalry advance accurately.

In a field dispatch from headquarters of the United States Sixth Army, Spencer Davis, Associated Press war correspondent, reported some temporary reverses for the Americans which underlined the severity of the fighting.

He said one unit of the 24th Division ran into trouble and had to retire. It was attempting a flank attack when it was caught in vicious enemy flanking fire. That was at the foot of a ridge.

On the ridge, First Cavalry troops had to fall back Thursday night from a high position. Yesterday it tried again and by nightfall the ridge was firmly in Yank hands.

Suggesting there is more in the report than meets the eye, Davis said the First Cavalry's five miles were gained "in an officially undisclosable direction."

There was neither optimism nor pessimism at headquarters at the announcement of the enemy's success in running the air and naval blockade of Ormoc. While the liberation forces far exceed the enemy's, the advantage of the surprise incursion of Leyte's eastern coast was about dissipated.

As the 24th infantry division and units of the dismounted First cavalry drove southward through the hilly fastnesses toward Ormoc, the 96th division pressed enemy remnants toward Ormoc from the east, in central Leyte. There still was no word in Friday's communique of the Seventh infantry division, last reported advancing along the coast south of Ormoc.

All signs pointed to a sanguinary battle for Ormoc, the enemy's escape port on Leyte's western coast. The Japanese gradually were being crowded into a confined area, raked day and night by heavy artillery and Allied warplanes.

Large fires, started by the bombardment, raged throughout Ormoc. Its usefulness as a supply base for the enemy troops fighting in the hills to the north had been "greatly decreased," MacArthur reported.

Japs Intensify Fight For

Leyte

NOV 11 1944

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 10 (AP)—(Via Army Radio) — Running a gantlet of harassing American planes and PT-boats, 35,000 veteran Japanese troops have joined the Sanguine battle for Leyte, Gen. Douglas MacArthur disclosed today in an announcement which indicates the battle for the Philippines may be long and hard.

The disclosure that despite all American efforts the Japanese had succeeded in replacing their heavy losses suffered in 22 days of fighting is having a sobering effect on the optimism which followed the comparatively easy initial landing.

Enough Troops Available

General MacArthur set forth the situation in a matter of fact manner. It is not viewed as pessimistic. He has at hand more than enough troops to handle the enemy forces now arrayed against him, but the general made it clear that the terrific advantage gained by the surprise landings on Leyte's east coast has about run its course.

The Japanese have been able to recover from the initial shock, but with only their west coast stronghold at Ormoc still remaining to them. But they recovered in time to make at least a determined stand for the remainder of Leyte.

Stalemate Broken

General MacArthur's communique today disclosed American troops broke a four-day stalemate in the battle for Ormoc "with substantial gains on a wide front," Ormoc is in flames as the result of artillery and aerial bombardment and its "usefulness to the enemy as a supply base has been greatly reduced."

American planes, in the air again after being grounded by a 100-mile-an-hour typhoon, strafed and bombed Japanese installations and shipping, destroying two barges and a coastal ship and damaging other enemy craft.

Strongpoints Taken

Elements of the United States 96th Infantry Division, advancing east into the foothills of the range east of Ormoc, captured enemy strongpoints as patrols pushed deep into the hills.

The value which the Japanese place on this rain-soaked island in the center of the Philippines group is shown further in the communique statement that "his 35th army is being deployed to this front."

The Nipponese's first opportunity to land reinforcements came October 25 when every American naval and air unit available was engaged in crippling the large Japanese fleet which came out from the north and south. There was no time to watch for Japanese reinforcements when the entire Philippine campaign was at stake in one naval battle.

Japs Got Breaks

They added to their reinforcements—in considerable numbers—November 1. They took advantage of the fact our airfields on Leyte had not been developed sufficiently to base medium and heavy bombers and the planes available were not enough to stop them.

A few days later they took quick advantage of a threatening tropical hurricane and pushed in still more fresh troops and equipment. These breaks probably won't occur for the Japanese again, but they were breaks that will multiply the price in American lives and money which must be paid to win initial stages of the battle for the Philippines.

Warning Given Previously

While the announcement of the reinforcements in such strength appeared abrupt, veiled warnings had been given in at least five communiques. No correspondent, however, was prepared for a total more than four times the highest, previously given estimate.

There was no mention in MacArthur's communique of the American Seventh Infantry Division, reported four days ago to be 12 miles, south of Ormoc after having pushed, across the narrow waist of Leyte to the west coast at Baybay.

10 SHIPS SUNK IN ORMOC BAY

American Pilots Tell Of Jap Convoy Battle

NOV 11 1944

An American Airbase on Leyte, Nov. 10 (AP)—American pilots came back to their bases tonight with stories of Japanese transports blowing up in 30 seconds, destroyers going up in clouds of smoke, Japanese bodies littering the surface of Ormoc Bay—and a score of three enemy transports definitely sunk and seven destroyers destroyed in a 24-hour attack by planes and PT boats.

The battle ended this afternoon when the remainder of the battered Japanese surface force fled westward toward Cebu.

Lightnings And Mitchells

It opened yesterday with Lightning fighters, each carrying two 1,000-pound bombs, teamed with a small force of Mitchell bombers in a low-level attack on the force, then coming toward Leyte, despite heavy anti-aircraft fire. The light force left one transport smoking.

(In a radio broadcast, NBC Reporter George Thomas Folster revealed that American air forces were using fighters for dive bombers because of a lack of planes built for that purpose. This lack has been felt, he said, ever since the navy turned over the Leyte air operation to army forces).

At dark, PT boats took up the attack where the light bomber force left off. One destroyer was sunk in a weird night-time surface battle.

U. S. Planes Up At Dawn

At dawn today, the American planes were up again—this time with Mitchell bombers in force. (Presumably some of these had been brought to Leyte overnight from rear areas, perhaps Morotai or Palau.) At first the American attack was held up by an adverse rain squall which blotted out the Japanese convoy. When this passed, the Japanese sent up a smoke screen to blot out their ships and to make low-level attacks impossible.

However, shortly, before noon, the clouds and smoke both blew away and the battle was on. Wave after wave of Mitchells screamed in to the attack. They hopped over the heavy flak screen set up by the warships and pressed their attacks home to the transports, standing stationary in Ormoc Bay. Then they climbed, turned and swept down again to chew at the enemy destroyers and destroyer-escorts.

"Bodies In The Bay"

Capt. Edward Maurer, of Nyack, N. Y., who led one unit of the Mitchells, described the scene:

"I'll never forget the sight of that transport. One minute you could see this huge ship sitting there behind the ack-ack screen, with troops diving for cover all over the deck. (This would indicate the transports probably had not completed their unloading.) The next second you could see a puff of flame, a geyser of smoke, and the transport was gone. I'll swear that shop went down in 30 seconds. All that was left was a column of smoke to 7,000 feet and an oil slick on the water, plus a lot of bodies in the bay."

"Blinking All Its Guns"

Major William Dunham, ace Thunderbolt fighter pilot from Nez Perce, Idaho, described the similar fate of a destroyer:

"Sitting up above, I saw this ship blinking all its guns on all decks as two Mitchells approached. Then there was a flash, a cloud of smoke and the warship exploded and sank."

Not once during the fight above the transport did enemy planes appear; but earlier in the day more than 20 Japanese fighters had hovered over the area until an attack began, and 16 were shot down. American losses were four bombers and four fighters.

PT Boats in Action

ABOARD A PT COMMAND TENDER OFF LEYTE, Nov. 10 (AP).—Throttled at full speed, two American patrol torpedo boats roared out of the darkness to within a few hundred yards of Japanese shipping which packed Ormoc Bay early this morning and scored torpedo hits on Japanese destroyers.

The PT's probed the enemy harbor for more than an hour. Crews reported there were fifteen destroyers and four troopships in port.

"We were just coming down the alley between Poro and Ponson islands in the Comote Sea off Ormoc when dead ahead of us three destroyers crossed our course," said Lieutenant Arthur Murray Preston, of Washington.

He rode a PT skippered by Lieutenant Joseph Beckmon, of Tacoma, Wash.

Lieutenant Melvin W. Haines, of Willamette, Ill., was in command of the other PT which attacked a transport.

"We swung hard to place our fish in line with the Japanese can (destroyer) and fired," Beckman said.

"We had closed to within a few hundred yards to make certain we didn't miss and we didn't. When the fish hit the destroyer there was a huge orange explosion almost like a phosphorous bomb. A great sheet of flames shot high into the air from the ship, then died down as black smoke billowed high over the whole destroyer."

Haines said as soon as the destroyer was attacked two others opened up against the PT's.

"One destroyer turned a blue-and-white searchlight on us and opened fire from five-inch guns," Haines said.

His PT was zigzagging through the water, but the destroyer kept the searchlight trained on the little craft for eighteen minutes. Only the PT's smoke screen enabled it to escape.

Two Enemy Counterattacks North of Bastion Repulsed.

DRIVE ON SAAR BASIN

U. S. Armored Divisions Rip German Lines in Fierce Attacks.

NOV 11 1944

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Saturday, Nov. 11.—(AP) The Third army's Winter offensive blazed over a 75-mile front yesterday and tanks and infantry, curving around little more than eight miles southeast of the great fortress of Metz, were within 21 miles of the frontier of the Saar basin, German industrial stronghold.

The Germans struck back at two places north of Metz during the morning, the first counterattacks since the offensive broke, but they were repulsed. At one point, the Moselle river bridgehead at Koenigsmacher the Americans scored a three-mile gain. Koenigsmacher is six miles from the nearest German frontier and ten miles from the Saar border.

Drive Beyond Buchy

At points along a 20-mile front southeast of Metz, where the big push appeared to be gaining the greatest momentum, the Americans now were more than eight miles beyond the starting point of three days ago without striking really strong resistance.

Deepest points of penetration were at Tragny, 14 miles southeast of Metz and five miles farther southeast at Fremery. Fremery is 21 miles from the Saar border and roughly 30 miles from Saarbrucken in the Siegfried line.

(The Germans southeast of Fremery were reported swinging armored troops into position in the forest of Chateau-Salins, possibly for a blow at the base of this salient, a front dispatch said. The infantry had penetrated 2 1-2 miles into the forest.

(This account said that west of Fremery the strategic height of Delme Ridge fell so quickly that Doughboys seized artillery and ammunition intact and turned some of the guns on the enemy.)

(A front dispatch said the Sixth armored division, the Second tank division to join at least six infantry divisions in the drive, pushed forward five miles and was now beyond Buchy, 10 miles southeast of Metz.)

Nazis Counterattack

The Germans struck back at two places north of Metz during the morning, the first counterattacks since the big push began three days ago, but by mid-afternoon the Doughboys had forged on an average of two to three miles, as much as seven miles beyond jump-off positions.

The front was ablaze from north to south with the exception of the strongly - fortified German bulge around fort-girdled Metz, an arc with an average radius of seven miles and now threatened with encirclement by Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's drive.

Censorship did not permit disclosure until late last night that this was a major offensive, an operation which was speared by veterans of the breakthrough in France. These veterans today were barely 30 miles from the Siegfried Line around Saarbrucken.

Saarbrucken's rail yards, feeding the Lorraine front, were under aerial attack in an attempt to seal off the battlezones—as in France—and the Germans seemed unable to bring up enough reserves to stay the offensive.

The 90th division, repulsing a counterattack led by bu two tanks at Koenigsmacher, 19 miles north of Metz, deepened their bridgehead to three miles across the Moselle river, which would place them within 10 miles of the Saar frontier.

The second counterattack rolled up in the long-quiet Maizieres-Les-Metz sector, five miles north of Metz, but the 95th division broke up the assault and drove on east toward the Moselle for sizeable gains.

(A front dispatch said on this part of the front, advanced elements now were within four and a half miles from Metz.)

To the south of Metz, the Germans appeared to be falling back, depending on road blocks and minefields to slow the Americans while withdrawing the bulk of their artillery to lines farther back.

Patton's Fifth infantry seized Louvigny, nine miles south of Metz, and pressed on to the northeast.

To the southeast the important German road center of Chateau-Salins, 25 miles from Metz, fell.

Capture Delme Ridge

A half dozen miles northwest the 80th division stormed and captured Delme ridge, a 1,200-foot height commanding territory for ten miles around and from which the Germans had been directing fire on American positions.

Delme itself, a town 18 miles southeast of Metz, last was reported still in German hands, but tanks of the Fourth armored division rumbling on beyond it were less than five miles from a vital feeder railroad from Metz to Sarrebourg after gains of some three miles.

Inside Germany, an indecisive struggle raged on in rain and sleet in the Hurtgen forest area southeast of Aachen.

Here the Doughboys of the U. S. First army made a 600-yard advance just southwest of the town of Hurtgen and held it in the face of counterblows, but a similar advance to the south later was lost.

West of Schmidt, 15 miles southeast of Aachen, American troops moved 300 yards across a snowy battlefield, slowly cleaning out pillboxes.

Positions remained unchanged at Vossenack, two miles to the northwest, where Doughboys dug into the town ignored a German ultimatum to surrender which was delivered by loudspeaker.

Only artillery duels were reported on the Western Holland front, where the British and Germans exchanged shots across the Maas river. The Allies now are drawn up solidly along the south bank of the river.

(A dispatch from the Dutch Island of Walcheren, to the west of this front, said the last 300 shivering defenders, cold and hungry, were brought out by rowboat, ending all resistance there.)

In the long-besieged port of Dunkerque, artillery fire was reported along the 25-mile perimeter of the German defenses, and rocket-firing planes attacked enemy gun positions.

On the U. S. Seventh Army front, 15 miles south of the southern edge of the Third Army battle zone, the Germans brought up reinforcements to forward positions, apparently fearing the offensive would spread to that quarter.

Nazi Prisoners Mount

In the Third Army fighting, the count of prisoners reached 1,500 by noon, and while some remained to be counted it still was a small bag considering the scope of operations.

To the south and east of Metz, a five-mile sector of the line which had been inactive sprang to life, welding two original thrusts into one broad effort.

The assault lines south of Metz now extend from a point some nine miles below the city all the way down to the Third Army's right flank in the area of Luneville. The lines to the north reach from a point five miles north to the French-German-Luxembourg frontier.

The Germans seemed to be more immediately concerned with the northern movement, for they also attacked a second bridgehead across the Moselle at Haute-Ham, 2 1-2 miles southwest of the one at Koenigsmachen.

(An Associated Press dispatch from the front declared the Koenigsmachen bridgehead, besides being deepened to three miles, had been broadened to six miles, indicating that the two bridgeheads may have merged.)

Around Chateau-Salins, near the southern end of the Third Army front, advanced elements fought a mile into the forest of the same name to the northwest once a German concentration point.

PARTS OF EIGHT U. S. DIVISIONS BATTLE ENEMY

Patton Throws 200 Tanks Against Germans in One Area of Front.

CHATEAU-SALINS IS CAPTURED

Yanks' Offensive Is Sweeping Toward Saar Basin After Six Weeks of Waiting.

London, Nov. 10 (A. P.). —The United States Third Army's winter offensive, passing beyond the trenches of the 1918 armistice, closed to within four and a half miles north and eight and a half miles southeast of the Germans' French fortress city of Metz today. Gains netted up to five miles and toppled several towns and villages including the important hub of Chateau-Salins.

Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton Jr. threw in additional armored forces into the drive which, finding the Germans foot-tied, had registered up to ten miles in a three-day drive on a fifty-five-mile arc on both sides of the fortress city.

The Sixth Armored Division leapfrogged infantry elements which had spearheaded the push northeast from Pont-a-Mousson, and reached well beyond Buchy in a five-mile advance from Cheminot and Louvigny. Buchy is eight and one-half miles southeast of Metz and only ten miles from the Metz-Saarbrucken road to Germany, Metz's chief rearward communication route.

The offensive broke out in a new spot at Maizieres-les-Metz, five miles north of Metz, where the Ninety-fifth Infantry Division spearheaded an advance to within four and one-half miles of the iron-ringed fortress.

Yanks Widen Bridgehead.

Farther north, near the Luxembourg border, the Ninetieth Infantry Division widened and deepened its bridgehead over the Moselle to a length of six and one-half miles and a depth of three miles.

The Germans said that Gen. Patton had poured heavy forces into the attack, sweeping northeastward toward the Saar and toward the rear of Metz, and said huge tank battles were raging, with 200 American tanks encountered at one place.

Dispatches from the front line said that Gen. Patton was now using parts of six infantry and two armored divisions in the thrusts, including the newly mentioned Ninety-fifth Infantry commanded by Major-Gen. Perry Twaddle, a part of the Twentieth Corps and the newly activated Sixth Armored under Major-Gen. Robert W. Grow of the Twelfth Corps.

Meanwhile on the First United States Army front southeast of Aachen doughboys struggled forward 600 yards through rain and sleet just southwest of Hurtgen and 300 yards toward Schmidt, highwater mark of the American advance toward the Roer and the Rhine. But a similar advance of 600 yards due south of Hurtgen was thrown back to its starting point.

On this front the Germans resorted to propaganda broadcasts exhorting their troops to fight and reminding them that tomorrow was the day in history for German arms when the Kaiser's forces quit in 1918.

Artillery pounded on both sides of the Maas (Meuse) in Holland. The enemy showed nervousness at the possibility of a new offensive from British and Canadians now drawn up on a solid assault front along that barrier to North Holland.

The Third Army drive, sprung on Wednesday without fanfare, had now developed into a real offensive from its springboard in the grass-grown trenches of 1918, where the Doughboys of 1944 had dug their foxholes in six weeks of waiting.

But it was not until late yesterday that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's Supreme Headquarters in Paris had permitted the drive to be called an offensive.

Gen. Patton's attack, swinging like a barn door from a hinge at a point nine miles south of fortress Metz, moved across sodden forests, hills and valleys in a northeasterly direction toward Germany's industrial Saar border twenty-five miles away and threatened to cut across the rear communications of Metz.

North of Metz an enveloping movement was in progress at points eighteen and twenty-two miles north of the city where bridgeheads across the Moselle were deepened by three miles. Here the Germans put in their first sizable counter-attack against Patton's drive now in its third day. But the enemy infantry and two tanks which tried to halt the Ninetieth American Infantry division were rocked back on their heels, despite German claims to the recapture of Konigsmacker in this area just below the Luxembourg border. Haute-Ham, only eleven miles from the Saar Basin was captured by the Americans.

A trail-blazing onslaught yesterday by 1,300 United States heavy bombers and hundreds of dive-bombers which smashed at German front line gun positions and strong points, as well as rail and road bottlenecks immediately to the rear, apparently had largely succeeded in sealing off the battle zone.

Thunderbolt pilots knocked out fifteen German tanks among a concentration twenty-five miles northeast of Nancy in this assault.

South of Metz and northeast of Nancy Gen. Patton's slashing attack was reminiscent of the initial stages of his whirlwind sweep through Normandy and Brittany to the Moselle last July and August.

Here German resistance continued light to moderate, with the Germans apparently withdrawing behind a screen of road blocks and mines and endeavoring to retrieve most of their artillery for emplacement farther back in parts of the old French Maginot Line.

Heavy rains of the first two days of the drive eased off overnight, giving promise of a repetition of the aerial onslaught of yesterday.

The American Fourth Armored Division, veterans of the St. Lo breakthrough in Normandy, advanced three more miles beyond Delme for a total gain of ten miles in the offensive, and crossed heavily gunned Delme Ridge just northwest of Chateau-Salins.

319th Takes Delme Ridge

While the 319th Regiment of the 80th Infantry Division captured Delme ridge, the Fourth Division ranged on to the vicinity of Hannocourt and Fonteney, three miles beyond, and the 35th Infantry Division slugged its way into the forest of Chateau-Salins and captured Chateau-Salins itself, three miles southeast of the wood.

Before its fall, Chateau-Salins, a sizable town controlling a network of roads fanning out northeast toward the Saar, was almost encircled by other elements which pushed across the Chateau-Salins-Sarrebourg road.

Gains Beyond Cheminot

Here, supreme headquarters said, Morville-les-Vic, two miles southeast of Chateau-Salins, was reached, and a field dispatch reported that the drive continued north to the vicinity of Hampont, three miles northeast of Chateau-Salins.

North of the Chateau-Salins sector and nine miles south of Metz, the Fifth Infantry Division's Second Regiment occupied Louvigny in a three-mile advance beyond Cheminot, and overcame a pocket of resistance at a rail crossing a mile and a quarter east of the village.

Below Gen. Patton's sector the Seventh Army of Lieut.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch continue to give support on his flank, capturing the village of Desfosse in the Meurthe Valley, five miles northwest of St. Die in the Saales Pass through the Vosges, and reaching the eastern edge of the forest of Domainia de Champ on the approaches to Fraize in Bonhomme Pass.

Capture Delme Ridge.

Thezey St. Martin, fourteen miles northeast of Nancy, was captured by the Second Regiment of the Fifth Infantry Division in the advance across Delme Ridge.

Capture of Delme Ridge, a four-mile-long mass of 1,200-foot hills, gave the Americans a chance to look down the throats of the Germans for a radius of ten miles or more and placed American armor within twelve miles of the Metz-Saarbrucken road, main rear communication line for the Metz fortress ring.

Prisoners taken in the drive mounted to 1,514.

In the First Army sector southeast of Aachen, Supreme Headquarters reported bitter fighting as American troops consolidated and improved their hold in the village of Vossenack and punched out small gains in local attacks west of Schmidt and southwest of Hurtgen.

Maas Mop-Up Finished

Supreme headquarters officially proclaimed the end of resistance south of the Maas in Holland, where the enemy bridgehead south of the Moerdijk bridges was wiped out, and on Walcheren Island at the mouth of the Schelde.

Artillery barrages were bursting on both sides of the Maas as the Germans watched for attempts of Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery to cross the barrier to Rotterdam, 16 miles to the north.

Patton to Mark 59th Birthday

LONDON, Nov. 10 (AP)—The advances made today by the United States Third Army around Metz were in the nature of a birthday present for its commander, Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton Jr. He will be 59 years old tomorrow.

42d Reported in Action

LONDON, Saturday, Nov. 11 (AP)—The Berlin radio said late last night the famous Rainbow Division, the Forty-second, had been thrown into the American offensive in the Metz sector of the western front. There has been no such announcement from Allied sources.

Nazi V-2 Attacks on England Confirmed by Churchill

LONDON, Nov. 10—(AP) Prime Minister Churchill confirmed today that England is under attack by the German long-range V-2 rocket, announcing that it flies through the stratosphere up to a height of between 60 and 70 miles and then plummets to earth with a ton of explosives travelling at a speed faster than sound.

Casualties and damage, he told a sober House of Commons, "have so far not been heavy," although the attack has been under way "for the last few weeks." Churchill said "a number" of the new rockets had landed at widely-scattered points in England.

Churchill pointed out that the speed of the V-2—estimated by other sources at between 700 and 1,000 miles an hour—outstripped sound. Therefore there was no way of giving sufficient public warning, but he said that "there is, however, no need to exaggerate the danger."

"The scale and effect of these attacks have not hitherto been significant," he added.

The German radio said tonight that the V-2 was now being fired against Paris and the harbor installations at Antwerp, great Belgian port through which the Allied command plans to supply the Western front armies.

The Prime Minister's statement came two days behind a German High command announcement that London was being bombarded by V-2, and an all-out Nazi propaganda campaign on the weapon's effectiveness.

Churchill, spokesman for a people who stood up to the fire bomb and robot bomb attacks, declared: "The use of this weapon is another attempt by the enemy to attack the morale of our civil population in the vain hope that he may, somehow, by this means stave off the defeat which faces him in the field."

At its estimated speed the missile would require but a few minutes to leave its launching base, rise 60 to 70 miles into space, and drop haphazardly upon some unsuspecting area.

The Germans broadcast over every home network, "It is true V-2 by itself could never decide the war in Germany's favor, but we never made such an assertion."

Churchill disclosed that some of the rockets had been fired from the Dutch island of Walcheren, which is now in Allied hands.

"Other areas from which rockets have or can be fired against this country will doubtless be overrun by our forces in due course," he said.

The Prime Minister added a note of warning that this might not end the attacks, for he said there was no certainty that their range might not be increased by reducing the weight of the warhead or by other methods.

The people of Britain have known for some time that scattered areas have been under desultory bombardment by rockets, and V-2 became just another Nazi nuisance to the majority. Many of the early explosions were explained as "gas main explosions."

"The rocket contains approximately the same quantity of high explosives as the flying bomb," said Churchill. "However it is designed to penetrate rather deeper before explosion. This results in somewhat heavier damage in the immediate vicinity above the crater, with rather less blast effect around it."

Churchill's disclosure came two days after the German High command first mentioned the bombardment of London by V-2. He told Commons that the reason for official silence was to avoid giving information of value to the enemy.

He described the German radio's "highly colored accounts of attacks on this country" as statements reflecting what the German government would have the German people believe in "the desperate need to afford them some encouragement.

V-2 has been described by neutral sources as a "flying telegraph pole" without ordinary bomb fins and weighing about 15 tons at the takeoff. Some German commentaries have said it could be used to bombard the United States as well as England. It has been said that launching sites were built in the Hartz mountains, 450 miles from London, although the present ranges are reported only about 300 miles.

Londoners who are defying V-2 as they defied other German attempts to harm them were given an eye-filling sight a few hours before Churchill spoke.

Heavy bombers off on a foray filled the sky over the city as they gathered at a rendezvous point, the roar of their motors drowning out city noises. People gathered on street corners to watch the mighty aerial parade.

V-2 Rockets Hit England, Says Churchill

London, Nov. 10 (AP)—The Germans for weeks have been plunging V-2 rockets into England at a speed faster than sound and from arcs 70 miles high, but thus far have caused little damage, Prime Minister Churchill announced today in Commons.

The Germans said V-2 and the earlier V-1 flying robot bomb were being used against both Paris and Antwerp as well as England, and boasted that the vengeance weapons would make the hard-won Belgian port "unsuitable for unloading troops and materiel on a major scale." The intact docks of Antwerp are depended upon by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower to supply his offensive into Germany.

"The scale of the attacks has not hitherto been significant," Churchill said.

Warhead Buried Deeply

Casualties have been light, largely because the warhead of approximately a ton buries itself so deeply into the earth when it lands at speeds exceeding 700 miles per hour.

Where the rockets were coming from was not clear. The Germans said the Allies never would find the camouflaged sites; Churchill said some were found on the captured Dutch island of Walcheren.

German propagandists pulled out all stops; they insisted that Churchill "had to admit" the existence of V-2; that it was not the last secret weapon; they hinted direly that the United States might feel its explosive weight. Indeed, Churchill said the range might be increased.

3,000-Mile-Per-Hour Estimate

Military men said thus far the rocket, which is dubbed the "Flying Telephone Pole" because of its elongated shape, had been a flop. The whole contraption weighs about 15 tons and has a range of more than 250 miles, but carries only about a ton of explosives. Some extreme estimates of its speed run to 3,000 miles an hour. Swedish reports said the rocket's speed and trajectory made accuracy impossible.

Churchill termed highly colored the accounts of the V-2, broadcast by the Germans in the past two days, and said they indicated the Germans were in "desperate need" to give the home front encouragement.

The bombardment with rockets was described by the Prime Minister as less effective than the robot bombs.

Launched From Airplanes

Before the Allied armies overran launching sites of the winged bombs, the Germans inflicted heavy damage on London and southern England. The Germans now launch winged bombs from airplanes flying out over the North Sea.

Churchill, disclosing that Walcheren was one Dutch island from which rockets have been fired, said other sites would be overrun by General Eisenhower's armies.

German Announcement

The Germans announced two days ago they had been using the V-2 rockets against London.

No official statement about the attack had been issued before, Churchill said, in order not to give information to the enemy.

Churchill said the rockets contained approximately the same quantity of explosive as the flying bomb, which caused heavy damage in London during the summer, but that the rocket penetrated more deeply before exploding.

"We cannot be certain that the enemy will not be able to increase the range of the rockets," he said. "There is, however, no need to exaggerate the danger."

Aimed To Break Morale

Churchill described the rocket bombardment as another attempt by the enemy to attack the morale of the civil population.

The rockets cause somewhat heavier damage in the immediate vicinity of the crater but rather less extensive blast around the neighborhood where they land than the flying bombs, he disclosed.

Defending the Government's censorship until now of stories on the rocket bomb, Churchill declared:

"The Government has been confirmed in this course by the fact that until two days ago the enemy made no mention of the weapon in communiques, but last Wednesday they made an official announcement followed by a number of highly colored accounts.

For German People

"I do not propose to comment on it except to say that the statements in this announcement are a good reflection of what the German Government would wish their people to believe," said the Prime Minister.

Churchill pointed out that "no reliable or sufficient public warning can in present circumstances be given" against a rocket-bomb attack.

Churchill said the Germans might increase the rocket range by "reducing the weight of the warhead, or by other methods."

Question Of Starting Places

The Prime Minister was asked whether the starting place was known. He replied:

"Naturally this is a matter upon which much attention is concentrated. Should satisfactory intelligence be received, no doubt appropriate measures will be taken."

The Berlin radio said the Germans never had contended that V-2 was a "war winning weapon," but that it was an entirely new weapon produced despite "the ordeal of the heaviest air warfare unleashed against us."

Trails Flame

The rocket used against widely scattered parts of Engalnd thus far is slender and about 50 feet long and it trails flame. Because it travels faster than sound, it strikes silently.

Censorship until today had bottled up all mention of V-2. Even now it may not be told where the rockets have landed or just what damage has been caused. V-2 is the popular version for German term "Vergeltungswaffen" No. 2.

Stockholm correspondents in Berlin have reported the Nazis admitting disappointment in the rocket because of its inaccuracy, the difficulty in controlling the weapon and the danger to launching crews. Originally, the rocket was to have carried ten tons of explosives, but the high mortality rate at launching sites caused the Nazis to cut the warhead to a ton, about the same as in V-1.

From Dutch Coast

The London Daily Mail correspondent in Stockholm said all rockets fired to date at England were from special sites along the Dutch coast north of Rotterdam. He reported that the Germans were striving to perfect V-3, an atom bomb, and were experimenting with a smaller type of V-2 which the Germans asserted could be fired as far as the United States.

Rockets are oversized versions of July Fourth sizzlers. They are believed to span the North Sea in the stratosphere, where there are no troublesome cross-winds.

Field dispatches have reported the use of V-2 rockets in the battlezone, but correspondents indicate they were too inaccurate to have military value. V-1 robots also have been used at the front and against several captured cities in Belgium, Holland and France.

Smaller Rockets

Rockets fired at troops were reported to be slightly smaller than those used against England. One dud weighed 13 tons and had 1,600 pounds of explosives in its snout when it was found behind United States lines in France.

Many of the rockets which have reached England have landed in open country; some have come down in the sea; others have burst in the air, scattering fragments far and wide.

While damage has been somewhat heavier than that of robot bombs in the immediate area of the crater, the effect of the rocket explosives has been felt over much less extensive areas.

Meanwhile, the London Daily Mail expressed the opinion that shortages of fuel and disruption of German home industries have prevented the Nazis from launching a colossal assault with their No. 2 "secret weapon," the V-2.

Large-Scale Plans

Sifting of reports from Stockholm and German-inspired rumors from other neutral capitals leads to the belief that the Germans planned originally to unload as much as 6,000 tons of high explosives on London in a 12-hour period.

These are the conclusions about the V-2 weapon, as drawn from a study of neutral reports:

It has a range of between 200 and 300 miles, is possibly rocket-propelled, using some fuel such as liquid oxygen or alcohol. It could reach a top speed of 3,000 miles an hour, faster than anything known, above the earth's atmosphere. On hitting the ground its speed might be 2,000 miles an hour.

It is possibly remotely controlled by radio on its upward flight, but is free of control on the downward flight.

Experimenting In 1942

It is believed in London that the Nazis began experimenting with their V-2 weapon as far back as 1942, when the Royal Air Force hit the Peenemunde research station on the Baltic.

Reports from all sources indicate that the Germans' V (vengeance) weapons have not lived up to their boasted reputation, and that Hitler's hopes of turning the tide of war with the V-2 are futile.

Meanwhile, flying bombs winging in from the North Sea continued to take their toll. London had a brief alert last night as houses were blasted in a residential district, and one robot hit a factory, killing three men. A salvation Army hall also was wrecked.

Churchill's Statement on V-2

LONDON, Nov. 10 (AP).—The complete text of Prime Minister Churchill's statement today in the House of Commons follows:

Last February I told Parliament that the Germans were preparing to attack this country by means of long-range rockets, and I referred again to the possibility of this form of attack in my statement in this House on July 6.

For the last few weeks the enemy has been using his new weapon, the long-range rocket, and a number have landed at widely scattered points in this country.

In all, the casualties and damage have so far not been heavy, though I am sure the House will wish me to express our sympathy with the victims of these attacks.

No official statement about the attack has hitherto been issued. The reason for this silence was that any announcement might have given information useful to the enemy, and we were confirmed in this course by the fact that until two days ago the enemy had made no mention of this weapon in his communiques.

Last Wednesday an official announcement followed by a number of highly colored accounts of attacks on this country was issued by the German high command.

I do not propose to comment upon it except to say the statements in this announcement are a good reflection of what the German government would wish their people to believe and of their desperate need to afford them some encouragement.

May I mention a few facts:

The rocket contains approximately the same quantity of high explosive as the flying bomb. However, it is designed to penetrate rather deeper before explosion. This results in somewhat heavy damage in the immediate vicinity above the crater, with rather less extensive blast effect around it.

The rocket flies through the stratosphere, going up to sixty to seventy miles, and outstrips sound. Because of its high speed no reliable or sufficient public warning can in present circumstances be given.

There is, however, no need to exaggerate the danger. The scale and effect of these attacks have not hitherto been significant.

Some rockets have been fired at us from the Island of Walcheren. This is now in our hands. Other areas from which rockets have or can at present be fired against this country will doubtless be overrun by our forces in due course.

We cannot, however, be certain that the enemy will not be able to increase the range, either by reducing the weight of the warhead or by other methods; or, on the other hand, can he be certain that any new launching area which he may establish farther back may not also in turn be overrun by the advancing Allied armies.

The use of this weapon is another attempt by the enemy to attack the morale of our civil population in the vain hope that he may somehow by this means stave off the defeat which faces him in the field. Doubtless the enemy had hoped by his announcement to induce us to give him information which he had failed to get otherwise. I am sure the House, the press and the public will refuse to oblige him in this respect.

Nazis Expect V-2 to Nullify Antwerp's Value

Say Rocket Will Make Port Useless, Threaten to Use It on Battlefields, Too

LONDON, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Germans asserted tonight that their V-2 rocket would make Antwerp useless as a supply port for the Allies, and that Allied lines also would be targets.

"Craters in London show the effects of single V-2 shells," Dr. Max Krull, a German military commentator, said in a Berlin broadcast. "What it will mean to Antwerp, once the process of exact aiming is completed, is salvos of V-2.

"Unloading on any large scale will be completely impossible, because Antwerp is nearer, and aiming will be more exact.

"At the same time, a clear picture of future employment of long-distance weapons against front areas can now be obtained. A single shot has a bigger effect than several artillery salvos."

The Berlin radio said earlier that the Germans never had contended that V-2 was a "war-winning weapon," but that it was an entirely new weapon produced despite "the ordeal of the heaviest air warfare unleashed against us."

German broadcasts said V-2 launching sites were so well camouflaged that Allied flyers could not find them.

Antwerp Facilities Unhurt Lately

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS Allied Expeditionary Force, Paris Nov. 10 (AP).——upreme headquarters declined tonight to comment on the German assertion that the port of Antwerp was being made useless by V-1 and V-2 attacks. The latest official statement on the condition of Antwerp's harbor facilities said they still were as intact as when that Belgain city was taken by the Allies.

There has been no official report that the V-2 is being used against Allied positions on the western front. V-1 flying bombs are known to have soared over the American 1st Army front, but it never has been stated whether they fell in Europe.

V-2 Rocket At Night Likened To Explosion Of The Moon

By HENRY B. JAMESON

London, Nov. 10 (AP)—The new V-2 rockets fall like shooting stars and although they are nothing compared to the buzz bombs as a terror weapon, they make a whale of a bang that can be heard for ten miles.

One man who lived through such an explosion less than 50 yards away said "I didn't hear any noise whatever before the explosion—then I thought it was the end of the world."

Another man, describing the same incident, said a "terrific explosion" was preceded by a noise like thunder. Others say the rockets looked like great balls of fire, and a few even claim to have been close enough to call them "great black arrows."

Like Moon Exploding

The first one I saw at night in the country reminded me of the moon exploding. There was a brilliant flash, followed by a jolting bang.

Many persons have reported hearing double explosions, one at the time of the flash in the sky and a second presumably when the rocket landed.

While censorship regulations still forbid publication of detailed damage reports, the "flying telegraph poles" so far have been too inaccurate to be of much military value.

Many narrow escapes have been disclosed, however, since the secret of "vergeltungswaffen" No. 2 was launched.

One Killed, Two Escape

In one incident a Mrs. French, an employe of a bakery which was demolished, was having tea with the proprietor and his wife after the shop had closed. "Something seemed to fall on top of us," said the proprietor. "Mrs. French was killed instantly, but my wife and I, sitting on the other side of the table, were only badly cut."

An elderly woman walking along a sidewalk when a rocket fell near by saw "a vivid flash"—and the next moment found herself sitting in the middle of the street, hardly scratched.

Houses, schools, hospitals churches, public houses and other buildings have been among those destroyed or damaged in rocket attacks.

From 30 To 50 Feet Long

Eyewitnesses who have seen them fall estimate their length from 30 to 50 feet and from two to four feet in diameter, with a warhead about the same size as the flying bomb.

"I saw a black cloud of smoke and then what appeared to be a very bright star traveling fast," said George Matthews, who saw his neighbor's house demolished. "Then later there was an orange-and-red explosion which appeared to have two distinct reports."

Frank Turner said it was almost a minute from the time he saw "something in the sky that looked like a red football" until he was rocked on his heels by an explosion.

Many Parts Are Recovered

Many pieces of exploded rockets have been recovered in scattered sections of the country.

Some parts of mechanism, from which experts may be able to piece together a composite picture of the rocket, also have been found.

Twisted, odd-looking pieces of machinery littered the ground near the scene of several explosions. Tough white metal, some in rolls and some in flat sheets a yard square, have been picked up. There were also numerous lengths of metal chain like those on the wheels of oversized bicycles: curiously shaped blocks of wood and bright red iron piping apparently from the tail section resembling gutters with many slotted holes.

Rockets May Transform Fighting in Future Wars

Interplanetary Society Head Gives Views on V-2's

LONDON, Nov. 10 (AP).—Professor A. M. Low, former president of the British Interplanetary Society, said today that Great Britain experimented with military rockets before the Germans developed the V-2, and "it is most unfortunate that the rockets are not traveling in the other direction."

"We far too often invent a weapon and then allow it to be developed out of the country," said Low. He added that the Interplanetary Society, interested in developing rocketry, was looked upon as an "association of cranks trying to go to the moon."

He predicted: "In the near future armies within 300 or 500 miles of each other will be within range, and that is going to alter the entire attitude toward war."

He visualized a war fought eventually at a range of 1,000 miles, with the course of rockets followed by electrical instruments.

England Fights Flying Bombs

LONDON, Saturday, Nov. 11 (AP)—The Germans launched a sharp series of flying bomb attacks on southern England from aircraft over the North Sea during the night and early morning hours, but ground gunners and fighters destroyed many of them.

The whole sky along the coast was aglow amid deafening explosions. Seemingly heavier explosions also were heard in the distance.

MARCHING IN SAME ARMISTICE LOCALE

Yank Finds Himself Again Slogging The Metz Road

By KENNETH L. DIXON

On the Third Army Front in France, Nov. 10 (AP)—Armistice Day 26 years ago tomorrow was a cold and rainy one around Metz, just as it has been lately.

The 35th Division was where it is now, and it was attacking, just as it is now.

Down the road to Metz on that day a generation ago marched the 137th Infantry Regiment under orders to assault the fortress city, which never had been taken by direct attack.

Word Swept Down The Line

That knowledge and the rain and mud didn't do much to make Pfc. Paul N. Hill happy. Then a 19-year-old mortarman, the Horton (Kan.) boy was wondering as they marched through San Pigny whether casualties would be as heavy as at St. Mihiel.

Suddenly the word swept down the line, man to man, at first in an unbelieving undertone, and then—when somebody said it was official—the undertone developed into wild yell:

"Armistice! Armistice!"

"We just stopped marching then and there," recalled Staff Sergeant Paul N. Hill, back now where he was 26 years ago.

26 Years Ago

Now a mess sergeant of Company E, same regiment, same division, he stood at almost the same spot as in 1918—and he is just one of many for whom history is repeating itself.

On Armistice Day, 1918, the American lines were drawn up about 11 miles south of Metz. Today they are about nine miles south.

In those days the Allies were deeper into the Vosges Mountains than the Allied armies southwest of this front are today, but then the Germans never got so far in the first World War, either.

But elsewhere all similarity to the positions then and now cease. Then, the Americans' total front amounted to 83 miles. Now, the Third Army alone is on the offensive along a front nearly as long.

Situation Today

There is an American army in the south, and another in the north, fighting now inside Germany some 28 miles from Cologne on the Rhine. The Germans quit last time when the Allies still were in Belgium 130 miles from Cologne.

Now here it is 26 years later and Hill again is in a muddy, miserable, shell-shattered village on the Western front.

The war also has a familiar ring for Brig. Gen. Theodore Futch, 49, Monroe, N. C., 35th Division artillery commander.

No Armistice Today

In 1918 he was a first lieutenant in a Third Division field artillery brigade which was in the Argonne Forest. A general's aide, he heard about the armistice 24 hours ahead of time.

"That night," he said, "we were getting a pretty heavy barrage in our sector and suddenly—knowing the war would be over in a few hours—I found my hand shaking almost every time a shell landed near by."

Today the shells are coming over again, but there won't be any armistice at 5 A. M. tomorrow.

U. S., Allies Pay Tribute Today To Soldiers, Living and Dead

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

This nation and its Allies pay tribute today to the soldiers, known and unknown, of this and other wars, who fought or fight that freedom might prevail.

Although enemies once thought subdued still plague the world, the significance of Armistice Day, Nov. 11, 1918, will be recalled in the midst of another war to honor the victorious warriors of that struggle and to say a prayer for those who carry on their battles now.

President Roosevelt will journey to Arlington National cemetery, where America's Unknown Soldier lies sleeping in a marble tomb on the sloping banks of the Potomac, to look on as his aides lay a wreath upon the not-forgotten stone, guarded day and night by armed sentries.

Patriotic organizations also will participate in ceremonies at the Unknown Soldier's tomb marking the 26th anniversary of that November day when the Allies and Germany brought an end to a four years' war and a world went delirious at the thought of peace.

Paris, torn since then by the turmoil of another war, will not forget that distant Armistice day either.

Today American Army and Navy forces will join with French and Allied troops in a massive parade.

And on the tomb of France's Unknown Soldier, General Charles de Gaulle will lay a wreath, shortly before cannon signalize the beginning of a minute's silence throughout France.

But not all of France will be stilled.

For on battlefields which knew the slosh of Doughboys' boots in the last war, men fight on again and look to the day when the peoples of the world may be able to settle all their difficulties, and resolve all their aspirations, without resort to war.

BOMBERS TURN TO AID HODGES

Cologne And Frankfurt Raided In Face Of Heavy Flak

London, Nov. 10 (AP)—American heavy bombers made a quick change of pace today, attacking military targets and industrial plants around Cologne and Frankfurt in support of the Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' American First Army after bombing in front of the Third Army's new offensive yesterday.

About 1,400 American planes were unopposed from the air as they swarmed over Cologne, delivering the city its 165th raid of the war.

Despite the 16 times Cologne was bombed last month, German anti-aircraft batteries hurled a dense cloud of flak into the paths of the 750 Liberators and Fortresses and 600 Mustangs and Thunderbolts that went into the Ruhr through cold soupy skies.

27 Bombers Missing

From the day's strike 27 bombers and seven fighters are missing, although several were believed to have landed in France.

Airfields that cannot be identified until later, an Eighth Air Force spokesman said, were bombed heavily, many for the first time as the operative strips in the area have all been built since the Luftwaffe was driven from France.

"These fields were constructed to guard the Ruhr," the spokesman said, adding that many were primarily for jet-propelled fighters.

Fighter-bombers dropped their wing and belly tanks and worked over communication lines at Nurnberg, Ludwigslust and Nienburg, all in northwestern Germany.

30 Locomotives Destroyed

Dive-bombing and strafing by Lightnings and Thunderbolts netted the destruction of 30 locomotives, 150 railroad cars, six oil cars and 100 motor vehicles. Five aircraft also were destroyed on the ground.

One group broke down a railroad bridge near Nienburg and another got the railway marshalling yards in Ludwigslust.

A flak barrage, described as "meager to intense" met the bomber fleet over Frankfurt's airplane factories and other industrial plants. Fighter opposition was lacking here also.

Transport targets in Holland and western Germany were attacked last night by Mosquitos of the RAF.

U. S. FLYERS BOMB JET PLANE BASES

London, Nov. 10 (A. P.).—Some 1,350 American planes attacked the Cologne and Frankfurt regions today, bombing jet plane bases, transport facilities and industrial plants.

Flights of 750 flying Fortresses and Liberators, escorted by 600 fighters, fanned out in several directions and struck most heavily at Cologne, upon which great ruin already has been visited. The city of 768,000, forty miles northwest of American-held Aachen, is the site of vast rail yards and such war factories as the Henschel tank works and the Bettenhausen ordnance plant.

Frankfurt is one of Germany's major rail centers and likewise the home of sprawling war industries.

R. A. F. Mosquitoes attacked a number of targets last night and shot up several trains, barges and other transport targets in Germany and Holland.

Fourteen United States heavy bombers and nineteen fighters out of a force of more than 2,000 planes failed to return from yesterday's attack on Nazi front-line positions in the Metz sector. Several of the planes probably landed in France.

A small force of Flying Fortresses also bombed the Saarbrucken railroad yards with good results and 250 fighters, capitalizing on the lack of enemy opposition, reported destroying or damaging sixty-one locomotives, 225 freight cars, five parked airplanes and numerous ground installations inside Germany.

U. S. AIR CARRIERS LANDED 50,000

London, Nov. 10 (A. P.).—United States troop carrier forces of the First Allied Airborne Army have dropped more than 50,000 parachute troopers and over 9,000,000 pounds of combat equipment and supplies behind enemy lines in Europe, a review of the airborne landings in Normandy, southern France and Holland disclosed today.

More than 9,000 aircraft and glider sorties were flown in the three operations with a loss of 2 per cent, said a statement from troop carrier headquar-

Soviet Troops Capture Huge

Stores of Ammunition, Equipment.

LONDON, Saturday, Nov. 11—(AP) Russian troops in a fierce all-day struggle yesterday drove a wedge between the German defenders of Budapest and eastern Slovakia by cutting the Budapest-Miskolc railway in the area of Mezokovesd, 65 miles northeast of the besieged Hungarian capital.

A midnight Soviet communique said the Russians killed 700 Germans and Hungarians, beat off a series of stubborn counterattacks, captured 15 guns, stores of ammunition and other equipment, and destroyed nine German tanks in the action which won a section of the important railway.

Reds Threaten Mezokovesd

Mezokovesd itself was threatened by the Russians with the capture of Borsodszemere, four miles to the southwest and two miles from the railway which skirts the Matra mountains in northeastern Hungary, and the Red army was 20 miles beyond the middle Tisza river which it crossed several days ago in the new drive on Budapest.

On the southern approaches to Budapest the enemy constantly is reinforcing his troops in an effort to hold that gateway city on the road to Austria, the Moscow bulletin said. Elite guard tank and cavalry divisions were hurled against the Germans yesterday in an effort to hold the railway to Cegled.

The rear of these enemy troops were imperilled by the drive down the railway from Miskolc.

The communique announced the capture of 4,100 more Hungarians and Germans during Wednesday and Thursday, boosting to approximately 150,000 the number of enemy troops killed or captured since Oct. 6 when the invasion of Hungary began.

Red army planes dropped leaflets carrying an appeal by Col. Gen. Janos Voeroes, former Hungarian chief of staff who recently surrendered voluntarily to the Russians, for the Hungarians to desert the Germans and join the Red army.

Drive on Budapest

Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukraine army units fanned out along the Budapest-Miskolc railway, driving both toward Budapest and toward the southern Czechoslovakian border in the Miskolc direction.

Among the towns seized at the top of the front beyond the middle Tisza river was Hejopapi, only 13 miles southeast of Miskolc, Hungary's fifth city. Hejobaba, a mile northeast of Hejopapi, also was taken.

At the southern end of the front the Russians in a seven-mile advance west of Kiskore on the Tisza, seized Pely, 54 miles due east of Budapest and were within 13 miles of a junction with other Soviet forces pushing up from the south past fallen Szolnok.

The capture of Pely also put the Russians 32 miles southeast of Hatvan, important junction town on the Budapest - Miskolc railway where a line winds northward across the 3,300-foot Matra mountain range into central Slovakia.

Steady and heavy rains hampered the operations in Hungary and elsewhere along the front, but Russian units still engaged in clearing the Budapest-Cegled railway southeast of the capital captured Pilis, 22 miles from the capital. Pilis was taken in a three-mile advance from Alberti, rail station taken Thursday.

The German Transocean agency military commentator, Lt. Col. Alfred von Olberg, said there was "lively activity" behind the Russian front and large-scale troop movements, indicating a big Soviet Winter offensive was impending in the north.

The appeal to the Hungarians by Voeroes was broadcast by Moscow as well as being dropped by plane over the front.

Voeroes was chief of staff until mid-October when Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Hungarian regent, was ousted by the Germans after publicly announcing he was seeking an armistice with the Allies. Horthy was arrested Oct. 16 by the German Gestapo, Voeroes told his countrymen, and declared that all orders issued by Prime Minister Ferenc Szalasi's puppet government were illegal.

Ask Hungarians to Surrender

The Hungarian general said he was authorized to issue orders in Horthy's name, and he appealed to the troops to surrender en masse, not to defend Budapest, to prevent the Germans from destroying Hungary's property and carrying off cattle and foodstuffs, "otherwise Hungary will be threatened with starvation."

In Yugoslavia Spitfires of the Allied Balkan air force, taking off from bases in Greece, pounded German columns retreating through southern Serbia, attacking the rail junction of Vesles below Skoplje and hitting railyards and a train.

Marshal Tito's headquarters announced that the Yugoslav national liberation army had wiped out 1,100 Germans in pushing toward Krivolak and Gradsko on the Vardar river just below Veles.

In the west the Germans managed to get a stronger column of reinforcements into Danilovgrad, 19 miles north of the Albanian frontier, and also broke out of Nevesinje and captured Kifino Selo, 40 miles southwest of Sarajevo, concentration point for the 100,000 Germans trying to escape from the lower Balkans.

Allied bombers were credited by the Yugoslavs with killing at least 750 Germans in attacking troop columns in the Visegrad sector, 43 miles east of Sarajevo.

London, Saturday, Nov. 11 (AP)—Overthrow of General Francisco Franco with the defat of Germany was predicted by Juan Negrin, last premier of republican Spain, in a greeting to Marshal Stalin on the 27th anniversary of the Russian Revolution.

The Moscow radio broadcast Negrin's message early today without any comment and did not say whether Stalin replied.

Nazis Intern Norse Rail Men

POLAND REPORTED ASKING SHOWDOWN

London, Nov. 10 (A. P.).—The Polish Government in Exile was reported in usually responsible quarters today to have asked the Big Three Powers for a showdown on its future and a decision in its long-standing differences with Russia.

A spokesman close to Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk's Cabinet said that a majority of the London Poles have concluded that they have no alternative but to accept the judgment of Great Britain, the United States and Russia, and that they feel that that judgment must come soon. Slowly and reluctantly, they reached the point of acknowledging that Poland has little chance of preserving her pre-war territories.

The Cabinet, however, seeks a pledge of support for territorial compensation in the west for such loss in the east as would be entailed by the establishment of a Curzon Line frontier. It also asks elimination of Russian support of the rival Polish Committee of National Liberation and a general hands-off policy by all countries in Poland's internal affairs.

RED AGREEMENT SOUGHT BY POLES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10—(AP) Allied efforts to settle the disputes between Russia and Poland caused Polish ambassador Jan Ciechanowski to rush back from Chicago for a conference with the State department late today.

The conference followed press dispatches from London saying that Poland's exile government was reported to have made specific suggestions aimed at reaching an accord with Russia.

Neither Ciechanowski nor the State department would discuss the purpose of the ambassador's call. However, there were indications that he sought to learn how far the United States might go in supporting any settlement between Russia and Poland.

There were also signs that he was told that America's basic policy is against guaranteeing any nation's frontiers or exact postwar status and, except where bilateral agreements can be made, this government generally believes in postponing settlement of boundary disputes until after the war.

The two main difficulties between Russia and Poland are: 1. Russia desires a large area which the Poles have considered their own, and 2. The Russians insist that Poland be governed by an administration friendly to Russia.

The Russians have proposed to compensate Poland for loss of territory in the east by giving her East Prussia and areas of eastern Germany proper.

Finnish Crisis Reported

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Swedish newspaper "Morgontidningen" reported that the Finnish government resigned tonight.

[The Finnish radio said party groups of the Finnish Diet met Thursday night to discuss a "government crisis." The broadcast, recorded by United States government monitors, said that "although some groups voiced the opinion that the time was not appropriate for major changes, it was realized that the reforming of the government could not be avoided." The broadcast said the party groups considered Juho Paasikivi as a "suitable candidate" for the Premiership, and added that members of the various parties were prepared to co-operate under his leadership. He is honorary president of the Finnish-Russian Society formed last month, and is a former Premier and Minister to Sweden.]

SWISS MINISTER RESIGNS OFFICE

BERN, Switzerland, Nov. 10—(AP) The Federal council announced today the resignation of foreign minister Marcel Pilet-Golaz a few days after Russia refused to resume diplomatic relations with Switzerland and accused the government of pro-Fascist sentiments and hostility toward the Soviet union.

In a letter to Walter Stamfli, president of the Swiss confederation, dated last Tuesday, the foreign minister said: "Negotiations to renew diplomatic relations between Russia and Switzerland, which I have desired for a long time to bring to a good end, did not materialize this time.

"Circumstances will show before lond the true and profound causes of the Russian refusal. While waiting it is well to avoid a compromise of the interior cohesion and unity nidispensable in the difficult years ahead.

'I always thought and many times said that for us a war-time minister of foreign affairs could not a'nd should not be the same for after the war. The new situation demands fresh intact forces."

Pilet-Golaz had been head of the Foreign Affairs department since 1940, when he succeeded Giuseppe Motta. In 1934 and 1940 he served as president.

Swiss, Iranians Have Upsets In Cabinets

[By the Associated Press]

Switzerland joined Iran and Finland today among nations undergoing Cabinet crises and the Germans in effect admitted trouble in their relations with Spain and Portugal with the statement that the Nazi envoys to the Iberian peninsula might be changed.

Dr. Marcel Pilet-Golaz, former president of the Swiss republic, resigned as his nation's Foreign Minister. Berlin made the most of this and of the fall of the Iranian Government of Premier Mohamed Maraghei Saed, trying to show that both were brought about by Soviet pressure.

The Bern dispatch announcing Dr. Pilet-Golaz's resignation gave no indication whether it was promped by the refusal of the Russians to resume diplomatic relations with the Swiss. The Swiss council recently formally denied that its Government was hostile to Russia, as Moscow contended, and announced it would continue to press for recognition.

Russ-Swiss Link Hint

Berlin, however, broadcasting a DNB dispatch from Bern, quoted an "official statement" of the cabinet officer saying he had made his decision earlier, but did not want to publish it "before discussions on relations between Switzerland and the Soviet Union had taken place." Berlin has insinuated that the Soviet Union virtually was dictating to Switzerland.

The resignation of Saed and his Iranian Cabinet, who have been criticized by the Russians for refusal to grant oil concessions to the Soviet Union, was viewed by DNB as prompted by Moscow's refusal to negotiate further with Saed's Government.

The Turkish home radio said the resignation of Saed took place yesterday and was accepted by the 25-year-old ruler of Iran, Mohammed Reza Pahlevi.

Diplomatic Changes Seen

DNB itself gave the indication that all was not well in Germany's relations with Spain and Portugal. The agency broadcast a report that changes in the German diplomatic representations in Madrid and Lisbon might be expected.

Hans Heinrich Dieckof, German Ambassador to Madrid, left the Spanish capital in September, and there was speculation that Hitler's utility man, Franz von Papen, might succeed to the post.

Dr. Oswald Baron von Hoyningen-Huene, Minister to Lisbon, flew to Berlin September 11, when reports weer current in Portugal that other high Nazi officials accredited to the Portuguese capital also had been recalled.

Crisis In Finland

The Finnish radio said today that party groups of the Finnish Diet met last night to discuss a "government crisis."

The broadcast, recorded by United States Government monitors, said that although some grouyps voiced the opinion that the time was not appropriate for major changes, it was realized that the reforming of the Government could not be avoided."

The broadcast said the party groups considered Juho Paasikivi as a "suitable candidate" for the Premiership, now held by Urho Jonas Castren, and added that members of the various parties were prepared to cooperate under Paasikivi's leadership.

Paasikivi is honorary president of the Finnish-Russian Society, formed last month, and is a former Premier and Minister to Eweden.

Russians Sever Rail Line To Budapest

Moscow, Nov. 10 (AP)—Russian troops under Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky drove a wedge across the enemy's last direct railway communications between Budapest and northeastern Hungary today after shattering the west bank defenses along the upper Tisza river.

A big infantry and armored salient extending westward beyond Mezokereszies, approximately 70 miles east-northeast of Budapest, curved dangerously toward the rear of German Panzer forces which have been counterattacking east and southeast of the Hungarian capital in an attempt to prevent it from being outflanked.

Rail Line Reported Cut

A Moscow announcement said the main Budapest-Miskolcz rail line had been severed. The Russian communique said the Second Ukrainian Army, advancing on a wide front across the middle Tisza, had captured 50 towns and villages.

There was no official news about Malinovsky's left flank, which has dug into Budapest's southern suburbs, or about the extreme right flank of his army which previously crossed the upper Tisza in the direction of the southern borders of Czechoslovakia.

The Russian war bulletin said that Malinovsky's army since October 6 had killed or captured 142,000 German and Hungarian defenders of Budapest.

From the German viewpoint Malinovsky's new breakthrough carried a double danger—the arrival of a powerfully strengthened force to join the siege of the Hungarian capital and the serious threat that the Russians might by-pass the city to the north in the direction of Vienna and Bratislava.

Among the important places captured were Mezo Keresztes, Poroszlo, Komlo and Besebtelek, all of which are on communications lines leading north from Budapest to Vienna, 140 miles distant.

Field dispatches indicated that the new operation employed only about one-third of Malinovsky's total strength. While there was no indication when the other two-thirds might go into action, the developing drive was hailed here as the probable beginning of a winter campaign aimed at reducing Budapest and driving into Germany from the south.

Much Equipment Taken.

Great quantities of equipment have been taken or destroyed by Malinovsky's troops, a special Soviet announcement said. Among the items listed as captured were 386 planes, 138 tanks and self-propelled guns, 856 guns, 680 mortars, 1,795 machine guns, and thousands of freight cars, trains and trucks.

The Russians said that in addition their troops destroyed 416 planes, 900 tanks and self-propelled guns, 3,000 trucks and hundreds of freight cars.

A late Budapest broadcast recorded in Bern, Switzerland, said that other Soviet units had renewed their attacks in Budapest's southern suburbs, where fierce house-to-house fighting has been reported.

Berlin said that other Russian troops had crossed the Danube River at Dunafoldvar, forty-three miles south of bomb-battered Budapest. The German radio said that further south another Red Army was on the move again with the crossing of the Danube at Apatin, fifteen miles south of the Hungarian border by units of Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's Third Ukraine Army.

Hungarians Urged To Desert Nazis And Join Red Army

Moscow, Nov. 10 (AP)—Col. Gen. Janos Veres, chief of staff of the Hungarian army, who surrendered to the Russians several weeks ago, appealed to his forces today to desert the Germans and join the Red army in driving the Nazis from Hungary.

A proclamation signed by him and relayed by radio and leaflets to the Hungarian people called Ferenc Szalasi, puppet premier, a traitor and declared Admiral Nicholas Horthy still was the legal ruler.

Tried To Make Peace

Horthy, long the regent of Hungary, attempted some time ago to make peace with the Allies.

Veres said Horthy had been arrested by the Gestapo.

"At present I enjoy the cordial hospitality of the Russians and assume full responsibility for my actions," Veres said. "If any harm is done my son, or other members of my family, I will use the most stern measures against those guilty.

"Abdication Illegal"

"The abdication of Regent Horthy was illegal because it was done under pressure of German tanks, dive bombers, the Gestapo and the SS (Elite Guard).

"Horthy remains the legal ruler of Hungary. All orders issued in his behalf beginning October 16 are illegal and false."

Torch Rededicating Armistice Site

Paris, Nov. 10 (AP) — A torch lighted from the eternal flame at the Arc de Triomphe will be borne by relays of runners today to the little village of Rethondes, 40 miles outside Paris, to rededicate the glade where Marshall Foch received the German Armistice delegates on November 8, 1918.

A public subscription is being taken up to construct a new memorial at Rethondes to replace that destroyed by the Germans when they entered Paris in 1940.

France's Part In War, Peace Is Parley Topic

Paris, Nov. 10 (AP)—France's part in European peace arrangements and the problem of equipping the French army will figure most prominently on the agenda of Gen. Charles de Gaulle and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill when they begin their discussions here, the semi-official Agence France Presse said tonight.

As an excited citizenry awaited the leaders' arrival, the diplomatic editor of the French news agency declared that the main question from a French viewpoint will be the armament problem since France's war effort depends to a large extent upon the aid the Allies will be able to give in the form of arms and equipment.

(A London report today said there was speculation that President Roosevelt might come to London and accompany Churchill to Paris. Another London report asserted that Marshal Stalin was believed to have been invited to London for pre-Christmas big three talks.)

YANKS TO BE IN PARIS ARMISTICE DAY PARADE

PARIS, Nov. 10—(AP) American Army and Navy detachments will participate tomorrow in a parade of French and Allied troops celebrating the most joyous Armistice day since the original day in 1918.

Thousands of flags of all the United Nations are flying from homes, stores and national monuments on the eve of the parade down the Champs Elysees, and it was announced that Gen. Charles de Gaulle would lay a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier just before 11 a.m. when cannon will signal a nation-wide minute's silence.

French war veterans attached to the U. S. Army in the last war will lay a wreath in the place Les Etats Unis on the monument to American forces of the First World War. An American chaplain will conduct a memorial service at the American cemetery at Suresnes.

Paris Assigns 50 Millions To U. S. for Purchases

Gold Covers Non-Lend-Lease Items Bought by French

PARIS, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Finance Ministry announced today that France has assigned $50,000,000 in gold to the American Treasury in payment for government purchases in the United States.

This marked the first use of French gold held in the United States since American recognition of General Charles de Gaulle's regime as the provisional government placed the money at French disposal.

Government sources explained that this payment was made to cover items not included in lend-lease transactions, which are confined to arms, clothing and equipment for French regular troops. Purchases for civil needs or clothing and supplies for garrison troops used as guards of the interior are not within lend-lease provisions.

[A Paris radio dispatch recorded by the Columbia Broadcasting System said the Finance Ministry had lowered the French bank rate from 3 to 2½ per cent.]

GERMANS KILL 150 IN DUTCH SHELTER

Heusden, Holland, Nov. 10 (A. P.). — From 125 to 150 Dutch civilians were estimated today to have been killed in an explosion which blew up the 350-year-old town hall, which had been used as a shelter.

The explosion occurred Saturday as the Allies were approaching Heusden in their march to the Maas River. The official Netherlands news agency said there was no doubt that the building was blown up deliberately by retreating Germans, using prepared charges.

EIGHTH ARMY TAKES FORLI

British Press On To New German Line On Montone River

Rome, Nov. 10 (AP)—British troops of the Eighth Army, widening their grasp on the southeastern edge of the Po plain, captured the old Italian fortress town of Forli on the Rimini-Bologna highway and loosened up German positions in the hills south and southwest of the city, the Allied command announced today.

Forli, a community of 65,000 population 38 miles southeast of Bologna, was captured after the Fifth Corps under Lieut. Gen. C. F. Keightley had made it so hot for the Germans on the west side of the Forli airfield southeast of the city that they were forced to pull back after many days of stubborn defiance.

Forli Barracks Fall

The Fifth Corps then thrust swiftly up the Rimini-Bologna highway and captured the Forli barracks, a little more than a mile east of the town, and the railway station on the north side. Other British units moved up the airfield road into the city. Some 250 Germans were captured.

Tonight the Allies were pressing on against Germans aligned at a new obstacle—the Montone river, which flows northwest from Forli.

The battle line on the extreme eastern flank of the Italian front now runs almost due north and south, with the Allies still held on the coastal road about five miles below Ravenna and others prying the Germans from their hill positions southwest of the Rimini-Bologna road.

Threat To Nazis In Mountains

Capture of Forli put the Eighth Army well along this highway to a point just nine miles from Faenza to the northwest. Every mile gained along the highway increases the danger to the German troops still fighting in the mountains to the south.

The leading Eighth Army troops ran into the new German line upon reaching the ruins of the main bridge over the Montone river west of Forli. The Germans had established themselves on the west bank. Other Eighth Army troops found the Germans holding the west bank of the river in strength south of the bridge.

Negro Troops Take 3 Villages

The fall of Forli helped Eighth Army troops in the hills to the southwest to pry the Germans out of some of their strong positions. Between the Rabbi and Montone rivers the village of Sadurano was taken and the troops pushed on to positions east of Castrocaro, a junction point on Highway 67, which leads through Forli to Ravenna. Castrocaro, six miles southwest of Forli, is still strongly held by the Germans.

American Negro troops on the coastal sector of the Fifth Army front continued to move forward and occupied the villages of Azzano, Terrinca and Levigliani amid towering peaks east of Massa. Azzano is about four miles east of Massa.

On other parts of the Fifth Army front there were no changes. Aggressive patrolling and heavy German shelling continued.

FORLI CAPTURED BY EIGHTH ARMY

Rome, Nov. 10 (A. P.).—British troops have captured Forli, Po Valley communications center thirty-eight miles southeast of Bologna on the Bologna-Rimini highway, Allied Headquarters announced today.

Capture of the old fortress city, which has a population of approximately 65,000, was accomplished by a pincer movement. One force moved directly up the Rimini-Bologna highway, while the second advanced up a road from the airfield to the southeast, penetrating into the town.

In addition other Eighth Army troops have loosened Nazi positions in the hills south and southwest of Forli. Approximately 250 prisoners were taken as the town fell.

Snipers were still active in Forli, but leading British troops pushed through the town and reached the ruins of the main bridge over the Montone River on the west. The Germans were holding the west bank of the Montone in strength.

The village of Sadurano in the hills between the Montone and Rabbi rivers was captured, and Eighth Army troops pushed on to positions east of Castrocaro, an enemy-held junction point six miles below Forli on the highway leading through Forli to Ravenna.

American Negro troops on the west coast sector of the Fifth Army front occupied three more villages amid the towering peaks east of Massa. Aggressive patrolling continued elsewhere on the Fifth Army front.

Tito's Men Wipe Out 1,100 Nazis In Drive

London, Nov. 10 (AP)—Yugoslav Partisans wiped out 1,100 Germans in a push toward Krivolak and Gradsko, where the Cherna river joins the Vardar in southern Serbia, Marshal Tito's broadcast communique said today.

Stip, a city on the Bregalnica river, was menaced by the new push, the broadcast said.

In the west, however, the Germans got strong reinforcements into Danilovgrad, in Montenegro, and broke out of Nevesinje to capture Kifino Selo, in Herzegovina.

Allied bombers were credited with killing at least 750 Germans in attacks in the Visegrad sector of central Yugoslavia.

RAF Hits Rail Junction

Rome, Nov. 10 (AP)—RAF Spitfires harassing the Germans retreating through Serbia have attacked the rail junction of Veles, 28 miles southeast of Skoplje on the Salonika-Skoplje rail line, one of the Nazi escape routes, an air force announcement said today.

The planes, operating from bases in Greece, hit rail yards and a train, the announcement added.

KWEILIN FALL SEEMS AT HAND

Chinese Admit Japs Also Are

At Edge Of Liuchow

Chungking, Nov. 10 (AP)—Two main objectives of Japan's South China offensive, Kweilin and Liuchow, were almost in enemy grasp tonight. Both are former bases of United States air power in the Orient.

[The Japanese agency Domei in a Tokyo broadcast declared both Kweilin and Liuchow had fallen, with Chungking's 31st Army troops surrendering in walled Kweilin.]

The Chinese high command said the Japanese loosed an all-out offensive against encircled Kweilin, the Kwangsi province capital, and rammed spearheads to within six miles of Liuchow on the east and to within nine and a half miles on the north. Liuchow lies on the Hunan-Kwangsi railway 95 miles southwest of Kweilin.

Chinese Retreat Cut Off

An outflanking Japanese column pressed into the outskirts of Liucheng, 19 miles northwest of Liuchow, to cut off Chinese retreat along the Kwangsi-Kweichow railway toward Kweichow province. [Domei also claimed the capture of Liucheng.]

Another column south of Liuchow made further progress heading off Chinese retreat toward the old provincial capital of Yungning (Nanning), 125 miles southwest of Liuchow.

The high command said the fighting in Kweilin's outer defense raged. Japanese threw in tanks, guns and planes, but the Chinese said the defenders stood fast, and inflicted numerous casualties on enemy forces attacking from the south.

East Coast Landing Expected

Chinese accounts said the Japanese from the east crossed the Kwei river, on whose western bank the city lies, losing 500 in the crossing and half of those who made it to the bridgehead. These remnants were declared being mopped up.

On the East China coast, the Japanese were building up an offensive and defensive zone around the port of Foochow against a possible American landing.

One Japanese column in steam launches moved 12 miles up the Min river to the northwest, while another moved 15 miles southward.

Japs Claim Fall Of Kweilin,

Liuchow

New York, Nov. 10 (AP)—Japanese broadcasts claimed the capture today of Kweilin and Liuchow in China.

The Japanese official news agency Domei said the Chinese 31st Army had "completely surrendered" at noon today in Kweilin, capital of Kwangsi province and defense pivot for southeastern China.

The dispatch, recorded by United States Government monitors, said news of capture was carried in a dispatch from the Kwangsi front. The Chinese have said Kweilin would be "China's Stalingrad."

The Chinese high command in Chungking said that the Japanese claws of a pincers moving on Liuchow from the north and the southwest were 50 miles apart. It was evident that once the gap was closed the Japanese would have a line stretching from the South China Sea to the Great Wall in the north, cutting China in two.

Claim Unconfirmed

The invaders in the north were last reported 15 miles from Liuchow at their nearest point, the Chinese said, and one of four columns slashing westward from the West River front was 35 miles south of Liuchow.

A Chinese spokesman admitted the Japanese were assailing Kweilin from the east, battering main positions guarding the city itself, and said the decisive battle was under way.

The Tokyo radio declared in an English-language broadcast before the report of Kweiling's capture that Liuchow, site of the last American air base in southeast China, had fallen at 8.40 A. M. (Japanese time) today.

The broadcast asserted that the Japanese forces had penetrated Liuchow from the north and "completely occupied it after smashing the powerful defenders in hand-to-hand fighting."

Tokyo said the vanguard of a Japanese mobile unit captured the Liuchow airfield at 5 P. M. yesterday.

BIG B-29 FORCE BLASTS NANKING

Superforts Attack Dock Areas of Yangtze River City.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11—(Saturday)—(AP) A large task force of B-29 Super-Fortresses of the 20th air force attacked Japanese-occupied Nanking, China, today's War department announced.

In a daylight flight, the big planes attacked the dock and warehouse areas of the Yangtze river city, the announcement by Gen. H. H. Arnold, who commands the 20th Air force, said. The announcement gave no details as to damage inflicted, but said further details would be released as soon as they become available.

Super-Fortresses of Major General Curtis E. Le May's 20th Bomber command participated in the raid, flying from China bases.

Yanks Raid Hongkong 2d Time In Week

Chungking, Nov. 10 (AP)—Liberators of the United States 14th Air Force yesterday bombed the Kowloon docks at Hongkong for the second time this week, Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer announced today.

The communique said the area east of the airdrome at Samah Bay on Hainan Island also was raided by the B-24's.

On the Salween river front P-38's bombed the airstrip at Mangshih and the Burma Road in that area, causing landslides and heavy damage, the communique said. One plane was lost.

CHINESE EXTEND IRRAWADDY GRIP

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 10—(AP) Chinese troops have expanded their bridgehead on the south bank of the Irrawaddy river near Shwegu in north Burma both to the east and the west, the Allied command announced today.

The Japanese, an Allied spokesman said, are pulling back to a shorter north Burma line and offering no serious resistance anywhere to the new Allied campaign to clear a land route to China.

Northeast of Shwegu other Chinese units patrolled extensively along the Taping river, and to the northwest British troops scouted south of Mawlu on the Myitkyina-Mandalay railway. Aircraft of the Eastern air command attacked supply and storage areas and rail targets in support of the north Burma operation.

In northwestern Burma the Fifth Indian division ran into some enemy opposition in scoring further advances east of Fort White on the main Japanese escape route from the Tiddim area.

The U. S. Tenth air force announced today that it was moving its headquarters from the Assam tea patch and rice paddy area to "the heart of the jungles and mountains of north Burma." Thus in three forward leaps within a year the tenth has advanced its air bases about 2,000 miles and placed its hedaquarters less than a half hour's flying time from the nearest enemy heavy installations.

Japs Moving To New Burma Line

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 10 (AP)—An Allied spokesman said today the Japanese were withdrawing to a shorter line in north Burma and were offering no serious resistance to Allied advances.

Enemy casualties, the spokesman said, have been negligible in recent days.

A communique said Chinese troops who crossed the Irrawaddy river yesterday and occupied Shwegu, midway between Katha and Bhamo, extended their positions east and west on the river's south bank.

RESCUED IN JUNGLE

Tiddim, Burma, Nov. 1 (by Mail) (A. P.).—Four American airmen who crashed while delivering supplies to the Fifth Indian Division have been rescued from behind the Japanese lines by jungle-fighting Punjabi troops of that division. Their supplies, air dropped, were supporting the Indians, who in turn were spearheading the Allied advance toward Kalemyo.

While circling the Beltang Lui River valley their plane lost power, struck a piney mountainside and caught fire. An hour later they were found in a dazed condition by the tall Punjabi infantrymen, who carried and assisted the Americans out through a countryside thick with Japanese. The rescued men were Lieut. Kenneth W. Krause of Waseca, Minn., Sergt. Keith H. Barton of White Cloud, Mich.; Staff Sergt. Wesley Thompson of Summer Shade, Ky., and Corporal Erwin A. Bishop of Baltimore, Md.

NIMITZ PRAISES WORK OF MARINES

HONOLULU, Nov. 10 — (AP) Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, in a radio broadcast celebrating the 169th anniversary of the United States Marine corps, said tonight the corps had reached "the ultimate in amphibious warfare" in its march beside the Army across the Pacific.

"The cities of Japan," the Admiral said, "will feel the metal hail from Marine wings. They'll feel the tread of the Marine feet." He added that not only the veterans who fought on beaches from Tarawa and Guadalcanal to Palau would be heard from in the future.

"These are not the only Marines who will fight in the Pacific," he declared. "Powerful land and air units who have yet to make history will have their opportunity."

"Today," he added, "we find the American Navy on a rampage, sweeping everything before it in the Pacific. The American Army under General MacArthur is again in the Philippines. The fleet and Marine force units are ablaze with battle stars. These symbolize the elimination of Japanese control in the Solomons, the Gilberts, the Marshalls, the Marianas and the Palau islands.

"Marine aviation units have built their nests on scarred battlegrounds won by the ground troops. Their silver wings bring death and destruction daily to the by-passed atolls. And Marine aviation, operating with Marine infantry, will again clear the beaches and soften the defenders."

The Admiral reviewed achievements of the Third and Fifth Amphibious corps and the First, Second, Third, Fourth and Sixth divisions of Marines.

Toughest Jap War Seen Ahead

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—The Marine Corps began its 170th year today with a warning from its commandant, Lieut. Gen. A. A. Vandegrift, that the toughest part of the Japanese war is yet to come.

In this war, Vandegrift said, the marines have sustained 8,827 killed and 25,000 wounded and "the coming year will be the supreme test."

Praising the men who spearheaded the 1,500-mile drive across the Central Pacific, the general said:

"We honor the memories of the men who have fallen in the advance. They fell going forward. Long after the total victory for which they died is won, they will remain heroically alive in the hearts of their comrades and in the legends of the Corps."

YANK BOMBERS BLAST KURILES

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 10—(AP) Army and Navy bombers attacked Tori Shima island in the northern Kuriles Nov. 6, downing three enemy interceptor planes Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

One Army medium bomber was lost in a furious air battle with 15 or 20 enemy fighters over the Kuriles, at the top of Japan's empire.

One Nipponese plane was damaged and another probably shot down in addition to the three definitely destroyed.

The American planes attacked nine self-propelled wooden barges off the east coast of Paramushiro and saw two of them blow up.

Liberator heavy bombers, Nimitz reported, raided Paramushiro, Matsuwa and Onnekotan islands in the Kuriles Nov. 8. Other Liberators raided the Bonin and Volcano islands south of Japan Nov. 7 and 8. They scored a direct hit on an enemy medium cargo ship at Chichi island, bombed two barges at Haha island and also blasted Iwo island.

Marine planes meanwhile attacked enemy positions in the Marianas, destroying a sugar mill on Rota island and also strafing a phosphate plant and an airstrip.

Liberator bombers also flew to Marcus island, 1,200 miles southeast of Tokyo, to blast that island for the seventh time this month.

Northern Kuriles Bombed

Bonins, Rota and Marcus Islands Also Raided; Two Barges Sunk

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP).—Air blows against the northern Kuriles, the Bonin Islands and Rota and Marcus Islands were disclosed by the Navy today.

Three enemy fighters were shot down, one probably shot down and one damaged during an attack on the northern Kuriles. A Mitchell medium bomber of the 11th Army Air Force was lost.

Other damage to the enemy, reported in a communique, included two self-propelled barges sunk off the coast of Paramushiro, a direct hit on a medium cargo ship in the Bonins, and destruction of a sugar mill on Rota Island.

Bong Runs Count to 34 In Single Pass at Zero

Top U. S. Ace Meets 5 Japanese Head On Over Ormoc

AN AMERICAN AIRBASE ON LEYTE, Nov. 11 (AP).—One pass at a Japanese plane and Major Richard I. Bong, of Poplar, Wis., today increased his score to thirty-four enemy planes downed in aerial combat.

Major Bong's victory came during the twenty-four-hour aerial battle over a Japanese convoy at Ormoc and represented one of sixteen Japanese planes definitely downed. Five others were probably destroyed.

Bong is America's ace of aces in all war theaters. His latest victory, according to his own report, came when he met five new Japanese fighters head-on. One of the Japanese planes zoomed up, rolled over—and came directly into Bong's gunsights. He said the enemy plane crashed in flames.

Bong's leading contender in this sector, Major Thomas B. Maguire jr., of Ridgewood, N. J., kept in the race today. He spotted a single Japanese plane, forced it toward the ground, fired once, and the enemy plane crashed to give him his twenty-sixth victory.

Japanese Bomb Admiralty Bases

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10 (AP)—The Tokyo radio said today that Japanese planes raided American bases at Los Negros Island in the Admiralty group and destroyed thirty of fifty parked planes of large and medium size.

Jap Official Contends Russ Policy Unchanged

San Francisco, Nov. 10 (AP)—Sadao Iguchi, spokesman of the Japanese Board of Information, says Premier Marshal Stalin's speech reference to Nippon as an "aggressive nation" is "no indication that any change has been made in the policy of the Soviet Union toward Japan," Tokyo radio reported today.

British Stake In Jap Defeat Held Imperative

London, Nov. 10 (AP)—Quick defeat of Japan is just as imperative to Britain as to the United States, Admiral of the Fleet Sir Andrew Cunningham, the First Sea Lord, declared today at a Royal Navy Volunteer Reserves' luncheon.

Until Germany is defeated, Britain must retain large naval forces in the European theater, Sir Andrew said, adding that "at the same time we are anxious to send a strong fleet to the Pacific to fight the Japanese, alongside the Americans."

Remarkable Skill

"So far," he said, "the United States Navy, with some valuable assistance from Australian and New Zealand ships, have conducted that war in the Pacific on their own.

"The energy and skill they have shown and the sucess they have achieved have alike been remarkable."

The admiral said "we must have dominating sea-air power to carry out the task ahead and the greater that superiority the sooner are we likely to crush the inner shell of the Japanese empire."

To Head Off Inflation

NOV 11 1944

San Francisco, Nov. 10 (AP)—Japan is anticipating inflation at the end of this year.

A radio broadcast said the Japanese Finance Ministry predicted "inflation of considerable proportion" because "more than 13,000,000,000 yen in bank notes" were circulated by the Bank of Japan in September.

The circulation, the broadcast added, was a "conspicuous increase" over the same period a year ago.

Controls Set Up

Cause for "recent currency inflation," Tokyo said, is attributed to "progressive wartime activity, excessive dispersal of Government funds, excessive loss of capital concerned with production and idle currency of individuals and corporations."

Counter measures have already been taken, the broadcast asserted including control of Governmen funds by placing limitation on pay ments and rationalized use of pro duction capital by perfecting super vision of munitions factories.

Curtin in Hospital for Rest

CANBERRA, Australia, Nov. 10 (AP).—Prime Minister John Curtin is in a hospital for rest and probably will not be able to return to work before January, Francis E. Forde, Army Minister and Deputy Premier, announced today. Mr. Curtin's health has become affected, involving some strain on the heart, as a result of his heavy continued burden of official duties," Forde reported in an official medical bulletin.

Great Man, Yamashita—Can Snore, Listen At Once

NOV 11 1944

San Francisco, Nov. 10 (AP)—Quite a guy, this Yamashita—he can snore and listen at the same time.

Or, at least, so said Radio Tokyo in a broadcast recorded here last night.

The broadcast, discussing Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, new Japanese commander who has declared his intention of forcing the unconditional surrender of Gen. Douglas MacArthur in the Philippines, declared that the Jap general sometimes gives the impression of being "vague" because "he has been known to doze off and even snore in the midst of conversation with people."

But this is misleading, said the broadcast.

It quoted a classmate of the commander, Lieut. Gen. Shiro Inaba, who said, "he (Yamashita) is the type of person who, while dozing, hears all the conversation carried on at the time. I believe that this is an example of his magnanimous spirit, which is unmoved by little things."

Idle Money Eyed

"It seems," the radio added, "the one remaining anti-inflation measure would be to find ways which will activate idle currency."

In another broadcast Tokyo announced that the Munitions Ministry has transferred Vice-Admiral Shingo Ishikawa, manager of the general-affairs section of the ministry's mobilization bureau, to another "important, undisclosed post."

Japs Egging On Their Hens

San Francisco, Nov. 10 (AP)—Japan's egg supply is meager, but the Japanese Agriculture and Commerce Ministry has a remedy, a Tokyo broadcast reported today.

Eggs are "precious" because they are sent to aircraft and submarine crew members, the broadcast explained.

To keep up the supply the Ministry proposed that "self-support-

7 EXILES REACH MEXICO

Guatemalan Revolutionaries Deported by Costa Rica

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 10 (AP)—Mexico's colony of political exiles from Central America grew today with the arrival of Gen. Alberto Noguera Gómez and six companions who had participated in a recent revolutionary movement against President Anastasio Somoza of Nicaragua.

Gen. Noguera Gómez, brother of the leader killed in the revolution, and his companions were deported by Costa Rica, where the anti-Somoza movement had been launched.

Among other exiles here are ousted President Federico Ponce of Guatemala and at least twenty-five of his countrymen.

Dr. Arturo Romero, a leader in the revolution that overthrew President Maximiliano Hernández Martínez of El Salvador earlier this year, conferred here today with officials of the Molina "government in exile."

Exiled German Publisher Set For Nazi Fall

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

[Former Chief of the Berlin Bureau of the Associated Press]

New York, Nov. 10 (AP)—Plans for re-education of the German people have been taken out of the realm of theoretical discussion by Gottfried Bermann-Fischer, head of what was once one of the largest publishing houses in Germany.

When the Nazis took over, many of the liberal books published by the Fischer Verlag were burned on the famous pyre erected before the University of Berlin in May, 1933. Fischer and his family had to flee. They first started a new publishing house, the Bermann-Fischer Verlag Aktiebolag, in Stockholm, Sweden, then set up a New York office of the resurrected concern.

—o—

Already the printing presses in Stockholm are busy grinding out democratic literature in the German language to be shipped into Germany after Adolf Hitler falls. Sumner Welles' "Time for Decision," Knut Hagberg's "Biography of Winston Churchill," and Tadeusz Norwid's "Country Without Traitors" (a story of Poland under German occupation), are among the titles already published.

But it is in the United States that the most ambitious project is taking shape. By April, 1945, a world history in the German language is to be completed, to give an entirely new conception to German readers.

—o—

Here's how Gottfried Bermann-Fischer looks upon it:

"It is my conviction that the future security of Europe and the world depends to a certain degree on the education of German youth in the values of democracy and international cooperation.

"I am also persuaded that this education must not be limited to the mere uprooting of the Nazi idea. The German sympathy for militaristic nationalism goes deeper than 1933.

"It is my hope that the textbooks I am preparing will contribute to the reorientation of the German mind toward democracy."

The textbooks on history, Fischer said, are under the general direction of Dr. Fritz Karsen, former director of the experimental educational institutions of the German republic in Berlin-Neukoelln, now a lecturer on education at City College, New York.

The historical series of five volumes is being written as follows:

"History of Pre-Historic and Primitive Peoples," by Dr. Julius Lips, former director of the Cologne Museum of Ethnology, former chief of the Department of Anthropology at Cologne University; "Ancient History," by Dr. Frederic Cramer, professor of history at Mount Holyoke College; "Medieval History," by Dr. Enmy Heller, former research associate at the German Historical Institute "Monumenta Germaniae," now instructor in history at Brooklyn College, and Dr. Helene Wieruszowska, former librarian at the University of Bonn, now instructor at Brooklyn College; "Modern History," by Dr. Hugo Bieber, German authority on modern history; and "Oriental History," by Dr. Otto Pfeifenberger, of the oriental institute of Columbia University.

—o—

A second educational project in process will provide a series of six German readers for youths from the second year of school to graduation from secondary school. Manuscripts will be completed by December of this year.

"These readers," Herr Fischer said, "will reflect all aspects of human life. Authors such as Heinrich Heine, banned by the Nazis, will be represented."

Among the contributors to these readers are Dr. Susanne Engelmann, former principal of a Berlin "gymnasium," or high school, now a lecturer on modern languages at Smith College; Dr. Hedda Korsch, former professor of a Berlin teachers' college, now professor of German at Wheaton College, Norton, Mass.; Joachim Author, now instructor in German literature at Mount Holyoke College, and Ernst Waldinger, former Austrian teacher and author, now of Detroit.

Fischer also proposes to issue textbooks on biology, geography, physics and even mathematics. For, said the refugee publisher:

"Teaching material in fields other than history and literature is also permeated with the poison of aggressive nationalism. When you consider that arithmetic is taught to German youngsters through military sympols of machine guns and troop trains, you get a picture of the size of the job to be done."

'Big 3' To Meet Again, Says President

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today he, Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin want to hold another meeting whenever they can arrange it.

He said, however, no details have been worked out and there is nothing definite on the time or place of such a meeting.

The President told the reporters at his first news conference since his election to a fourth term that he wouldn't tell when the time and place are arranged anyway.

Always Kept Secret

Such meetings always have been secret until the government heads arrive at the scene of the conference.

The conference, attended by many of the newsmen who accompanied Mr. Roosevelt on his campaign tours, was filled with banter and joking questions. One asked if he had received a "peace feeler" from Germany. The President laughed and said that sounds like a pre-election question.

Questioned About 1948

Paul Ward, of the Baltimore Sun, put in with:

"Mr. President, may I be the first to ask if you are going to run in 1948?"

The Chief Executive said the question was hoary with age—observing that he had been asked that one as far back as 1936.

Big Three Parley Expected

London, Nov. 10 (AP)—Marshal Stalin is believed to have been invited to London for the Big Three talks expected before Christmas, but the best available information today was that he likely would agree to meet President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill somewhere in the Middle East.

There was speculation that Roosevelt might come first to London and accompany Churchill to Paris, and that they would go from there to the rendezvous with Stalin.

Moscow Interested

Moscow, Nov. 10 (AP)—Moscow heard with interest today of Prime Minister Churchill's assertion in London yesterday that it is "high time" that he, Premier Stalin and President Roosevelt get together for another conference.

While there was no official comment, there seemed reason here to believe that Stalin is as anxious to meet again with Churchill and Roosevelt as they are to meet him.

Such a conference is generally regarded in Moscow as a logical sequel to President Roosevelt's re-election.

AVIATION PARLEY ACCEPTS PLAN BY LATIN AMERICANS

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—(AP) The International Aviation conference accepted provisionally today an interim plan for regulating world air commerce introduced by the 19 Latin American Republics whereby every nation would have equal voice in selecting an executive council.

Fifty-one delegates concurred in the proposal after the United States withdrew its suggestion for an interim executive council in which nine of 15 seats would be distributed arbitrarily among six countries and the remaining six would be assigned to regions.

The Latin American plan calls for "free election" of an executive council by an assembly of all participating nations, and suggests further that this conference act as the assembly and select the council.

Col. Pedro A. Chapa, chief of the Mexican delegation and president of the Latin American bloc formed last weekend, announced the approval of the plan at a joint session of two subcommittees, which will sit again soon as a full committee and ratify the decision.

"It's a great day for us," Chapa said at a hastily called press conference.

He said Cuba and Mexico, which acted for their sister republics in presenting the plan, were elated "not only because our draft was accepted, but because it represents the close cooperation between the United States and Latin America."

The United States persisted in its decision to save a place for Russia in whatever organization may be set up, it was disclosed by Chapa, who said that this country had suggested the council number be increased to 16 to make a seat for the Soviet if it should decide to come into the agreement. Chapa said his group had no objection to the larger number, but their plan does not envision any arbitrary award of a permanent seat on the executive body.

However, the Latin American outline calls upon the assembly to "endeavor to give adequate representation" in the council "to those countries that have attained largest development in the field of international civil aviation." Thus Russia could earn a place by entering the field of international air transport.

Acceptance of the Latin American idea for an interim organization may have a powerful influence on the proposed permanent authority. Dr. Luis Machado, a Cuban delegation advisor, said as much in response to a question, pointing out that the countries which have fostered the equal representation plan for an interim body "were very unlikely to reverse themselves on the permanent organization.

"I think that perhaps this is not only a very important precedent for the aviation conference, but also for other international organizations," he added.

Canada's Trump Air-Aim Card Is Awaited

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP) — Canada appeared today to be holding back as a trump card in the International Civil Aviation Conference her own aspirations for post-war world air routes.

Sponsor of one of the two British Empire plans for giving route assignment power to an international authority, Canada has not yet stated her own aims for carrying commerce in the air ocean.

Eight other countries — the United States, the Netherlands, Poland, Philippine Commonwealth, Spain, Switzerland, Egypt and Lebanon—have said formally where they hope to fly as an initial objective.

Decision Withheld

Thus far, however, Canada has declined to say whether it intends to do the same, although Adolf A. Berle, Jr., United States delegation chairman and president of the 51-nation conference, suggested that such plans be laid on the table for discussion.

The other members of the British Commonwealth also have refrained from presenting their air transport objectives, indicating the possibility of concerted empire action on a route plan.

The countries which met at Montreal in advance of the conference—United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, Southern Rhodesia, Newfoundland and India—agreed on the desirability of a British Empire communications program, including an airways pattern.

Joint Proposal Hinted

Apparently details of such a program were left unsettled, and the reluctance of the commonwealth members to state individual aims may be related to the question of whether they will eventually present a joint proposal.

Stating that he was no less optimistic about the conference than when he came to Chicago, H. J. Symington, Canadian delegate said yesterday he was "hopeful that the principles of the proposals of the United States, Canada and the United Kingdom will be drafted not into a Canadian plan but into a conference document which will give hope of a proper control of the air."

Speaking at a press conference along with Berle, Symington detailed the processes by which his country had arrived at its proposal for a world authority to assign and award routes, much as the United States Civil Aeronautics Board operates for American companies.

"Ahead Of Its Time"

He said, with an obvious reference to Berle, that the only dangerous criticism he had heard of the Canadian idea was that it was "ahead of its time."

Berle explained that the remarks to which Symington referred (a reference to "dreams") had been prior to submission of the Canadian plan now on the table and "related to the plan which for some months you had urged upon us." It has been evident that Canada revised her proposals since presenting them originally last March.

Symington said his country wanted to have the international air pattern worked out before the world is "cobwebbed" with routes, feeling that if an orderly pattern could not be established now it certainly could not be done later.

LATIN AMERICANS RECOGNIZE REDS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10—(AP) With the approach of United Nations peace organization talks, several Latin-American countries have taken a sudden spurt toward establishing relations with Russia.

Only five Latin nations have recognized the Soviet Union thus far. They are Cuba, Mexico, Costa Rica, Colombia and Uruguay.

Now Bolivia has begun negotiations with the Soviet embassy in Washington, Chile has expressed its desire to do so, and reports from Ecuador, Brazil and Honduras indicate that these nations are giving the matter careful consideration.

Russia never has hit directly at the Latin American nations for their failure to recognize the Soviet government but some may have thought a recent Moscow broadside at Switzerland, Spain and Portugal — European countries which never established relations—was a straw in the wind.

The rebuke came in Moscow's refusal to attend the International Aviation conference in Chicago because these three European neutrals would be represented there.

Russian envoys have attended United Nations conferences at which Latin-American countries without relations with Moscow have been represented, such as the Bretton Woods monetary meeting, United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration sessions, and the Hot Springs Food and agriculture meeting. However, the forthcoming United Nations conference to plan a world security organization, as a sequel to the four power Dumbarton Oaks talks, easily might be considered in a different light.

Dissolution of the comintern and reinstatement of the orthodox church in the Soviet Union have tended to take emphasis off some of the reasons most often advanced for Latin American aloofness.

Latins Seek Greater Role In Peace Setup

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—Latin-American countries began airing today an insistence that smaller nations receive more guarantees in the world peace organization.

First to be heard from was Uruguay, which urged revival of the League of Nations where every nation had an equal vote.

Failing that, the Uruguayan proposal presented to representatives of the other American republics here suggested that assurances for small nations be written into the Dumbarton Oaks blueprint.

Venezuela's Plan

Veneguela has also presented a plan, not yet published, which is understood to reflect a general Latin-American trend of thought fo a greater role for smaller American republics in the future peace league.

Uruguay's idea about breathing new life into the League of Nations caused considerable stir among diplomats.

They considered it unlikely that this suggestion would make much headway. But small-nation guarantees and the suggestion that the system of Pan-American cooperation be fitted into the security organization struck a responsive note among the Latins, however.

Bloc Plan Proposed

Another plan, not yet officially presented but which will probably be laid before the diplomats at their next meeting, proposes that the Western Hemisphere enter the peace system as a bloc, so that combined strength would offset the comparative weakness of individual nations.

The Latins tried this technique with some success at the International Aviation Conference in Chicago, where they agreed among themselves on an air plan before putting it up to other nations.

The basic ideas of a world organization backed by force with an assembly, executive council and court were supported in the Uruguay proposal and are expected to receive the backing of the other American republics.

Democracy Stressed

Uruguay stressed democracy as well as peacefulness as a requisite for membership in the world organization. Admitting such a definition would cause difficulties at present, the Uruguayan plan proposed that nations joining the league must at least adhere to principles of justice, human dignity, and repudiation of the doctrine of racial superiority.

The document was not specific on voting procedure in the all-important council — a subject on which Dumbarton Oaks was silent.

It is known that the American-templated a veto power for the great nations. Dumbarton Oaks also specifically gave permanent council to the big four and to France "in due course." Uruguay said because of their role in the war, it could accept this arrangement but only "on a temporary basis."

Australian Official Headed For D. C. Parley

Los Angeles, Nov. 10 (AP)—Australia's Minister of Trade and Customs, Senator Richard V. Keane, planned visits to Hollywood movie studios today before heading for Washington and a conference with Government officials on Lend-Lease and reciprocal trade agreements.

Senator Keane arrived here yesterday from Sydney. He told newsmen that Australia held the American soldier in high regard and that his country would not forget the effort expended to save his nation when it was in deepest peril.

F. D. R. Message Opens Parley On Business

Rye, N. Y., Nov. 10 (AP)—World business after the war must be expanded "on a basis of non-discrimination and of freedom from excessive barriers and restraints," President Roosevelt said today in a message to the opening session of the International Business Conference.

"The necessary expansion can be achieved only as nations and their citizens work together cooperatively toward understanding each others' problems and taking effective and mutually advantageous measures for solving these problems," the President said in extending greetings to some 300 businessmen from 50 nations who will meet here to discuss various aspects of world trade.

The President said that, by exchanging information and by "frank and friendly discussion," businessmen from all countries can help to replace the "war-distorted economy of the world with the new and better structure which is necessary to the maintenance of world prosperity and security."

Sponsored By Three Groups

The message was read by Eliot Wadsworth, chairman of the American section of the International Chamber of Commerce, one of the four organizations sponsoring the conference. The other three are the National Association of Manufacturers, the National Foreign Trade Council and the United States Chamber of Commerce.

In a welcoming address, Wadsworth said the delegates are not expected to conclude their deliberations with a set of resolutions, but when the conference is over "these businessmen will have a general idea of what their counterparts in other countries will want when the war ends and international trade can move again.

"They will be in a position to give advice and counsel to their governments, which inevitably will play an important part in the post-war international economic and trade picture."

"Suspicions Don't Work"

Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, told the delegates:

"The world of tomorrow must not be a restricted world of high walls, high suspicions and high animosities. We have tried that system and it does not work. It will be a world of competition, to be sure, but this competition must be constructive and not destructive."

Urges Long-Term Vision

Asserting that in the future national decisions must give more weight to economics and less to policies, Johnston continued:

"As businessmen our decisions in the future can be eithre helpful or harmful to international amity. We must, there fore, raise our sights and look beyond the immediate profit to the long-term gain. Self-interest will continue, as laways, to be the motive power which drives the wheels of progress. But we must distinguish between intelligent self-interest and blind selfishness. We must be big enough to aim at the greatest good for the greatest number, confident that in the long run the prosperity of any individual, of any company, of any nation, is best insured by the maintenance of a prosperous world."

Favors Reason And Trust

Robert Gaylord, president of the NAM, asserting that war results from economic maladjustments, said that "the more nearly we understand one another and our respective problems, the more easy it will lbe to correct these maladjustments and the more apt we are to resort to reason and trust in solutions, rather than the use of economic force."

The delegates were told by Eugene P. Thomas, president of National Foreign Trade Council, that they faced the task of planning to reconcile "divergent doctrines affecting the rebuilding of the world economy."

"To you is entrusted the charting of a course to greater world prosperity," he said. "As trustees for your own separate interests, the delegations present may in reality be the precursors of a world-wide commercial league of nations."

6 JAP VESSELS SUNK BY AMERICAN U-BOATS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10—(AP) Six enemy vessels including a light cruiser have been sunk by United States submarines in the Pacific and far Eastern waters, the Navy announced today.

The bag, which also included a medium converted seaplane tender, brought the total of enemy vessels sunk in the Pacific area to 831.

The text of Navy department communique No. 553:

"Pacific and far East:

"1—U. S. submarines have reported the sinking of six vessels, including one combatant ship and one naval auxiliary, as a result of operations against the enemy in these waters, as follows:

1 light cruiser;

1 medium converted seaplane tender;

3 medium cargo vessels;

1 medium tanker.

2—These actions have not been announced in any previous Navy department communique."

U-Boat Toll Reaches New Low

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—German U-boats sank fewer United Nations' merchant vessels in October than in any other month of the war.

This was reported in a joint Anglo-American statement issued last night by the Office of War Information.

The statement also said:

"Although the number of German U-boats destroyed was less than what has come to be considered a good monthly 'bag,' it compares very favorably with the number of Allied merchant vessels sunk by U-boats."

4th Marine Division Gets Presidential Unit Citation

Highest Group Award Given for Saipan and Tinian

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP).—The nation's highest group award, the Presidential Unit Citation, has been awarded to the 4th Marine Division for its capture of the islands of Saipan and Tinian.

The same citation went to the 1st Marine Division for the conquest of Guadalcanal, and to the 2d Marine Division for action at Tarawa.

Major General Harry Schmidt commanded the 4th Division during the storming of Saipan in June. After that operation he was elevated to corps commander, and Major General Clifton C. Cates, one of the heroes of Guadalcanal, took over the division command for the assault on Tinian about a month later.

The Distinguished Service Medal was awarded today to Rear Admiral Ernest Gregor Small for "exceptionally meritorious service" as commender of a task group of the 5th Fleet in recent action against Japanese islands, the Navy announced. The presentation was made in New York City, where Admiral Small is under medical treatment.

SERVICE MEDAL GIVEN ADM. SMALL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 — (AP) The Distinguished Service medal was awarded today to Rear Admiral Ernest Gregor Small.

The award was made for "exceptionally meritorious service" as commander of a task group of the 5th fleet in recent action against Japanese islands, the Navy announced.

The presentation was made in New York city where Admiral Small is under medical treatment.

Admiral Small is a native of Waltham, Mass. His wife lives at 92 Livingston street, New Haven, Conn.

Admiral Small previously was awarded the Navy Cross, the Legion of Merit and the Gold Star in lieu of a Second Legion of Merit.

The citation for the Distinguished Service medal credited Admiral Small, while commanding cruisers of a fast carrier task group during operations against the Gilbert islands in November and December, 1943, with providing "decisive support for our amphibious landings at Tarawa and Apamama."

In the assault on the Marshall islands in January and February, 1944, the citation said, Admiral Small "conducted the operations of his command boldly and with indominable force and, by adroit tactical empl yment of his small unit, succeeded in neutralizing important Japanese bases at Wotje and Maloelap with brilliant effectiveness."

Further, the citation said, Admiral Small "worked tirelessly in command of the support force including fleet oilers, during the powerful carrier strike against Palau, Yap and Woleai in the Carolines group on March 29-30 and April 1, providing essential services to the fleet where and when required."

AMERICANS MAY BYPASS KURILES

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 10 — (AP) Back from nearly fifteen months of war corresponding in the North Pacific for the Associated Press, Norman Bell said here today that Japan's Kurile islands probably could now be taken or bypassed any time the High command in Washington gave the word.

But whether such a move was in the war plans, he added, was shrouded in as much secrecy as the Aleutian islands are by fog or clouds.

"And those who don't know and can only guess," he said, "include the Japanese. To keep them guessing has been one of the big aims of the war up there for the last year and a half.

"We've given them annoying headaches at the top of their empire while they were getting hit so hard down below, in the central and south Pacific."

Bell said that the sea and air, clear across to the Kuriles, were now dominated by Vice Admiral Frank Jack Fletcher's North Pacific Navy force and Major General Davenport Johnson's Eleventh Army air force.

"Aleutian-based army and navy bombers," he said, "fly round trips of sixteen hundred to two thousand miles, all over open ocean and in nearly every kind of weather."

These land-based Venturas, Liberators and Mitchells, he added, "often shoot their way through Jap fighters practically over their own fields on Paramushiro and Shimushu."

Bell reported that Admiral Fletcher's warships have taken over on the sea as the planes have in the air. They have bombarded Paramushiro and Matsuwa, he said.

The returning correspondent saw much of the immense construction program among the Aleutians, westward to Attu. He said some of these big new island bases were obviously intended for permanent use.

Sees Early Action On Pearl Harbor

Washington, Nov. 10 (A. P.).—Navy Secretary Forrestal said today that some action on the report of a board of inquiry which investigated circumstances of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor may be expected within two weeks.

The report was submitted to the Navy Secretary on October 20 after a long series of hearings, at which it is understood that Rear-Admiral Kimmel and Major-Gen. Short gave their version of the affair.

50 MILLION G.I. PACKAGES

The shipment represents the greatest mass movement of package mail ever to leave this country. Delivery of the packages to the G.I. Joes will be by every type of army transportation, ranging from dog teams in the Arctic to camels in Africa and from special parachutes to jeeps and trucks.

Washington, Nov. 10 (A. P.).—The War Department announced today the names of 1,875 Army casualties in the European area.

Ullman, Artist, Killed In War

New York, Nov. 10 (AP)—Paul Ullman, 38, American artist, was killed in France August 25 while fighting with a French resistance group he had formed, it was learned today.

His art works were shown in New York, in Pittsburgh and in Paris. He was born in Paris, and was the son of Eugene P. Ullman an American painter.

New Jeep Threatens To Replace the Horse

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP).—Now comes a "jeep" that can be led like a horse.

This newest adaptation of the Army's most versatile vehicle, reports the November issue of "Air Force," official United States Army Air Forces magazine, is called the jungle jeep and is designed for use in areas inaccessible to larger vehicles.

Resembling an oversized toy wagon, the jungle jeep has a flat platform instead of seats. The engine is underneath, and a motorcycle-type hand throttle and hand-operated lever break are mounted on a swivel tiller bar that replaces the steering wheel, thus permitting the operator to lead, follow or ride the vehicle over rough terrain.

The jeep flat-top can carry 800 pounds of personnel, cargo or supplies, "Air Force" reports.

New Super Plane Gas

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—A "super fuel" now is being produced in limited amounts for combat planes.

Disclosing this today, J. A. Krug, chairman of the War Production Board, said the current output of the "super fuel" now is "very minor" when compared with the production of 100-octane gasoline, but will be gradually stepped up as engines capable of using it efficiently come off assembly lines.

The new "super fuel" will increase cruising range and "full-throttle" performance of planes.

Since a barrel of crude will produce only about half as much of the new fuel as it will of 100-octane, the use of the higher-powered fuel is expected to be limited, for the near future at least, to carrier-based aircraft and super-bombers.

Jewish Welfare Parley Topic

Miami, Fla., Nov. 10 (AP)—Post-war welfare of Jewish people made homeless b ythe Nazis will be discussed at the Jewish World Conference next week, Moises Goldman, head of the Argentine delegation, said here.

Goldman, president of the Federation and Association of Jews in the Argentine, arrived by Pan American clipper last night en route to the meeting at New York. He is accompanied by his wife.

"The movement to Palestine will be discussed," he reported, "and ways devised for returning the homeless to their country.

"Many will not wish to return to Palestine, but we hope to assist them in settling in countries throughout the world where men will be judged by their personal contribution to society and will not be segregated as to race or color."

BEVERAGE LIQUOR TO BE PRODUCED DURING JANUARY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 — (AP) "Drinkin' liquor" will come from most of the nation's beverage distilleries in January.

The second holiday from industrial alcohol production since October, 1942, was announced today by Chairman J. A. Krug of the War Production board. He notified the distilleries their facilities "are not needed for war production" during January, thus freeing them to make liquor, principally whisky and gin.

Might Include Bourbon

And there are indications that, unlike during the August holiday, the production might include bourbon whisky. In August the distilleries were not permitted to use corn, essential ingredient of bourbon.

A bumper corn crop this year may prompt the War Food administration to make some of it available. While no formal decision has been announced, WFA officials are represented as leaning to the view there is enough corn in sight for both livestock feeding and some bourbon.

Krug indicated the January holiday will not be the only one next year. While large amounts of industrial alcohol will be required for war purposes, he said, the industry's capacity has reached such a point "that occasional releases of beverage facilities can probably be made during 1945 without jeopardizing the war program."

The January release of the distilleries was made possible, Krug reported, by a reduction in alcohol requirements for synthetic rubber during the last three months of this year. The lowering of alcohol requirements resulted from increased production of butadiene from petroleum.

During the August holiday, distilleries produced about 54,000,000 proof gallons of beverage spirits. Of nearly 130 distilleries, which normally make beverage spirits, only a few did not turn back at least part of their facilities to that product in August. There are other distillers whose product even in peacetime is industrial alcohol.

Will Help Release Stocks

While beverage alcohol produced in January will not reach retail outlets in the near future, it will have an immediate effect by releasing stocks already in warehouses.

Following the pattern set in August, most of the January output is expected to be used with aged whiskies to produce blends; about 30 per cent for gin, and the small remainder of straight whisky.

Because of increased facilities, the industry now can produce in one month more than a normal year's supply of liquor.

Stocks of whisky on hand declined steadily after the industry converted to industrial alcohol in October, 1942. At that time, stocks totaled 487,550,265 gallons. Even with the August production of 54,000,000 proof gallons, stocks totaled only 340,970,618 at the end of September, 1944, the last month reported by the Internal Revenue bureau.

WPB sources disclosed that another order is "under consideration" which would authorize distilleries not shifting to beverage spirits during January to produce alcohol for commercial purposes.

The supply of alcohol for such items as cosmetics, paints and yarnishes long has been limited. The available supply now is allocated.

CHICAGO SUN'S NEWSPRINT CUT

WPB Punishes Violation of Rules by Paring Quota.

Washington, Nov. 10 (A. P.).—The War Production Board today ordered the Chicago Sun to reduce its consumption of newsprint by 886.89 tons by the end of September, 1945. The agency contended that the newspaper was in willful violation of an order limiting the use of newsprint. Its formal order said:

"During the second quarter of 1944, the Chicago Sun used or caused to be used 886.89 tons of print paper in excess of the quota of print paper which it was permitted to consume during the quarter under provisions of limitation order L-240, and in violation of that order. The Chicago Sun had full knowledge of the terms and provisions of limitation order L-240 and the violations were willful.

"This excessive use of paper has diverted scarce materials to uses not authorized by the War Production Board, and has hampered and impeded the war effort of the United States of America."

Press Release Issued.

The WPB action, announced through the agency's compliance division, was taken, a press release said, "in full accord with proposals made by the WPB's newspaper publishers' industry advisory committee, July 14, 1944 that all publishers consuming more newsprint than allowed by their quotas be strictly dealt with for violations under limitation order L-240 and its amendments."

The press release continued:

"The newspaper publishers had also insisted that full publicity be given such violations. They further recommended that prompt repayment of all newsprint used illegally be made by reductions of paper quotas in subsequent months.

Reduction of Quotas.

"The newspaper has been directed to reduce its normal use of newsprint paper under quota by 197.08 tons during the months of November and December, 1944; by 295.64 tons during the first quarter of 1945; by 295.63 tons during the second quarter of 1945; by 98.54 tons during the third quarter of 1945.

"The Chicago Sun is the second newspaper to be cited for violations in newsprint consumption. The Wichita Beacon of Wichita, Kan., was similarly ordered in August, 1944, to reduce its paper consumption by ninety tons, between September, 1944, and March, 1945, WPB pointed out."

The Chicago Sun is published by Field Enterprises, Inc., headed by Marshall Field 3d.

Sun's Manager Replies.

In Chicago, Clem J. Randau, business manager of the Sun, denied that the paper had willfully violated the limitation orders, and said that he would request a rehearing before the compliance division.

"The question of violation as alleged," Mr. Randau's statement said, "is purely technical. The Sun has made a continuous effort to have the printing and publishing division of WPB fix a reasonable and equitable base.

"This was made necessary because the Sun commenced publication on December 4, 1941, and was not covered by the newsprint rationing order which set 1941 as the base year. Finally in September, 1944, the WPB appeals board approved a formula which set a base quota and a consumption quota amounting to 6.6 per cent above the Sun's newsprint usage for the year 1942.

"The quota as finally determined, if made effective at the beginning of the second quarter of 1944 (the quarter in which the Sun is charged with an excessive use of newsprint), would have automatically eliminated any question of non-compliance. The Sun further maintains that the delay in the final decision was solely responsible for the charges of violation."

Black Market In Cigarettes Is Target Of OPA Crackdown

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—The Office of Price Administration has instructed its field offices to crack down on what it terms a "growing black market in cigarettes."

Thomas I. Emerson, OPA enforcement chief, said today that while the situation "has not reached serious proportions, we are very much concerned that it may."

Enforcement action already has been taken in a number of areas and is imminent in others, Emerson said.

Earlier in the day, W. E. Fitzgerald, OPA chief for the Detroit district, warned wholesalers and jobbers to "clean up the cigarette situation" there. He directed dealers to deliver 60 per cent. of each retailer's June, 1943, purchases or "the OPA will move right into your offices and examine your books."

"In Bad Odor"

Fitzgerald said there is a "bad black market in Detroit" and "the situation is in bad odor."

"There is no reason," he added, "why any person should have to stand in line for two blocks to get a pack of cigarettes."

Emerson said OPA has been watching the cigarette picture closely "since the shortage became more acute six weeks or two months ago."

While he declined to name specific areas, Emerson declared that in some cities "racketeer-type practices have been appearing."

The flow of cigarettes into regular trade channels has been diminishing and in some places sales are actually on the old bootleg "ask-for-Joe" basis, Emerson said.

No Good Reason For Shortage

He added that the shortage might be attributed to one or both of two reasons.

"One," he said, "is an increase in smoking. The other is possible hoarding by the public.

"The latter situation would create an artificial shortage and play right into the hands of racketeers by causing a bidding up of prices."

He said that while production of cigarettes this year for domestic consumption is less than in 1943, it is greater than in 1942.

"Thus there is no good reason for an acute shortage at this time," Emerson added.

Railway's Strike In Chicago Hits Commuting

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP)—Transportation of an estimated 75,000 Chicago commuters was disrupted this morning when 600 employes of the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee, and the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin electric railroads stopped work as efforts failed to settle a wage dispute.

The strikers, members of the Brotherhod of Railroad Trainmen and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, left their jobs at the designated hour of 4 A. M. No settlement was imminent in the months-old controversy. A scheduled strike September 18 was averted upon intervention of President Roosevelt, who referred the dispute to a special mediation board.

Thousands Stranded

The disruption of service seriously affected the transportation of thousands of workers, as well as soldiers and sailors at Fort Sheridan and the Great Lakes Naval Training Center.

Police Lieutenant George Barnes, who said policemen were stationed along routes of both lines in Chicago, said there was no disorder, but confusion mounted as commuters sought to reach their places of employment in Chicago and in north and west suburbs. Hundreds were left stranded when the trains halted.

The North Shore normally operates 165 trains daily on its route to Milwaukee and on a second route to Waukegan, the training center and Fort Sheridan.

Federal Seizure Suggested

Company spokesmen and union officials said they had exhausted every hope of averting the strike and said the settlement would come only by President Roosevelt ordering the lines be taken over by Federal officials.

The mediation board had recommended the roads grant wage increases of 5 cents an hour to the union members, 4 cents an hour less than they had asked. The brotherhood councils rejected the proposal. Current wages, rail officials said, are 92 cents an hour for motormen and conductors and 80 cents for collectors and brakemen.

Most Of Packard Co. Workers Return

Detroit, Nov. 10 (AP)—The Packard Motor Car Company had called all but 2,000 of its 39,000 employes back to work today following termination of a strike of 200 rod polishers which company officials said had forced them to close the plant.

Several departments resumed production yesterday when the polishers returned to work, the company reported, and the only two departments still closed will reopen Monday.

A delegation of metal polishers from Packard Local 190, United Automobile Workers (CIO), was granted permission to appear before the union's executive board in Chicago to present the grievances that caused them to walk out Tuesday.

Union officials said the strike resulted from the upgrading of Negroes to polishing jobs, but denied the company was forced to close the entire plant.

The Fruehauf Trailer Company was closed for the third time in two weeks. Fruehauf spokesman said 1,200 employes walked out Thursday in protest against the discharge of two employes in connection with a previous strike.

Buffalo Transport Strike Ends

BUFFALO, Nov. 10 (AP).—An intra-union dispute which led to interruption of trolley and bus service in Buffalo for two hours this morning and made thousands of war-plant employees late for work was settled this afternoon, a union official announced.

Bernard J. Yungbluth, president of the International Railway Company, said about 100 operators reported "sick" this morning, but returned to work two hours later and service was returned to normal.

SIKES RESIGNS SEAT IN CONGRESS FOR ARMY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10—(AP) Rep. Robert L. F. Sikes (D-Fla.) has resigned his seat in Congress to become an Army major, assigned to "a special mission for the War department."

Sikes, 38-year-old member of the House Military committee, was re-elected Tuesday. His office said today the resignation did not apply to the new two-year term in the 79th congress convening in January, thus indicating he may return to the House later.

The nature of Sikes' Army assignment was not announced.

His Congressional office aides said, will remain open and his secretarial staff will be retained during his absence.

First elected to Congress in 1940, Sikes is publisher of a weekly newspaper at Crestview, Fla., and is past president of the Florida Press association.

COMMUNISM ISSUE IS CALLED 'PHONY'

Mrs. Roosevelt Says Majority Repudiated Isolationism

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today called Communism a "phony" election issue and declared isolationism was repudiated by the majority.

Mrs. Roosevelt told her news conference that there is no possible danger of Communism as long as people don't experience the kind of hardships that weaken their faith in democracy.

The same answer holds for any threat of national socialism, she said, in reply to a question.

Isolationism Repudiated

Although the majority of voters "very clearly" repudiated isolationism, Mrs. Roosevelt asserted, that does not mean that isolationists will stop trying to influence people.

Commenting on a question about expanding social security benefits, the First Lady said she hoped that would be done primarily on the basis of including more people, such as agricultural and domestic servants groups.

She suggested that a simpler way of handling social security be found.

Inaugural To Be Different

Mrs. Roosevelt said she believed that the President's fourth inaugural would be "somewhat different" from peacetime ones. She indicated that, for instance, refreshments would be less elaborate because of rationing regulations.

The President's wife declared that the next four years will be the most difficult the world has ever been through.

TWO MAJOR POSTS WILL GO TO WEST

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10—(AP) Two of the nation's top legislative posts will go to the West when the new congress organizes in January.

They are the chairmanships of the Senate's Military and Agriculture committees, now held by Senator Robert R. (Bob) Reynolds and Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith.

Smith was defeated in the South Carolina Democratic primary while Reynolds did not seek re-election.

By the traditional right of seniority, Senator Thomas (D-Utah) has the first claim on the Military committee post, should he decide to give up chairmanship of the Education and Labor committee. If he doesn't, Senator Johnson (D-Colo) would take over.

Similarly, the Agriculture chairmanship is available to Senator Wheeler (D-Mont), if he should prefer it to his present chairmanship of the Interstate Commerce committee. If he doesn't, then it goes to Senator Thomas (D-Okla).

Both Thomases were re-elected Tuesday. Wheeler is a holdover.

Neither Wheeler nor Thomas of Utah have made public their intentions. Some Senators think Wheeler might take the farm post, most others think he wouldn't. There is strong belief that Thomas would swap the labor for the War committee leadership.

Senator Johnson of Colorado is not only in line for the military post, if Thomas of Utah turns it down, but he likewise is eligible for the Interstate Commerce top spot if Wheeler should switch to Agriculture.

Another chairman, of a lesser known committee, lost out in the Democratic primary—Senator Bennett Champ Clark of Missouri—who heads the Interoceanic Canals group. Next in line of succession is Senator Pepper (D-Fla), who was re-elected Tuesday.

Michigan Is Still Unsnarling Vote

Detroit, Nov. 10 (AP)—The untangling of a bewildering volume of errors by Wayne county election precinct workers gave President Roosevelt an apparently safe margin of 17,109 votes today in the race for Michigan's 19 electoral college votes for President, but the county's Board of Canvassers faced long days of work to complete the correction of mistakes.

With only 16 of the State's 3,841 precincts missing and the count complete in all out-State counties, the vote was:

Roosevelt	1,097,606
Thomas E. Dewey	1,080,497

GOP Won't Concede

E. Cyril Bevan, Democratic National Committeeman from Michigan, predicted the President would be found in the complete official returns to have won Michigan from native-son Dewey by 20,000 or more votes.

John R. Dethmers, Republican State chairman and Attorney General-elect, said he was not ready to concede the State to Roosevelt, and that Republicans were watching closely what had happened in predominantly Democratic Wayne.

Some Still Uncounted

Bevan made it clear that he made no claim revision of the Wayne county figures would destroy the landslide majorities of the entire Republican State ticket, from Governor down the line.

Virtually every kind of error that could vex the canvassers had occurred. Their first task today was untangling of the 16 precincts still uncounted. They had the ballot boxes from 13 of these precincts, but no official tally books, and said that unless the books were locked inside the boxes, all of the ballots would have to be recounted.

Three Are Missing

The other three precincts simply were missing—nobody knew what had happened to them, but the canvassers said they assumed the ballot boxes and tally books had been sent to the wrong address and would turn up as others had done yesterday.

Complete outstate tabulation showed Dewey had run up a margin of 213,607 votes over Roosevelt in the 82 counties outside Wayne. In Wayne county, however, the President was credited on the face of the late returns with a 230,716 margin, which more than wiped out what normally might have been expected to be a winning lead.

I.O.Says P.A.C.Backed 114 Election Winners

Takes Credit in Defeat of Nye, Fish and Danaher

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP).—"The C. I. O. News" prepared a list today of 114 election winners who, it said, were backed by the Congress of Industrial Organizations' Political Action Committee.

The publication did not give any figures, merely presenting a state-by-state summary of results of races in which it said the P. A. C. took a stand.

The tabulation, which "The C. I. O. News" called incomplete, also showed that a number of candidates supported by the P. A. C. lost, but the data given was not detailed enough for a precise count.

"The C. I. O. News" emphasized that the summary was its own hurried compilation for next Monday's edition, and not the P. A. C.'s report.

Senators Gerald P. Nye, Republican of North Dakota, and John A. Danaher, Republican of Connecticut, and Representatives Hamilton Fish, Republican of New York, and Stephen A. Day, Republican of Illinois, were among those reported beaten with P. A. C. opposition.

Representative Clare Boothe Luce, Republican of Connecticut; Senator Charles W. Tobey, Republican of New Hampshire; Senator-elect Homer Capehart, Republican of Indiana; Representative Jessie Sumner, Republican of Illinois; Representative Ralph E. Church, Republican of Illinois; Representative Clare Hoffman, Republican of Michigan, and Representative E. E. Cox, Democrat of Georgia, were given special mention as winners whom the P. A. C. either opposed or refused to support.

F.D.R. Guess Too Low

NOV 11 1944

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—President Roosevelt's advance guess on his fourth-term election:

335 electoral votes for himself.

196 for his opponent.

He gave these figures to his news conference today when reporters asked how his usual forecast had turned out.

Mr. Roosevelt observed smilingly that he wasn't very accurate.

He told the newsmen he called off the 25-cent bet he made on the election because he got scared. Under the New York law a voter loses his ballot if he participates on a wager.

316,013 N.Y. Margin

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 10 (AP)—President Roosevelt's New York State plurality over Governor Dewey totaled 316,013, a recheck of the complete unofficial returns disclosed today.

An Associated Press tabulation center error, made by an operator processing returns for mechanical addition, gave Dewey 55,000 more than his actual 6,248 votes in Lewis county. The Roosevelt plurality of 261,013 reported yesterday thus was 55,000 less than the correct figure.

Expense items covered oyster roasts in Maryland, lawn parties in New Jersey and $2,500 worth of transportation for voters in Oklahoma. Most money, as usual, was listed for advertising of various kinds, or for radio time.

Dual Task Facing Roosevelt

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—President Roosevelt and the new Democratic-controlled Congress inherited from the 1944 elections today an opportunity for the greatest teamwork job in American history.

The votes of 45,000,000 Americans had been counted, a majority—better than 3,000,000—for Roosevelt. They gave him and his party a working majority of at least 55 in the House and 19 in the Senate. They also gave the party 25 of the 48 Governorships of the nation.

Ahead lies the dual challenge for the President and the 79th Congress to wind up the war and together write a peace that will last.

"No One-Man Job"

This, as the President's opponent, Thomas E. Dewey, said in his campaign, is no one-man job.

On the President's part he faces:

The impending conference with Churchill and Stalin; the Chinese problem enhanced by removal of Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell at Chiang Kai-shek's personal request; decisions on the makeup of the new Cabinet, provided any changes would be contemplated; a number of major appointments now likely to be made momentarily.

The retiring Congress meeting next week has some work to do, but the spotlight henceforth is on the new one that convenes in January.

Must Assign Funds

This 79th Congress must appropriate the final funds of war, it must equip the President with special wartime powers that are due soon to expire, renew anti-inflation and other economic controls, act on taxes and other domestic matters. Principally, though, it will be the "peace" Congress.

Whatever Roosevelt and his cohorts work out for the peace must go before the United States Senate, and only a two thirds majority there will sanction it. That will require some Republican votes.

Secretary of State Hull has not ignored the Republicans in the Senate and has taken them into h confidence, as well as the Democrats, in frequent parleys on pr ress of the peace plans.

Hot Battles Previously

Roosevelt and the old Congress have battled tooth-and-nail on some issues where Southern Democrats teamed up with Republicans. But on major questions involving the war, the Congress gave the Administration pretty much what it wanted.

Senator Harry S. Truman, the Vice-President-elect, sounded the new teamwork cry, declaring it was his first goal to keep that mile between the White House and the Capitol only a geographical barrier.

Governor Dewey came nearer to winning than any other defeated Presidential candidate since 1916.

Present Box Score

With 8,588 of the 130,789 districts still to report, this was the box score:

Roosevelt, 24,249,098; Dewey, 21,195,298; electoral vote, 432 to 99; 36 States to 12.

House — 242 Democrats, 187 Republicans, 2 minor parties, 4 undecided (all in Missouri).

Senate—56 Democrats, 37 Republicans, 1 Progressive, 2 unsettled (Pennsylvania, Missouri).

Missouri counted its service vote today to determine the result of a Senatorial and four House contests. Republican Forrest C. Donnell held a slight edge over Democrat Roy McKittrick for the Senate post, while three incumbent Republican Representatives clung to slim leads and a fourth Republican trailed.

Hull Is Reported Eager To Hold Cabinet Job

NOV 11 1944

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—Associates of Secretary of State Hull represented him today as eager to remain in his post as long as he can.

They are likewise convinced, they said, that President Roosevelt intends to keep him just as long as he can.

Their remarks were in connection with a report that John G. Winant, now ambassador to England and former Republican Governor of New Hampshire, might be the next Secretary of State.

Reported Better

Other reports of Cabinet changes are current now, as is usual right after an election when members customarily submit their resignations for the President to accept if he wishes.

Hull, 73, went to Naval Hospital week before last with a throat ailment. But the word at the State Department is that he is getting along well, further:

He is so intensely interested in carrying forward the Dumbarton Oaks plan for an international peace organization, and in other continuing efforts, that only the strictest orders from doctors could induce him to quit work.

Perkins Questioned

Vice-President Wallace and Under Secretary of State Stettinius have been mentioned as possible successors to Hull, when and if.

Secretary of Labor Perkins, asked about her plans, commented only that someone is forever predicting she will quit.

Winant also has been mentioned for this post, as have John R. Steelman, recently resigned department conciliator and President George Harrison of the Railway Clerks' Union. Sidney Hillman, head of the CIO Political Action Committee, has been talked of in this connection, despite the fact that the AFL faction of organized labor has made apparent its objections to him—or any other CIO leader.

Biddle "Happy In Job"

Aides of Attorney General Biddle said that he is "happy in his job" and discounted that Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia might head the Justice Department.

Robert E. Hannegan, who managed President Roosevelt's fourthterm campaign, when asked whether he would become Postmaster General, replied that "we already have one." This is Frank Walker.

Interior Secretary Ickes has submitted his resignation but no one at his department expects it to be accepted.

At the Treasury and Commerce departments, respectively, reports that Secretaries Morgenthau and Jones may leave draw denials. The same is true of Secretary of Agriculture Wickard.

War Change Doubted

There has been comparatively little talk of changes in the War and Navy portfolios, held by 77-year-old Henry L. Stimson and James V. Forrestal.

Some mention has been made of Stimson going to the State Department, to be succeeded at War by Assistant Secretary James J. McCloy.

Whether Mr. Roosevelt changes his Cabinet staff or not, he has five appointments to make: A successor to James F. Byrnes, war mobilizer who wants to take a rest from public life; a successor to James Lawrence Fly, resigned chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, and three members of the new Surplus War Property Board.

RECEPTION GIVEN FDR ON RETURN TO WHITE HOUSE

NOV 11 1944

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10—(AP) President Roosevelt rode back to the White House and a fourth term today along rain-puddled Pennsylvania Avenue, jammed from curb to building line with drenched but cheering citizens.

The impromptu homecoming party attracted 250,000 persons. Traffic Chief William A. Van Duzer estimated as his men coiled up four and a half miles of rope and cable which were stretched along the parade route to hold the president's well-wishers on the sidewalks.

"This is a very wonderful welcome home you have given me," the President smiled when his big open car paused briefly at the Columbus fountain in Union Station plaza. He grinned, took off his dripping hat, and waved cheerily to the crowd.

Vice President Wallace and Senator Truman, who will succeed to that office January 20, huddled in raincoats beside Mr. Roosevelt in the back seat. Up front beside the driver perched young Johnny Boettiger, the President's grandson.

The rain which had spattered briskly on acres of vari-colored umbrellas slackened as the President's car purred out of the station on the final lap of his trip from Hyde Park, N. Y.

Fifty motorcyclemen deployed in a V-for-victory formation to clear the route for the President's procession.

Mr. Roosevelt's personal and official families greeted him in his private car soon after it rolled in from Hyde Park. Mrs. Roosevelt's limousine followed the President's automobile, along with other automobiles bearing cabinet members and other high governmental officials.

Bands tooted merrily throughout the creeping 20 minute drive to the White House. Bouncing banners proclaimed: "In '44 we need you more" and "You're back and we're back of you."

The schools let out the youngsters for the celebration. Government girls trooped out of the vast departmental buildings, and a paratrooper back from the war climbed high on a monument for a glimpse of his Commander in Chief.

Two 'teen-age girls stood on a downtown curb.

"I remember the very first time I saw President Roosevelt," one of them reminisced. "Mother had to hold me up in her arms so I could see him. Do you remember the first time you ever saw him?"

"Golly no," her companion replied. "How old do you think I am, for goodness sake."

DEWEY AND PARTY GOING TO GEORGIA

Albany, Nov. 10 (A. P.).—Gov. Dewey said today he would leave tomorrow morning for Sea Island, Ga., where he will spend about two weeks resting from his presidential campaign.

Mrs. Dewey and their two sons, Thomas Jr., 12, and John Martin, 8, will accompany the defeated Republican presidential nominee.

Others in the party will be Paul E. Lockwood, the Governor's secretary and Mr. and Mrs. Carl T. (Pat) Hogan, friends of the Deweys who will join them in New York city.

An aid said that as far as politics was concerned the Governor would be "deaf, dumb and blind."

He said the Governor was pleased with his large popular vote in the presidential race. President Roosevelt's margin—so far slightly more than 3,000,000 votes—was the smallest in any presidential election since 1916.

FIELD DISPATCHES REPORTED INDICATIONS THAT THE ENEMY STILL WAS OFF BALANCE FROM THE ATTACK, LAUNCHED AT DAWN TWO DAYS AGO, AND FROM THE DEMORALIZING AND DESTRUCTIVE EFFECT OF 4,000 TONS OF ANTI-PERSONNEL BOMBS DROPPED YESTERDAY BY MORE THAN 1,300 AMERICAN HEAVY BOMBERS.

LT. GEN. GEORGE S. PATTON, JR., NOW HAS SENT SEVEN DIVISIONS INTO ACTION -- ONE OF THEM THE FOURTH ARMORED DIVISION. A DISPATCH FROM PARIS SAID THERE NO LONGER WAS ANY ATTEMPT AT SUPREME HEADQUARTERS TO MINIMIZE THE FORCE OF THE ONSLAUGHT, ALTHOUGH ITS FULL SCOPE STILL CANNOT BE MEASURED.

THE SCALE OF THE ATTACK ALREADY UNFOLDED, HOWEVER, MADE IT PLAIN THAT THE GERMANS COULD NOT DREAM OF ANY WINTER LULL IN WHICH THE ALLIED ARMIES, DRAWN UP FOR 500 MILES THROUGH FRANCE, WESTERN GERMANY AND HOLLAND, WOULD BE WEATHER-BOUND OR SHACKLED BY SUPPLY DIFFICULTIES.

THERE WAS NOTHING IN YESTERDAY'S EXTRAVAGANT USE OF AIR POWER -- THE MIGHTIEST GROUND SUPPORT EFFORT SINCE THE ST.LO BREAK-THROUGH IN NORMANDY -- TO INDICATE THAT MASS BOMBING IS ONLY A FAIR WEATHER WEAPON. THE BIG BOMBERS WENT TO THEIR TARGETS THROUGH ICING CLOUDS AND BOMBED THROUGH RAINSTORMS. SNOW FELL ON THE BATTLE-FIELDS.

BOTH ENDS OF THE THIRD ARMY FRONT CURVED EASTWARD BEYOND METZ, PUTTING PATTON'S FORCES IN POSITION TO CUT ACROSS THAT STRONGHOLD'S REAR COMMUNICATIONS.

THE UPPER END WAS AT BERG, A TOWN 22 MILES NORTHEAST OF METZ ON THE WEST BANK OF THE MOSELLE AND THREE MILES SOUTHWEST OF THE JUNCTURE OF THE FRENCH, LUXEMBOURG AND GERMAN FRONTIERS. THE SOUTHERN FLANK STRETCHED 33 MILES SOUTHEAST OF METZ TO MONCOURT, JUST BELOW CHATEAU SALINS.

DRIVING GENERALLY NORTHEASTWARD, FOURTH ARMORED DIVISION TANKS YESTERDAY RUMBLED ACROSS THE HIGHWAY LEADING FROM METZ TO CHATEAU SALINS, REACHING THE VICINITY OF DELME AND VIVIERS IN A SALIENT THAT WAS 15 OR 16 MILES FROM THE MAIN HIGHWAY RUNNING EASTWARD FROM METZ TO SAARBRUCKEN.

A15

A DISPATCH FROM ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR CORRESPONDENT LEWIS HAWKINS SAID THAT MAJ. GEN. JOHN WOOD'S TANKS PASSED ALONG ROADS OVERLOOKED BY GERMANS HOLDING THE 1,200-FOOT HIGH COTE DE DELME RIDGE THREE MILES NORTHWEST OF THE CAPTURED VILLAGE OF ORIOCOURT.

"WITH EXCELLENT OBSERVATION FROM THIS FOUR-MILE-LONG PASS, WHICH DOMINATES THE ROLLING COUNTRYSIDE FOR MILES AROUND AND PRESUMABLY IS WELL SPOTTED WITH GUN EMPLACEMENTS, IT SEEMED INCREDIBLE THAT OUR TANKS WERE NOT POUNDED UNMERCIFULLY," SAID HAWKINS. "BUT IN RIDING WITH THEM AND WATCHING THEM PASS FOR A PERIOD OF MORE THAN TWO HOURS WE SAW NO CONCERTED SHELLING."

WAITING UNTIL THE HEAVY BOMBERS HAD GOT IN THEIR LICKS, TROOPS OF TWO INFANTRY DIVISIONS CROSSED THE MOSELLE RIVER AT TWO POINTS NORTH OF METZ YESTERDAY. TOWNS CAPTURED INCLUDED KOENIGSMACHER AND HAUTE-HAM, JUST BELOW BERG AND ONLY 11 MILES FROM THE SAAR BASIN.

UNDATED TOKYO LIFE (330)

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NOV 11 1944

THE JAPANESE, PARTICULARLY THOSE IN TOKYO, DON'T HAVE MUCH FUN ANY MORE.

EVERYTHING TO EAT AND DRINK IS RATIONED. TOKYO IS BLACKED OUT NIGHTLY--SO BLACK THAT EVEN A NEWSPAPER MAN CAN'T FIND HIS WAY AROUND. THERE IS A SHORTAGE OF SAKE BARS, RESTAURANTS, BOOKS AND DRAMA, AND A THREAT OF INFLATION HANGS OVER THE EMPIRE.

NIPPONESE RADIO BROADCASTS REPORTED THESE THINGS TODAY.

LIFE IN TOKYO WAS EXPLAINED AS CHEERFULLY AS POSSIBLE BY YASYSABURO AKIYAMA, A STAFF MEMBER OF THE NEWSPAPER ASAHI, SHIMBUN, IN A BROADCAST TO THE PEOPLE OF THE EMPIRE. IT WAS PICKED UP BY THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION.

AKIYAMA, WHO GOT LOST IN THE BLACKOUT WHILE TRYING TO FIND THE BROADCASTING STUDIO BUT FINALLY MADE IT, EXPRESSED KEEN REGRET OVER THE DISAPPEARANCE OF LITTLE RESTAURANTS WHERE THE PEOPLE USED TO EAT BETWEEN MEALS.

THIS EATING BETWEEN MEALS WAS AN OLD JAPANESE CUSTOM. AT MID-MORNING AND TOWARD THE FAG-END OF THE AFTERNOON THE TOKYO RESIDENT WOULD GO TO ONE OF THESE PLACES AND TEAR INTO A RICE BALL

WOULD GO TO ONE OF THESE PLACES AND TEAR INTO A RICE BALL, A HUNK OF RAW TUNA AND A CUP OF TEA.

AKIYAMA ALSO SORT OF APOLOGIZED FOR THE DISAPPEARANCE OF REGULAR PLAYS AND DRAMAS. HE EXPLAINED THAT ONLY THEATRICAL PRODUCTIONS BENEFICIAL TO THE WAR EFFORT WERE PERMITTED AND ACKNOWLEDGED THAT THIS MEANT THE EXCLUSION OF THE BEST TYPE OF PERFORMANCES.

"THIS," HE SAID, "IS NO TIME FOR PLAY FOR THE SAKE OF THE DRAMA WORLD."

AKIYAMA SUGGESTED THAT FOR PASTIME IT MIGHT BE A GOOD IDEA TO CURL UP WITH A GOOD BOOK, BUT IN THE SAME BREADTH REPORTED THAT ALL THE SHOPS WERE OUT OF PRE-WAR BOOKS; THAT FEW NEW ONES WERE BEING PRINTED AND THAT WHENEVER ANYONE WANTS TO BUY A MAGAZINE HE MUST DIG UP NOT ONLY THE PURCHASE PRICE BUT ALSO AN OLD MAGAZINE TO COUNTER-BALANCE THE DRAIN ON THE PAPER SUPPLY.

NEVERTHELESS, AKIYAMA ADDED THE PEOPLE ARE "NOT INACTIVE." HE NOTED CROWDS OF "LIVELY PEOPLE" RIDING STREET CARS, AND LONG

QUEUES AT THE 164 GOVERNMENT-ESTABLISHED "PEOPLE'S DRINKING SPOTS," WHERE A CUSTOMER GETS A DISH OF FOOD AND A BOTTLE OF SAKE FOR 30 TO 38 CENTS.

UNDATED POISON GAS

THE TOKYO RADIO LAST NIGHT TERMED AS "CHUNGKING PROPAGANDA" THE CHINESE ACCUSATION THAT THEY WERE USING POISON GAS. THE TEXT OF THE ENEMY BROADCAST, AS RECORDED BY CBS, FOLLOWS:

"A CHUNGKING NEWSPAPER THURSDAY REPORTED THAT CHUNGKING ARMY AUTHORITIES HAVE ANNOUNCED THAT JAPANESE FORCES IN THEIR ONSLAUGHT ON KWILIN USED POISON GAS. IT IS STILL THE SAME PROPAGANDA THEY RESORT TO WHENEVER THE WAR SITUATION IS UNFAVORABLE TO THE CHUNGKING ARMY, AS WAS THE CASE WITH OUR HUNAN OPERATION. AMONG THE STEPS CONTEMPLATED, THE BROADCAST SAID, WAS ONE TO GROUP ALL PRODUCTION UNITS OF A SIMILAR NATURE UNDER "CENTRALIZED MANAGEMENT IN ORDER TO INCREASE EFFICIENCY."

U. S. FLIERS WIPE OUT JAPANESE CONVOY, 6 DESTROYERS, 4 TRANSPORTS, 8,000 TROOPS; PATTON 5 MILES FROM METZ, CUTS OUTLETS

10 ENEMY SHIPS SUNK IN BID TO REINFORCE LEYTE

Only Remnants of 8,000 Fresh Troops Reach Shore After Battle.

MacArthur Says Japs to Make Attempt to Crush U. S. Forces.

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, SUNDAY, Nov. 12.—(AP) Carrier planes of the U. S. Third fleet destroyed an entire Japanese convoy of four transports and six destroyers in Ormoc bay today, smashing the second Nipponese attempt in three days to reinforce their Leyte island army.

Only remnants of an estimated 8,000 fresh enemy troops reached shore, after a slashing dawn battle.

13 Planes Destroyed

(Reporting the same action from Pearl Harbor, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz disclosed that the attacking Navy Hellcats, Avengers and divebombers shot down 13 Nipponese planes covering the ships and perhaps bagged five more.)

(A two-engined enemy reconnaissance plane and a divebomber were shot down near the Third fleet carriers. Seven Navy planes were lost but most of the pilots and crewmen were believed to have been rescued.)

The Japanese lost 13 destroyers and seven transports, plus thousands of men, in their attempts today and last Thursday and Friday to land reinforcements.

Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, the new Japanese commander, has "chosen Western Leyte, as a main battleground for his supreme effort to crush our liberating forces," Gen. Douglas MacArthur said in today's communique.

He said Japan's conqueror of Malaya is attempting to land sufficient forces to break out of the "Yamashita line," the American-encircled area around Ormoc, last Japanese stronghold on Leyte.

Yanks Make New Gains

American ground forces made new gains across the rugged terrain south of Carigara bay, as the Yank airmen smashed the latest reinforcement effort some 20 miles southward.

The Naval airmen, attacking in force, caught the Japanese convoy as it slipped into Ormoc bay under cover of early morning darkness.

(Lief Erickson, Associated Press war correspondent at Pearl Harbor, said "the report of the convoy destruction discloses that Third fleet carrier forces again have undertaken direct support of MacArthur's ground operations on Leyte.

("Opposed by the Third fleet plane power, the Japanese attempts to throw more troops into the defense of Leyte should become increasingly difficult.")

Yesterday's account of the Thursday-Friday attacks on the earlier convoy underlined the fact that MacArthur's land-based air arm still is somewhat limited on Leyte. He had to call on bombers from rear bases to help in the assault.

It was Third and Seventh fleet airpower which covered MacArthur in his landings on Leyte Oct. 20, and later dealt some of the big blows which crushed the Japanese fleet in the second naval battle of the Philippines sea.

4 Transports Sunk

(Nimitz' report of the convoy attack listed the same number of ships—four transports, six destroyers—but whereas MacArthur said all were sunk, Nimitz said the four transports and three destroyers were "seen to sink," two other destroyers were "thought to have sunk" and the sixth was listed as "damaged.")

30. 24 — 20307

Elements of the 1st Cavalry division, pushing over rough terrain, were fighting eight miles south of Carigara, while the 24th division was maintaining steady pressure against stubbornly fighting Japanese on the Ormoc road.

While the Japanese convoy was being slashed, other planes attacked additional enemy shipping in the Visayan area. Full reports, however, have not been received.

Simultaneously, army fighter planes assaulted enemy installations in the Ormoc sector, shooting down 19 Japanese aircraft with "only minor loss," the statement said.

"The new Japanese commander in the Philippines, General Yamashita, is using every endeavor to build up a prepared line of defense in the Ormoc corridor," the communique said.

"It is his evident purpose to assemble sufficient forces to attempt to break out from this Yamashita line which is now enveloped by our troops on ground fronts.

"He has chosen western Leyte as a main battleground for his supreme effort to crush our liberating forces."

Fight on Ormoc Road

While the 1st U. S. Cavalry spread out through rugged mountain flanks, the 24th division was fighting south of Pinamopoan along the Ormoc road. The Japanese are "resisting stubbornly" in this sector, the communique said.

Spearheads of the First Cavalry have punched through ridge country east of Ormoc road and South Carigara bay to surround Mt. Pina and Mt. Badian. Fighting also was in progress near Mt. Cabungangan, eight miles southwest of Carigara.

American ground forces fought and hacked their way through jungles and over mountain trails, closing in on the port of Ormoc, Japanese base on the island's west coast.

The 24th division overcame roadblocks on the ridge road southward from Pinamopoan on the north coast, headquarters announced. Frontline reports said the Japanese were expending reinforcements here with bloody liberality, to delay as long as possible the final fight for Ormoc.

Advance 5 Miles

First cavalry division units advanced five miles south and west of Carigara, another north coast town. But the elements of the 96th division moving on Ormoc from the east met strong opposition in the hills southwest of Potak.

The 5th air force meanwhile kept an alert watch against more Japanese attempts to land fresh troops on Leyte, such as were put ashore Thursday to further fatten the 35th army.

The enemy is throwing replacements into the defense of Ormoc without regard to cost, cutting into the 45,000 men which American headquarters' spokesmen have estimated as the strength of the Japanese on the island.

In the 24th division area the fighting is mindful of Guadalcanal in the enemy's expenditure of troops, said Fred Hampson, Associated Press correspondent with that division.

The Japanese apparently intend to reinforce at all costs, just so long as they can delay the consolidation of American forces nearer to Ormoc, Hampson said.

Maj. Gen. Fred Irving, commander of the division, said the Ormoc-Pinamopoan corridor is sure to be a death trap for the Japanese.

Japs Hurl Fresh Men At Yanks On Leyte

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 11 (AP) — Japan's "Tiger of Malaya," whose do-or-die stand on Leyte has flamed into a savage battle involving more than 100,000 men, poured thousands of fresh Nipponese against the Yanks today, after landing them from a 19-ship convoy at a cost of three transports and seven destroyers.

Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, taking great risks with Japan's dwindling reserves of cargo vessels and escort warships, got reinforcements to Ormoc despite determined attacks spaced over a 24-hour-period by American planes and patrol torpedo boats. A heavy rain squall favored the gamble.

Crucial Battle Developing

The reinforcements, which reasonably might exceed 10,000, buttressed 35,000 other enemy troops of three fresh divisions moved in on western Leyte to replace 35,000 casualties.

The biggest and most crucial land engagement since Gen. Douglas MacArthur returned to the Philippines October 20 is developing.

The enemy convoy of four 5,000-ton transports and fifteen destroyers—the Japanese frequently use the swift destroyers for troop-carrying as well as escort duty—was spotted by United States airmen Thursday afternoon as it entered Ormoc Bay.

Thursday night, patrol torpedo boats darted in and out of destroyer searchlight paths, slipped by geysers churned up by five-inch guns and succeeded in sinking a warship.

Capt. Edward Maurer of Nyack, who led one flight of Mitchells, saw one transport go down in thirty seconds. He said later:

"I'll never forget the sight of that transport. One minute you could see this huge ship sitting there behind the ack-ack screen, with troops diving for cover all over the deck. The next second you could see a puff of flames, a geyser of smoke and the transport was gone. . . . All that was left was a column of smoke to 7,000 feet and an oil slick on the water, plus a lot of bodies in the bay."

The action ended late yesterday when the convoy remnants fled west toward Cebu. The attack cost four bombers and four fighters.

Leyte Becoming Like Guadalcanal

By Fred Hampson

With 24th Division Near Pinamopoan, Leyte, P. I., Nov. 11 (AP —Via Army Radio)—The fighting in this area is beginning to take on some aspects of Guadalcanal.

Apparently the Japanese intend to reinforce at all costs and regardless of tactical difficulties, as long as such reinforcement delays our final consolidation.

The enemy has thrown reinforcements into the Ormoc-Pinamopoan road corridor, and it appears inevitable that they must die there—or surrender.

To those of us who worked in the Solomons, it is reminiscent of the fighting at Lunda and Esperance on Guadalcanal, where the Japanese threw in reinforcements with ghastly repetition, buying time with blood to fortify elsewhere.

Maj. Gen. Fred Irving, commander of the 24th Division which has been tempered into a great fighting unit in a 22-day baptism of fire, said the Ormoc corridor is sure to be a death trap for the Japanese. But the formidable job of springing the trap rests with his division.

British Subs Sink 45 Jap Vessels

London, Nov. 11 (AP)—British submarines sank 45 Japanese vessels in Far Eastern waters in recent weeks, an Admiralty communique announced today.

A communique said the toll included one large and one medium sized supply ship, a submarine chaser and three landing craft. In addition, a medium-sized supply ship and a mine sweeper were probably sunk and 14 supply vessels damaged.

The large supply ship, which was sunk by a torpedo, was intercepted while under escort near Padang, off the west coast of Sumatra.

Hit At Port Blair

The British submarines scored torpedo hits on a medium-size supply ship entering Port Blair in the Andaman Islands, while a similar vessel was believed to have exploded after a torpedo attack in the Malacca Straits, the communique said.

Other sinkings occurred off Sabang, where the Royal Navy submarines fought a brisk gun battle with a Japanese convoy of 12 small supply ships. In another action in the same area an enemy mine sweeper was sunk.

CATCH JAPS ASLEEP

With 24th Division, Leyte, P. I., Nov. 7 (Delayed)—(A. P.).—A nine-man patrol, sent into the Leyte valley hills to find a trail for a battalion flanking movement, caught the Japanese napping today.

Creeping up a dim trail the patrol came upon three Japanese asleep under a bamboo tree. They decided to capture them and were creeping up close when one sharp-eyed soldier discovered that sleeping Japanese were all along the trail.

The patrol was too small to capture them all, so at a given signal the members opened fire.

The howling Japanese fled without firing a shot, leaving six dead and all their weapons.

500,000 Tons of Supplies Reach Leyte in 3 Weeks

Merchantmen Deliver 30,000 Troops After Invasion

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 (AP).—American merchant ships delivered 500,000 tons of invasion supplies and 30,000 troops at Leyte Island in the Philippines, in the three weeks following its invasion, the War Shipping Administration announced today.

Crews of the cargo craft unloaded the invasion supplies themselves, in some cases working around the clock, Lieutenant John Macauley of the United States Maritime Service reported to W. S. A. officials here.

Lieutenant Macauley quoted an officer of the Army Services of Supply as stating: "The merchant marine has done its best Pacific job here."

Every merchantman in the Philippine invasion was loaded to capacity and many carried soldiers, although not originally designated for that task.

"Constant harassing attacks by Jap dive-bombers did not prevent supplies being landed," Lieutenant Macauley said. "The merchant ships fought back and quite a number of enemy planes are at the bottom of Leyte harbor as a result," he added.

FIRST ARMY GAINS 5 MILES IN DRIVE TO FLANK BASTION

Patton Throws More Troops Into All-Out Battle for Fort.

GERMANS RETREAT

U. S. Forces Destroy Tanks, Artillery, Capture Brieux-Chateau.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Nov. 11 — (AP) American infantry and armor drew the arc of steel threatening to envelop Metz, one of Europe's mightiest bastions, to fully two-thirds of the way around that Nazi-held French fortress today, with less than ten miles separating the two flanking forces.

The U. S. Third army smashed ahead five miles, crossing rivers, rail-lines and highways, to tighten the noose around Metz. Lt. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., who celebrated his 59th birthday and Armistice Day with the most sweeping advances of his new Winter offensive, has sent elements of at least eight division into the line since the drive started four days ago.

Drive on Fortress

Hinges of two assaults swing around Metz from both sides w driven to within five miles of citadel due south and within four and one-half miles on the opposite side. The forces on the southern hinge southeast of Metz—including all or part of six divisions—continued to smash recklessly ahead, swinging far to the east and increasing the threat of complete encirclement of Metz.

American fighter bombers flew 700 sorties despite varying weather. At one point they caught more than 25 German tanks moving toward the American lines and reported the destruction of ten and the damaging of 15.

At the same time, the Fourth Armored division pushed on three miles northeast along a rail route from captured Haboudange to the area of Conthil, only four miles from the Benestroff rail junction and nine miles northeast of Chateau-Salins.

The Doughboys were engaging the German 110th and 111th panzer grenadier regiments in the area of Gerbecourt on the eastern edge of Chateau-Salins forest. Planes combined with ground forces to inflict severe losses on the enemy.

Destroy Nazi Tanks

Third army headquarters reported 57 pieces of field artillery and anti-aircraft guns were knocked out or captured in the forest and on a nearby ridge. Ninth air force fighter bomber pilots claimed destruction of 75 trucks, 35 horse-drawn artillery pieces and 11 gun positions.

On the left hinge of the swing around Metz from the southeast, the Fifth infantry division thrust north to a point five miles south of Metz. North of the fortress city, the 95th division captured Brieux-Chateau, one mile southeast of Maizieres-Les-Metz. A front dispatch said these forces were only four and one-half miles from Metz.

Meanwhile, the 90th division strengthened its three-by-six mile bridgehead over the Moselle river in the Koenigsmacher area by eliminating the German salient jutting into it at the middle.

While German resistance stiffened, gains of five and seven miles were racked up on this Armistice Day—the fourth day of a drive which might well develop into the last great push on the Western Front.

Lt. Gen. Patton Jr., celebrating his birthday, had split the German defenders south of the fort-ringed city and had tanks marauding 18 miles from the Saar border near Saarbrucken, where they had cut one of Metz's rail lines by which it is supplied from the east.

Battle In Hurtgen Forest

(Although there was no armistice on any section of the 450-mile front, the only other major activity reported was on the U.S. First army sector, where the Doughboys still were slugging it out with the Germans southeast of Aachen in Hurtgen forest.

(A German High Command spokesman said Patton "has now engaged about two thirds of his tank forces on the right wing" and that "here his progress is notable.")

German forces cut off from their comrades south of Metz were falling back on the city, and the Fifth infantry was bearing down on Pommerieux, only seven miles from the outskirts.

These forces were but about 14 miles away from the 95th division, which edged forward slightly four miles north of Metz despite heavy shelling of their positions west of the Moselle river.

The Sixth armored division sent tank vanguards across the Nied through Han-Sur-Nied, 14 miles southeast of Metz. Another column reached the river at Lemud, nine miles east of Metz after overrunning the nearby village of Aube—12 miles beyond the jump-off positions of four days ago. The Lemud thrust was the deepest penetration yet.

Thirty-fifth Division infantrymen, fighting on almost the same spot as their fathers fought on Armistice day 26 years ago, drove substantial forces from the forest of Chateau-Salins on the right flank of the Third army's assault lines.

Only along the lines five miles west of the fortress city, which has not been taken by storm since the Fifth century, were the lines static. The bridgehead 19 miles north of Metz near Koenigsmacher was being strengthened. It is now six miles wide and three miles deep.

Take 2,440 Prisoners

Liberating 225 square miles in three days, the Third army up to last midnight had taken 2,440 prisoners and the momentum of its attack was rising.

The biggest advance of the day was the capture of Haboundange, seven miles north of Chateau-Salins, which fell yesterday. Here the Americans were 18 miles from the border of the industrial Saar basin.

Two miles north lies Morhange, where the first great battle of World War I was fought in August of 1914.

The lines were shaping up in an arc seven to nine miles southeast of Metz. In a one-mile advance, the Doughboys seized Silly-En-Saulnois, nine miles southeast of the city. Vigny, 2 miles southwest, and Luppy, four miles east, also fell.

To the southeast, Lucy, five miles north of Delme ridge—which was taken yesterday—was captured.

This was the sort of advance, scored along the 25-mile front southeast of Metz, which by official account has permitted the Third army to average three miles a day since the Winter offensive broke last Wednesday.

It was disclosed that two German divisions beaten in Normandy had been reformed and returned to oppose Patton's drive.

They were the 17th Panzer Grenadier division, which was chopped up at Carentan, and the 110th and 111th Panzer Grenadier regiments of the 11th Panzer division, last reported at Caen.

PATTON'S TANKS GAIN IN DRIVE ON REICH

NOV 12 1944

Cross Nied River and Cut Sarrebourg Rail Line in Five-mile Advance Behind German Fortress of Metz.

London, Nov. 11 (A. P.).—American Third Army tanks, spearing forward five miles today in a drive cutting behind Metz, crossed the Nied River, severed the rail line to Sarrebourg and reached within nineteen miles of Germany's Saar border.

Tanks of the Sixth Armored Division led the plunge through the German flank southeast of Metz, crossing the Nied and rolling through the town of Mansur-Nied, thirteen miles from the fortress city of Metz.

Third Army troops drove deeper toward Metz on two sides in today's advances. The deepest penetrations had carried at least fourteen miles in four days from the jump-off line, and well beyond the 1918 Armistice Day battleline. Berlin declared 600 tanks were engaged in the offensive.

Fourth Division armored units reached Lucy, seventeen miles southeast of Metz, and two miles from the Sarrebourg Railway. These units had advanced five and one-half miles beyond Delme in twenty-four hours.

Other infantrymen drove nearly seven miles north of captured Chateau Salins to Haboudange, twenty-four miles southeast of Metz, and twenty miles from the Saar.

North of Metz, another Third Army prong pushed slowly eastward from Mazieres, occupying a woods about four miles above Metz. It was about sixteen miles from the nearest columns driving into the German flank southeast of the city.

Still farther north, Third Army troops had established three bridgeheads over the Moselle River near Luxembourg on a curving battlefront that was as close as ten miles to the frontier of the Saar.

Weather Impedes Yanks.

Rain, minefields and stubborn Nazis slowed progress along the seventy-five-mile Metz front. Two German counter-attacks were beaten off near Mazieres, and Koenigsmacher on the Moselle sectors.

Elements of the Sixth Armored Division, which took Luppy and fought astride the road from Pont-a-Mousson to Falquemont split German forces of undisclosed size. Some of the enemy retreated northwest toward Metz, and some fell back eastward.

At the southern end of the western front, Allied forces closing on St. Die in the Meurthe River valley captured the villages of Le Menil and Biarville, northwest of the town. A local counter-attack was beaten off farther south east of Bruyeres.

At least six United States infantry divisions and two armored divisions were in action above and below Metz. They were advancing in two wings divided by the German defensive positions bulging out just west of Metz.

German Attack Repulsed

In the Aachen sector inside Germany, where infantry of the American First Army has been trying to breach the approaches to Cologne with a limited attack in the Hurtgen Forest area, a German counter-attack was repulsed.

Extensive minefields were encountered by the Yanks attempting to drive the fiercely resisting Germans out of their dug-in positions around Hurtgen. West of Schmidt, however, limited progress was reported as the Americans continued mopping up enemy pillboxes.

Patton's Third Army troops had advanced to points 4½ miles north and little more than eight miles southeast of Metz itself.

Southeast of Fremery the Germans were reported to be moving armored troops into position in the forest of Chateau-Salins. Yank infantry has penetrated 2½ miles into the forest.

Le Menil, Biarville Taken

At the southern end of the Western front, Allied forces closing on St. Die in the Meurthe river valley captured the villages of Le Menil and Biarville, northwest of the town. A German attack was beaten off.

The German high command declared that Americans south of Thionville were thrown back beyond the Moselle, and that the right bank of the river was cleared. It also asserted that the United States bridgehead northeast of Koenigsmachen was encircled. Berlin admitted American gains only in the Chateau-Salins area, and said 52 American tanks were destroyed.

PATTON 59 TODAY

London, Nov. 11 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton Jr., whose Third Army troops now are engaged in an offensive on both sides of the fortress city of Metz, observed his 59th birthday anniversary today.

HUGE ROCKETS FIRED AT YANKS

13½-Ton Vengeance Bombs Unleashed On West Front

New York, Nov. 11 (AP)—The Berlin radio said tonight that a new German wireless-controlled tank, the V-4, has gone into action. The broadcast was reported by CBS.

London, Nov. 11 (AP)—The German V-2 rocket bomb, described as a 13½-ton wingless projectile which cuts through space at a maximum speed of 3,500 miles an hour, has been falling in Allied sectors in Belgium and France as well as in Britain, front dispatches permitted through army censorship said tonight.

A number of these new vengeance weapons, which cannot be heard coming because they are faster than sound, fell in one United States army sector alone in less than two days, and the rate has increased at various intervals, said a dispatch from Austin Bealmear, Associated Press correspondent. The censor deleted the origin of the dispatch.

V-2 Also Used In Belgium

In another dispatch from which the censor also had deleted the dateline, Ross Munro, Canadian press correspondent, in describing this "eeriest weapon yet produced in the war," said the Germans had been bombarding an Allied sector in Belgium.

Just where the bombs have fallen, Munro was not allowed to say, but the missile was termed poor in accuracy.

Today's German communique said the V-2 still was being fired at Antwerp in Belgium and at London.

Less Effective Than The V-1

The new German reprisal weapon was described by the correspondents as being about 46 feet long and five feet wide, and less effective than V-1, the robot bomb first used against England.

The warhead contains almost a ton of explosives, and the fuel used to propel it weighs nine tons. It is shot from concrete ramps almost vertically, reaches a height of 20 miles before beginning a great arc toward its intended target. At the height of the arc it is 55 miles from the earth and attains a velocity of 5,000 feet per second, or approximately 3,500 miles an hour.

Its Speed Faster Than Sound

Prime Minister Churchill said yesterday that the rocket traveled up to 70 miles high at a speed faster than sound, which would be something above 700 miles an hour at ground level.

Although you can't hear the projectile until after it has struck the earth and set off its ton of explosives, Bealmear said its descent from the heavens at night resembles a ball of fire.

Allied experts were quoted as saying that V-2 was not as effective in destructive power as the V-1 because of the huge crater it makes, reducing the blast. The robot bomb digs hardly any crater, going off on contact with maximum blasting effect.

Has No Shrapnel Effect

The V-2 also is a much more complicated and expensive weapon than the robot bomb, a product which takes an immense amount of machining. The warhead is not encased in heavy metal and there is no shrapnel effect, Munro's dispatch said.

Field dispatches have reported the use of V-2 rockets in the battle zone, but correspondents indicated they were too inaccurate to have military value. V-1 robots also have been used at the front and against several captured cities in Belgium, France and Holland. Rockets fired at troops were reported to have been slightly smaller than those used against England.

V-2 Casualties In Britain

At least 36 persons have been killed or badly injured by the V-2 bombardment of Britain, a check of casualties in reported incidents showed.

The casualty figure is an unofficial and incomplete tally. Reports of some incidents did not include fatalities caused.

In one case a rocket plummeted into a shopping crowd and "a number" of persons were killed. One time nine children were killed at a birthday party.

One rocket exploded in an open area, and several ducks were the only victims. Still another rocket dug its deep crater in the open and killed only a pig.

Alert In Metropolitan London

Metropolitan London had an alert during the night as a new flurry of robot bombs came in from the North Sea. Their explosions killed at least seven persons and injured others, including two American army officers. Anti-aircraft guns and fighters knocked down a number of robots on the Channel coast.

The German radio continued its propaganda campaign on the effectiveness of the V-2, saying that one rocket damaged or destroyed 600 houses in London.

The German home front was told that the new weapon "exceeded all imagination" and surpassed the boldest phantasy of the future.

"Employment of V-weapons has just begun," German propadandists said, adding that the bombardment of London will increase.

Claims were made regarding the otherwise unsupported report that Antwerp, too, was under bombardment and that "a large part of the population has fled into the country."

The German news agency DNB, stating that both the V-1 and the V-2 were being fired against Antwerp, said the dock and harbor installations were heavily damaged.

"The Defense dock and Defevre dock and the Kempisch dock nearby were hit," DNB said, adding that "the authorities at once cordoned off the docks so as to prevent the news from spreading."

British agents are reported hunting down the launching sites from which V-2 rockets are being launched against southern England so that heavy bombers may give them the appropriate measures promised by Prime Minister Churchill.

Nedville Nordness, an Associated Press War Correspondent, reported in a delayed dispatch from Eindhoven, Holland, that some of the first rockets hurled against England came from movable sites near the Hague, and he said that the famous peace palace shuddered under the vibrations.

Quoting an escaped Dutch government worker, he said civilians saw rockets being towed in huge carriers to the launching area, but never saw them actually fired.

The ground for acres around the site was scorched, clothes hanging on lines were seared, and a number of the German launching crew were said to have been killed or injured.

Agents Hunt V-2 Sites, Report

London, Nov. 11 (AP) — British agents on the Continent are reported hunting down the launching sites from which V-2 "Flying Telegraph Pole" rockets are fired against southern England so that heavy bombers may give them the appropriate measures promised by Prime Minister Churchill.

Britons who had seen the red flash of V-2 explosions and heard the peculiar double rumble of the blasts were reading details of the new 1,000-mile-an-hour weapon and photographs of its effects in newspapers today.

Censorship Ban Lifted

The censorship ban was lifted by Prime Minister Churchill's report to Parliament yesterday.

"I thought it was the end of the world," said one man who lived through an explosion less than 50 yards away.

One rocket blasted a deep crater a short distance from a German prisoner-of-war camp. The occupants escaped injury.

Nazis Threaten Antwerp

The Germans claimed last night that once "the process of exact aiming is complete" their V-2 rocket would make Antwerp useless as a supply port to the Allies and that front lines also would be targets.

There has been no official report that this latest Nazi weapon is being used against Allied positions on the Western front.

Many Robots Bagged

The latest official statements on the condition of Antwerp's harbor facilities said they still were intact.

NOV 12 1944

Meanwhile ground gunners and fighters had one of their best nights last night, blowing flying bombs out of the sky as the Germans launched sharp V-1 attacks on southern England from aircraft over the North Sea.

V-2 Sites In Hague Area Described

Eindhoven, Holland, Nov. 6 (AP, Delayed by Censor)—Some of the first rockets hurled against England were launched from sites in the vicinity of the Hague, a Dutch Government worker who escaped from the Germans said today.

The Peace Palace as well as other buildings in the city shuddered under the vibrations of the weapons as they were launched, he related.

Tells Of Great Noise

Dutch civilians, he said, were cleared out of the launching area and never saw a rocket actually fired, but they saw rockets being towed in huge carriers to the sites and could hear the roar of takeoff.

"The noise of one rocket launching was greater than the combined roar of hundreds of Allied heavy bombers," he declared. "The launching device itself was of terrific size with many large-sized wheels for the self-propelled mechanism.

Ground Scorched

"The ground for acres around the sites was scorched. Clothes hanging on lines were seared. We learned that many who operated the launching sites were killed or injured."

The Dutchman said that rockets set for England took off almost vertically but veered slightly.

"About 3,000 yards from the site," he continued, "the rocket would give off a series of explosions and then would turn in the right direction and disappear."

Rocket Used Against Yanks

Thirteen-and-a-half-ton Missile Batters American Sectors of Western Front.

With American Armies in France, Nov. 11 (A. P.).—The Germans have been firing rockets estimated to weigh thirteen and a half tons into an American sector of the western front.

A number of these devastating new vengeance weapons fell in one American sector alone in less than two days, and the rate has been increased at various intervals since.

There is no official estimate of the total number of rockets the Germans have managed to send over the American lines since they were put in operation.

The projectile is believed to be about forty-six feet long. Its overall weight of thirteen and one-half tons includes fuel which itself weighs nine tons.

The warhead contains almost a ton of explosives.

Becomes Flaming Meteor.

Launched from concrete ramps, the rocket is shot into the air almost vertically, and reaches a heighty of twenty miles before beginning a great arc toward its target. At the height of its arc it is fifty-five miles from the earth. When it reaches the desired velocity and position, the fuel is cut off by radio.

A maximum velocity of 5,000 feet per second (nearly a mile a second or roughly 3,500 miles per hour) is attained at the upper thin air level. Descending into heavier air in the final stages of its trajectory at a 45-degree angle, the projectile sets up friction causing heat as high as 600 degrees Fahrenheit.

Descending earthward at night it resembles a ball of fire. The explosion often is a rumble resembling thunder.

One encouraging feature of this latest weapon is that its accuracy to date has been poor.

V-2 Claims Scoffed At By Ex-German Expert

Atlanta, Nov. 11 (AP)—Germany's new V-2 rocket has only a "nuisance value" in the opinion of an expert who scoffed at claims that Antwerp and Paris would be destroyed by rocket attacks.

Willy Ley, 38-year-old scientist and former vice-president of the German Rocket Society, said precision bombing of United States planes was far more effective than either the V-2 rocket or the V-1 robot bomb.

"I do not see any great value in a 12-ton rocket with a one-ton bomb attached to it," said Ley. "An airplane can do the job more effectively carrying a larger bomb load. The only advantage rockets have is that there is no defense against them except to find the launching places and destroy them."

Scoffs At City Destruction

As to destroying cities with rockets, Lay scoffed at the idea declaring: "My rough guess is that about 15 out of every 100 rockets launched would near their intended target. Destruction of a city is a job for precision bombers."

Ley expressed doubt that the Germans could build a rocket bomb that would span the Atlantic Ocean but said the Nazis might "try to build rockets to be carried within 300 miles of the United States coast and launch them there."

V-1 "Important Weapon"

The scientist, who fled Germany when Hitler came to power and has become a naturalized United States citizen, said he believed the V-1 robots always would be "an important weapon after certain improvements have been made—primarily elimination of cumbersome takeoff installations so they can be used in the field."

Ley, now employed by an airplane corporation here, said his work dealt primarily with development of rockets for use in weather forecasting to replace the meteorological sounding balloons.

2,000 U. S. PLANES ATTACK GERMANY IN BAD WEATHER

LONDON, Nov. 11—(AP)—German antiaircraft gunners offered only meager to moderate resistance today when 2,000 American planes attacked the Reich in bad weather from west and south, hitting poorly-defended targets in Italy, Austria and Western Germany.

Lt. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz' U. S. strategic air force coordinated strikes with the Fifteenth air force in Italy, sending out 700 heavy bombers, which hit synthetic oil plants in Czechoslovakia, a steel plant at Linz, Austria, and bridges in northern Italy. The Liberators and Fortresses from Italy were escorted by 450 fighters.

Suggesting the RAF was on its way back to Germany tonight, Berlin radio warned of the approach of "enemy border formations over Heligoland bay approaching northwestern Germany."

"German antiaircraft batteries must have been saving their ammunition today," a spokesman said after Eighth airforce planes attacked a synthetic oil plant in the Ruhr railway yards at Coblenz, to the south.

"They have quit throwing much flak when we attack through heavy clouds," the spokesman said. "Apparently they are saving shells just the same as they are saving gasoline and other supplies."

Only one German plane offered attack when the 450 Liberators and Fortresses, with an escort of 370 Mustangs and Thunderbolts, crossed the channel and sailed across France above a fleecy white blanket of clouds. A jet-propelled Messerschmitt 163 was driven off after making one feeble pass at the American armada.

Four bombers and one fighter failed to return.

A long munition train west of Amersfoort on its way to Nazi troops in Holland was blown to smithereens by RAF Typhoons. The Typhoons scored eight hits with their 500-pound bombs and "the train and a large section of the line vanished in smoke and debris," a pilot said.

This was the tenth of eleven days this month that American heavy bombers have been over the Reich. They were grounded last Tuesday.

RAF Mosquitoes bombed Hannover twice last night and the second formation in followed the fiery trail of the first. About 30 giant 4,000 pounders were planted in the target areas.

U. S. Planes Hit Ruhr Oil, Rail Targets

London, Nov. 11 (AP)—United States Eighth Air Force bombers and fighters, resuming their attacks against Germany's synthetic oil plants and railroads in the Ruhr, delivered an Armistice Day blow today at Gelsenkirchen and Coblenz.

Approximately 450 Flying Fortresses and Liberators and almost an equal number of fighters participated.

At the same time heavy bombers and fighters from the United States 15th Air Force in Italy attacked targets in southern Germany, the Berlin radio said.

Snowstorms Over Reich

The daylight blows, carried out despite heavy snowstorms over Germany, followed two concentrated attacks during the night on Hannover.

Objectives of the British-based bombers were two oil plants near Gelsenkirchen and the freight yards at Coblenz, a key Western Front rail terminal.

RAF Lancasters, escorted by Mustangs, also attacked a synthetic oil plant at Castrop-Rauzel, in the Ruhr, today.

Forty-Nine Planes Lost

Eighth Air Force headquarters said that in the past three days a total of 27 heavy bombers and 22 fighters were lost in action against Germany.

The attacks on Hannover were made by RAF Mosquitos which flew through snow and sleet and dropped many tons of bombs, including more than 30 4,000-pounders, on railyards and factories.

RAF Fighter Missing

Mosquitos also hit other objectives in the Ruhr.

One German plane was destroyed and one RAF fighter was missing.

Several of the 27 United States heavy bombers and seven fighters reported missing in yesterday's attacks in the Cologne and Frankfurt areas were believed to have landed in France.

NEW BUDAPEST DRIVE GAINS

Attack To Southeast Of City Rolls On Unchecked

London, Sunday, Nov. 12 (AP)—Russian troops, resuming a drive southeast of Budapest, yesterday moved to within 43 miles of the capital, and also struck to within 11 miles of Miskolc, Hungary's fifth city, in the northeast, as they steadily expanded their wedge between the German defenders of the two prize cities, Moscow announced last night.

Soviet columns, hitting from the southeast, captured Ujszasz rail junction on the northern arm of the line between Budapest and fallen Szolnok. Ujszasz is 43 miles from the capital, whose southern outskirts still are being fiercely defended by reinforced German troops.

Jaszladany, 45 miles due east of Budapest and seven miles northeast of Ujszasz, also was seized, the Soviet communique said. Its capture put these units within 12 miles of a junction with another column which had taken Pely to the northeast on Friday after crossing the middle Tisza river.

All Out For Encirclement

Berlin's radio commentators termed this Soviet drive the most menacing to Budapest, and termed it an all-out offensive aimed at encircling the capital on the Danube.

In the northeast, other units of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukraine Army widened their grip on the Budapest-Miskolc railway and also cut the highway between the two cities with the seizure of Szihalom, 64 miles northeast of the capital.

At the top end of the middle Tisza front the Russians rolled through Hejosalonta, 11 miles southeast of Miskolc, and also took Sajoszoged, 13 miles from their objective. These troops were moving on Miskolc along the west bank of the Sajo river, a tributary of the Tisza.

Street-Fighting In Budapest

With the capture of Hejosalonta in the north, Szihalom to the southwest and the intermediate rail station of Mezonyarad, the Russians either were astride or in effective control of a 25-mile section of the Budapest-Miskolc railway—a vital Axis artery connecting the German armies based on Budapest with those defending eastern Slovakia.

Turkish reports told meanwhile of street-fighting inside Budapest and a Hungarian communique said that Russian troops, which had infiltrated Csepel Island, a 30-mile-long piece of land in the Danube just south of Budapest, had been hurled back to the eastern banks. The Hungarians spoke, however, of Russian attacks against "the Budapest bridgehead," another indication that the Red army troops were fighting inside the city. Moscow has never claimed an entry into Budapest.

In lower Yugoslavia the Russians announced the capture by the Bulgarians of Veles, on the Athens-Skoplje railway 40 miles north of the Greek frontier and 26 miles southeast of Skoplje, big Yugoslav junction.

Stip, 17 miles east of Veles, also fell, Moscow's bulletin said, and the Bulgarians still are attacking German positions at Kumanovo, 15 miles northeast of Skoplje, through which the Germans are withdrawing into central Yugoslavia.

Marshal Tito's headquarters confirmed another important development in the south, where Russian and Yugoslav troops crossed the Danube River on a thirty-seven mile front between Baja and Apatin in a drive on the large strategic Hungarian city of Pecs, thirty-four miles west of Baja and ninety-nine miles southwest of Budapest.

Baja, in southern Hungary, is eighty-four miles below besieged Budapest, and Apatin is in northern Yugoslavia.

A German military commentator, Col. Ernst von Hammer, said that the new Russian drive on Budapest had been launched north of the eighteen-mile rail line between Russian-held Cegled and Szolnok, and apparently was aimed both at Budapest and toward a junction with other Soviet forces that had crossed the Middle Tisza River, cut the Budapest-Miskolc railway and threatened Budapest from the east and northeast.

Von Hammer said the Russians "were stemmed and forced to bring up reserves" after initial gains.

Another German commentator, Lieut. Col. Alfred Olberg, reported that Gen. Ivan Petroff's Fourth Ukrainian Army, fighting in eastern Czechoslovakia, "plans to advance on Budapest from Slovakia."

Reds Start All-Out Drive On Budapest

London, Nov. 11 (AP)—The Russians have launched an all-out offensive against Budapest from the east and penetrated German and Hungarian defense lines in two places, the German commentator, Col. Ernst von Hammer, reported today.

He located the drive between the Tisza and Danube rivers "north of the line Cegled-Szolnok." Cegled lies 38 miles southeast of the capital and Szolnok 18 miles due east of Cegled.

The Russian breakthroughs were "stemmed" and the Soviets forced to bring up reserves, von Hammer said.

Earlier the official German news agency DNB had reported a German withdrawal of several miles northwest of Szolnok.

Outflanking Movement Begun.

Moscow, Nov. 11 (A. P.).—A wide outflanking movement took shape on two sides of Budapest today while the main Russian forces, holding the city under siege, clung to their positions in the capital's southern suburbs against desperate Nazi counter-attacks.

One group of Marshal Rodio Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukraine Army edged westward from the wide Tisza River brideghead capturing additional strong points northeast of Budapest and strengthened their hold on the vital Budapest-Miskolcz railroad. Other Russian units and troops of Marshal Tito's Yugoslav Partisan forces pushed forward west of the Danube in a drive up through southern Hungary aimed at Pecs.

The outflanking movements developed on German and Hungarian positions over a 200-mile front, either end of which can turn into a serious by-passing of Budapest.

Malinovsky's troops yesterday breached the Budapest-Miskolcz line at Mezokovesd, sixty-five miles northeast of Budapest.

Slog Ahead in Mud.

Slogging onward in heavy mud, the Russian infantry added eight villages and one railway station to the Soviet salient stretching from the upper Tisza River to the base of the Matra Mountains, Moscow announced.

This sector, where the only essential changes of the entire eastern front were reported in the last twenty-four hours, was a steadily growing menace to the rear of the German and Hungarian forces still strung out some forty miles east and northeast of Budapest.

Mezokovesd itself was threatened by the Russians with the capture of Borsodszemere, four miles to the southwest and two miles from the railway which skirts the Matra Mountains.

The Second Ukrainian Army group, capturing 4,100 prisoners in the last forty-eight hours, raised its total bag of prisoners to more than 46,000 since October 6 when the invasion of Hungary began, Moscow said.

The increased number of prisoners being taken was considered in Moscow an indication of the spread of defeatism in the Hungarian ranks.

HITLER RUMORS FLOOD LONDON

Fuehrer Seen Either Dead, Ill or Unbalanced.

London, Nov. 11 (A. P.).—The mysterious silence of Adolf Hitler has deluged London with reports that he is dead, seriously ill or suffering nervous disorders.

Strange doings from the Swiss radio, dispatches from the Swiss and Swedish listening posts, and reports to London from the German underground all suggested that something may be wrong with the Fuehrer.

The latest rumor, from Zurich, said Hitler had undergone a throat operation at the hands of an Austrian surgeon. This report, however, came from German sources, which may be trying to cover up Hitler's failure to make his usual speech on the November 9 anniversary of his 1923 Munich Beer Hall putsch.

London's Daily Express said under a front-page headline today that "authoritative quarters in London" believed Hitler had been seriously injured in the bombing attempt against him on July 20.

Final Phase

The London Daily Mail also front-paged a suggestion by a prominent British psychologist, William Brown, that "the Fuehrer may now be approaching the final phase of his mental sickness."

Reuters, in a dispatch today from Supreme Allied Headquarters in Paris, said, "The dead hand of Hitler is missing from the battle front as well as from the home front" as witnessed by the more skillful direction of the German army.

Brain Specialist

The Associated Press, on November 6, carried a report from a person closely in touch with the underground in Germany that a brain specialist, Professor Horster, had been called in to examine Hitler at Klessheim, where he was staying while new fortifications were being completed around his mountain retreat at Berchtesgaden.

This person asserted today there were increasing indications that Hitler was badly off balance mentally. He said underground reports were that the Fuehrer was absorbed with almost childish intent on the fortifications being speeded in his entire Alpine area and that he insisted on daily lectures from General Jacob, Nazi fortifications chief.

These uncommitted reports have been strengthened by the German radio. It has offered excuses for his silence and issued panegyrics about what a great spiritual leader he is.

Himmler Seems Dominant.

Whatever the reason, Hitler has remained publicly silent longer than at any time since his rise to power. The last time his voice was heard was in a strange and shaky broadcast in the early morning hours of the day after the bombing attempt.

Heinrich Himmler has taken over more and more power. Significantly, perhaps, a voice from the audience listening to Himler's latest speech called out for three cheers for "Reichsfuehrer" Himmler—a risky thing to do in Hitler's hey-day.

Austrian Deserters Held Joining Guerrillas

London, Nov. 11 (AP)—Thousands of Austrians have deserted from the German army while on home leave and joined guerrilla forces in the Alps, Archduke Robert of Austria said today.

In the past three months, he reported in an interview, 32 Gestapo battalions have been formed to ferret out the deserters and to make punitive expeditions into the mountains against the patriots.

Labels Reported Found

The Germans were reported to have ordered a state of alarm in Vienna for SS formations as from midnight tonight, apparently in an effort to cope with possible disturbances tomorrow on the anniversary of the founding of the Austrian Republic.

Swiss advises said that during the past several days little labels with the simple inscription "November 12th" have been found stuck on trams, shop windows and walls in Vienna.

Although the exact number of Austrian desertions is not known, Robert said they had been "considerable — probably 10,000 to 20,000."

Weary Of Fighting Russ

Austrian underground sources reported that the deserters, weary of fighting against the Russians under appalling conditions, fled into the Alps with guns and equipment, hoping that they could remain above the conflict until it is over.

Robert said German civilians were reported leaving Vienna. "Apparently the Germans intend to defend Vienna to the utmost," he said, "but the 700,000 foreign workers in the city and its vicinity might effectively sabotage this defense, should it be impossible to remove them at the last minute. In any event, there will be heavy fighting before the liberation of Vienna."

Nazis At Lorient Refuse To Surrender

London, Nov. 11 (AP) — German troops holding the French port of Lorient have refused an American request to surrender, a Berlin broadcast said today.

The entire civilian population of Dunkirk, 62,500 persons, has been evacuated from that Nazi-held fortress port and from the fortified area on the southern Gironde estuary northwest of Bordeaux, the broadcast added.

Both sides are continuing harassing artillery fire in and around the French Atlantic coastal areas still left in German hands.

Paasikivi Takes Finnish Premiership

London, Nov. 11 (A. P.).—The Finnish radio announced today that Juho Paasikivi, veteran peace envoy and friendly to Soviet Russia, had accepted the premiership in a new Finnish Government. He succeeds Erhu Castren, whose Government has been criticized for its handling of the Russo-Finnish armistice problems.

Letter Purportedly From Blum Is Read

London, Nov. 11 (AP)—A letter purportedly written on September 30 by Leon Blum, former French Premier, was read to the opening Congress of the French Socialist party, the Paris radio said today.

There have been several roundabout reports of Blum's death—but none has been verified. One of the last reports came from Moscow on August 8 when a Soviet newspaperman reported that the 72-year-old French politician had been put to death in the Nazi torture factory in Lublin.

Label Tito National Hero

London, Nov. 11 (AP)—Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito was proclaimed a "national hero" by a resolution adopted by the anti-Fascist National Liberation Assembly of Serbia, the Yugoslav raido said tonight.

BRITAIN SEES BARS TO POST-WAR TASK

London, Nov. 11 (A. P.).—British industry, groping for a way to resume manufacturing for peace-time markets, found encouragement today in news from Washington that some restrictions on the use of lend-lease raw materials may be lifted.

But there's still a man power problem, there's still a war, and reconversion remained a dubious quantity. There was little encouragement from officials at home.

Hugh Dalton, president of the board of trade, said flatly that at this stage of the war "it was a delusion to suppose there is a very large amount of labor, material and industrial capacity which can be turned over from the war effort and given priority to post-war export undertakings."

FLYERS WIN MEDALS

Eighth Air Force Command, England (Delayed).—The Distinguished Flying Cross has been awarded to Lieut. Albert K. Gilfond, B-17 bombardier, son of Mrs. Pearl Gilfond of 2754 Creston avenue, the Bronx, it was announced here today. Other awards to New York men include three Oak Leaf Clusters to the Air Medal and three Air Medals.

An Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a fourth Air Medal has been presented to Lieut. Joseph F. Cucco, Flying Fortress pilot, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Cucco of 1636 West 10th street, Brooklyn. First Oak Leaf Clusters were awarded to Lieut. John J. Walsh, bombardier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Walsh of 303 East 89th street, and to Staff Sergt. Anthony Corsuti, ball turret gunner on a B-17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Corsuti of 21 East Second street.

Lieut. Herbert S. Reinheimer, navigator on a Liberator bomber, son of Mrs. Madeline Reinheimer of 617 West 168th street, was awarded the Air Medal as were Capt. Frederick S. Denziger, special observer on bombing attacks on enemy territory, whose wife, Mrs. Louise Danziger, lives at 940 Park avenue, and Lieut. Robert M. White, P-51 Mustang pilot, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. White of 64 West 109th street.

LEADERS BEGIN PARIS TALKS

Churchill Says Strong France Is Part Of British Policy

Paris, Nov. 11 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill, returning to Paris for the first time since the black days of 1940, opened conferences on this Armistice Day with the French provisional government which are expected to center on the restoration of France as a first-rate world power.

His visit coincided with announcement that the United States, Britain and Russia had invited the de Gaulle Government to assume full membership on the European advisory commission, which is studying the problems of peace.

Mr. Churchill declared at a dinner given for him tonight in Paris by Gen. Charles de Gaulle that "it is a fundamental principle of British policy that the alliance with France should be unshakable, constant and effective."

Said "A Day Would Come"

The British Prime Minister, as quoted by the Paris radio, recalled that he had told the French by radio from London in 1940 that "a day would come when France would take her place at the head of the great nations and play her part as the champion of liberty and independence."

The talks began at 3.30 P. M. as Churchill and de Gaulle left the lunch table and went to de Gaulle's office in the Ministry of War.

Eden and Bidault were with their chiefs. A group of British and French military experts waited outside the office but they were not called to enter the conference room. At one point an aide came out and returned hurriedly with a large map.

The conversations were held in French, which both Churchill and Eden speak fluently. The first meeting ended at 5.30 P. M. and the Prime Minister received another ovation as he left the ministry.

Brings Assurances

Churchill, who paused long enough to take part in the first Armistice Day celebration in France in five years, was believed to have brought at least informally qualified assurances from the "big four"—the United States, Britain, Russia and China — of France's early resumption of a bigger role in settling the future of Germany, and in establishing a world security organization.

The resumption of normal economic relations between France and Britain has been widely mentioned as prominent on the agenda, but this is reliably viewed as being forced into the background because France's domestic economy has been paralyzed by war.

Collaboration In Pacific

More pressing are such matters as France's part in the occupation of Germany, France's collaboration in the war in the Pacific, and her views on stabilization of world peace.

The occupation question, so far as France was concerned, was not clarified at the Quebec conference and Churchill, fresh from Moscow, was likely to be at least an informal emissary.

A statement issued by the American Embassy and the Ambassadors of the United States, Britain and Russia "expressed their conviction that cooperation of the representatives of their countries on the commission with their French colleague will help prepare the way for a solid and durable peace in Europe founded upon democracy, order and justice."

Bidault Role Expected

A statement published simultaneously by the Quai d'Orsay (French Foreign Office) said France would be on "a basis of perfect equality" with the three other powers on the commission.

It is expected that Foreign Minister Georges Bidault, who received the invitation from the hands of the three Ambassadors, will be the French delegate on the commission, which now is sitting in London.

Standing beside Gen. Charles de Gaulle at the Arc de Triomphe, Churchill reviewed a parade of French troops which for one hour marched down the Champs Elysees, and laid a wreath at the tomb of the unknown soldier.

Arrived Yesterday

Censorship was lifted to permit disclosure that the Prime Minister and his Foreign Secretary, Anthony Eden, had arrived by plane yesterday.

Churchill was back in Paris for the first time since June, 1940, when a France reeling under the blows of Hitler's war machine was offered citizenship in the British Empire in a last-hour attempt to keep her in the war.

Scores of Royal Air Force planes droned overhead as Churchill, standing before the breeze-whipped Eternal Flame, placed the wreath on the tomb of the unknown soldier. Then he signed the guest book of the Arc de Triomphe below the signature of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

French Pass in Review

Units of all the French forces passed in review, including turbaned Moroccans and red-fezzed Senegalese from Africa. A crack band of the U. S. Army's Seine base section was in the line of march.

Afterward, Churchill and de Gaulle drove in an open automobile down the Champs Elysees, stopping to lay another wreath at the statue of Clemenceau, France's World War I premier, before going on to the French war office for lunch.

A third wreath wae laid on the tomb of Foch in the Invalides. Mrs. Foch, a little, 82-year-old woman, and other members of her family stood by.

Churchill arrived at a U. S. Air transport command base outside Paris, accompanied by Eden, Mrs. Churchill, their daughter, Mary, Sir Alexander Cadogan, Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs, and a small party of military and civilian aides.

The Churchill conference was an entirely British-French affair, without American participation. The single American note on Churchill's arrival was the presence of military police.

With De Gaulle were these prospective conferees: Gen. Alphonse Juin, chief of staff; Rene Massiole, French ambassador to Britain; cabinet members Georges Bidault of foreign affairs, Alexander Parodi of labor and Charles Tillon of air, and the Veteran Parliamentarian Jules Jeanneney, representing the French consultative assembly.

Churchill, Eden In Paris For Parley

Paris, Nov. 11 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill, Britain's self-styled "wandering minstrel" of diplomacy, came from behind a 24-hour secrecy screen in Paris today and joined Gen. Charles de Gaulle in a traditional tribute to war dead at the Arc de Triomphe on the French nation's first Armistice Day observance in five years.

The British Prime Minister arrived in Paris by plane yesterday with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden for political and economic talks with the French.

Wearing the powder blue uniform of a marshal of the Royal Air Force, Churchill laid a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier and reviewed an hour-long parade of French forces down the Champs Elysees.

Americans In Parade

Small detachments of British soldiers and American army and navy base units also marched in the parade.

Despite the official secrecy thrown about Churchill's visit until his 11 o'clock appearance at the ceremony, the capital's main avenue was bordered by a tight jam of people. Thousands kept up an intermittent chant, "Vive Churchill, Vive de Gaulle, Vive Koenig." (Lieut. Gen. Pierre Koenig, commander of French Forces of the Interior and military governor of Paris).

Planes Overhead

Scores of RAF planes wheeled overhead in the dim sunlight, and a cold breeze whipped the tongues of the eternal flame as Churchill placed the wreath and signed an American Red Cross guest book.

Then the Prime Minister stood by as Gen. de Gaulle pinned decorations on a dozen soldiers and airmen, three of them British army officers.

The guests of honor included the widow of Marshal Foch, World War I French commander in chief, and severely wounded veterans of the last war, some of them in wheelchairs.

Compiegne Forest

(Churchill and de Gaulle were to participate later in ceremonies in the Compiegne Forest, scene of the signing of the French armistice with Germany in 1940, the London radio said in a broadcast over the Blue Network.)

It was the first visit by a foreign governmental chief to France since this nation's liberation and Churchill's first visit of state to this nation since the fateful June of 1940 when he carried an invitation for union to tottering France.

Background For 'Big 3' Parley

(In London there was belief that Britain's war leader would reassure France of a place among the great powers in the writing of the peace and would obtain the French position on pending international affairs as background for the coming conference of Churchill, Roosevelt and Stalin.

(The immediate objective of the visit—in addition to the aim of cementing the friendship of the two peoples—was understood to center around rearming the French military forces for more unified participation in the assault upon Germany.)

Churchill and Eden were accompanied by Mrs. Churchill and the Churchills' daughter Mary, Sir Alexander Cadogan, permanent Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and a small party of military and civilian aides.

Cheered On Arrival

They landed at a United States Air Transport command base outside Paris, where they were met by General de Gaulle and other French dignitaries and the British and Canadian Ambassadors. They drove through streets lined—despite the "secrecy" of the arrival—with cheering people, of whom many waved Union Jacks.

Friday evening was devoted to a small private dinner.

The bulk of Churchill's time in Paris is expected to be spent in private conferences with French officials.

The chief topics are expected to be:

Resumption of business between France and Britain.

France's future collaboration in the war, both in Europe and the Pacific.

France's role in the occupation of Germany and at the peace table—points left unsettled at the recent international conferences, which focussed on the "big four" of the United States, Britain, Russia and China.

Post-War Borders

(London quarters said Allied help in the restoration of France and consideration of the post-war German-French borders were other probable points.)

The provisional government has repeatedly asserted France's determination to resume her position among the major powers.

The visit was a British-French affair, without the participation of American personalities.

The single American note in the arrival was the presence of "white top" military police. The Churchill plane was met by an honor guard of newly recruited French infantrymen in United States army uniforms and a detachment of the French Republican Guard.

V-Sign Omitted

The Prime Minister, pale but jaunty, clambered down the steep plane steps agilely, a cigar in his mouth. He omitted the familiar V-sign gesture.

With General de Gaulle were prospective French conferees: Chief of Staff General Alphonse Juin; the French Ambassador to Britain, Rene Massigli; Cabinet members Georges Bidault of Foreign Affairs; Alexander Parodi, Labor and Charles Tillon, Air; and a veteran Parliamentarian, Jules Jeanneney, representing the Consultative Assembly.

Churchill paused briefly during an inspection of the military guard for the playing of French and British national anthems. Then he climbed with Gen de Gaulle into the leading car of a motor procession and gestured animatedly in discussion as they drove off.

The British military delegation included Field Marshal Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the British General Staff, and General Sir Hastings Ismay, military adviser to the War Cabinet.

FRANCE OFFERED FULL SAY IN PEACE

Reich May Be Split 4 Ways; French Restoration Seen

Washington, Nov. 11 (AP)—Nazi-trodden France will have a full voice in imposing justice upon a defeated Germany.

Even those points on which the "Big Three" already had decided apparently are reopened to incorporate French ideas.

Germany may be split four ways instead of three for occupation purposes.

Those appeared tonight to be the main prospects raised by announcement that France has been invited to sit with the United States, Great Britain and Russia on the European Advisory Commission.

The main work of the commission is planning the occupation and control of Germany. Considerable progress recently has been made on these problems, but none of the work has embraced French ideas. That is because the French have refused to give their counsel unless they could share in the decisions and responsibilities.

"Five-Power Era"

The announcement today, following Allied recognition October 23 of the administration of Gen. Charles de Gaulle as the provisional government of France, marked the end of exclusive "Big Three" domination in Europe.

Assuming France's acceptance of the invitation, and with China counted in, it marks the beginning of a "five power" era for the erection of world peace machinery. In preparation for this, the United States, Britain, Russia and China agreed at Dumbarton Oaks that "in due course" France should be counted as one of the powerful permanent five members of the proposed world security council.

Presumably today's action means that the qualification "in due course" has been met and that France will go on the council immediately if and when the world organization is set up.

A Planning Agency

But the initial consequences of adding France to the European Advisory Commission are more military than political and they raise several issues with respect to the conclusion of the war against Germany.

The commission is a sort of clearing and planning agency for the Allied powers. It has no authority to make any decisions.

Already, however, the commission had worked out and Moscow, Washington and London had approved a set of terms to be imposed after Germany's surrender. The commission also had worked out and obtained approval for a three-way split plan for occupying Germany.

Surrender Terms Debated

Russia would occupy the eastern third, the British the northwestern portion and American troops the southwestern section.

Many diplomatic officials were startled to read in the announcement on France's new position that "among the matters which are receiving close attention of the commission is the question of the surrender terms to be imposed on Germany and the treatment to be accorded that country."

Advisory-Group

Place Offered To France

NOV 12 1944

Washington, Nov. 11 (AP) — The United States, Britain and Russia today invited the de Gaulle Government of France to assume full membership on the European Advisory Commission.

This is the most advanced step yet taken toward reconstituting France as a great power.

The invitation was extended to the French Provisional Government at Paris, where Prime Minister Churchill is making an Armistice Day visit today.

Joint Announcement

The action was announced jointly here and in London and Moscow.

Acting Secretary of State Stettinius issued this statement:

"At the Moscow conference a year ago the American, British and Soviet governments decided to re-establish in London a European advisory commission for the purpose of studying certain European questions and submitting joint recommendations thereon to the three governments.

"Among the matters which are receiving the close attention of the commission is the question of the surrender terms to be imposed on Germany, and the treatment to be accorded that country.

France Has Vital Interest

"Conscious of France's vital interest in the solution of the German problem and of the part which France will inevitably play in maintaining the future peace of Europe, the Government of the United States is happy to join in extending to the Provisional Government of the French Republic an invitation to full membership on the European Advisory Commission.

"Representatives of the three governments are today communicating this decision to the Provisional Government of the French Republic at Paris."

It was less than a month ago, October 23, that the United States and Britain recognized the administration of Gen. Charles de Gaulle as a full fledged provisional government.

Caffery Ambassador

Jefferson Caffery, one of the top-flight United States diplomats, was named Ambasador to Paris.

Simultaneously, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander on the Western front, turned back to French administration virtually all of France except those northeastern border areas actually in combat.

General de Gaulle insisted at the time that recognition was not enough—that France must be given a full share in deciding future European policies. His primary request was for membership on the European Advisory Commission.

Wanted Full Part

De Gaulle had refused to join in making decisions on German control policy so long as France's part was limited to suggestions and advice, and she was barred from the commission's discussions.

Some time ago the United States, Britain and Russia projected a great power role for France in the future by agreeing that "in due course" that nation should be one of the five permanent members of the proposed world security council along with the present Big Three and China.

Slaying Of Dutch Laid To False Report

Breda, Holland, Nov. 11 (AP)—False reports September 5 of the liberation of Breda by the Allies threw the Germans in the area into panic and cost many Dutch citizens their lives, it was learned when the Allies finally occupied the town.

Despite the Nazi ban against listening to Allied programs, the broadcast was heard and the Germans in the town seized what transport they could and packed up their loot.

However, before they fled they entered many Dutch homes, and where they found weapons and uniforms they took the owners out and shot them.

German Civilians Get AMG Police Training

United States First Army Headquarters, Nov. 11 (AP)—German civilians are being trained by American military government officers to help in the policing of captured German towns.

The trainees live in a stable converted into a barracks. It long has been the plan of the militry government to use existing administrative personnel in Germany after the purge of Nazi elements. This, however, is an experiment in providing trained police for towns yet to be occupied.

The student policemen are being drilled in the laws, ordinances and regulations of the military government. They are being taught English, which is the official language of occupied towns in this area. After assignment to posts in newly captured places, they will instruct assistants in the same subjects.

AACHEN STAND CONDEMNED

NEW YORK, Nov. 11—(AP) The British radio reported tonight that German prisoners of war in England had adopted a resolution calling the defense of Aachen and its "senseless destruction" a "crime against the people" of Germany that must bring punishment on the German leaders. The broadcast in German was recorded here by the Office of War Information.

2 Confessed Nazi Spies Executed by Americans

VIXON

Soldiers Posed as Poles to Enter 3d Army Lines

WITH THE AMERICAN 3D ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 11 (AP).—Two confessed German spies who were convicted by a military commission Oct. 18 were executed by a firing squad this afternoon. The execution was the first announced in the 3d Army's sector.

The pair were captured while posing as Polish refugees by three American soldiers, Sergeant Robert T. Skarboro, of Chicago; Corporal Christopher W. Wolf, of Hortonville, Wis., and Technical Fifth Grade Frank A. Glowczynski, of Chicago.

The Americans were on outpost duty in a village west of the Moselle River when they saw the two civilians, one a youth and the other a bald, middle-aged man. The sergeant asked where they were going and they mumbled, "Polack, Polack."

Skarboro called Glowczynski, who speaks Polish, to question them. The older man said they were "just poor Polish workers" on the way to a near-by farm to seek jobs.

Since there are many Polish workers in that sector, their story seemed plausible and the doughboys let them proceed. Later they became worried about the incident. The Americans got in Corporal Wolf's jeep, caught the pair and took them to a platoon command post for further questioning. Their strange accent bothered Glowczynski. He never had heard any Poles talk like that.

The next day he understod why. Officials sent word back that the two men had confessed they were German soldiers who had been sent through the lines disguised as civilians and ordered to get information on American troop dispositions.

How Destiny Handled 8 Men's Lives Since '18

London, Nov. 11 (AP)—As a great, bloody conflict ended 26 years ago this morning, doctors in a military hospital in the German town of Pasewalk studied the case of a shell-shocked German corporal and debated whether to send him to a mental institution.

They finally released the melancholy corporal as fit, and Adolf Hitler walked out into the gloomy day.

3 Other Unknown Men

At far-flung points elsewhere on the globe, three comparatively unknown men whom destiny had marked to shape the future of the world greeted the end of that war with a firm belief that only peace and prosperity lay ahead. They had never heard of Adolf Hitler.

In Washington, a young man named Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who was considered quite efficient around the Navy Department where he was Under Secretary, was convalescing from pneumonia.

In London, Winston Churchill stood at the window of his room looking toward Trafalgar Square.

Stalin Began Planning

In Russia, Joseph Stalin was in the process of planning a long-range program of reconstruction for the new Soviet Union—a quiet little man still in the background.

In Germany, Heinrich Himmler was trying to get enough gas to operate his taxi, a newspaperman named Joseph Goebbels was seeking employment, and Hermann Goering was boasting of his feats as a combat pilot.

Dwight D. Eisenhower, the man destined to command the Allied armies against Hitler, was somewhat disappointed when he heard of the armistice because he had had no opportunity to get into combat.

Stationed At Gettysburg

At 11 A. M., November 11, 1918, Eisenhower was at Camp Colt, Gettysburg, Pa., commanding a tank training school.

Today, these men who celebrated that peace of 26 years ago, are locked in the world's greatest conflict with the corporal who escaped confinement in a mental home.

Unknown to each other then, Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin now are planning to meet soon to shape the course of the world after Hitler has been liquidated.

Hitler Going Backward

But what of Adolf Hitler? He failed to make his usual broadcast this week on the biggest Nazi anniversary of all—the anniversary of the Munich beer hall Putsch. Stockholm reports say people in Germany believe he is dead. Some reports have hinted that he is mentally ill and that a brain specialist was called to Berchtesgaden.

But, whatever the truth, one fact stands out clearly—Adolf Hitler is sinking fast into the oblivion he knew before 11 A. M. 26 years ago today.

Most Britons Work On Peace Anniversary

London, Nov. 11 (AP)—The great majority of Britons worked at war factories, offices, farms and mines as usual on this 26th anniversary of the first World War armistice in an effort to speed the victory in World War II.

The royal family remained in mourning for the death of the Earl of Strathmore, the Queen's father. An equerry laid a wreath of memorial poppies at the foot of the cenotaph in Whitehall.

Blind veterans of the two wars were led to the cenotaph by Sir Ian Fraser. Veterans of other wars mounted guard over the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Westminster Abbey.

Richard Law, Minister of State, told Britons in a message that life was not going to be easy for them, that "there is much to be done."

No Armistice Observance At Front

With Northern Armies in Holland, Nov. 11 (AP)—There was no frontline Armistice observance of silence on this front where doughboys, Tommies and Canadians fought in the mud.

Corporal Ben Joseph, Akron, Ohio, said "we came over here to finish what was started in the last war, not to observe any of its foolishness. The only thing I want to observe is Berlin, and then the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor."

There was some observance of Armistice Day well back of the front lines. Troops paraded in one liberated Dutch community.

Guns Keep Roaring At Armistice Hour

With the United States First Army in Germany, Nov. 11 (AP)—The big guns kept roaring in the Battle of Germany today as the hands of watches reached the hour of 11 o'clock—when the guns were stilled in the last war.

Armistice Day—cold, muddy and gray—passed unheralded and hardly noticed in the First Army area. Up in foxholes at the front troops had no surcease from battle.

There were no official army ceremonies to mark the end of the First World War 26 years ago, although in some Belgian towns civilians observed the day by voicing thanks to Americans for their liberation.

U. S. SOLDIERS JOIN COMPIEGNE CEREMONY

COMPIEGNE, France, Nov. 11 (AP)—Two hundred American soldiers participated in ceremonies today in the Forest of Compiègne, where the armistice that ended World War I was signed—and where Hitler, in June, 1940, imposed his armistice terms on France.

The Germans carried off in 1940 the famous railway car in which the two events took place. They exhibited it at a fair at Leipzig and later it was reported destroyed in an Allied bombing of Berlin.

The monument with the inscription marking the end of "the criminal pride of the German Empire" was destroyed by the Nazis, but they left the statue of Marshal Foch standing.

The observance at Compiègne yesterday included a ceremony "to cleanse the place of the presence of Hitler," the American Broadcasting Station in Europe said in a report heard by Columbia Broadcasting System. A torch lighted from the eternal flame of the Unknown Soldier's Tomb under the Arc de Triomphe in Paris was carried to Compiègne by relays of runners and used to set eleven bonfires " to purify the site."

ALLIES MARK ARMISTICE DAY

President, Churchill, De Gaulle In Tributes To War Dead

Washington, Nov. 11 (AP)—America and her Allies took but little time today from their current conflict to mark the 26th anniversary of Armistice Day, symbol of a peace once attained but lost.

France's first Armistice Day celebration in five years was given new significance as the United States, Great Britain and Russia invited the war-stunned land to share with them the responsibility for administering justice to Germany when she is defeated.

As the war tides ebbed and flowed around the world, the gallantry of those who died in the First World War for the Allied cause was honored both here and abroad.

President At Arlington

President Roosevelt, as the nation's leader, watched as a wreath was laid in his behalf upon the tomb of America's Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery.

Standing beside Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, and James V. Forrestal, Secretary of the Navy, he watched Maj. Gen. Edwin M. Watson, his chief military aide, lay a large oval wreath of white and yellow chrysanthemums at the foot of the marble sarcophagus.

Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, naval aide, also stood with him in the minute of silence preceding the wreath laying. A small guard of men in the uniform of the army, navy and marines participated.

Prime Minister Churchill and General de Gaulle took joint part in France's tribute to her war dead at the Arc de Triomphe in Paris.

Britain's Blind Veterans

In London, blind veterans of the two world wars were led to the cenotaph in Whitehall, while a representative of the royal family, in mouring for the death of the Queen's father, placed a memorial wreath of poppies at the monument's base.

Coupled with the tributes at the monuments to the war dead were reminders to the living that much remains to be done before victory can be counted upon.

America's War Mobilization Director, James F. Byrnes, told a Columbia (S. C.) Armistice Day crowd that United States forces must have more munitions and other war equipment, if the struggle is to be shortened.

"We must not let pride in our accomplishments blind us to the magnitude of our needs," he said.

Meuse-Argonne Dead Honored

Brig. Gen. Charles R. Doran, at services honoring the American dead in the Meuse-Argonne Forest in France, declared:

"We cannot deceive ourselves into believing that complete victory will be quick and easy."

And a pledge that the war must not be allowed to recur was voiced in Washington by Edward N. Scheiberling, American Legion national commander, who said:

"This time we do not say that it must not happen again. This time we say that—under God—it shall not happen again."

Legion's Aims Told at Tomb of Unknown Hero

Scheiberling Says Veterans Should Sit at Peace Table; Roosevelt Pays Homage

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 (AP)—President Roosevelt stood without a top-coat in a chilly breeze at Arlington National Cemetery today to pay the nation's annual homage at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Standing beside Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, and James V. Forrestal, Secretary of the Navy, he watched Major General Edwin M. Watson, his chief military aide, lay a large oval wreath of white and yellow crysanthemums at the foot of the marble sarcophagus.

Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, Naval aide, also stood with him in the minute of silence preceding the wreathing laying. A small guard of men in the uniforms of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps participated.

Just before the ceremony the band played "Hail to the Chief" and "The Star-Spangled Banner," as several hundred spectators looked on. A bugler sounded taps at the end.

The customary Presidential salute of twenty-one guns was fired out over the Potomac River as the Presidential procession moved through the cemetery gates and out again.

In an addres sat the Tomb, Edward N. Scheiberling, national commander of the American Legion, said veterans of this war should sit at the peace table to assure the achievement of a lasting peace. He asserted that America had broken its promises to "this man" and his comrades of the last war.

"This time," he declared, "we do not say that it must not happen again.

"This time we say that—under God—it shall not happen again.

"We cannot leave the making of peace to statesmen alone. This time we who have fought in the battles—we, the comrades of the Unknown Soldier, veterans of two wars, will help formulate the terms of an enduring peace. It can be done only by those of us who know the horrors of war."

The peace that was won after the first world war, said the Legion commander, was lost on the "altar of political expediency and public indifference." He added:

"This tragic blunder must not be repeated. Representatives of those who have fought in World War I and World War II should certainly sit at the peace table and exercise an active influence in formulating the terms of peace."

Mr. Scheiberling said his views expressed the conviction of the Legion and sprang from "twenty-five bitter years of illusions" in which the world was witnessed plunging swiftly into another war.

The Legion commander demanded that the nation "redeem its pledge" to its fighting men to care for the widows and orphans of those who have fallen.

"There are women today in need, in the midst of our war-time prosperity," he said "because the country claimed the lives of their husbands. There are women—and children—in difficult circumstances today because their country failed them—and their soldier husbands and fathers.

"This is a shameful condition which the Legion insists shall be corrected."

The United Nations must not again accept an armistice but demand and get a real peace, Mrs. Charles B. Gilbert, national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, said in a second speech prepared for delivery at the ceremonies.

NAZIS AT CANAL HALT ITALY DRIVE

Eighth Army Meets Strong Defenses Outside Forli

Rome, Nov. 11 (AP)—British Eighth Army troops grinding slowly forward from captured Forli in the eastern Po Valley were halted today just outside the city at the Ravaldino canal, which they found the German tanks and infantry defending in considerable strength.

The canal runs from the northwest corner of Forli in a northeasterly direction. Southwest of Forli the Germans have taken up positions along the Montone river

Snow Hampers Transport

Snow flurries fell on both the Fifth and Eighth army fronts, varying from a light coating in some sectors to a depth of nine inches on the right flank in the hills. There has been snow on the higher peaks for several weeks, but now on the Eighth Army front heavy drifts were beginning to interrupt communications.

The Germans evacuated Castrocaro, about five milees southwest of Forli on Highway 67, but they were still holding strongly in the hills to the west. The Desert Air Force was called in to attack German positions along the Montone and delivered an assault described as very successful.

Hold Coastal Sector Points

On the coastal sector, positions on Highway 16 were unchanged. The Germans were still holding Coccolia, on the Ronco river farther inland, in strength. The Germans also were defending Gambellara strongly in this area, and extensive minefields were making progress difficult for Eighth Army armor.

On the Fifth Army front below Bologna there was little but aggressive patrolling and harassing German artillery fire, but troops of Indian divisions occupied Monte Budrialto, a 2,200-foot peak east of the Faenza road.

Snow Blankets Italy Front

Rome, Nov. 11 (AP)—Eighth Army

troops, driving ahead north of captured Forli, smashed into strong German tank and infantry defenses today along a canal running from the northwest corner of the Bologna-Rimini highway town.

Snow has fallen over both the Fifth and Eighth army fronts to a depth of nine inches in some places and on the Eighth Army front heavy drifts interrupted communications in the hills.

Dig In On Montone

Southwest of Forli the Germans have taken up positions along the Montone river. Castrocaro, about five miles southwest of Forli, has been evacuated by the Nazis, but they are holding tenaciously in the hills to the west.

On the Fifth Army front due south of Bologna there was aggressive patrolling yesterday punctuated by German artillery fire. Indian troops scored an advance in occupying Monte Budrialto, 2,200-foot feature east of the Faenza road.

In observance of the Armistice Day anniversary, American, British and French troops were reviewed in the Piazza Venezia in front of Mussolini's former headquarters.

ACE SAVES BULLETS

A Fighter Base in Italy, Nov. 8 (Delayed) (A. P.)—Fighter Pilot Lieut. John J. Voll of Goshen, Ohio, is the leading active ace in the Mediterranean theater—and he has a lot of ammunition to spare.

This former Mount Okab, Ohio, semi-pro infielder has blasted nineteen enemy planes out of the skies since coming to war last May. Three of his last four victories were scored without firing a shot.

He maneuvered two of the Jerries into a mid-air collision and the third, his seventeenth victory, he forced to crash in a dive.

Nazis To Sink All Baltic Shipping

Stockholm, Nov. 11 (AP)—Germany today declared the Bothnian Gulf and most of the Baltic Sea a war operational zone in which any ship might be sunk without warning, and the Swedish Government immediately protested vigorously, saying that Berlin would be held responsible for any incident involving Swedish vessels.

The broadcast German proclamation was tacit admission that Berlin fears new operations by the Russian Baltic fleet, perhaps amphibious operations against German soil from bases in Finland, Estonia, Latvia and even Memel territory torn from German East Prussia.

"Startle The World"

[A Reuter Moscow dispatch said that "the Soviet high command may soon startle the world with a series of mass seaborne landings on German soil from its newly captured series of springboard ports along the coast of the Baltic states."]

Berlin's newly outlined operational zone included all of the Gulf of Bothnia between Sweden and capitulated Finland, and the Baltic Sea east of a 120-mile line running from the southern tip of Poland, a Swedish island off this country's southeastern coast, down to Rugenwalde, on the German coast 175 miles northeast of Berlin.

The Swedish Government note said it considered the German plan "damaging to legitimate Swedish interests," and held it unjustifiable.

Text Of Note

[The text of the note, as broadcast by Stockholm radio and reported by the Federal Communications Commission:

["The Swedish Government considers the contemplated German measures damaging to legitimate Swedish interests. It most strongly denies that German armed forces would have the right to attack Swedish vessels without previous warning within the planned new zone of operation. The Government places responsibility for all consequences which may result from German measures entirely upon the German Government."]

Sweden had been notified two days ago of the German intention and today announced its emphatic protest. This episode is another in a long series of incidents which have impaired relations between neutral Sweden and Germany.

Because of the increased risk, the Swedish War Insurance Board today warned all Swedish ships in the Baltic to proceed only inside Swedish territorial waters.

Swedes Hit Baltic Ban

Stockholm, Sweden, Nov. 11 (AP). The Swedish Government lodged a sharp protest with the German legation today against the official Berlin declaration proclaiming the Baltic Sea and Bothnian Gulf an operational area in which all shipping would be subject to attack without warning.

The Swedish reply to the German advisory note declared all consequences which may result from the German measure would be held against the German Government.

"The Swedish Government is of the opinion the planned German measure is dangerous to legitimate Swedish interests," the protest said.

Swedes Arrest German Tourist Bureau Head

Stockholm, Nov. 11 (AP) — The Swedish police announced today that Baron Gossler, head of the German Tourist Bureau, was arrested a week ago on a charge of attempting to engage a Baltic refugee for intelligence work against a foreign country.

The window of his tourist bureau, which actually was a Nazi propaganda headquarters, has been stoned so frequently that the Germans no longer are able to obtain insurance on it.

Congratulates Roosevelt

Madrid, Nov. 11 (AP)—Generalissimo Franco has sent President Roosevelt a message of congratulation on his reelection, it was announced today.

Pravda Sees Election As Aid To Freedom

Moscow, Nov. 11 (AP)—"The results of the American elections struck a new blow at the enemies of freedom-loving peoples," the Communist party newspaper Pravda said today.

"Roosevelt's victory strengthened the union of the United Nations," Pravda declared, adding:

"Thanks to his policies, the international role of the U. S. A. has increased. Roosevelt labors industriously to give the United States a dignified place in the battle alliance of freedom-loving nations."

CHINESE CONCEDE BREAK IN KWEILIN

Japs Claim Capture Of City And Also Of Liuchow

Chungking, Nov. 11 (AP) — Estimating that 350,000 Japanese had been flung into the battle for Kwangsi province, the Chinese high command admitted tonight that the enemy had broken into Kweilin and also was pushing a menacing drive in the south toward important Yungning (Nanning).

Resistance continued inside Kweilin, Kwangsi capital and defense pivot for southeast China, which was penetrated Thursday night, the high command said.

Say Liuchow Holds Out

Liuchow, site of the last advance American air base in southeast China, still is in Chinese hands, the communique said. A United States 14th Air Force communique detailed widespread attacks in Hunan and Kwangsi provinces.

[The Japanese high command proclaimed the capture of both Kweilin and Liuchow, which Domei previously had reported taken. An imperial headquarters communique broadcast by Tokyo and recorded by United States Government monitors said the Japanese had "smashed the network of bases of the United States Air Force in this sector and established a superior strategic position on the China continent."]

Would Leave 105-Mile Gap

Yungning was threatened by a drive westward south of Liuchow. The enemy was within seven and one half miles of Chienkiang on the highway to Yungning, which is some 50 miles below Liuchow.

Japanese capture of Yungning would mean that the enemy would have only 105 miles to go in order to form a link with his forces in Indo-China—50 miles each way if the forces converged.

The penetration of Kweilin and the assault on Luichow brought closer the dismal prospect of a link between the invader forces in China and Indo-China, which would give the enemy a long overland line of supply and reinforcement between Singapore and Manchuria.

Already the westward surging Japanese columns by-passing Liuchow on the south had all but cut the highway between Liuchow and Yungning.

The only hopeful element in the overall picture would be that the transcontinental line would be a tenuous one, with limited capacity and open to disruptive attacks by Chinese ground forces and the United States Fourteenth Air Force.

The enemy, striking down the Hunan-Kwangsi railway, may already have closed the gap between his forces driving up from the West River sector. This alone would mean the realization of a major Japanese objective, a through connection between Hong Kong and Manchuria, bisecting China.

Enemy In Kweilin, Chinese Admit

Chungking, Nov. 11 (AP) — The Japanese have flung 350,000 men into the battle for Kwangsi province, the Chinese high command announced tonight, admitting that the enemy has broken into Kweilin, the province's capital.

Liuchow, site of the last remaining American air base in southeast China, 95 miles below Kweilin, still is in Chinese hands, the high command said.

Still Resisting

The enemy smashed into Kweilin, Kwangsi defense pivot, Thursday night, the Chinese said, but added that resistance continued within the city.

South of Liuchow a Japanese column knifing westward was within seven miles of Chienkiang on the highway to Yungning (Nanning), which is 55 miles from Liuchow.

Fall of Yungning would mean that the Japanese would have only 105 miles to go to form a link with their forces in Indo-China.

Chinese Close In On Bhamo In Burma

Chungking, Nov. 11 (AP)—Chinese moving southward in Burma closed in on Bhamo today with one column only eight miles east of the town and another, pressing down from the northeast, the Chinese high command said today.

British elements struck to within nine miles from Naba Junction on the Myitkyina-Rangoon railroad 60 miles west of Bhamo.

Allies Advance in Burma

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 11 (AP).—Chinese troops, one of three Allied columns moving southward to clear a land route through Burma to China, have crossed the Taping River, in the Myothit area, an Allied communique said today.

Another Chinese column, in a flanking movement, has captured Momauk.

The third south-bound column, composed of British forces, was only nine miles from Naba Junction, where the main Myitkyina-Rangoon railway turns west to India, then south to Mandalay.

Gen. Cheves Now China Supply Chief

Chungking, Nov. 11 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Gilbert Cheves, 49, of Washington, D. C., who has commanded the base section and port of Calcutta through which flow supplies for China, today was appointed commanding general of services of supply for United States forces in the China theater of operations.

Col. R. R. Neyland, Jr., 52, who has run the big advance supply section in China, succeeds Cheves in India.

Cheves' assignment is a recognition of the importance of supply in this theater and the enlargement of operations which may follow the reopening of the Burma Road, said the announcement from Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer's headquarters.

Cheves, a Georgian, received a law degree at the University of Georgia in 1917 and served in World War I.

Neyland is known in the United States as a former University of Tennessee football coach.

U.S. Carrier Task Force in Pacific Has Been Doubled in Six Months

U.S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR, Nov. 11—(AP) The American Pacific Fleet fast carrier task force is becoming increasingly stronger and in a very few months will have twice as many carriers operating in the Western Pacific as it had six months ago Rear Admiral George D. Murray said today.

As of six months ago this fleet could put at least 1,000 planes in the air.

Admiral Murray, Naval air commander in the Pacific, also reported that all U.S. naval aircraft and pilot losses of the last two months had been replaced. This included losses in the great naval battles of the Philippines October 24 and 25.

American losses in those battles included the light carrier Princeton, two escort carriers and damage to an unnamed number of carriers. The Japanese claimed they shot down about 500 U.S. planes there.

"I'm glad to be able to report, "Murray said, "that our losses of the last two months, since the Marianas, are well within what we can stand.

"All our aircraft losses have been replaced. Our pilot losses have been replaced.

Murray had just returned from the Western Pacific, where he conferred with virtually every naval task force commander.

He said yank pilots had been trained to the highest possible efficiency and that they had greatly increased the ratio of Japanese to American losses in air combat.

"Japanese losses, which we estimate conservatively, are increasing steadily in our favor," he added. "In one instance it was as high as 120 Japanese downed to only three or four Americans and that's no fairy tale!"

Admiral Murray said he looked forward "with confidence to the Navy exerting increasing pressure against the Japanese empire."

"Our policy," he added, "is never to give the enemy a breathing space to reorganize and rearrange his forces."

The air officer said the quality of Japanese varied with the theater and the situation.

"Japan still has hundreds of very good pilots, "he said, but her losses are so tremendous we wonder how long the supply can last.

"They run the scale from excellent to large numbers of poor inexperienced pilots. One American fighter squadron leader told me that before he could close in for a shot one Jap pilot bailed out of his undamaged plane."

Murray estimated that more than 50 per cent of all American airmen downed are rescued. He called this "a great morale factor." He said one carrier squadron had a rescue record of 90 per cent of all men able to get out of their planes after being downed.

The admiral emphasized that success in the Western Pacific depends primarily on logistics and production. He paid tribute to mainland civilians for war production and the crews of tankers and cargo ships for keeping supplies into the Pacific area. Army engineers and the seabees also came in for praise in that connection.

Murray commanded the carrier Enterprise which provided security patrols for the carrier Hornet, which carried Lt. Gen. James Doolittle's B-25 bombers for their raid on Tokyo April 18, 1942.

BONG, JOHNSON UP JAP SCORE

American Aces Shoot Down Enemy Planes Over Ormoc

At a Leyte Airbase, Philippines,

Sunday, Nov. 12 (AP)—Major Richard I. Bong, of Poplar, Wis., American ace of aces, ran his string to 36 today, downing two more Japanese planes in the skies above Ormoc.

He said the enemy fighters encountered were among the best he has met in the war.

Bong's victories were his seventh and eighth within the past 31 days. He has shot down six since he arrived at this base October 27.

Johnson Also Scores

In the same roaring dogfight today, Major Gerald Johnson, of Eugene, Ore., bagged his 18th and 19th.

Bong and Johnson attacked seven enemy fighters as the Nipponese prepared for runs on American torpedo bombers going after Japanese shipping in Ormoc harbor.

Three other pilots helped boost the score of the fighting 49th Fighter Group to 555 enemy planes.

Second Lieutenant Harold W. Harris, of Memphis, Tenn., got two. Lieutenant Frederick Dick, of Auburn, Maine, and Second Lieutenant Fernley H. Danstrom, of Olivia, Texas, each got one.

'Jap WAC' Is Albino Papuan

San Francisco, Nov. 11 (AP)—The myth of "the Jap WAC from Wewak" has been exploded, says an Aneta (Dutch news agency) dispatch from New Guinea, and the truth which shattered it is almost as incredible as the myth itself.

Stories have been drifting in and out of Allied headquarters in New Guinea of a phantom Japanese woman soldier in the jungles. She was the leader of a sizable group of isolated Japanese being fereted out by native patrols, said one story. She tossed hand grenades with a vigor and accuracy that surpassed the skill of men in her group, was another.

Through close questioning of Papuan natives of the jungle area, however, patrols established that the phantom figure is one of the rarest of all persons—an albino Papuan woman who has cast her lot with the Japanese.

Tokyo Reports Pagan Raid

San Francisco, Nov. 11 (AP)—The Tokyo radio said today that "ten enemy planes, including B-29s" raided Pagan Island in the Marianas Friday.

The broadcast to Japanese areas, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, said also that "more than ten medium-type enemy planes" bombed Yap Island in the Carolines Thursday and that 17 B-29s bombed Haha Island and Chichi Island, both located in the Bonins, Thursday afternoon.

Superforts Strike In Japan And At Two Chinese Cities

NOV 12 1944

Washington, Nov. 11 (AP)—Using secret instruments to locate their targets through clouds, Superfortresses today bombed a Japanese homeland aircraft manufacturing center and transportation and storage facilities in two enemy-held Chinese cities.

One Superfortress was missing, a communique reported. At least two enemy planes were shot down, seven others probably destroyed and 11 damaged.

From Bases In China

The communique said a large task force of Superfortresses, operating from bases in China, participated in the three-prong aerial blow. The targets were:

The Omura aircraft factory, at Omura, on the Japanese home island of Kyushu.

The extensive dock and loading facilities at Nanking, a ferry point for rail traffic between Shanghai, Tientsin and Manchuria. Nanking also is the seat of the Japanese-controlled puppet government in China.

Enemy military storage and transshipment facilities at the great port of Shanghai.

The Twentieth Air Force communique said these were "targets of vital importance to the Japanese war machine."

Diversion Due To Overcast

The air force reported that "overcast skies caused a diversion of the effort," but did not make clear the originally intended target. Earlier in the day, a 20th Air Force announcement reported only an attack on Nanking.

It was possible, however, that Omura, the most distant of the three targets, may have been first choice and that because of the overcast there a part of the mission deployed to the mainland cities. Omura is about 1,800 miles from the China bases. Nanking and Shanghai are about 1,000.

The attack on the Omura aircraft plant, hit previously on October 25, was "accomplished through clouds by precision instruments," the communique said.

Good Results At Shanghai

Instruments also were used in the attack on Nanking. Because of the clouds, results at both targets could not be observed. Returning crews reported good results at Shanghai.

[Tokyo Domei agency said in a broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission that "some 20-odd Superfortresses raided Nanking. The enemy broadcast said the Superfortresses "indiscriminately bombed" the port vicinity and one of the big bombers was shot down by anti-aircraft fire.]

Today's communique was the first official report that the high-flying Superfortresses have instruments for bombing through overcast. Such instruments have been used for some time in strategic operations by the smaller planes employed in the European theater.

Fighter Opposition Weak

Most of the returning B-29 crews said fighter-plane opposition was weak and anti-aircraft fire meager on today's raids.

A report of a Superfortress attack on the island of Saishu, west of Kyushu, was broadcast by the Tokyo radio. It also said that planes flew over Honshu, the main island of Japan, in what apparently was a reconnaissance flight.

YANKS BATTER NANKING AND SHANGHAI TOO

NOV 12 1944

One Huge American Bomber Is Missing After Triple Daylight Attack.

OMURA HIT IN JAP HOMELAND

Tokyo Radio Tells of Other Blows by U. S. Aircraft—Says Damage Is Slight.

Washington, Nov. 11 (A. P.).—B-29 Superfortresses of the Twentieth United States Air Force by daylight today attacked three vitally important enemy targets—Nanking and Shanghai in Japanese-occupied China, and Omura on the Japanese home island of Kyushu.

According to preliminary reports, the War Department announced this afternoon one of the gigantic bombers is missing. They encountered a weaker than usual fighter opposition, the communique noted, and they shot down two enemy planes, probably destroyed seven others and damaged eleven.

In a first announcement today the War Department reported the Superfortresses attacking only Nanking, which is the capital of the Japanese puppet government of China. The later communique, listing the three targets, said that weather had "caused a diversion of part of the effort," thus indicating that Shanghai and Omura were alternate targets.

Meanwhile today the Tokyo radio declared that Superfortresses attacked both Shanghai and the Japanese homeland islands of Kyushu and Saishu, while still more planes—these of unspecified type—flew over the cities of Kobe and Kure on the south coast of Honshu, the main island of Japan.

Text of Communique.

The text of the Twentieth Air Force communique follows:

"A large task force of B-29 aircraft today attacked three targets of vital importance to the Japanese war machine. The strikes were made in daylight by elements of Major-Gen. Curtis E. Lemay's Twentieth Bomber Command from their bases in China. Overcast skies caused a diversion of part of the effort, and bombs were dropped at Omura, on the main Japanese island of Kyushu, and at Nanking and Shanghai on the Yangtze River in Japanese-occupied China.

"At Omura the target was the Omura aircraft factory, which was attacked previously in a B-29 mission on October 25. Over Omura the skies were overcast, and bombing was accomplished through clouds by precision instruments with unobserved results.

"Similar weather prevailed at Nanking, where bombing also was by instrument and the effect was unobserved. The target at Nanking was the extensive dock and loading facilities where rail traffic between Shanghai, Tientsin and Manchuria is ferried across the Yangtze River.

"At Shanghai, good bombing was reported by some of the crews, although all elements did not mave sufficient visibility for observation of results. The target at Shanghai was Japanese military storage and transshipment facilities on the main Japanese military supply route to the occupied mainland.

"Fighter plane opposition was reported weak by most participating aircraft, but returning crews reported they had shot two enemy aircraft, with seven others probably destroyed and eleven damaged. Anti-aircraft was meager at all three targets.

"On the basis of preliminary reports, one of our aircraft is known to be missing."

Other Attacks Reported.

In a dispatch broadcast by the Tokyo radio and picked up by the FCC, Domei, the Japanese official news agency, said that several Superfortresses struck Shanghai at 8:50 A. M. today (7:50 o'clock last night, New York time), that they approached "in wave-type formations," and that they dropped bombs on "several points on the outskirts" of the city. It added, as usual, that the damage was "extremely negligible."

Tokyo also broadcast a communique in which Imperial Headquarters declared that eighty Superfortresses attacked the home islands of Kyushu and Saishu at 10 A. M. today, or a little more than an hour after the reported Shanghai attack. Kyushu is the southernmost of the Japanese home islands. Saishu, just below the southern tip of Korea, is about 150 miles to the west.

Fifteen Islands Blasted.

Pearl Harbor, Nov. 11 (A. P.)—American planes pounded fifteen Japanese island groups over a giant arc of nearly 5,000 miles from the Kuriles to Dutch Timor Admiral Nimitz and Gen. Mac Arthur disclosed in their latest communiques.

The raiders hit north of Tokyo at the Kuriles, south in the Bonins and Volcanoes. Other targets were Marcus, the Marianas, the Western Philippines, Borneo, Celebes, the Moluccas, Ceram, Timor, New Guinea, New Britain, New Ireland and the Solomons.

More than a score of Japanese fighters were encountered Monday over Tori Shima in the northern Kuriles and from three to four were downed at a cost of one Mitchell bomber.

Fifteen enemy fighters challenged raiders of the Western Philippines and three were shot down at a cost of two Liberators.

A medium cargo ship was damaged off Chici in the Volcanoes. A 2,000-ton freighter was sunk and a 6,000-ton transport damaged in the Western Philippines. Two coastal vessels were destroyed off Borneo. Two small freighters and a coastal vessel were set afire off Dutch Celebes and five schooners were damaged.

U. S. WON'T TAKE SIDES IN POLAND

NOV 12 1944

Said to Refuse to Back Any Specific Plan.

Washington, Nov. 11 (A. P.).—The United States was understood today to be standing firm on its policy of encouraging Poland and Russia to settle their differences but refusing to guarantee any specific settlement.

This appeared to be the situation as American officials studied the latest request for information and advice presented by the Polish Government in Exile in London through its Ambassador, John Ciechanowski.

Mr. Ciechanowski called at the State Department late yesterday after making a rush trip here from Chicago where he has been attending the international aviation conference.

Border Solution Sought.

Recent dispatches from London have said that Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin are pressing the London Government of Poland to come to an early agreement on its territorial and political differences with Russia. Stalin's trump cards are that the Red Army primarily is liberating Poland and the the Soviet-sponsored Polish liberation committee is actually administering the freed territories of Eastern Poland.

The differences between the Soviet-supported Poles and the London Poles have boiled down to several specific points, the foremost of which is that Russia has already taken over and incorporated within the Russian State large areas which the London Polish Government claims and which Poland had during the period between the world wars.

Churchill in Accord.

Stalin's proposal, to which Prime Minister Churchill appears to have agreed in principle at least, is understood to have been to fix Poland's eastern boundary on the so-called Curzon line and compensate Poland for the loss of territory by giving her East Prussia and other areas now recognized as German.

To accept any such settlement as final, pending actual Allied conquest and control of the German territories, the London Poles apparently hope that they may obtain guaranties of the settlement not only by Russia and Britain but also by the United States. This seems to have posed for the American Government the question of whether it is willing to undertake specific legal and moral obligations for definite future Polish boundaries.

Bolivia Begins Talks With Russia Embassy

NOV 12 1944

Washington, Nov. 11 (A. P.).—The roster of Latin-American States recognizing the Soviet Union may presently include Bolivia, Chile, Ecuador, Brazil and Honduras.

On the eve of world security talks in which they expect to participate, Bolivia has started negotiations with the Russian embassy here and Chile has expressed a desire to re-establish diplomatic ties with Moscow. Ecuador, Brazil and Honduras are reported to be considering such a step.

United States Prestige Down, Conference Told

Los Angeles, Nov. 11 (AP)—Dr. Richard F. Pattee, former United States State Department official, declared today that United States prestige has suffered in all Latin-American countries because of diplomatic differences with Argentina.

Describing the feelings of other Latin-American nations, Dr. Pattee told the Conference of Inter-American Relations at Immaculate Heart College:

"First, they feel a similar difficulty might arise between the United States and their countries, and second, they wonder how it is possible that such a difficulty can arise after 14 years of efforts to secure mediation of Pan-American difficulties."

He described the present Argentina Government as "similar to many such military governments that have been established throughout Latin America for centuries." Dr. Pattee, once assistant chief of the State Department's division of cultural relations, is now professor of diplomatic history at the University of Mexico.

CHINA TO AID IN AVIATION

Parley Told It Will Open Skies To Other Nations

Chicago, Nov. 11 (AP)—China disclosed today her ambitions to participate in post-war international air travel and her intention to open China skies to other nations. At the same time China took a stand in line with United States views at the International Civil Aviation Conference.

Kia-Ngau Chang, former Chinese Minister of Communications and head of a delegation to the conference, presented his country's views at a press conference. He said in brief:

The virtual exclusion of foreign air lines by China before the war was due to fear of Japanese penetration, and a revised policy would be adopted after the war.

To Welcome Foreign Operators

China is prepared to welcome foreign operators on a non-discriminatory basis, with rights to be granted through mutual understanding.

China's immediate post-war concern will be rebuilding of domestic services, with parallel activity to develop a network of air services to neighboring countries, and eventually to all the world.

China feels that a major task of the conference is establishment of an international aviation authority "with equitable representation and adequate powers for dealing with the expanding international air services." However, in the matter of powers for this authority, China's delegation believes it should be "primarily confined to the technical field, where there is already a large measure of agreement," Chang said.

Parallels U. S. Position

This position closely parallels the announced proposition of the United States.

Chang added the international authority would "have a better chance for a normal and healthy growth" if it were "assigned, at least in the early stages, only consultative and advisory functions in regard to matters of an economic or political nature."

Here he used almost the exact phraseology of the United States in outlining its views on what the permanent world agency should be so far as economics are concerned, and this is the biggest question still before the conference.

China Has Two Air Lines

Chang explained China has two air-line companies, one owned partly by Pan American Airways and the other formerly owned in part by German interests which the Chinese confiscated after Pearl Harbor.

Asked if there were any significance in the fact that Russia was not listed among the countries with whom air commerce would be sought, Chang explained that China already had a connecting service with the Soviet.

"The Chinese Government is alive to the importance of international cooperation in the development of a civil aviation," Chang said, "so long as her national security and sovereignty remain unaffected, China is eager to welcome the expansion of plentiful and efficient foreign air services into the country.

China To Loosen Up Air Policy After War

Chicago, Nov. 11—China's delegates to the International Civil Aviation Conference announced today a post-war policy of closed air over her vast territory would be revised when peace comes to "welcome the expansion of plentiful and efficient foreign air services into the country."

In a statement of policy prepared by the delegation leader, Kia-ngau Chang, the Chinese at the same time indicated strong support for the American view that the world aviation authority which this conference proposes to establish have power for the present only in the technical field, with "consultative and advisory functions in regard to matters of an economic or political nature."

Reason For Restriction

The Chinese leader explained that before the war "concern over Japanese penetration into China led to the adoption of a restrictive policy which practically precluded any extension of foreign airlines into her territory."

After the war, he said, she intends to rebuild her domestic services and to expand beyond her borders in India, Burma, Malaya, Thailand, Indo-China, the Philippines, Korea and Japan.

Door Held Open To Russia

The conference entered the second half of its expected run with the United States still pushing absent Russia into the forefront as a possible participant in the world air agreement being sought here by 51 nations.

The latest move in this country's determination to hold the door wide open for the Soviet, which called back its delegation when it was but a matter of hours by air from Chicago, was a request that one seat be added to the proposed executive council for a temporary aviation authority just in case Russia decided to come along and occupy it.

U. S. Yields Point

The United States did that while backing down from a proposal that Russia be given two seats permanently on such an interim council. Confronted with a 19-vote bloc of Latin-American delegates, the United States abandoned its suggestion for pre-assignment of seats and also for running the interim organization solely through the executive council, with no overriding assembly on which all might be represented.

The Latin-American Republics, with Mexico and Cuba in the van, substituted their proposal for an all-nation assembly which would elect the council.

The Latin-Americans have thus taken a leading position in the effort to get world air routes into operation quickly and in attempting to limit the powers of the proposed international authority.

U.S. Ships Shells

While Hot Due To Demand

NOV 12 1944

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 11 (AP)—Demand for artillery ammunition is so great that hot shells are being loaded into freight cars for overseas shipment as soon as the TNT inside them hardens, War Mobilization Director Byrnes said today.

He made this disclosure in an address prepared for Armistice Day.

"We must not let pride in our accomplishments blind us to the magnitude of our needs," Byrnes cautioned, explaining that "our present military shortages are not a product of our failure or our mistakes.

"Product Of Success"

"They are a product of our successes," he added. "We are running months ahead of our military timetable. As a result, we must obtain from our war factories material that was not scheduled for production until next March."

The armed forces need heavy artillery and mortar ammunition especially, Byrnes related.

General Eisenhower's troops are currently drawing upon their reserve supplies, he said, and in the Pacific General MacArthur's forces will use as much 105-millimeter ammunition this month as they did in all of last year.

Move On "Expedite" Basis

"To meet these demands from the front, hot shells are being loaded into freight cars at factories in this country as soon as the TNT inside them solidifies. They move direct from the factory to the port on an 'expedite' basis," Byrnes said.

Hourly reports on the whereabouts of each car are telegraphed to the headquarters of the Army Transportation Corps in Washington so that there will be no delay in spotting any tieups.

Carried In Destroyers, Planes

In some cases special trains of 30 cars or more are used and these trains have the right of way over everything else on the rails.

"In a few cases, destroyers have been used to move top priority items across the ocean. Air transport is frequently utilized for the shipment of rockets or mortar ammunition, and as many as 20 planes have been assigned for a single shipment."

Byrnes, who also is director of reconversion, said that in addition to ammunition, other urgently needed items are tanks, heavy trucks, cotton duck and radar equipment.

"All of these things are needed to bring the war to an earlier end," he declared.

Antwerp Ready Soon

"Within a week," Byrnes revealed, "Antwerp will be ready for the unloading of ships. . . . We will resume the march to Berlin. And when the Russians reach Hitler's capital, I nominate for chairman of the welcoming committee our own General Eisenhower."

Invasion Saved London: Byrnes

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 11 (AP)—If Allied forces had not landed on the Continent June 6 "little would have been left of London" because of the flying-bomb menace, War Mobilization Director Byrnes said today.

Byrnes, in a talk prepared for an Armistice Day program, said that an inspection of a flying-bomb launching site near Cherbourg had convinced him "that only by invasion could we ever have curbed the destruction by those flying bombs."

He made no direct reference to the new vengeance bomb which the Germans have been employing against the British.

Secret Mississi[p]pi ests Perfected D-Da[y] bors

Engineers Tried Models of Artificial

VICKSBURG, Miss[.], 11 (AP).—Waterways technic[ians] worked twenty-four hours a day for four months in a lonely concrete building near the Mississippi River here to eliminate the "bugs" from the United Nations' plan to use artificial harbors in the invasion of France.

So urgent and so secret were their findings, said Gerard H. Matthes, director of the United States Waterways Experiment Station, that their reports, transmitted immediately to Washington, were never put in writing.

Mr. Matthes said the technicians, headed by Captain J. B. Tiffany jr., of the Engineers, began tank tests of artificial harbor models immediately after the first Quebec conference of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill in August, 1943, and concluded their work in December.

Two proposed types of concrete caisson—to be constructed in England and towed across the English Channel—were built to model scale, Mr. Matthes said. Placed in the test tank they were exposed to violent waves, simulating storm conditions off the invasion coast. Effects on the caissons were noted. Flaws in the original designs were reported and new designs were tested.

The tests were repeated until the design was adjudged correct for the job.

W. F. A. Set to Subsidize Cotton and Wheat Export

U. S. Surpluses To Be Sold at Competitive Prices Abroad

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 (AP).—The War Food Administration announced today that it now is ready to subsidize the exports of American cotton, wheat and wheat flour.

The food agency said the United States now has surpluses of these commodities. Insofar as the export programs move excess supplies abroad they will have a price-supporting effect on domestic prices by preventing accumulation of unmarketable supplies, it was explained.

The cotton, wheat and flour will be made available to foreign buyers at prices competitive with producers in other countries. The government will make up the difference between the higher domestic price and the lower foreign price.

The exact amount of the initial export subsidies will be announced Nov. 15. Officials said that in recent months, American cotton had been priced at four or five cents above competitive cotton in foreign markets and that wheat has between 35 and 45 cents above Canadian and other wheat.

The wheat and the cotton to be disposed of under the export program will be taken from government owned stocks or will be purchased in the open market. Foreign sales will be handled through private exporters.

Gestapo Reported In Prisoner Camps

Boston, Nov. 11 (AP)—The Gestapo is in America today—in the prison camps where almost 300,000 captured Germans are held—according to Brig. Gen. Blackshear M. Bryan, Jr., assistant provost marshal general.

He told a press conference yesterday that "Nazi party leaders are even on the alert in prison camps to discipline any Germans who might profess disloyalty to their Fuhrer."

General Bryan said he did not know of any cases in which captured agents actually had disciplined fellow prisoners. He added that at present there are 400 camps spread in all States except Vermont and Rhode Island.

Prisoners of war now number 334,548, he said, including 297,438 Germans, slightly more than 22,000 Japanese and roughly 15,000 Italians.

The general said that "there had been only 947 escapes up to November 9 and on that date all had been recaptured except 13."

Civilian Travel Ban Off In 9 Countries

Washington, Nov. 11 (AP)—Nine countries previously blocked off by the war today were declared open to civilian travel without the requirement of military approval. The area thus freed includes most of France.

The State Department, in making the announcement, warned that travel facilities to these countries are extremely limited. It was also made plain that only those trips by Americans bearing on the war effort or in some way serving the national interest would have any prospect of clearance through the department.

Areas for which military permits are no longer required are Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia, Libya, Syria, Lebanon, Turkey, Cyprus and that area of France known as the "Zone of the Interior," which is all of France except the portions involved in active combat.

U. N. R. R. A. Promotes Gaines

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 (AP).—Appointment of Frank S. Gaines, former Mayor of Berkeley, Calif., as acting director of the southwest Pacific office of U. N. R. R. A. at Sydney, Australia, was announced today. Director General Herbert H. Lehman of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, said Mr. Gaines joined U. N. N. R. A. recently as deputy director of the China area office in Chungking.

KNUDSON VIEWS READJUSTMENT

Discusses Settlement Of Government Contracts

Dayton, Ohio, Nov. 11 (AP)—The history of the nation for the next 20 years and the future happiness of every American for the next two generations depend upon the efficient settlement of present Government contracts, Lieut. Gen. William S. Knudsen, director of the Air Technical Service Command, declared today.

Calling for public understanding of what he termed "the greatest job which America faces, next to winning of the war," General Knudsen expressed concern over "possible public apathy" in the coming months over contract settlements.

"For decades to come, the nation's entire economy—and that means jobs and money in the bank and a chance to send your son to college—depends upon the outcome of the job we have ahead of us," he said in a statement.

"Labor will have to understand that there will be some unemployment as we terminate contracts and cut back production."

Surplus Property Disposal

Discussing surplus property disposal, General Knudsen declared it would be necessary to scrap a large percentage of war equipment that is declared surplus.

"People will just have to get used to the idea that the war is wasteful," he said. "We don't want the situation occurring after this war, as it has done after other wars, where outmoded materiel will be warehoused and kept for years, at a great expense to the taxpayer, when it is just so much junk as far as its ever being used is concerned."

ROOSEVELT EXPECTED TO RETAIN MARSHALL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(AP) President Roosevelt is expected to retain Gen. George C. Marshall as chief of staff after he reaches retirement age Dec 31, the Army and Navy journal says.

The journal noted that Admiral Earnest J. King, chief of naval operations, who was 65 in 1942, was continued on active duty by the President. Marshall, in addition to being the Army chief of staff, is one of the American members of the combined chiefs of staff.

An announcement from President Roosevelt on his decision to retain Marshall is expected soon, the journal says.

Crippled Japanese-American Veteran Ejected By Barber

NOV 12 1944

Poston, Ariz., Nov. 11 (AP)—The War Relocation Authority today reported a crippled Japanese-American army private, wearing many service ribbons, had been ejected from a civilian barber shop near this WRA center because of the owner's objection to his ancestry.

Andy Hale, the barber, acknowledged he had ordered the soldier Thursday not to come in his shop, but denied shoving or forcing the infantryman. The WRA said the veteran, walking with a crutch, had been shoved from the establishment.

Hale, father of three sons in the armed service, said a sign on the front of his Parker (Ariz.) shop reads: "Japs keep out, you rat."

"I don't want none of their business," Hale asserted. "They might close me up but I sure as hell won't work on a Jap."

Just Alike To Him

Hale, in answer to a question, said it made no difference to him whether the Japanese-Americans were civilians or soldiers. "They look just alike to me," explained the Forth Worth (Texas) native who has lived 20 years in Arizona.

Mrs. Pauline Brown, reports officer for the WRA center, said the soldier was Private Raymond Matsuda, 29, former resident of Hawaii, who was shot in the knee on the Italian front July 22.

Matsuda, Mrs. Brown related, was wearing seven army ribbons and badges, including the combat infantryman's badge and the Purple Heart.

He served two years overseas, she reported, with the 442d Regimental Combat Team, an outstanding unit on the Italian front.

Came To Visit Friends

Mrs. Brown said Matsuda came to visit friends here. He has been at the army's Hammond General Hospital at Modesto, Cal. She reported Matsuda gave this version of the incident:

Matsuda went into the shop without noticing the sign and was confronted by Hale, who said "Can't you see that sign?"

The soldier replied he hadn't noticed it but even so he was wearing a United States Army uniform. Hale then shoved him out the door.

Hale said, "I didn't touch the soldier—he didn't even come into the shop. I met him at the door and told him not to come in. That's all there was to it."

About eight or ten months ago, Hale said, he stopped another Japanese-American soldier from walking into his establishment.

Camouflage Removed From Martin's Mars

Chicago, Nov. 11 (AP)—Wartime camouflage has been removed from the Mars, largest flying boat in the world, now in navy transport service between San Francisco and Honolulu, representatives of the Glenn L. Martin Company, of Baltimore, Md., builders of the 70-ton giant, disclosed today.

The blue and white paint which covered the Mars weighed 628 pounds, which the company said required 580 additional pounds (about 100 gallons) of fuel for the flight to Hawaii. In addition, engineers estimate the cruising speed is increased by 4.3 miles an hour through elimination of the "drag" or air resistance of the paint.

Payload is increased about 1,200 pounds, engineers said.

Liberty Ship Split in Two Is Back in War—Whole

Vessel Serving Russia Was Repaired After Storm

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 (AP).—A Liberty ship which snapped in two during a wild Arctic storm is one piece again and back in war service. Disclosing the incident today, the War Shipping Administration called the ship's survival "proof of the soundness of Liberty ship design and construction."

Built at Richmond, Calif., as the Alexander Baranoff, the freighter was turned over to Russia under lend-lease and renamed the Valeri Chkalov. After several trips delivering war supplies for Russia, the ship was returning to this country in ballast last winter for another load when caught in a violent storm.

By the time rescue craft arrived, the bow and stern of the freighter were ten miles apart. A United States destroyer and two naval tugs took them in tow. The bisected freighter was taken to North Vancouver, British Columbia, and put together again.

SECURITY TAX RISE OPPOSED

Vandenberg To Offer Bill To Bar Automatic Boost

NOV 12

Washington, Nov. 11 (AP)—Legislation to block an automatic $1,500,000,000 increase in social security pay-roll taxes will be offered when Congress reconvenes Tuesday, Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) announced today.

"I should think that 1945 would be rather a poor year to double pay-roll taxes," the Senator said, citing campaign declarations by both major parties favoring lighter tax loads on business as it reconverts to peacetime pursuits.

For three successive years Vandenberg has championed legislation which prevented doubling of the pay-roll tax, now one per cent. each on employers and employes. Without positive action by Congress, the tax increase becomes effective January 1, 1945.

"Morgenthau Rule" Cited

Under the so-called Morgenthau rule, adopted in 1939, the reserve fund from which social security benefits are paid is considered adequate when it equals three times the highest annual expenditure contemplated in any one of five subsequent years. Vandenberg said that by January 1 the reserve would amount to about $6,000,000,000, which is twelve times the lowest and eight times the highest estimate of disbursements from the fund in 1949.

The Senator contends the law is contradictory because, while it recognizes the Morgenthau rule, it also arbitrarily calls for an increase in the pay-roll levy rate from time to time.

"Either the statutory increases are wrong or the Morgenthau rule is wrong," he said. "As a matter of fact, they're collecting more at the one per cent. level than was expected to be collected at the two per cent. level when the statute was written.

"Would Settle It For Good"

"I think the question should be settled once and for all, instead of a bite at a time every year."

President Roosevelt is on record in favor of permitting the increase to take effect. In vetoing the 1943 tax bill last February 22, he took exception to a similar freeze provision, declaring the increase was scheduled for "a time when industry and labor are best able to adjust themselves t such increases."

Vandenberg declared the pay-roll tax tax question is "utterly unrelated to expanded social security coverage."

"I'm in favor of a very general expansion in coverage and a readjustment in benefits at points where it is obviously equitable," he said. "This pending question relates solely to what taxes are to be paid for existing benefits."

Delay Until November 20

With members of Congress straggling back after their election campaigns, actual legislating is not likely to start until about November 20.

With the customary Christmas holidays in the offing, that would leave little more than four weeks to handle "must" bills, including extension of the President's war powers.

Other pending measures include legislation to extend the time for court-martial of army and navy officers in charge at Pearl Harbor when Japanese attacked; a $500,000,000 rivers and harbors authorization bill, and a $1,000,000,000 flood control authorization bill. The latter two measures will die with the 78th Congress unless acted upon favorably.

WLB PENALIZES CARPENTERS

Membership Safeguards Of 7 Locals Ordered Withheld

Washington, Nov. 11 (AP)—The War Labor Board today penalized striking locals of the AFL Carpenters union in seven mill cases by withholding for a probationary period the usual membership safeguards.

For the first time, the board acted in this manner under the provisions of the Smith-Connally War Labor Disputes Act toward a union which had voted to strike in time of war.

WLB refused to approve the customary dues check-off and maintenance-of-membership provision in these locals' contracts. In an eighth case, where the employer had agreed to continue a maintenance of membership provision already in its contract, the board withheld the check-off from the union. Under the maintenance clause, union members must keep dues paid up or be fired.

Labor Members Dissent

Labor members dissented to the opinion, written by Edwin E. Witte, a public member of the board. Witte said there was nothing in the Smith-Connally Act which approved strikes under any circumstances, adding that:

"Major labor organizations and the responsible labor leaders of the country have taken the position that compliance with the notice provisions of the War Labor Disputes Act does not relieve labor of the pledge it freely gave. . . ." not to strike during the war.

The cases involved 11 millwork companies in Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa and various locals of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, AFL, with 4,767 members.

Companies, Employes Listed

The companies and number of employes, in parentheses:

Wisconsin—Anson and Gilkey Company (215) at Merrill; Morgan Company (550), Foster-Lotham Mills (330) and the Radford Company (70) at Oshkosh, and George Silbernagel and Sons (700) at Wausaw.

Illinois—Rock Island Sash and Door Works (433) at Rock Island.

Iowa—Farley and Loetscher Manufacturing Company (1,134) and Metz Manufacturing Company (60) at Dubuque; Curtis Companies, Inc. (500) at Clinton; Roach and Musser Company (375) and Huttig Manufacturing Company (400) at Muscatine.

Two years ago, when the union sought an area-wide agreement, disputes arose and a panel was appointed to hear the cases separately. The panel report is presently being considered by the board. After taking a vote as required under the Disputes Act, the union went on strike for approximately two weeks, ending August 24, 1944, allegedly over delay in disposition of the cases.

Denial Periods Vary

The board denied maintenance-of-membership and check-off provisions for the period from August 24 to February 24, 1945, in five cases, and to March 24, 1945, in two others, where unauthorized strikes had occurred previously.

The six-month probation was applied to Anson and Gilkey, Morgan, Radford, Metz and Curtis companies. The additional month was applied at Foster-Lotham and Farley and Loetscher.

The check-off was denied to the union at the Rock Island Sash and Door Works, but the carpenters have the right to reopen the issue after February 24, 1945.

3 Big Companies Bow To Demands Of Petrillo

Federation Of Musicians Lifts Ban On Recordings

FOR RCA-VICTOR, COLUMBIA AND NBC

NOV 13 1944

New York, Nov. 11 (AP)—James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians (AFL), announced today the lifting of his 27-month recording ban against RCA-Victor, Columbia Recording Corporation and the National Broadcasting Company's transcription division.

Petrillo, who had rejected a War Labor Board order and a request from President Roosevelt to permit union musicians to resume recording for the companies, said all three companies had agreed to the union's requirement that they pay the union a royalty on each disc sold.

James W. Murray, general manager of RCA-Victor record activities, announced a few minutes earlier that RAC-Victor had agreed to "meet the demands" of Petrillo.

Smaller Firms Had Signed

Decca and several smaller recording companies signed with the union a year ago.

Columbia announced tonight that it had signed with Petrillo "because of the Government's unwillingness or incapacity to enforce its orders."

Recalling that the dispute was certified to the War Labor Board more than 16 months ago, Edward Wallenstein, Columbia's president, said in a telegram to Fred M. Vinson, Economic Stabilization Director:

"The economic pressures on us are such that we can wait no longer and must now either sign or go out of business."

President Roosevelt asked Vinson last October 18 to see if the law permitted any action to compel lifting of the ban. The WLB had certified the dispute to the President.

The three-year agreements signed today, Petrillo said, would permit the companies to resume recording at once. When the ban was imposed August 1, 1942, the RCA-Victor and Columbia were making more than half of the 130,000,000 records produced annually in the United States.

On the basis of that production, the union will get approximately $4,000,000 a year from the three companies, Petrillo said, adding that he expected the amount would be greater since the demand for records had increased since 1942.

Contracts Generally Same

He said the contracts signed today were the same, with minor exceptions, as those signed previously by Decca and the smaller companies.

"This is the greatest victory for a labor organization in the history of the labor movement," Petrillo told reporters. "The American Federation of Musicians is the first labor organization to receive agreements whereby employers pay money direct to the organization for the employment of musicians over and above what they pay for the actual work done by the musicians in the making of recordings."

Three Executives Sign

The union president said the contracts were signed by Murray for RCA-Victor, Wallenstein for Columbia, and Lloyd Egnor, manager of the NBC's transcription division.

He said he had come to New York from Chicago at the request of Niles Trammel, NBC president, and that a five-hour conference preceded the signing of contracts.

"Today was fine," Petrillo commented, "but there are a hell of a lot of scars. They led people to believe I'm something that I am not."

Murray's Statement

Murray's statement announcing the agreement read:

"In view of Mr. Petrillo's decision not to accept the order of the War Labor Board and the request of the President to obey the board's order, we had no alternative but to meet the demands of Mr. Petrillo that we make direct payments to the union's treasury, or to abandon our record business, which would have resulted in losses to the public, our employes and artists, our dealers and stockholders."

Petrillo has based the requirement that the recording firms pay into the union's unemployment fund a royalty on each disc sold on the contention that "canned music" causes unemployment of musicians.

RAIL STRIKE IMPASSE

Chicago, Nov. 11 (A. P.).—Efforts to end a strike of 550 employees on two electric railroads in order to restore normal transportation facilities for some 75,000 suburban commuters, appeared today to have reached a stalemate twenty-four hours after service on the lines halted.

Both company spokesmen and officials of the two railroad brotherhoods involved in the strike, which resulted from a wage dispute, said that they had exhausted every possibility of immediate settlement.

Thousands of persons living in western suburbs and in North Shore communities served by the roads—the Chicago North Shore & Milwaukee and Chicago Aurora & Elgin—faced transportation difficulties.

LONDON, NOV. 10-(AP)-MARSHAL STALIN IS BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN INVITED TO LONDON FOR THE BIG THREE TALKS EXPECTED BEFORE CHRISTMAS, BUT THE BEST AVAILABLE INFORMATION TODAY WAS THAT HE LIKELY WOULD AGREE TO MEET PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL SOMEWHERE IN THE MIDDLE EAST.

THERE WAS SPECULATION THAT ROOSEVELT MIGHT COME FIRST TO LONDON AND ACCOMPANY CHURCHILL TO PARIS, AND THAT THEY WOULD GO FROM THERE TO THE RENDEZVOUS WITH STALIN.

AFTER DRAWING ONE LARGE TRUCK LOAD OF FOOD AND FEEDING IT TO THE MEN OF THE GUARDS ARMORED DIVISION, THE MESS OFFICERS CAME BACK THE NEXT DAY AND FOUND ANOTHER NAME UNDER THEIRS ON THE INVOICE LIST.
"THE GERMANS CAME BACK LAST NIGHT AFTER YOU LEFT," THE LITTLE STOREKEEPER EXPLAINED.
THE NEXT DAY, WHEN THE TOMMIES PARKED THEIR TRUCK BY THE DEPOT, THE STOREKEEPER CAME RUNNING OUT TO MEET THEM.
"YOU CAN'T COME IN NOW," HE SHOUTED. "THE NAZIS ARE HERE."
THE MESS OFFICERS DOVE FOR COVER. TWENTY MINUTES LATER THEY CAME BACK AND FOUND THE GERMANS HAD LOADED THE ENGLISH TRUCK WITH SUPPLIES. WITHOUT HESITATION THE BRITISH TOMMIES JUMPED INTO THEIR TRUCK AND RACED AWAY--WITHOUT THANKING THE GERMANS FOR LOADING IT.

PRECEDE PARIS CHURCHILL
LONDON, NOV 11-(AP)-PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL DECLARED AT A DINNER GIVEN FOR HIM TONIGHT IN PARIS BY GEN.CHARLES DE GAULLE THAT "IT IS A FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLE OF BRITISH POLICY THAT THE ALLIANCE WITH FRANCE SHOULD BE UNSHAKEABLE, CONSTANT AND EFFECTIVE."
THE BRITISH PRIME MINISTER, AS QUOTED BY THE PARIS RADIO, RECALLED THAT HE HAD TOLD THE FRENCH BY RADIO FROM LONDON IN 1940 THAT "A DAY WOULD COME WHEN FRANCE WOULD TAKE HER PLACE AT THE HEAD OF THE GREAT NATIONS AND PLAY HER PART AS THE CHAMPION OF LIBERTY AND INDEPENDENCE."

LONDON, NOV 11-(AP)-PRIME MINISTER WINSTON CHURCHILL AND FOREIGN SECRETARY ANTHONY EDEN HAVE FLOWN TO PARIS TO CONFER WITH GEN.CHARLES DE GAULLE, IT WAS DISCLOSED TODAY.
ACCOMPANIED BY MRS.CHURCHILL, MISS MARY CHURCHILL, AND GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS, THEY FLEW TO FRANCE FROM AN ENGLISH FIELD IN A DOUGLAS DAKOTA TRANSPORT PLANE FRIDAY AFTERNOON.
THE NEWS OF THEIR TRIP WAS HELD UP FOR SECURITY REASONS UNTIL 11 A.M. (6 A.M. EASTERN WAR TIME) TODAY--ARMISTICE DAY--THE HOUR AT WHICH THE FIRST WORLD WAR ARMISTICE BEGAN, NOV.11, 1918.
SIR ALEXANDER CADOGAN, PERMANENT UNDERSECRETARY FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS, AND NICHOLAS LANGFORD, EDEN'S PRIVATE SECRETARY, WERE IN THE GROUP.
A BUZZING SWARM OF SPITFIRES ESCORTED THE TRANSPORT PLANE.
THE PRIME MINISTER WENT TO PARIS AT THE INVITATION OF DE GAULLE AND THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT.
IT WAS THE FIRST TIME SINCE MAY 22, 1940, THA CHURCHILL HAD GONE TO FRANCE ON A VISIT OF STATE. THEN HE FLEW TO TOURS TO CONFER WITH PREMIER PAUL REYNAUD AND GENERAL MAXIME WEYGAND AS THE ALLIES RETREATED AND FRANCE TOTTERED.
THAT WAS FIVE DAYS AFTER HE HAD OFFERED FRANCE A SOLEMN UNION THAT WOULD HAVE GIVEN FRANCE EQUAL PARTNERSHIP IN THE BRITISH EMPIRE.
CHURCHILL VISITED NORMANDY SHORTLY AFTER THE INVASION.
PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT IS EXPECTED TO ACCEPT AN INVITATION TO PARIS LATER.
ASIDE FROM THE SIGNIFICANT SYMBOLISM IN THE PRIME MINISTER'S PRESENCE IN PARIS ON ARMISTICE DAY, THERE WAS A RIPE FIELD FOR IMPORTANT POLITICAL AND MILITARY TALKS ON FRENCH SOIL.
THE REARMING OF THE FRENCH ARMY TO SHARE THE FINAL BLOWS AGAINST GERMANY WAS CERTAIN TO BE ONE SUBJECT. THE FRENCH ROLE IN THE OCCUPATION OF GERMANY AND ALLIED AID IN THE RESTORATION OF FRENCH CIVILIAN LIFE WERE OTHERS.
THE TALKS ARE EXPECTED TO FURNISH FRUITFUL ORIENTATION ON A NUMBER OF POINTS FOR THE IMMINENT PARLEY OF THE BIG THREE LEADERS - CHURCHILL, ROOSEVELT AND STALIN.
THE MEETING POSED ONE QUESTION MARK: WOULD GENERAL DE GAULLE PRESS UPON CHURCHILL HIS VIEW THAT FRANCE OUGHT TO BE LET INTO THE PARLEYS AS ONE OF A BIG FOUR?

INVITATION TO FRANCE TO ASSUME FULL MEMBERSHIP ON THE EUROPEAN ADVISORY COMMISSION, ANNOUNCED JOINTLY IN WASHINGTON AND LONDON TODAY. AMONG OTHER MATTERS, THIS COMMITTEE IS WORKING ON TERMS FOR FRENCH-GERMAN TERRITORIAL CLAIMS.

LONDON BELIEVES THAT STEPS TO SPEED FRANCE'S RETURN TO THE WORLD COUNCIL TABLES OCCUPIED CHURCHILL'S FIRST ATTENTION IN HIS CONVERSATIONS WITH GEN. DE GAULLE, FOR THE PRIME MINISTER HAS LONG EMPHASIZED THAT IT IS IN BRITAIN'S INTEREST TO SEE ERECTED A "STRONG, INDEPENDENT AND FRIENDLY FRANCE."

ALONG THAT LINE, IT WAS UNDERSTOOD THAT PROBLEMS SURROUNDING THE TASK OF REARMING FRENCH MILITARY FORCES WOULD FORM PART OF THE MOVE TO BACK UP THIS COUNTRY WHICH ONCE HAD THE WORLD'S LARGEST ARMY.

THIS OBJECTIVE, INCREASING IN IMPORTANCE AS THE CHANCES OF VICTORY OVER GERMANY THIS YEAR DIMINISH, RAISED THE LIKELIHOOD THAT FRENCH FORCES WILL BE GIVEN INCREASED RESPONSIBILITY ON THE WESTERN FRONT NEXT YEAR, AND IMPROVED THE POSSIBILITY OF THEIR USE IN GERMANY'S OCCUPATION.

BUT IT WAS OBVIOUS THAT DISCUSSION OF THE IMMEDIATE MILITARY FUTURE OF FRANCE COULD NOT BE SEPARATED FROM HER DIPLOMATIC ASPIRATIONS, MAKING IT ALMOST INEVITABLE THAT CHURCHILL AND DE GAULLE TALKED OVER THE FRENCH POSITION AS REGARDS THE IMMINENT "BIG THREE" CONFERENCE.

NOV 12 1944

WHETHER THE TRI-POWER CONFERENCE WOULD BE WIDENED AT THIS STAGE REMAINED UNCERTAIN, BUT THE PARIS DISCUSSIONS AT LEAST WILL PROVIDE CHURCHILL WITH THE FRENCH POSITION ON EUROPE'S PROBLEMS TO CARRY INTO HIS NEXT MEETING WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND MARSHAL STALIN.

THE CONVERSATION BETWEEN CHURCHILL, DE GAULLE AND THEIR ADVISORS MAY ALSO PAVE THE WAY FOR RESUMPTION OF THE WAR-INTERRUPTED INTERDEPENDENT ECONOMIC RELATIONS BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES--AN ASPECT OF FOREIGN RELATIONS WHICH CHURCHILL ALWAYS HAS WEIGHED CAREFULLY.

SO, TOO, HAS CHURCHILL LONG BEEN CONVINCED THAT FRANCE AND BRITAIN MUST STICK TOGETHER FOR THEIR SELF-INTERESTS.

"IT'S NOW NEARLY 40 YEARS SINCE I FIRST BECAME CONVINCED THAT THE FORTUNES OF GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE WERE INTERWOVEN, AND THAT THEIR MILITARY FORCES MUST BE COMBINED IN THE MOST EFFECTIVE MANNER BY ALLIANCE AND AGREEMENT AND CLAIMS," HE TOLD COMMONS SEPTEMBER 29.

FRANCE AND BRITAIN MUST MAINTAIN AND STRENGTHEN "CLOSEST FRIENDSHIP AND MUTUAL UNDERSTANDING OF COMMON INTERESTS, BOTH POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC," CONCURRED THE NEWSPAPER "PARISIAN LIBERE" IN A FEATURED EDITORIAL TODAY.

IT WAS A DARK OBJECT, TRAILING A PLUME OF YELLOWISH BROWN SMOKE. WE STOPPED OUR JEEP. THERE WAS A ROCKING BLAST. OVERHEAD WE SAW A CLOUD OF WHITE SMOKE THOUSANDS OF FEET UP, PRESUMABLY WHERE THE OBJECT'S DESCENT BEGAN.

SECONDS LATER AS WE RACED FORWARD AGAIN, THERE WAS A BILLOWING CLOUD OF DARK BROWN SMOKE RISING ABOVE THE HOUSES. WHEN WE REZCHED THE SCENE OF THE EXPLOSION, WE FOUND THE MAIN BLAST HAD OCCURRED IN THE MIDDLE OF A FRESHLY PLOWED FIELD. PARTS OF THE PROJECTILE WERE STREWN OVER HUNDREDS OF YARDS, PIECES OF THIN METAL, WHISPS AND CHUNKS OF WHAT APPEARED TO BE SPUN GLASS AND ODD BITS OF WHAT MUST HAVE BEEN THE PROPULSION MECHANISM.

THE BIG EXPLOSION AND THE SUCCEEDING SMALLER BLASTS CAUSED RELATIVELY LITTLE DAMAGE AND NO SERIOUS CASUALTIES.

PARIS, NOV 11-(AP)-LT.GEN.GEORGE S.PATTON'S TANK-RIDING INFANTRY SWEPT ON TODAY TOWARD METZ, ALREADY WELL BEYOND THE LINE WHERE GEN.JOHN J.PERSHING'S FOOT-SLOGGING DOUGHBOYS WERE POISED FOR A SIMILAR ATTACK ON THE FORTRESS CITY WHEN ARMISTICE CAME IN 1918.

FOR THE NEW AMERICAN FORCES, THIS WAS THE FIRST ARMISTICE DAY ON THE WESTERN FRONT, BUT THE RISING POWER OF PATTON'S ASSAULT GAVE PROMISE THAT BEFORE ANOTHER ROLLS AROUND THEY WILL HAVE LEFT THE BATTLEFIELDS OF EUROPE.

IN THEIR MUDDY TRENCHES BEFORE METZ THE DOUGHBOYS OF THE LAST WAR WERE PREPARING ON NOV.11, 1918, FOR JUST SUCH AN OFFENSIVE AS PATTON HAS UNCORKED. THEN, LT.GEN.R.L.BULLARD'S AMERICAN SECOND ARMY WAS SCHEDULED TO PUSH OFF JUST THREE DAYS LATER -- ON NOV.14.

THE OLD SECOND WAS LINED UP ALONG THE RIGHT FLANK OF THE FIRST ARMY ON MUCH THE SAME FRONT AS THE ONE PATTON'S THIRD ARMY HAS NOW BROKEN ACROSS. REDUCTION OF THE OLD ST.MIHIEL SALIENT HAD PUT BULLARD'S ARMY IN POSITION SOME 15 MILES SOUTHWEST OF METZ AND ALONG A LINE WHICH CROSSED THE MOSELLE RIVER NEAR PONT-A-MOUSSON AND EXTENDED NORTHEAST OF NANCY. TODAY THEY ARE ABOUT NINE MILES SOUTH OF METZ.

DOWN THE ROAD TO METZ ON THIS DAY A GENERATION AGO MARCHED THE 137TH INFANTRY REGIMENT UNDER ORDERS TO ASSAULT THE FORTRESS CITY, WHICH NEVER HAD BEEN TAKEN BY DIRECT ATTACK.

THERE IS AN AMERICAN ARMY IN THE SOUTH, AND ANOTHER IN THE NORTH.

THIS TIME THE ALLIES HAVE ALREADY GIVEN THE WEHRMACHT A WORSE BEATING THAN IT TOOK IN THE FIRST WORLD WAR. GERMANY HAS FEWER TROOPS ENGAGED IN AND BACKING THE LINE IN THE WEST THAN IN ITS HOUR OF COLLAPSE IN NOVEMBER 1918. BUT THIS TIME THE GERMANS ARE FIGHTING GRIMLY ON TO THE DEATH.

BERN, SWITZERLAND, NOV. 11--(AP)--THE NEWSPAPER DER BUND, commenting SWISS ON THE RESIGNATION OF FOREIGN MINISTER MARCEL PILET-GOLAZ, SAID LAST NIGHT THAT THE act resulted from OF INTERIOR POLITICS RATHER THAN from THE RUSSIAN REFUSAL TO RENEW DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH SWITZERLAND.

FOR THIS REASON, DER BUND SAID, THE TIME FOR THE ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE WITHDRAWAL--SIX DAYS AFTER MOSCOW'S ANNOUNCEMENT--WAS BADLY CHOSEN BECAUSE IT IS APT TO CREATE THE IMPRESSIO THAT SWITZERLAND "YIELDS TOO EASILY TO FOREIGN INFLUENCE."

IN HIS LETTER TO WALTER STAUFLI, PRESIDENT OF THE SWISS CONFEDERATION, DATED LAST TUESDAY, PILET-GOLAZ MENTIONED THAT THE RENEWAL OF DI LOMATIC RELATIONS BETWEEN RUSSIA AND SWITZERLAND HAD NOT MATERIALIZED AND ADDED:

"CIRCUMSTANCES WILL SHOW BEFORE LONG THE TRUE AND PROFOUND CAUSES OF THE RUSSIAN REFUSAL. WHILE WAITING IT IS WELL TO AVOID A COMPROMISE OF THE INTERIOR COHESION AND UNITY INDISPENSABLE IN THE DIFFICULT YEARS AHEAD."

MCCAMPBELL, 34-YEAR-OLD ANNAPOLIS GRADUATE AND VETERAN PILOT MADE HIS RECORD WHILE SERVING AS COMMANDER OF AN AIR GROUP WHICH NOW IS THE SENIOR GROUP IN ACTION IN THE PACIFIC. HIS GROUP HAS SHOT 289 PLANES OUT OF THE AIR, FAR OVER THE MARK FOR ANY OTHER CARRIER OUTFIT.

MCCAMPBELL GOT HIS LAST TWO PLANES IN A SWEEP OVER MANILA NOV. 5.

"WE WERE ATTACKING," MCCAMPBELL SAID, "AND I WAS SITTING THERE OVER THE TARGET. THEN I JUST HAPPENED TO RUN INTO A SINGLE JAP PLANE, ROLLED OVER ON HIM AND MADE SEVERAL PASSES. I KEPT HITTING HIM BUT COULDN'T GET HIM TO BURN. FINALLY, HE HIT THE WATER OFF THE ENTRANCE TO MANILA BAY.

"LATER ON THAT SAME DAY, OUR PLANES RENDEZVOUSED AND RAN INTO A COUPLE OF ZEROS. I GOT ON ONE'S TAIL, MADE A COUPLE OF PASSES AND GOT HIM."

HW917PPW NM

MCCAMPBELL'S RECORD IS REMARKABLE. HIS PREVIOUS 30 ALL WERE SHOT DOWN SINCE LAST JUNE 11. HE GOT NINE IN AN HOUR AND 35 MINUTES OFF THE PHILIPPINES OCT. 24 WHEN HE AND HIS WINGMAN CHASED A FLIGHT THAT ORIGINALLY NUMBERED 60 NIPPONESE AIRCRAFT BACK TO LUZON ISLAND.

MCCAMPBELL SAID THAT AMONG THE 32 PLANES HE HAS DOWNED WERE NINE DIFFERENT TYPES. AMONG THEM WAS THE LATEST JAPANESE FIGHTER WITH A SEL. SEALING GASOLINE TANK. ONLY ONE OF THE ENEMY PILOTS IN MCCAMPBELL'S STRING OF 32 BAILED OUT.

MCCAMPBELL'S AIR GROUP, WHICH NOW IS IN ITS SEVENTH MONTH OF DUTY ON THIS CARRIER, HAS FLOWN 4,407 COMBAT SORTIES. IN ADDITION TO THE 289 DEFINITELY SHOT DOWN, THE GROUP PROBABLY SHOT DOWN 30 MORE, DAMAGED ANOTHER 22 AND HAS WIPED OUT 423 ENEMY AIRCRAFT ON THE GROUND.

THE GROUP OFFICIALLY CLAIMS THE SINKING OF 189,000 TONS OF ENEMY SHIP. IT PROBABLY SANK 8,000 TONS MORE AND DAMAGED 380,000 TONS. AMONG THE SHIPS HIT WERE ENEMY AIRCRAFT CARRIERS, CRUISERS AND OTHER WARSHIPS.

MCCAMPBELL, DYNAMIC LITTLE 150-POUNDER WHO WAS ON THE OLD CARRIER WASP WHEN IT WAS SUNK, PARTICULARLY IS PROUD OF ANOTHER ACHIEVEMENT OF HIS AIR GROUP. NO ENEMY PLANE EVER HAS HIT A TORPEDO OR DIVE BOMBER THAT MCCAMPBELL'S FIGHTER GROUP HAS ESCORTED.

"THAT GIVES THEM A LOT OF CONFIDENCE," MCCAMPBELL SAID.

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, PHILIPPINES,SUNDAY,NOV.12-(VIA ARMY RADIO)-(AP)-GEN.DOUGLAS MACARTHUR TODAY MENTIONED FOR THE FIRST TIME IN HIS COMMUNIQUES THE NAME OF GEN.TOMOYUKI YAMASHITA, THE JAPANESE GENERAL CHOSEN BY NIPPON'S WAR LORDS TO FIGHT AMERICAN FORCES IN THE PHILIPPINES.

THE FACT THAT THE SHORT, FAT SABER-RATTLING YAMASHITA, CONQUEROR OF BRITISH FORCES IN MALAYA, IS THE NEW JAPANESE COMMANDER IN THE PHILIPPINES EXPLAINS THE ENEMY'S PARTIALLY SUCCESSFUL--BUT COSTLY--EFFORTS TO REINFORCE HIS TROOPS IN WESTERN LEYTE ISLAND.

(TOKYO RADIO ANNOUNCED YAMASHITA'S APPOINTMENT TO THE PHILIPPINE COMMAND A FEW DAYS AGO, AND QUOTED YAMASHITA AS SAYING HE WOULD DEMAND "UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER" FROM MACARTHUR.)

MACARTHUR SAID YAMASHITA IS STRIVING TO "BUILD UP A PREPARED LINE OF DEFENSE IN THE ORMOC CORRIDOR" ON LEYTE. THE CORRIDOR, DOWN WHICH AMERICAN TROOPS ARE NOW PROGRESSING AGAINST STIFF OPPOSITION, LEADS FROM PINAMOPOAN, NORTH COAST TOWN, TO ORMOC, LAST ENEMY SUPPLY BASE ON THE WEST COAST.

YAMASHITA "HAS CHOSEN WESTERN LEYTE AS A MAIN BATTLE GROUND FOR HIS FIRST SUPREME EFFORT TO CRUSH OUR LIBERATING FORCES," MACARTHUR SAID.

NOV 12 1944

JAPAN CHOSE WELL IN SELECTING YAMASHITA. THIS IS JUNGLE COUNTRY AND THERE IS JUNGLE FIGHTING TO BE DONE.

YAMASHITA IS AN EXPERT ON JUNGLE WARFARE. HE DISPLAYED THAT WHEN HE DROVE DOWN MALAYA THROUGH JUNGLE AND SWAMP WHICH WERE BELIEVED IMPASSABLE,AND FORCED SIR ARTHUR E.PERCIVAL TO SURRENDER AT SINGAPORE FEB.15, 1942.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT THAT YAMASHITA IS THE NEW COMMANDER IN THE PHILIPPINES DOES NOT MEAN THAT HE HAS REPLACED FIELD MARSHAL COUNT TERAUCHI AS COMMANDER OF THE ENTIRE SOUTH ASIA COMMAND.

WHILE YAMASHITA APPARENTLY WILL LEAD TROOPS ONLY IN THE PHILIPPINES, IT WAS TO TERAUCHI THAT MACARTHUR RECENTLY SENT AN OFFICIAL WARNING THAT THE FIELD MARSHAL WOULD BE HELD RESPONSIBLE FOR JAPANESE CONDUCT TOWARD ALLIED PRISONERS OF WAR.

CIVILIAN INTERNEES AND NONCOMBATANTS.
YAMASHITA WAS ONE OF THE FIRST JAPANESE GENERALS TO TAKE SERIOUSLY THE STUDY OF NIPPONESE METHODS OF GUERRILLA WARFARE. HE SPENT SOME TIME IN GERMANY STUDYING THE GERMAN STYLE OF WARFARE AND WAS THERE WHEN WAR WAS DECLARED. HE RETURNED AND IMMEDIATELY BEGAN THE CAMPAIGN IN MALAYA.
HE ASTOUNDED THE MILITARY WORLD WITH THE SPEED WITH WHICH HIS TROOPS POURED DOWN ON THE DEFENDERS OF SINGAPORE.

JULY 4TH, 1944, THE SECOND MARINE REGIMENT PUSHED TO MUTCHO POINT AND SECURED THE CITY OF GARAPAN TO BREAK THE BACK OF THE JAP DEFENDERS OF SAIPAN.
CORPORAL DAVID BROWN, OF (1617 RAY STREET), ASHLAND, KY., ENTERED A RUBBLE STREWN HOUSE TO DODGE SNIPER FIRE.

THAT NIGHT BROWN TOLD THE STORY TO CORPORAL FREDERICK R.BROWN, OF (1515 PEARL STREET), BAKERSFIELD, CALIF.
THE FLAG WAS CARRIED IN THE CALIFORNIA BROWN'S KNAPSACK THROUGH THE SAIPAN AND TINIAN CAMPAIGNS.

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, PHILIPPINES-(AP)-THE GREEN-BACKED "PHILIPPINE READER" HAD THE NAME MARIA BAROLA PENCILED ON THE FRONTISPIECE AND MARIA WAS IN HER FIRST YEAR OF INTERMEDIATE GRADES WHEN THE JAPANESE CAME.
IT WAS THEN SHE COULD NO LONGER READ ABOUT THE KIND AND POWERFUL KING WHO TURNED HIS MIGHTY ARMY TO ONE SIDE TO SPARE THE HOME OF A MOTHER BIRD AND HER NESTLINGS WHO FOOLISHLY BUILT A NEST IN THE CENTER OF THE ROAD.
THAT STORY WAS CONTRARY TO THE IDEAS OF THE JAPANESE ESTABLISHING A "NEW ORDER" IN THEIR CONQUERED COUNTRIES.
NEITHER COULD MARIA LOOK AT A PICTURE OF AN AMERICAN LOCOMOTIVE NOR READ HER OWN "PHILIPPINES HYMN."
ONE OF THE FIRST ACTS OF THE JAPANESE ON LEYTE AFTER THEIR MILITARY CONQUEST WAS CONCLUDED WAS THE SYSTEMATIC CENSORING OF SCHOOL BOOKS.
I FOUND MARIA'S BOOK IN A BUILDING WHICH IS NOW THE HEADQUARTERS OF BRIG. GENERAL WILLIAM GRUBER OF CINCINNATI, OHIO, ARTILLERY COMMANDER FOR THE 24TH DIVISION.
THE JAPANESE HAD WORKED HARD AND LONG OVER THIS BOOK OF MARIA'S. SOME PAGES HAD BEEN CUT OUT. OTHERS HAD PIECES OF HEAVY PAPER PASTED OVER THEM. PAGES 18 TO 21 WERE CUT OUT BECAUSE THEY CONTAINED THE WORDS "AMERICA." PASTED OVER WAS A PAGE THE INDEX SAID CONTAINED THE VERSE, "THE FLAG GOES BY."
"ST.GEORGE AND THE DRAGON" AND "THE LITTLE MATCH BOY" ALSO WERE CONSIDERED AS UNFIT READING FOR PHILIPPINE CHILDREN.
THE JAPANESE LEFT SOME PAGES IN. THEY PERMITTED MARIA TO READ THE STORY ABOUT THE CITY MOUSE AND THE COUNTRY MOUSE, AND THE TALES OF ANDROCLUS AND THE LION AND OF WILLIAM TELL.
WHAT PROBABLY WAS REQUIRED READING WAS THE STORY OF THE JAPANESE EARTHQUAKE IN WHICH A WEALTHY FARMER SET FIRE TO HIS RICH RICE FIELDS TO SUMMON VILLAGERS WHO WERE CELEBRATING IN A VILLAGE BY THE SEA SHORE. IN THIS WAY, THE LEGEND GOES, THE KIND FARMER SAVED THE LIVES OF 400 PEOPLE FROM A GREAT TIDAL WAVE THAT FOLLOWED THE EARTHQUAKE.
TO THE JAPANESE THIS LEGEND ON KINDNESS AND SELF-SACRIFICE WAS ALL RIGHT. BUT TO A JAPAN AT WAR IT IS NOT RIGHT TO READ THE STORY ABOUT THE GREAT KING WHO SAVED THE LIFE OF A BIRD AND HER NESTLINGS. NOT WHEN THE TITLE OF THE STORY IS "THE BRAVEST ARE THE TENDEREST."

3D ARMY'S GAINS ALMOST ENCIRCLE METZ; GLOOMY PROCLAMATION READ FOR HITLER; AMERICANS PUSH AHEAD 3 MILES ON LEYTE

PATTON'S FORCES MAKE NEW GAINS ON 70-MILE FRONT

Threaten to Cut Off Enemy Defenders of French Fortress.

REPULSE TWO ATTACKS

Many Prisoners Taken as Yanks Clear Chateau-Salins Forest.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—(AP) The Germans were seen pulling out of Metz tonight to escape being trapped inside that fortress as Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's tanks and infantry drove forward along a 70-mile front—advancing up to four miles through a snowstorm in some places.

A field dispatch said that long German columns, including many horsedrawn vehicles, were observed moving eastward from Metz along two high roads, but it was not clear whether the Germans were withdrawing only specialized units and equipment or preparing to give up the city.

Threaten to Trap Nazis

The greatest gains of the fifth day of a two-way drive which threatens to cut off the Metz defenders from the rear were made by the 35th infantry division, which pounded ahead four miles, clearing the Germans from the Chateau-Salins forest and continuing more than a mile beyond into the Chateau Brehain vicinity.

The 35th not only added 400 more prisoners to the bag which totalled 3,625 in the first four days, but captured five German tanks intact and undamaged.

Farther north, elements of the Sixth Armored division drove two miles northeast from Han-Sur-Nied and entered Herny, while fresh infantry units continued to pour across captured Nied river bridges to secure a hold on the territory which is slowly being extended across the Metz supply lines.

Herny is on the Saarbrucken highway two miles northeast of Han-Sur-Nied where it joins the Metz-Saarbourg road and rail line. The Sixth now is 15 miles beyond its Nov. 8 jumpoff line.

The Germans attempted two counterattacks on Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's right flank today, but the 26th division stopped them cold, then lashed out with an attack of its own, pushing a mile and a half to Haraucourt, five miles southeast of Chateau-Salins.

Northeast of Chateau-Salins, the Fourth Armored division pounded three miles northeast to a point beyond Radalbe, two and a half miles northeast of Conthil.

Enemy Counterattacks

Resistance southeast of Metz, consisting principally of artillery and mortar fire, was somewhat lighter than that north of the city, where the Germans struck back against the Koenigsmacher bridgehead with the strongest counterattack since the Third army drive started. NOV 13 1944

The Nazis dented the bridgehead a mile and a half in the Kerling area, but the 90th division regained the initiative and recovered some of its lost ground. At last report, it still was pushing the enemy back.

Other infantry of the 90th advanced a mile to Uckange, four miles south of Thionville on the west bank of the Moselle.

The seesaw battle in the Hurtgen forest area of the U. S. First army front continued today with Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' troops losing ground to stubborn German reserves at one point and regaining it all later.

Activity on the 21st army group front was confined chiefly to patrolling on both sides, although Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's forces in the northeast sector were subjected to moderate artillery fire today.

Miserable weather with temperatures dropping to freezing in some places kept the Allied tactical airforces grounded all day.

The Germans threw in counterattacks on both flanks of Patton's assault lines as more tanks and infantry were sent across the Nied river barrier over several bridges reported captured intact.

One counterattack hammered a wedge a mile and a half deep into the Koenigsmacher bridgehead on the Moselle river 19 miles north of Metz and within four miles of the German frontier.

It finally was checked near Kerling, 3 miles east of Koenigsmacher, and then the 90th division veterans countered and seized old Fort Koenigsmacher, virtually part of the Maginot Line, taking 300 prisoners.

Nazis Strike at Hampont

The second enemy counterblow was aimed from the east toward Hampont, three miles east of Chateau-Salins and was the first attack the Germans had attempted in the main fighting zone. Latest word at Supreme headquarters was that this thrust was held.

Transocean, German propaganda agency, trumpeted the engagement as a "gigantic tank battle" and asserted it would grow in intensity. It said Patton was attacking with 500 to 700 tanks.

Eight miles northeast of the expanding Nied river bridgehead at Han-Sur-Nied, the Germans were reported withdrawing material from the area of Fau'quemont, enemy base but 11 miles short of the Saar border, a front dispatch said.

Reaching for more of the rail network supplying Metz, Fourth Armored division tank forces 12 miles southeast of Han reached Conthil, but four miles from the railway junction of Benestroff. These patrols were barely 18 miles from the Saar border and only 27 miles from Saarbrucken itself.

Between the spearheads of the Fourth and Sixth divisions, the Germans were pulling out of the strongly-held forest of Chateau-Salins.

For some reason the big guns of the forts ringing Metz had yet to open up on the American columns fighting five miles to the south and even nearer on the north, possibly because the gunners are without aerial observation to direct their fire. NOV 13 1944

The Germans communique intimated that something big was afoot far to the north in eastern Holland facing the Ruhr valley, reporting "continuous enemy movements" in the Nijmegen and Helmond areas and "heavy attacks by battleplanes."

Nazis Patrol Areas

An Associated Press front dispatch confirmed the German nervousness over this front, saying that the enemy was patrolling aggressively in an attempt to gather information and was shelling Allied troops in their water-soaked foxholes.

To the south on the First Army front, doughboys cleaned out more pillboxes near the bomb-smashed town of Schmidt southeast of Aachen under heavy enemy mortar and machine gun fire.

The U.S Seventh army on the southern end of the 50-mile front followed up a German withdrawal forced by flooding of the Lowlands. The Americans drew up along the Muerthe river and pressed to within two miles of St. Die, in the entrance to one of the passes through the Vosges to the Rhine.

These forces seized Herbaville, two miles northwest of St. Die, La Fosse, three miles southwest, and cleaned all but scattered units from the forests of Mortagne and De Champ screening St. Die on the west.

They also took the village of Etival and Pajaille on the Muerthe river six miles of St. Die and Le Vivier.

The French First army in the Vosges mountains farther south was tied up by heavy rains and snow.

NAZIS HURL V-2 ROCKETS AGAINST ALLIED ARMIES

WITH THE U. S. FIRST ARMY IN GERMANY, Nov. 12—(AP) The Nazis have launched their new secret weapon — V-2, a supersonic rocket—against targets in Belgium, northwest and northeast sectors of France and in Holland.

Very little can be disclosed at this time except that rockets are being used against certain countries now in Allied hands. The Germans also are sending buzz-bombs into these areas and troops in certain parts of the first army area can hear daily the throbbing shudder of the robot weapons thundering overhead from launching sites somewhere in Germany.

Neutral sources report V-2 weighs about 15 tons when launched. The warhead is believed to contain about a ton of explosives encased in light metal to give a terrific blast effect.

When at full speed, the rocket is believed to travel at a stratosphere level. When it strikes the ground, the rate of speed is estimated at about 900 miles per hour.

The Germans also are sending V-1 buzz-bombs into those areas, and troops in certain parts of the 1st Army area can hear daily the throbbing shudder of the robot weapons thundering overhead from launching sites somewhere in Germany.

OFFICER GIVES LIFE TO SAVE NIED BRIDGE

UNITED STATES 317TH INFANTRY REGIMENT COMMAND POST in France, Nov. 12 (AP)—Tanks and infantry moved across one sturdy Nied River bridge toward Germany today largely because a lieutenant died and a captain lived.

Because the lieutenant of the engineers gave his life to cut wires of demolition charges before they could shatter the bridge his name must be withheld under Army rules.

The captain who fought and lived to fight again and who won the praise of two divisional generals is James A. Craig Jr., 25 years old, of New Cumberland, Pa.

Doughboys of the Eightieth Infantry and tankmen of the Sixth Armored Division swept into a town on the river yesterday with Craig's Company A of the First Battalion of the 317th Regiment in the vanguard.

Everyone realized the bridge had to be taken quickly if the advance were to continue, so Captain Craig led his company through terrifying fire to the bridge and on across it. Only eighteen got across.

The bridge had not been blown up because there were still many Germans on the west side when Captain Craig and his handful reached the east bank.

The little group with the captain was pinned down immediately by even fiercer fire from a concentration of 40-mm. anti-aircraft guns on a hill above the town and from mortars and small arms of hundreds of the enemy in the eastern part of the town.

While Captain Craig and his men held stubbornly to their foothold on the bridge approaches, the lieutenant rode a tank out on the span, jumped off, cut the demolition wires and was killed. Tanks and infantry reinforcements crossed the bridge later.

3 Foodless Weeks Enough For Nazi

With the United States First Army in Germany, Nov. 12 (AP)—Hitler lost another convert today when a gaunt, German army officer staggered out of the ruins of Aachen to surrender to American soldiers garrisoned in the wrecked town.

This officer had believed Hitler's promise that the Allies would be thrown off the soil of the Fatherland. He had waited in hiding for more than three weeks without food, expecting a counterattack would set him free. But it never came.

"Three weeks without food is too much, even for the Fuehrer," he said in a resigned voice.

He took refuge in the ruins when the First Infantry Division captured the city three weeks ago. Hitler had promised that Allied troops would be thrown back within 48 hours.

Today, the officer decided he had kept faith long enough.

Axis Leader Promises 'Victory' Against Bolshevism in Talk by Proxy.

'NO CHEAP ESCAPE'

Germans Pledge 'Unconditional Resistance to Allied Armies' in Response.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON, Nov. 12—A proclamation in the name of long-silent Adolf Hitler — but read by the hangman chief Heinrich Himmler —tonight summoned Germans to fight to the death and promised victory against the Allies who seek Germany's "complete annihilation."

Sounding every appeal to steel German will, the proclamation asserted surrender would not be a "cheap escape," appealed for loyalty to the Fuehrer, warned that his power is absolute, and declared that "as long as I am alive Germany will not suffer the fate of European states flooded by Bolshevism."

NOV 13 1944

Hitler Still Absent

But the voice of Hitler—who has not spoken to his people for nearly four months in their gravest crisis —was not heard on this sabbath which Berlin radio called "a day of national rising."

His silence, since the day after the July 20 attempt on his life, has led to reports Hitler is dead, or ill, or mad. His proclamation said only that his work "does not allow me to leave headquarters even for a few days."

The manifesto marked the staging of the Nazis' postponed anniversary celebration of the Nov. 9, 1923, Beer Hall Putsch in Munich, and mass swearing-in of "millions" of men in the Volkssturm or people's army, pledging fealty to Hitler and unconditional resistance to the Allies.

Himmler, rapidly coming to the fore recently as Germany's strong man, read the proclamation in Munich.

Throughout the evening Nazis big and small gave pep broadcasts from Munich, but it was Gauleiter Paul Giesler, and not Hitler, who placed the traditional wreath on the monument of the 16 who died in the unsuccessful Putsch 21 years ago. Hitler's proclamation, as broadcast from that Nazi shrine city, said "I greet you from afar, my party comrades."

The Nazi leaders—Hitler by proclamation, Reichsminister Goebbels and others in personal addresses at Volkssturm ceremonies—sought to pledge Germany virtually to national suicide.

They held up the fanaticism of the Japanese as an example for Germans in defense of "our beloved Reich by every home, every street corner, every clump of trees."

All thought of compromise or capitulation was rejected.

"The time of people who favor compromise or reserve has definitely passed," said Hitler's text as broadcast by DNB.

"We fight to the last breath," Goebbels told Volkssturmers in Berlin.

Hitler's address struck the old Nazi propaganda chords of the menace of "international Jewry", and "Bolshevist barbarisms" threatening, he said, to engulf not only Germany, but all Europe.

He appealed strongly for continued fanatic Nazi loyalty to himself, and while promising that Germany would triumph despite every obstacle, declared "we must be willing to sacrifice life in order to preserve life."

Death awaits any German who opposes the decision for last-ditch struggle, the proclamation said.

"As long as there is breath left in me, my body and soul will serve one thought only: to make my people strong in defense and attack against this deadly danger. If there are people who are objecting to this, it cannot be helped."

"Whoever attempts to sow doubts among others, whoever lifts a sword or throws a bomb against Germany, will be mercilessly and ruthlessly destroyed."

Hitler stressed "how necessary it is for the nation to appreciate and honor its great men," and put himself in that class by reviewing, again, how National Socialism had made Germany strong.

Warn of Nazi Fate

Warning of the fate that might face a defeated Germany, he declared the Allies now were demanding that 40,000,000 Germans "be eliminated from our "midst" to weaken the nation. The aim of Germany's enemies, said the proclamation, was "the destruction of our nation, its complete annihilation, and thus the end of its existence."

Whenever a "cowardly capitulation" has taken place "or was considered and might still be considered today or tomorrow, the result will not be a cheap escape from an historical crisis, but the compulsory extermination of the respective peoples and thereby the destruction of the responsible men.

"Bolshevist chaos and civil war will be the first result in the interior of these countries. The second phase opens with the handing over of so-called war criminals, of valuable men, and will be ended by unending columns of human beings who set out along the road to Siberia, to die there as the victims of the weakness of their leaders."

Hitler charged that the Allies, unable to break into Germany, took recourse to "a stab in the back in the interior of Germany" arranged by "unprincipled characters in order to break German resistance at its very roots"—apparently referring to the July 20 bomb attack, which at the time he and the Nazis officially blamed on high officers of the German army.

But, he said, that assassination try resulted only in expelling "unworthy ones" from the party, state, and armed forces, and bringing about complete unity.

Cite Jap Ally

"Our greatest ally, Japan, looked upon the fight from the very first day in the right light; a decisive dispute for existence," he declared. "Since then Japan is fighting with the valor of really heroic people."

The proclamation said that "if in these times I speak seldom or little to the German people, this is due to my being at work in order to fulfill the tasks entrusted to me, and which must be fulfilled in order to turn our fortunes."

After first transmitting this explanation of Hitler's non-appearance, DNB said a recording by Hitler of the proclamation would be broadcast. Then later signals were changed again, and Himmler—also a busy man—broadcast it from Munich. The Putsch celebration, by Berlin account, had been delayed from Nov. 8 until Sunday in order not to interfere on a week-day with Germany's total mobilization.

The Nazis apparently were forced to attempt some explanation to refute widespread reports abroad that something was wrong with Hitler.

Volkssturm As Reinforcement

Speaking in Berlin at the swearing-in ceremonies, Reichsminister Paul Joseph Goebbels declared Volkssturm regiments would be used to reinforce any critical sectors of the front, and asserted "we shall never lay down our arms."

Heinrich Himmler spoke in Munich, and other Gauleiters in other cities as the Volkssturm men "all over "Germany" pledged themselves to "be unconditionally loyal and obedient to Adolf Hitler" and "to die rather than abandon freedom and with it the social future of my nation," Berlin newscasts said.

Goebbels, declaring that "hundreds of thousands of men have volunteered" in Berlin, was quoted by the German radio as saying it was his "ambition to train and equip the Berlin Volkssturm in such a manner that, if a crisis should arise in the coming months at any one place of the front, we are always able to throw to the front 3 or 5 or 20 regiments of the Berlin Volkssturm."

To Have Machine Guns

These regiments, he said, would be equipped with light and heavy machine guns, and be able to "deliver a tank-punch and tank-terror."

The German people, he added, are resolved to "defend itself house to house and street by street."

"Filled with the same spirit as the valorous Japanese people," Goebbels continued, "we are preparing for the last round of this war. Only two days ago, the British Premier said the last round would be decisive and that it was just now being fought.

"This last round we want to win, with our last breath if necessary."

Declared To Be Millions

One broadcast account describing the oath-taking ceremonies said the number of Volkssturm men runs "into the millions." The listening members, it added, included men and young boys in an assortment of uniforms and civilian clothes, some wearing tin hats.

After Goebbels spoke, the radio accounts continued, the marchers paraded with a few tanks leading their columns.

The text of the oath required of Volkssturm inductees was given as:

"I swear this oath by Almighty God: That I will be unconditionally loyal and obedient to Adolf Hitler, Fuehrer of the greater German Reich. I swear to fight courageously for my homeland and to die rather than abandon freedom and with it the social future of my nation."

As Proof To World

Goebbels, the broadcast said, told the people's army that "you have assembled in order to prove to the world that not only at the front but also at home, Germany has millions of men who will never haul down the flag before the enemies of the Reich or capitulate in a cowardly manner.

"The enemy who has advanced up to our frontiers believes he will be able to defeat the Reich with his materiel and almost inexhaustable reserves, thereby bringing the deepest national and social serfdom to our people.

"For more than five years our nation withstood this gigantic assault. The whole world nearly has united in order to wipe out from the map the German Reich and split up the German people into small, powerless states. For five years they have been going against us without succeeding in forcing the German people to their knees."

To Demand High Price

But, he declared, "We shall never lay down our arms relying on an enemy who knows no mercy if once we have disarmed. . . . We are determined to demand that our enemies pay a high and hard price."

Goebbels, alluding to Allied "shouts of premature hope of victory," admitted that the Germans in 1941, when England refused to yield, "learned what it means to make premature promises of victory to a people, and then to encounter fanatical and embittered resistance."

The Propaganda Minister said "the hostile world is tired of war because it has no war aim. It is united in what it does not want, but disunited in what it wants. It holds no high ideals such as we are defending and which enabled us to see our nation rearising even after the most serious military setbacks."

HIMMLER HELD REICH MASTER

Hitler Proclamation Seen As Buildup For Gestapo Chief

NOV 13 1944

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

[Former Chief of The Associated Press Berlin Bureau]

New York, Nov. 12 (AP)—Hitler's proclamation appears to be more in the nature of a buildup for Heinrich Himmler as the real master of Germany, than of a document calculated to inspire the apathetic German masses to make a final heroic stand.

The new thing about the proclamation is not its content. Exhortations to fight to the bitter end have by this time lost their punch with the war-weary population. The new thing about it is the fact that, of all persons, the Gestapo chief and principal hangman of the Reich has been selected to read a document purporting to come from the Fuehrer himself.

Goebbels Passed Over

Obviously, if Adolf Hitler had time to compose the piece to which the German nation was regaled, he might also have found time to step before a microphone at his own desk, wherever he might be. One is naturally inclined to wonder whether Adolf Hitler is still master of his own movements.

The obvious man to read a proclamation on behalf of the Fuehrer is Dr. Joseph Goebbels, the Minister for Propaganda and Public Enlightenment. In the past that has been his job, both because it naturally belonged to his functions, and because he is a trained radio speaker who knows how to charm radio audiences.

Ever since the purge of generals and other opponents of the regime which set in after the attempt, real or staged, upon Hitler's life on July 20, every attempt has been made to popularize Heinrich Himmler with the masses. The German press has been surfeited with articles depicting him as the home-loving man of the people to whom a grave injustice has been done by picturing him as an ogre and a sadist.

Himmler Emerges As Real Power

Apparently Himmler thinks that this process of popularization has gone far enough, and that he can now emerge as the real power in Germany, even though Hitler has never revoked his public announcement of September 1, 1939, by which Hermann Goering was designated as his successor.

Nobody in informed circles today believes that Goering ever will be Fuehrer. Heinrich Himmler already rules in fact. It is anybody's guess when he will rule in name.

He himself has already prepared for that eventuality by having postage stamps printed which can be released when he no longer goes through the formality of reading proclamations in the name of Adolf Hitler, but drafts and reads them in the name of Heinrich Himmler.

Hitler Under Gestapo Control

Long before World War II began, Adolf Hitler was under the control of the Gestapo. Diplomats and other emissaries visiting der Fuehrer were often amazed to learn that the Gestapo listened in on even the most private talks of Germany's top man.

One of the most dramatic stories yet to be revealed is how Hitler's principal tool for extermination of his opposition became the man he feared most, and whose bidding he had to do.

Text of Hitler's Proclamation to Volkssturm Read to German People by Heinrich Himmler

NOV 13 1944

Adolf Hitler's proclamation, as carried by DNB and reported by the Federal Communications Commission, opened with the assertion that the "requirements of total war have caused me to postpone celebrations commemorating Nov. 9 to the next available Sunday." The proclamation continued:

Work at my headquarters does not permit me to leave it at the present, even for a few days. Quite apart from this, I consider my task today to consist not so much in delivering speeches as in preparing and carrying out those measures that are necessary to wage this war to its ultimate victorious conclusion.

As in the times of crisis in 1923, I am inspired today by only one single idea dominating all other considerations: to make—now more than ever—every effort for success, which is imperative!

And as it was then possible to tell dead comrades ten years later with justification that victory had after all become theirs, so victory in the great struggle for the existence or nonexistence of our people must and will in the end belong to our nation, the fighting front and the no less heroically battling homeland.

On many previous occasions I have pointed out how necessary it is for the nation to appreciate and honor its great men. Particularly in evil times, a despondent nation may gain courage and strength from its bearing in times gone by. How much more is this true of a people that is bearing itself with such boundless courage as the German nation. It will be able to derive from the struggle of its great men the only right lesson for the present—namely, the realization that Providence in the end helps only those who, without despairing, with stout and faithful hearts, enter the battle with adversities of the time and thus eventually become the masters of their destiny.

Turns to Divine Law

As far as the Almighty has opened our eyes and enabled us within the bounds of our weak human understanding to gain insight into the laws underlying his will, we can realize the incorruptible justice that life accords as its ultimate price only to him who is willing and ready to sacrifice life in order to preserve life.

It is a matter of complete indifference whether man affirms or disavows this inexorable law; he cannot change it. Hence anyone seeking to shirk the struggle for this life invalidates not this law but the underlying conditions of his own existence.

When the National Socialist movement embarked on its fight to conquer German man, every understanding individual was convinced of the internal collapse of the people and the Reich that was threatening. This was bound to result in a growing menace to our national existence, the gradual decline of our birth rate and hence in the insidious decay of our national substance that would have exacted sacrifices many times those of the World War. Such a development was in line with our enemies' aims.

The economic strangulation of the old Reich was intended to destroy the material basis of the German people's existence. Thus they hoped to achieve the fulfillment of Clemenceau's demand for the decimation of the German nation by 20,000,000 people.

The struggle of 1914-18 caused the deaths of 2,000,000 people. But there were 20,000,000 more that, according to the wishes of the democratic benefactors of mankind, were to be eliminated from our midst.

Today this demand has been increased to 40,000,000. As it does not lie within the power of man to call a halt to retarding movements in the life of a nation, nobody could say when this process of the shrinkage of our people's substance would come to an end. In this connection, another rule of nature forces itself upon us: there is no vacuum in the world.

"Reservations" for the Weak

Peoples that are too weak numerically or biologically and are no longer capable of filling their living space in a satisfactory manner receive at best a reservation commensurate to their value and their size. Other life, however, will flow into the space thus freed. Other nations—and, unfortunately, very often more primitive races—will then, acting on the command of Providence, take up the struggle for existence in the area that an old nation has lost out of cowardice and weakness, or, in other words, out of unfitness for life.

Thus, in 1919, we were faced with the realization that only the remolding of our people from top to bottom would in the long run enable it to resume its struggle for existence. Only complete negation of the phraseology of democratic disintegration of peoples and of the Bolshevik destruction of nationhood was able to bring back to our people its natural vitality, and thus the preconditions necessary to safeguard its successful self-assertion in the future. Because of this realization, the National Socialist movement entered the struggle.

Faced with these great aims, however, both the proletarian and the bourgeois class state had to lose all their significance. What the social classes, professions, religious creeds or political parties may then still have imagined to be the ideal was, in the eyes of the young movement, proved to be madness and thus a fatal poison for our people. The intention to establish for the first time in our history a people's state comprising all Germans could be realized, however, only by the mobilization of the nation's whole strength. The synthesis of Nationalist and Socialist thoughts was most suitable for the generation of that power that such a struggle demands as a prerequisite of success.

Cites Germany's Enemies

The proclamation of this young National Socialist people's state, indeed, immediately aroused the hatred of all those enemies at home and abroad who advocated the former system of German dismemberment and hence of German impotence—the hatred, that is, of parties and petty parties, of groups, estates, vocations, organizations, classes and finally of religious confessions as those most likely to derive benefit from our internal disunity, and abroad the hatred of the hostile democratic-Marxist world as the party most interested in German impotence.

The hatred generated by this conspiracy of our enemies at home and abroad has, ever since, faithfully pursued the movement throughout the years of struggle, before and after the accession to power. This hatred worked against us with all the petty tricks and all the brutality of which the system was then capable. Since the procession to the Feldherrnhalle, thousands of murdered National Socialists and tens of thousands of wounded fell victim to this, the only real aggression.

Since the accession to power our old enemies have not changed. On the contrary, they have intensified their hatred. At most, they have adapted their methods to the new situation.

As in the time of the struggle for power since the year 1933, so Jewry, as a final inspiring and impelling force, has not allowed any opportunity to pass of expressing its satanic will of persecution and destruction against the new state idea as such and against the young state born out of it. It saw in them the first dawn of the general recognition of its activity, the destroying and ruining of nations and thus eminent danger for itself.

Times have thus changed, but the essential elements of the fight forced upon us have remained. What has remained is:

1. Our own goal, the preservation of our nation, the safeguarding of its future with all available means, and,

2. The goal of our enemies, the destruction of our nation, the extirpation and therewith the termination of our existence.

That this neither was nor is the thesis of National Socialist propaganda was in the past proved by the fact of German inner disintegration and is today being confirmed by the proclamation of our enemies.

No National Socialist Minister of Propaganda could sketch the aims of our enemies more clearly than it has been done for decades, and is being done particularly today, by the Jewish press, or more clearly than enemy statesmen above all are doing in public announcements through their ministers.

The aim of our enemies has thus also been retained. Bolshevism, furthered by the democracies, once tried to destroy our movement by terror in our country. Sovietism, supported by the democracies, is endeavoring to destroy the Reich and exterminate our people. The fact that the bourgeois world, which then consciously or unconsciously acted as a handy-man for Bolshevism in the interior of our country, is approaching its own downfall in an act of blindness inflicted by God did not in the least alter the way in which it behaved.

The fact that the present democracies would be borne to their graves immediately after the victory of Bolshevism, that democratic states together with their ideas would be smashed against the wall, alters the reality of their present procedure just as little. The senselessness of their action, however incomprehensible in itself, finds its explanation the moment that one knows that behind human stupidity and weakness, that behind the lack of character on one side and the inadequacy on the other side, there is always a Jew: he is the wire-puller of democracy as he is the creator and inciter of the Bolshevik world-beast.

This danger from within had dawned on many even before National Socialism proclaimed it. Effective counter-measures, however, were taken only when these faint ideas had grown into full-blooded programmatic conception and when these ideas found a powerful executor in the National Socialist party.

Today, too, many foreign statesmen, parliamentarians and party politicians, as well as economists, have realized the necessity of saving Europe from the Bolshevik monster. Practical results, however, can be achieved only if a strong European power succeeds in organizing this common struggle for life or death, overruling all theoretical hopes, and in waging it to a successful conclusion. This can be done, and will be done, only by National Socialist Germany. Europe has always been a multitude of competing peoples and States. Nevertheless, the spiritual conception of European entity in most cases arose only in one State or in a community of related peoples. The eternal strife of European peoples among themselves certainly also has its great advantages.

"Asiatic" Threat Recalled

As in every competitive fight, this struggle required supreme hitting power from every individual nation. But at times when all were involved in a fateful life-and-death struggle there was a great danger that the forces of this Continent would be split up in the face of the threatening onrush from the depth of the Asiatic east—that eternally latent threat to Europe.

Over long periods in Europe's history, the thesis of a European balance of power was for the narrow-minded west only too often identical with a license to side with the peril threatening Europe, in contravention of the law of European solidarity, the aim being all the more easily to throttle this or that vexatious competitor.

For centuries the old Reich had to wage its struggle against the Mongols and later on against the Turks by its own strength and with few allied resources to preserve Europe from a fate the results of which would have been just as unthinkable as would be the fact of its Bolshevization today.

Although in past centuries this struggle entailing many reserves burdened our people with very grave sacrifices, it ultimately led to success. This alone provided the requisite conditions for the birth, or existence, and for the prosperity of the European family of nations.

Moreover, conflicts of world-historic importance have necessarily the consequence that in the end those struggles, in which evidently the providence of God makes men fight to prove their supreme qualities and thus to justify their existence or fail to do so, will be decided by a tenacity not of months or years but only after long periods of time. Up to now only the bearing of the [Nazi] movement provides the reason why the National Socialist state will not pass this historic test.

What bourgeois party could have survived the collapse of Nov. 9, 1923? What party would finally have accomplished a perfect victory after so complete a collapse, after a struggle unexampled in toughness?

Even if this struggle, measured by today's events, may appear small to a superficial observer, this merely shows the lack of ability to understand decisive values as such. For the struggle for the movement was then the struggle for Germany exactly as it is the struggle of the Reich today. It was a struggle for our people and its future that had to be decided first at home to enable us to oppose at last the enemy ideology and the will of extermination from outside.

How hopeless that struggle of the party at that time appeared to our opponents was revealed by their statements that after Nov. 9, 1923, National Socialism could be regarded as definitely dead and thus the danger to the enemies of our people was eliminated. And yet, a few years later, this party, regarded as obliterated, was already engaged in a decisive struggle for power; and, after almost a decade of unrestrained effort by many men and women and repeated through temporary setbacks, it emerged victorious in the end.

Claims Ability to Lead Europe

During this period the movement received and proved itself possessed of that inner spiritual bearing that enables it today to lead the nation and the Reich, and even to lead Europe. And just as we then were able to witness how the entire bourgeois world of democratic parties gradually disintegrated, how it decayed by its compromises and brought about its own downfall by cowardly renunciation, so we shall today be witnesses of the same spectacle on a large scale.

Nations, and above all their statesmen, military leaders and fighting men, at all times have easily borne days of fortune and thus of visible success. What has characterized the great personalities of world history and those nations destined for greatness has always been their steadfastness during the days of tribulation, their confidence at times when their position seemed hopeless, their defiance and their courage after reverses had been suffered.

During the time of our struggle we National Socialists have always welcomed shorter or longer periods of persecution, because they stripped the party of all those elements that in any case would have been nothing better than camp followers, although they would have certainly boasted loudest on the day of victory.

Likewise, in this most gigantic struggle of nations of all time, we witness the falling away from us of all that is small, cowardly and unfit for life. It is due to their spiritual and moral inadequacy, caused by centuries of inbreeding, that monarchs, completely misunderstanding their own position, which today has nothing but prehistoric value, should lose their courage and become traitors. Nations demand, in times like these, leaders other than ailing and decrepit old dynasties.

Warns Former Satellites

The fact that so-called statesmen, and generals too, allow themselves to be ensnared by a belief that they are able to decide in their favor the historical conflict for existence or non-existence by cowardly capitulations only confirms the experience gained over a period of thousands of years, that at one and the same time the earth is not inhabited by too many great men. But, wherever such capitulation has taken place, or was considered and might still be considered today, the result will not be an easy escape from a crisis of world-wide importance but, perforce, the certain eradication of the nations concerned, and with them also the annihilation of their responsible leaders.

For Bolshevik chaos and civil war within such states will be merely the first result. The second result, however, begins with the handing over of so-called "war criminals," of men who are valuable in themselves, and ends with immense columns of people who set out for the Siberian tundras to die there as victims of the weakness of the leadership of their states.

Although the military consequences of these treacheries have from the outset been very severe for Germany, a mainstay in the struggle, they have nevertheless not loosened the structure of the Reich, nor could they eliminate the spirit of resistance. On the contrary, the nation was hardened in its fighting determination and become all the more fanatical.

We are glad that, among those nations that were affected by these signs of decay, forces of resistance arose in Italy. They rallied around the creator of the new state, Benito Mussolini, as their Duce. In Hungary they gathered around Szalsi; in Slovakia, under the leadership of President Tiso; in Croatia, headed by the Poglavnik, Ante Pavelitch. In all these countries they closed their ranks behind the leaders of young nations.

We know that among other peoples, too, committees and governments have sprung up imbued with the determination of disowning capitulation and not accepting the extermination of their peoples simply because some unscrupulous weaklings failed in their honor and in their duties or because some fools fell for the mirages in which today they themselves no longer believ

Praises Japan's Attitude

Our greatest ally, Japan, h viewed the struggle from i day as what it really is: a sive clash in which existen self is at stake. And, ever s Japan has been fighting t struggle with the courage of a real nation of heroes.

Party comrades! Fellow-countrymen! Men and women! Since the Russian armies broke through the Rumanian front on the Don in November, 1942, since the subsequent disintegration of the Italian and Hungarian formations, with all the severe consequences involved for our strategy, our people have been hit by treachery after treachery. Nevertheless, the hopes of our enemies have not come true. Again and again we succeeded in re-establishing our fronts and halting the enemy.

Thus they were left only with the one hope that they could deliver a decisive stab in the interior of our country, as was always the case when they did not know how to achieve successes against Germany in another way. Creatures devoid of all character, a blend of feudal arrogance, bourgeois inadequacy and former parliamentarian corruption, met together to break German resistance at its root in the hope that they could reap immediately the reward for this act of perjury. In one point, it is true, they were entirely correct.

As long as I am alive, Germany will not suffer the fate of European states that have been overrun by bolshevism; as long as there is a breath left in me, my body and my soul will serve only one thought—to make my people strong in defense and attack against the most mortal peril that is threatening it.

For if, in previous days, wars have been fought for dynastic or economic interests, the meaning of this war is a struggle for the survival of our very nation. Therefore the only logical consequence of all sacrifices in this war is the strengthening of the German people's state. If there are outmoded individuals who take exception to this, they cannot be helped, because this people's state will pass over them and continue its business. If individual members of subdued parties, classes or other factions of our people believe that now, perhaps, the time of their resurrection might have come, they will only experience the moment of their complete extermination.

National Socialism, once persecuted in an atrociously bloody way, showed a day after assuming power not only a truly conciliatory attitude but even generosity toward its political opponents. In this state I have either granted pensions or even called into new and higher offices innumerable men who, before National Socialism took over power, were persecutors themselves. The same Bavarian Minister of Justice under whom I was confined to the fortress for thirteen months was nevertheless appointed by me as Reich Minister of Justice. Prussian Ministers and Reich Ministers who had previously been our most ardent persecutors received high pensions from me as an act of grace, although we were under no obligation to do so. I would have regarded it as unworthy of myself to plunge into misery the Social Democrats, only because when holding Ministerial offices they had been my adversaries. Judges who previously had passed sentences on us were, nevertheless, not hampered in their career and often they were even promoted.

Only those who by deed or word proclaimed their hostility to the new state were treated in accordance with law. Moreover, by the nature of my accession to power, I made it easy for every German, and for every state official and officer in particular, to fulfill his duty without coming into conflict with his conscience. For almost eighteen months the late Reich President, who, in accordance with the Constitution, made me the leader of by far the strongest party, Chancellor, was my superior and was treated by me with the esteem and high respect due to his office.

Magnanimity Is Over

Those, however, who by no act of mine were constantly brought into conflict with their conscience and who now think fit to involve other people in conflicts with their consciences must know that this means certain death for them. As long as only I myself was the object of their persecutions, I could be magnanimous and overlook and forget their actions. Whoever today uses a dagger or bomb against Germany will be destroyed without mercy and without consideration.

A few hours were sufficient to extinguish the attempted Putsch of July 20, a few months to rout the whole clique of these Catilinian subjects who are without honor and to exterminate them completely. In the year 1934 I took the revolt of a small group inside the movement as the occasion for cleansing the party and in the same way the new revolt was the start of a thorough overhaul of the whole Government apparatus.

The time for people who like to make compromises or reservations is definitely over. The Reich war flag has become recently, as a symbol of the National Socialist idea, of the revolution and of the state, the regimental flag of the German armed forces. The German salute has been introduced. The people's grenadier divisions will, together with a stream of German youth, help the world of National Socialist ideas to final and complete victory.

Hails Armed Forces' Loyalty

There is one thing that has deeply touched me and has filled me with grateful joy after this July 20: the knowledge that the army, navy and air force—the Elite Guard can here in any case be left out of the account—in their totality had accepted the spirit of National Socialism to such an extent that there remained hardly anything to do but to expel the unworthy ones from the party, state and armed forces in order to bring about complete unity of views and the will of the party, nation, state and armed forces.

It is unfortunate that this transition had not shown itself so clearly at an earlier date. And yet, repercussions of this day have been bitter. Full of surging hopes, our enemies pulled themselves together, using all their strength in the belief that Germany could now be overrun without further ado.

I owe it to the courageous bearing of our armed forces, and above all to the courageous bearing of the German homeland, which is above praise, that they did not succeed. The response to the call for a strengthening of the Reich's defenses and mobilization for the Volkssturm [Home Guard] was only a symbol of the community of spirit among the German people in this fateful struggle for the future of our nation, a spirit that is becoming ever more evident. Thus, the soldierly homeland steps to the side of the old grenadiers, of the army soldiers, of the navy and the air force as fully equal, not only men, old men and boys, but also women and girls.

But, now that I review the sum total of unspeakable sacrifices made by our people today and all the sufferings forced on millions of human beings in our towns, I would like to ask the criminals of July 20 just one question: "With what right could such sacrifices be demanded if not the holy resolve in one's conscience of consolidating the German people's state at the end of this struggle and of building it up more and more so that eventually this, the greatest epoch of our people, may also become the birth hour of the Reich, which at last not only includes all Germans against the outside world but also gives happiness within?"

By fighting for the National Socialist German people's state, I give the only conceivable moral and ethical meaning to this greatest struggle in our history. He who in this hour too is concerned merely with interests of his own class acts not only as a criminal but at the same time as an insane egoist, insane because it requires incredible stupidity to think that one can inspire a nation for more than half a decade with enthusiasm for the fight for life or death and for the sake, perhaps, of the medieval feudal state.

Cites Envy of Opponents

Party comrades, when the year 1923 was at its close, I wrote "Mein Kampf" while in prison. All the time I had before me the aim of putting into practice the idea of the National Socialist people's state. For years we have fought for this idea and, after the accession to power, shaped it into reality. Our opponents were filled with rage and envy at the achievements that we reached in all spheres of our economic and social life, the increasing results of our cultural pursuits and the pacification of all classes. If other countries today publish so-called "plans of the future," they represent but a weak replica of what National Socialist Germany has already realized in practice.

Today I cannot do more than renew my vow to continue this work. As an old National Socialist, I shall fulfill the duties imposed on me and shall not falter for a moment in the struggle. I have not chosen these obligations; they are duties imposed on every German by destiny itself, demanding that we do everything and neglect nothing to secure the future and thus the existence of our people.

To the most severe blows of fate we shall stand up with obstinate wrath, always imbued by the conviction that destiny often punishes those that it loves best and that it tests and has to test men to reveal in just judgment their true values. In this struggle I am filled with unshakable determination to show posterity a no less laudable example than that shown by great Germans in by-gone times.

If I address you party members and the whole German people so infrequently and rarely nowadays it is because I work and toil in fulfilment of those tasks with which our age has burdened me and that must be fulfilled to bring about a turn in our fate.

For, as I have this will and as I see my people faithfully following me, I am not for a moment in doubt that the time of trials will eventually be passed successfully by us and that the hour is approaching when God Almighty will give us His blessing as he did during long periods before. We then achieved the greatest victories of world history and yet we did not become insolent. Times of reverses will never make us submit. They will, therefore, only confirm in good sense the picture of the character of the German people of today that will be handed on to posterity. I therefore believe with unshakable confidence that, as a result of our work and our sacrifice, the moment will come when success will finally crown our endeavors.

The objective of our struggle is none other than the one for which we had to fight in 1923 and for which the first sixteen martyrs of our movement went to their deaths: to save our people from distress and peril and to safeguard the lives of our children and children's children down to the most remote generations. In the shadow of our nation, there is marching Europe, which feels that today it is not Germany's fate alone that is being decided but the future of all those peoples that regard themselves as part of Europe and consciously abhor Bolshevik barbarism.

Thus I greet you from afar, my old party comrades, through the speaker of this pledge in dogged determination, with my old fighting courage unimpaired and in unshakable confidence. I am thinking once more of the fighters of that day twenty-one years ago who also set an example to us for the future of our people and the greater German Reich.

London Now Convinced Hitler Is Incapacitated

London, Nov. 12 (AP)—The conviction grew tonight in informed quarters here that Adolf Hitler is incapacitated—at least—and that Heinrich Himmler has succeeded him as No. 1 man in Germany.

When the Nazis today issued a proclamation in Hitler's name and Himmler broadcast it to the nation, these observers found confirmation of their suspicions that the Fuehrer is ill, mad or dead and that his henchmen are trading on his name and prestige with the German people.

An official British source observed that there was a "phony ring" to the proclamation purportedly coming from a Fuehrer "too busy at his headquarters to speak."

This was the second "Hitler proclamation" issued during the Fuehrer's four-month silence. The first calling up the German Volkssturm, came on October 18, when Himmler was so deputized for Hitler.

U. S. Forces Tighten Hold On Japs in Leyte Pocket

Yanks Capture Vital Heights Dominating Roadway to Ormoc

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Monday, Nov. 13.—(AP) Driving through jungles and mountains against bitter opposition, American forces yesterday made gains ranging from a few hundred yards to three miles and tightened their squeeze against reinforced Japanese troops crammed in western Leyte island.

Units of the 24th division made the longest jump on the difficult route from Carigara bay to Ormoc. The infantrymen plunged through difficult terrain to capture the heights of Mt. Catabaran, a 2,300-foot peak dominating the roadway to Ormoc. They advanced three miles from Hill 1525, near the northern end of the Ormoc corridor.

Receive Aerial Support

The main column of the 24th, supported by heavy tank and aerial fire, made "good progress against heavy opposition" along the main road southward from Limon, today's communique reported.

Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita's fanatical Japanese forces continued their attempts to break the American vise, pressing them against blasted Ormoc. But a headquarters spokesman said the Americans still held both the preponderance of numbers and the initiative.

Continued pressure by a series of Yank ground attacks, supported by heavy artillery and air bombardments, thus far have kept the Japanese on the defensive, despite the great numbers of reinforcements they have succeeded in pouring into the Leyte battlefront.

The Nipponese made no new attempt to send fresh troops ashore, after losing four transports, six destroyers and most of 8,000 reinforcements in the complete destruction of a convoy off Ormoc Saturday by American carrier planes.

To pinpoint American positions through the valleys and mountains in and around the Ormoc corridor would be difficult. The huge map at press headquarters looks like a Christmas tree, with blue pins dotting the various ridges which battle has engulfed. Most of them are south and east of Pinamopoan—an expanse of hills where there are no towns or villages.

Today's communique reported that Third fleet carrier planes shot down 13 enemy fighters during their destructive assault on the latest Japanese reinforcement convoy at Ormoc Saturday.

(Adm. Chester W. Nimitz at Pearl Harbor previously announced the destruction of these fighters and added that five more probably were destroyed.)

Planes Hit Ormoc

Heavy land-based American aircraft, striking from rear bases, hit flaming Ormoc with 62 tons of bombs, "causing extensive destruction."

Enemy "harassing air attacks" have increased slightly, the communique reported, and 11 Japanese planes were destroyed by Yank fighters and antiaircraft fire.

Mt. Catabaran, where the 24th Division was fighting, is almost five miles south of Carigara bay and approximately two miles east of the Pinamopoan-Ormoc highway.

Elements of the First Cavalry division are meeting "increasing resistance" in the Mt. Pina saddle, to the southeast of the road. The cavalrymen have spread out across rugged ridges, to protect the flanks of the main American column punching down the twisting Ormoc road.

In the 24th corps sector, in the center of Leyte island, Americans were closing from both the east and the south, moving against Japanese hill positions and enemy remnants which fled to the mountains after the Yank thrust through central Leyte valley, near the island's east coast.

Jap Planes Hit Back At Invasion Shipping

Aboard a P-T Tender in San Pedro Bay, Leyte, Nov. 12 (AP)—Japanese fighters and dive bombers made a spectacular midafternoon vengeance strike against American shipping crowding San Pedro Bay today, quite obviously in retaliation for the heavy shipping losses the Japanese suffered during the previous 48 hours at Ormoc.

In groups of four or five, the Japanese planes buzzed angrily over American ships, then dove to the attack through clouds of anti-aircraft fire.

American Lightnings and Thunderbolt fighters circled high above their own ack-ack to swoop on the Japanese planes—Zero fighters and "Val" bombers—as they retreated from the bombing area.

From the bridge of this ship it was possible to see five different attacks under way simultaneously during a five-minute period. One enemy plane scored a direct hit on the deck of a ship, which burst into flames. A moment later, a second ship was hit on the stern. While PT-boats and LCI fire boats rushed to assist the burning ship, four more enemy planes peeled off for attacks.

MAJ. McGUIRE DOWNS 28TH JAPANESE PLANE

AN ADVANCED FIGHTER BASE, Leyte, Nov. 12—(AP) Maj. Thomas B. McGuire, the second highest-scoring fighter ace in the Southwest Pacific, scored his 27th and 28th kills today, when he shot down two Japanese navy fighter bombers near Cebu.

The Ridgewood, N. J., ace is beginning to crowd America's ace of aces, Maj. Richard I. Bong of Poplar, Wis., who has 36 notches in his aerial guns.

McGuire was on patrol with his squad when they sighted a group of Japanese planes and immediately gave battle.

Col. Charles McDonald of St. Petersburg, Fla., in a fight yesterday, scored a double kill against Japanese Navy fighter bombers and brought his total to 16. Flying a P47, he got his 14th plane two days ago.

P-T BOAT'S GUNS HELP GUERRILLAS

Shelling Of Jap Force On Mindanao Revealed

By SPENCER DAVIS

Aboard a P-T Boat Off Northern Mindanao, Philippines, Nov. 5 (AP—Delayed)—The moon was not yet up and the darkness accentuated the flickering lights of Mindanao's northernmost shoreline as this P-T boat approached on a special mission.

"Those lights might cause us some trouble when we try to find him," remarked the skipper, Lieut. Howard Terry, Cameron, Texas.

We were looking for a signal light from shore. For the two preceding nights an American scout, hiding out in friendly guerrilla country, had sent his identification signal, but this night his vigil was to end.

Scout Brings Filipino "Boy"

Machine Gunner Joseph Stefanoni, Greenwich Village, New York city, sang out: "There it is," and the signalman gave an answering blink. Soon a native boat paddled alongside. Willing hands pulled the scout aboard.

"Got room for one more?" The scout asked Terry. "I want to bring my boy along."

Terry agreed and almost instantly a small, cheerful Filipino of perhaps 21 materialized at the scout's side. He was "Conny," a guerrilla.

The American scout, a Rhode Islander who must remain unidentified, produced a large packet of maps, spread them out under the chart house light, and beckoned to Terry and his executive officer, Pete Reardon, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Would Help Guerrillas

"There is a concentration of about 150 Japs here," he said, pointing to a harbor at Masipit. "If we shot them up it would do much for the guerrillas who have been harassing the Jap garrison for weeks."

The P-T gingerly nosed into Masipit Harbor, taking constant soundings to avoid running aground.

The engines were muffled as the boat moved quietly to within 100 yards of the beach.

It was 1 A. M. now and the moon was up and gleaming brightly. Suddenly a rifle cracked on shore.

First Shot But Not Last

"The first shot has been fired, boys," Terry shouted, "but not the last. Let's go!"

Every gun on the little P-T blazed away at shoreline structures where the enemy troops were garrisoned. Tracers poured a crimson stream into the objective. Then the mortars lobbed their high explosives throughout the area.

At this point Lieut. (j. g.) Ken Sharp, of Pasadena, Cal., took over the heavy duty. There was a whoosh and a salvo of rockets scudded from their racks. It was a direct hit.

AUSTRALIANS HELPED IN LEYTE NAVAL FIGHT

CANBERRA, Australia, Nov. 12 (AP)—The Australian cruiser Shropshire and the destroyer Arunta played a vital part in the sinking of eighteen Japanese warships in Leyte Gulf during the naval battle in the central Philippines on the night of Oct. 25, it was officially announced today.

Both ships, with other Allied units, scored repeated hits on a large Japanese cruiser or battleship, and then the Arunta went in with close torpedo fire and also scored several hits with her 4.7-inch guns at almost point-blank range.

The Shropshire hit a Japanese battleship, believed to be the Yamasiro, with her third salvo. The following morning the battleship keeled over and sank. The Shropshire's officers believe their broadside finished off the vessel.

638,800 TONS HIT EUROPE

Total Represents Efforts Of U. S. Heavy Bombers Only

London, Nov. 12 (AP)—American heavy bombers of the Eighth and Fifteenth Air forces blasted German industrial and military targets with 638,880 tons of explosives through October 31, the United States Strategic Air Forces in Europe announced today. The Reich itself shook under the weight of 330,000 tons.

Since the Eighth Air Force began operations from England in August, 1942, and the Fifteenth from Italy in November, 1943, bombers and fighters together destroyed 15,210 enemy planes, shooting down 12,640 and smashing the rest on the ground. Combined American losses were 5,708 bombers and 2,449 fighters, less than 2 per cent. of the planes dispatched.

Weather Bad

The report on these groups, commanded by Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz since their reorganization last January, was issued on a day when American planes seeking objectives in western Germany were grounded by continental weather.

RAF bombers staged a massive raid late yesterday and last night, smashing at targets in western Germany with 3,088 tons of bombs. Most of these were dumped on the Rhenamia and Ebano oil refineries near Harburg, a city of 110,000 near Hamburg.

Stockholm reports said Allied bombers crossed Sweden and Norway today. Observers suggested they might be attacking Germany's crippled battleship Tirpitz, chased to the Arctic Ocean by the RAF and bombed two weeks ago when it was observed under way. Swedish anti-aircraft fired on the planes today as they crossed into Norway.

Brenner Pass Bridges Hit

Fifteenth Air Force Liberators bombed four bridges on the Brenner Pass rail line today in a renewed effort to sever the main supply artery for Nazi troops in northern Italy. The bombardiers aimed at the Avisio viaduct and bridges at Mezzocorona, Albes and Ora.

American Thunderbolts encountered more than 30 ME-109s north of Villafranca, probably destroyed one and damaged three and destroyed a Heinkel bomber in a strafing attack on the Villafranca airdrome.

The RAF attack on Harburg lasted about four minutes, pilots said. Seven bombers were lost from a formation of 500 ships. The big British Lancasters, going out after 2,000 Allied planes raked the Reich from the west and south during the day, also hit a synthetic oil plant at Dortmund in the Ruhr. RAF Mosquito bombers and fighters ranged over northern and northwestern Germany last night, attacking transportation and other targets.

Large Force Over Sweden

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 12 (AP).—Large formations of foreign aircraft crossed western Sweden early today and moved off into Norway after Swedish aircraft fire was begun, the Swedish defense staff announced. It was suggested here that the planes may have been engaged in a new Allied raid on the German battleship Tirpitz, attacked two weeks ago near Tromsoe, Norway.

REDS CAPTURE 50 MILES OF RAILWAY LINE

Monor Fall Clears Budapest Route—Tito's Yugoslavs Besiege Skoplje

London, Monday, Nov. 13 (AP)—Russian troops swept the Germans from nearly all of the 50-mile Budapest-Szolnok trunk railway yesterday with the capture of Monor, a powerful stronghold 14 miles southeast of the Hungarian capital, and in a coordinated 11-mile push from the east seized positions within 30 miles of the city, Moscow announced last night.

A Yugoslav communique broadcast by Marshal Tito's headquarters early today said his troops were storming Skoplje, Yugoslavia's sixth city on the Belgrade-Athens railway 70 miles north of the Greek frontier, after investing it on three sides.

Skoplje, a city of 65,000, is an important German "bolt" position protecting the southern corridor through which some of the 100,000 enemy troops threatened with entrapment have been fleeing.

Both the Yugoslav bulletin and Berlin broadcasts, meanwhile, reported large numbers of Russian troops were pouring across the Danube near Apatin, northern Yugoslav town 120 miles south of Budapest, moving westward to flank the Hungarian capital and also head off the German retreat from the south.

Russian troops, attacking on a 65-mile arc east of Budapest, were being resisted bitterly by Germans, often engaging in hand-to-hand combat. They also were fighting in deep mud, hauling their guns by hand.

Also Take Mezokovesd

Sixty-five miles northeast of Budapest the Russians killed 800 enemy troops and seized Mezokovesd, a strategic six-way road town on the railway to Miskolc, thereby gaining firm control of a 25-mile section of that main Axis artery connecting the German armies around Budapest with those defending eastern Slovakia.

Berlin declared the fighting east of Budapest, along the secondary Budapest-Szolnok railway, an "all-out offensive" in which several towns changed hands several times.

The Russians, fanning out from Ujszasz, a junction on this line taken Saturday, drove westward 11 miles, capturing Farmos, 30 miles from Budapest.

Six-Mile Gain On East

Pushing northwest of Ujszasz, another Soviet column captured the rail station of Boldoghaza in a six-mile gain along the railway to Jaszbereny, last big Axis stronghold guarding Budapest from the east.

Jaszbereny also was threatened by Russian units which took Alattyan, seven miles southeast of the stronghold.

A midnight Soviet bulletin said the Germans and Hungarians were suffering heavily in this area, one Soviet unit alone killing 600 Germans. A total of 700 enemy troops were captured during the day and 30 localities seized.

All But Five-Mile Sector

With the fall of Monor the Russians had captured all save a five-mile sector just outside Budapest of the railway between the capital and the embattled town of Vecses. In the fighting at Vecses and other near-by points Soviet troops were only two miles south of the secondary railway running east through Tapio-Gyorgye.

A Moscow broadcast said battalions of the German Volkssturm, or home army, were being rushed to the Hungarian front.

The home army of recruits, ranging in age up to 60, hitherto has not been used outside the German homeland. Its first appearance in battle was in German East Prussia.

With Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukraine Army units stalled for a week in Budapest's southern outskirts, other Soviet troops were reported to have flanked the capital and carried the war into the western half of Hungary by crossing the Danube far to the south.

London, Monday, Nov. 13 (AP). Britain "intends to employ her own people productively, to the full," and wants neither German labor nor German manufacturers after the war, Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express said in an editorial today.

"But Germany's raw materials' are worth taking," the newspaper said.

First Yank To Bomb Europe Sneaked Trip

London, Nov. 12 (AP)—Members of the first American bomb crew that flew over Nazi Europe, wherever they may be, must get particular satisfaction tonight from realizing that the 2,000 pounds of T. N. T. dropped June 29, 1942, was the beginning of a load of destruction which 28 months later would equal almost 640,000 tons.

This story never has been told before.

Lieut. Bernard L. Abell, of Chicago, Ill., claimed in a letter to the Associated Press to have been the first American bombardier to toggle a switch over Europe in this war. He was flying in a British plane with a crew that included Capt. Charles C. Kegelman, of El Reno, Okla., pilot, and Sergt. Robert L. Coley, Fredonia, Kan.

'A Fine Edge'

While training with the RAF, Bell said, "the boys reached a fine edge." Their British friends said they could borrow a medium bomber and make the raid over Hazebrouck in occupied France if they promised not to tell.

The American crew went aboard that night and Kegelman took the plane up in practiced RAF style. On the run over the target, five planes were shot down, but the Americans' ship wasn't hit.

Bell laid his bombs right down the groove although flak was exploding all about him.

Yanks Build Chapel For Missing Buddies

London, Nov. 12 (AP)—In memory of their dead and missing comrades, members of an American Flying Fortress group assembled at St. Andrews Parish in Quidenham this afternoon and stood solemnly before the 14th century chapel they raised $2,400 to rebuild.

A memorial book contains the names of their comrades lost in action. A specially designed stained glass window depicts an American airman in flying togs looking toward a figure of Christ. Incorporated in the design are the emblems of the Eighth Air Force, 96th Bomber Group and its four squadrons.

'WAC Queen' Steals Show At GI Grid Game

London, Nov. 12 (AP)—Corporal Ruby Newell, of Long Beach, Cal., crowned "prettiest WAC in the United Kingdom" in a ceremony between the halves, stole the show at a service football game today before 45,000 at White City Stadium.

Private Ashley Anderson, former University of Wisconsin star, led the Eighth Air Force shuttle raiders to a 20-0 triumph over a United States Navy eleven, but most of the GI's eyes were trained on Corporal Newell.

Lieut. Gen. James H. Doolittle, commander of the Eighth Air Force, presented her with a dozen American beauty roses.

The queen of the WACs was selected in a contest sponsored by The Stars and Stripes.

SHIFTS IN 8TH AIR FORCE

Doolittle Announces Changes in Division and Wing Commands

LONDON, Nov. 12 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. James H. Doolittle, chief of the United States Eighth Air Force, announced today changes in his command by which Col. Anthony A. Mustoe of Bellevue, Pa., becomes commander of the Fortieth Combat Wing, succeeding Brig. Gen. Howard M. Turner, now head of the First Bombardment Division.

Col. Maurice A. Preston of Tulare, Calif., succeeds Brig. Gen. Robert F. Travis of Savannah, Ga., as commander of the Forty-first Combat Wing. General Travis has returned home.

In the Second Division, Col. Milton Arnold of Washington, D. C., has been made commander of the Second Combat Wing, replacing Brig. Gen. Edward J. Timberlake Jr. of San Antonio, Tex., who commands the Twentieth Wing in the absence of Col. Jack Wood of Riverside, Calif., on temporary duty in the United States.

Tommies May Not Get Home Soon, Wives Told

London, Nov. 12 (AP)—Wives of British soldiers learned today that nothing could be done to insure home leaves for their husbands after three years' service.

More than 1,000 wives, in a petition to Prime Minister Churchill, had complained that four or five years of separation greatly diminished their chances of having children and limited the size of families.

Sir James Grigg, War Secretary, replied that, because of a shortage of trained reserves, any drastic shortening of overseas service periods would lengthen the war rather than bring the men home sooner.

The War Office has, however, issued a general guide to commanders overseas providing for compassionate leaves in special instances.

CHURCHILL URGES UNITY IN FRANCE

Calls for Arms to Aid Allies, Says Nazis May Be Beaten in Six Months.

PARIS, Nov. 12—(AP) Britain wants a powerful and well-equipped French army as soon as possible to aid in reestablishing the stability of Europe and hopes that the French will maintain internal solidarity and stability under Gen. Charles DeGaulle's government, Churchill told a cheering assemblage in the hotel De Ville today.

Speaking in French at a reception in his honor by the Paris and Seine departmental liberation committees, England's Prime Minister said the Nazi enemy, disheartened and under relentless Allied pounding, might be beaten within the next six months.

Will Not Prolong War

"We don't want to prolong the war merely to give your army the opportunities it desires, but we hope as much of the French army as possible will be able to engage in the final battles," he said.

"Unity! unity" was Churchill's parting advice in commenting that France could not afford anything which would upset her national life at the moment when all the nation's force must be thrown into the post-war reconstruction period.

"Fortunately you have at this moment at your head an incontestably able chief," Churchill said, adding with a grin that he had had "some slight differences" with him from time to time.

"But rally to him so that France remains united, indivisible," he continued with great earnestness.

This advance was given, he said, so that France might not only help defeat Germany but help "protect us from a repetition o[illegible]an aggression."

Concerning the eventu[illegible] victory, he said "it is possible that six months hence the enemy will have been beaten."

"This is the moment for France to take her place among the other great powers," he told the assemblage of notables, and as he again emphasized the necessity of unity he looked squarely at the leader of the National Resistance council.

Kept Faith in France

"I have never lost faith in the citizens of Paris.

"During the hard years when you were under the yoke of the Boche and we had the Blitz—which was the lesser of the two evils—during all these years I have always had a feeling of unity with the people of Paris.

But For The Channel

"We, also, if there had not been the Channel would have been hard put to it to face 2,000 tanks without the necessary cannon.

"I am sure that if they had a possibility of fighting on equal terms Frenchmen again would have shown those qualities which have given them an immortal place in history.

"I said four years ago when addressing you from London that France would resume its place with great powers of the world.

"I personally did everything I could to see that General Leclerc's division got to France. Today that greatest part of France is liberated and big battles are engaged.

"I understand very well how much you want to take greatest possible part in these battles.

Cannot Promise Long War

"It is necessary that you should have help as soon as possible from the Allies—your soldiers in Italy proved their skill and dealt hard blows to the Germans.

"Of course, I cannot promise a long war. It is possible that within six months the enemy will be beaten and that the possibility to have many modern divisions ready will have gone—but we shall do our best to see to it that French forces are engaged against the Germans in the months that remain of this frightful war."

Recalling tragic events in France in 1940 he declared "I always had the certitude that France would retake her place among the nations of the world and exert her influence on its economic, social and political developments."

Fresh from morning-long conferences with DeGaulle and other French Leaders at the Quai D' Orsay, the French foreign office, he said he never had lost faith in the French army, which had had to fight on unequal terms in 1940.

The entire membership of the committee of liberation, their best heavily braided uniforms or wearing blue and red sashes—colors of the city of Paris—awaited the Prime Minister and his party in the resplendent reception room, while thousands outside strained at police lines.

Andre Tollet, chairman of the Paris Liberation committee, presented the Prime Minister with a German swastika flag captured by the FFI from police headquarters during the insurrection last August.

Change Of[illegible]s In Spa[illegible]roposed

Paris, Nov. 12 (AP)—Talks aimed at modification of the policies of Gen. Francisco Franco's regime to avert a renewal of the Spanish Civil War were proposed today by Miguel Maura, Spanish Republican representative, to Jose Antonio San Groniz, Spanish Ambassador to Rome now visiting in Paris.

The proposal was supported by all Republican groups, Maura said, with the exception of the Communist party, which up to now has withheld its sanction.

Maura said San Groniz had received the proposal and had undertaken to pass it on to Madrid authorities. There it is likely to be received coldly because the Republican ideas were premised on the removal of Franco.

BRITISH CROSS NUOVO CANAL

Small Bridgehead Formed Against Strong Resistance

Heinzerling

Rome, Nov. 12 (AP)—Troops of the British Eighth Army have established a small bridgehead across the Nuovo Canal, running north from Forli, against strong German resistance, Allied headquarters announced today.

Farther north, about six miles southwest of Ravenna, other Eighth Army units moved into Gambellara, headquarters said.

Along the Fifth Army front in north central Italy American troops made slight gains, but activity mainly was confined to patrol operations. Patrols also were active along the Adriatic sector.

Heavy Fight At Crossroads

German outposts east of the Nuovo Canal and north of Forli were being cleaned out methodically, but mines were retarding progress there of British troops. Heavy fighting took place at a crossroads just west of Forli. The Germans were supported by six-barreled mortars and considerable artillery but finally were repulsed.

Bridging of the Nuovo Canal was made at the southern end just north of Forli under heavy shellfire.

Headquarters said Italian patriots cooperated with the Eighth Army during the capture of the town and in the subsequent mopping up.

The German air force made its strongest appearance of weeks in an 11-plane attack near Loiano. Two of the planes were downed by anti-aircraft fire and two others probably destroyed.

Nazis in Women's Dress Plant Italian Ambush

By The Associated Press.

ROME, Nov. 12—The Germans pulled a new stunt in the fighting near the Ronco River in northern Italy yesterday.

An Eighth Army scout car went forward to question what seemed to be a group of women civilians.

As it approached a bazooka opened fire from a near-by house and hit the car.

The "women" ran into the house from which the fire came. They were German soldiers wearing dresses.

92 IN MEDICAL CORPS GET AIR MEDAL IN ROME

Heinzerling

ROME, Nov. 12 (AP)—Forty-four flight nurses and forty-eight flight surgeon technicians of the 802d and 807th Medical Evacuation Squadrons, who have helped in aerial evacuation of 170,000 sick and wounded from forward areas since March, 1943, received air medals today from Maj. Gen. John K. Cannon, commander of the Twelfth Air Force.

They were cited for "meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight; for professional skill and devotion to duty displayed by each crew member in evacuating sick and wounded from the combat zone, which have reflected high credit upon the military service of the United States."

MISS CORNELL HONORED

Gen. Clark Presents Plaque for Entertaining in Italy

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY, in Italy, Nov. 12 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the United States Fifth Army, today awarded to Katharine Cornell a Fifth Army plaque for outstanding service in recognition of the work of the cast of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

The citation said performances of the play had been attended by thousands of troops and had "contributed materially to the enhancement of morale."

Brian Aherne, Hollywood film star, was a member of the cast.

SWEDEN PROTESTS GERMAN ORDER ON BALTIC SHIPPING

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 12—(AP) Germany's declaration that most of the Baltic and the Gulf of Bothnia was a war zone, in which all shipping would be attacked without warning, placed Sweden today closer to armed conflict than at any time in her five years of neutrality.

Despite Sweden's immediate and sharply-worded protest placing responsibility for all untoward incidents on the Germans, authoritative sources took the view the government would adopt a cautious policy and bend every effort to safeguard the nation's neutrality.

There were suggestions in informed quarters that the Germans themselves did not want to antagonize the Swedes, whose Navy is strong enough to demand considerable respect.

On the other hand, the newspaper Dagens Nyheter declared editorially that the German measure, "which evidently was taken in desperation in this eleventh hour of the war, will not deter the Swedish Navy from guarding its own ships outside territorial waters."

(The German news agency DNB declared today that shortly after the proclamation of a war zone a Finnish transport was sunk by the German Air force.)

The proclaimed war zone left all Sweden's east coast free of danger to about the middle of the Gulf of Bothnia. The proscribed area includes Finland's Aaland island, which lies closer to Sweden than to Finland.

All waters west of the Swedish island of Gotland are excluded from the danger area. This was interpreted as evidence of a German desire not to disrupt Swedish traffic between the island and the mainland.

But the immediate effect was to halt both Sweden and Finnish traffic between the two countries and leave in doubt whether proposed travel from Stockholm to Leningrad in Russia would begin as planned in the immediate future.

Most informed Swedes took the view the proclamation was aimed directly at starving out Finland, but naval opinion was that a major objective was to prepare for a Russian move against Germany's North Baltic shores.

The Swedish naval staff announced today that the question of convoying ships to Finland depended upon developments and that for the present food would be carried only in Finnish vessels. The Swedish passenger line from Stockholm to Turku was halted, at least temporarily.

Sevenska Dagbladet suggested a Russian-Finnish convoy system might be adopted, while the Morgontidningen declared that "it is hoped the Swedish government will do all possible in the face of the German blockade to fulfill its promise to Finland."

The naval opinion that Germany may fear a Baltic invasion cited a Moscow declaration that landing operations on "the Normandy scale" could be expected now that most Baltic states were cleared of Germans.

The German fleet still is considered dominant in the Baltic with at least two pocket battleships, three or more light cruisers and numerous submarines and destroyers. The Russians are believed to have one old battleship and numerous small cruisers, destroyers and submarines.

Soviet Press Pleased Over Tehran Shakeup

Moscow, Nov. 12 (AP)—Pravda, the official Communist newspaper, pointing to economic benefits it said the Iranians would derive from proposed Soviet oil concessions, expressed "great satisfaction" today over the ouster last week of Premier Mohamed Saed of Iran.

"In Soviet public circles the announcement of Saed's resignation was accepted with great satisfaction and we hope the new Iranian Government will include persons who will honestly and conscientiously fulfill the obligations Iran assumed by treaty with the Soviet Union and will support it with neighborly and friendly relations," the editorial said.

"Such a policy will fully meet the hopes, interests and wishes of the Iranian people."

Pravda and all other Soviet newspapers today printed a Tass dispatch from Tehran saying the Iranian press and demanded that Saed "be brought to trial" for arresting organizers of a celebration November 7 in honor of the 27th anniversary of the Soviet Revolution.

BRITISH TROOPS ADVANCE IN BURMA

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 12—(AP) British troops, pushing southward in north Burma toward Naba junction on the main Myitkyina-Rangoon railway, have advanced another mile against stubborn Japanese resistance, an Allied communique reported today.

The British now are eight miles from Naba junction, where the railway turns west to India and then south to Mandalay. Two other columns of Chinese forces are moving south to clear a land route through Burma to China, but the communique today gave no report of their progress.

Planes of the Allied Eastern Air command yesterday damaged rolling stock, river steamers and road transport in central Burma and northern Thailand and destroyed one enemy plane and damaged another off the Arakan coast.

(The Tokyo radio in a broadcast recorded by the FCC today said Japanese planes attacked three enemy warships near the island of Cheduba off the Burma coast and seriously damaged one.)

SULTAN TAKES COMMAND

Stilwell's Successor Says Aims of Troops Remain the Same

NEW DELHI, India, Nov. 12 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Daniel I. Sultan took command of Chinese armies in Burma officially today, succeeding Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, under direct deputization from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Now under General Sultan as commander of the northern combat area are the Chinese First Army, the Chinese Sixth Army, the British Thirty-Sixth Division and what General Sultan described at a press conference at the Burma front as a "considerable force" of Americans who soon will be ready to assist in the Allies' southward drive.

General Sultan said the aim of American forces in the India-Burma theatre was unchanged. It is to defeat the Japanese in North Burma, to open a road and deliver fullest assistance to Chinese forces in China.

WIND TOSSES SUPERFORTS

Rivets Pop From Big Planes In Hurricane Over Omura

J. Grover

A 20th Bomber Base, China, Nov. 11 (AP—Delayed)—Superfortresses raided the Omura aircraft center in the Japanese homeland today in the teeth of a hurricane so violent that the big bombers were stood on their wing tips and some of the attacking force was shunted off for blows at Nanking on the Chinese mainland.

Tremendous winds over Omura on the island of Kyushu tossed the giant planes about like feathers and so severe was the stress that rivets popped, Major Donald Roberts, Los Angeles, reported.

Seven Missions In 27 Days

Stepping up their strategic bombing of Japan, the Superfortresses completed their seventh mission in 27 days.

A sizable force took off with Omura as the primary target. The mission was designed to destroy all structures left standing after the successful raid on October 25.

After the take-off the weather picture suddenly became ominous and a radio message ordered the Japan-bound formations to strike the freight yards and docks of Nanking. About half the formation never heard the order and flew on to Omura, bombing by instruments.

Capt. Raymond M. Moore, Detroit, said much of the outbound trip was "through icing conditions, the worst ever saw" and "crewmen in the rear of the plane were batted around like tennis balls and all got air sick."

Moore also reported that rivets popped in considerable number from the leading edge of the plane, but the sturdy planes weathered the storm.

Weather cleared near Nanking, and bomber crews on that run said the port and railyards were heavily damaged, with several ships at the riverside docks left flaming.

See New Jap Fighter

Although fighter opposition was weak, a few crews reported seeing a new type of twin-engined Japanese fighter which was very fast.

These made numerous passes but were driven off. Anti-aircraft fire was reported meager and inaccurate.

Since October 14 the superbombers have been out an average of every four days, leaving smoking ruins at Okayama, Heito and Einansho on Formosa, Omura, Rangoon in Burma and the Malayan base of Singapore.

Superfort Crews In Scroll Praise O'Brien Troupe Show

J. Grover

A United States B-29 Base in West China, Nov. 11 (AP—Delayed)—The Hollywood—GI feud is over so far as American superbomber jockeys are concerned.

The enlisted men of the 20th Bomber Command—among the bitterest critics of previous troupes accused of listless performances and avoiding non-coms—have prepared a testimonial scroll of appreciation after a USO troupe headed by the film star, Pat O'Brien came, showed and conquered.

Call Bouquets Deserved

"That gang nearly knocked themselves out trying to put on a real show," said one Winnetka (Ill.) crewman who helped draw up the testimonial. "When a bunch of regulars such as these appear, they deserve bouquets just as those who fouled up got knocks."

O'Brien's troupe included Jinx Falkenberg, starlet and a former model; Ruthie Carroll, singer; Betsy Yeaton, dancer; Jimmy Dodd, singer and guitarist, and Harry Brown, the troupe manager and pianist. Brown is the father of Lieut. Tom Brown, former Hollywood actor now serving overseas.

O'Brien's troupe put on shows punctuated by the sound of gunfire from the Kweilin front before the group's arrival at this base. They carried out their full schedule at advanced Superfortresses bases despite a knee injury suffered by O'Brien while playing softball at Kunming.

Freezing Weather No Bar

Freezing weather, which made it a picnic for scantily clad girl dancers in their outdoor performances, also proved no hindrance. Excerpts from the scroll presented to O'Brien said: "Now we have seen both sides—the good and the bad. We hollered when it was bad. It is fine to give credit where credit is due and it is overdue to Pat O'Brien, Jinx Falkenberg and their troupe. They did not expect the impossible—a Roxy stage, cozy theater and soft lights.

"This was a theater in the real sense, without the fixings, but for true entertainment. You people at home should know the cheer and good will this troupe brought from home to us here in China."

WANG CHING-WEI, TOKYO PUPPET, DIES

Japanese Emperor and High Officials Issue Tributes to Head of Nanking Group

LONDON, Nov. 12 (AP)—Wang Ching-wei, 62, President and Premier of the Japanese-sponsored puppet Government of China at Nanking, died Friday in a Japanese hospital of diabetes, the Tokyo radio announced today.

His death was announced by Japan's Premier, Kuniaki Koiso, the broadcast said. Wang had been in Japan since March for medical treatment.

[The Tokyo radio, in an English-language broadcast to America, quoted a medical report as saying that Wang had suffered from "spinal cord compression" and that death had resulted from "physical exhaustion," according to the Federal Communications Commission. Domei, Japanese news agency according to a broadcast, reported that Wang's body had arrived in Nanking from Japan and that plans were being made for a state funeral.]

The Tokyo announcement said that at a special meeting of the Nanking Central Political Council Chen Kung-po, former President of the Legislative Council of the Nanking Government, had been named acting President to succeed Wang. The broadcast said Chen also would take over the premiership and the chairmanship of the military council.

[Acting President Chen is a Cantonese. After receiving his university education in China he studied at Columbia University, where he received an M. A. degree in economics. He held several high posts in the Chinese Government until he joined Wang's movement.]

The victim of several assassination attempts, one in 1935 and another in 1939, Wang at one time was high in the Central Government of China before deserting to the Japanese, who made him ruler of the puppet Nanking Government in 1939. He served as President of the Executive Committee in 1932 and was Foreign Minister in Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's government from 1933 to 1935.

Along with Chiang Kai-shek, he was a protégé of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, founder of modern China, and after the death of Dr. Sun in 1925 he was a member of a triumvirate, including General Chiang and Hu Han-min, which continued to lead the revolution. His desertion to the Japanese produced one of the biggest crises of the war for General Chiang.

Tributes to Wang by Japanese leaders, including Emperor Hirohito, were broadcast over the Tokyo radio. The Emperor, Tokyo said, had conferred posthumously on Wang the Collar of the Chrysanthemum, Japan's highest award to the head of a foreign state.

Prince Konoye, former Japanese Premier, also paid tribute, the broadcast said.

Fled to Japanese in 1938

Forty-five years old when he assumed control of the "National Government of China." Wang long had been a rival of Chiang Kai-shek, and twice had been exiled before he fled to the Japanese lines in 1938.

He entered the stormy Chinese political sea at 15, when he participated in an attempt to bomb a prince of the Manchu dynasty. He was jailed until the fall of the empire permitted his release, and then went to France and to the Tokyo Law College to complete his education.

After the death of Dr. Sun in 1925, he became one of the triumvirate that was to carry on the revolution, with Chiang as military chief and Hu Han-min as principal administrator. When the "China Incident" began in July, 1937, with the shooting at the Marco Polo Bridge near Peiping, he became deputy leader under Chiang.

Strongly supporting the war at the beginning, Wang had changed his opinions by December, 1938. Issuing a call for peace, he fled when the generalissimo's government branded him a traitor. The Japanese made him head of the Nanking government in March, 1940, in the absence of diplomatic representatives of any country except Japan, but with a loan of $60,000,000 to set up his administration.

In November of that year a treaty between the "National Government" and Japan settled their relationship. Japan was to raise and train a Chinese Army under Japanese officers. China, as represented by Wang, promised the "suppression of anti-Japanese activities," which included the dispatch of an expeditionary force against the generalissimo, and participation in the fight against communism, the pretext for the establishment of permanent Japanese garrisons.

Recognized by Axis Powers

This regularization of the relationship brought the Nanking regime the recognition of the Axis powers, an event which, characteristically, was announced in Tokyo rather than in China, on July 2, 1941. Germany and Italy sent representatives to Nanking and their action was paralleled by their satellite nations.

Wang received 300,000,000 yen and the technical surrender of all "administrative rights in the concessions that Japan owns in China" and, after Japan entered the second World War, declared war on Great Britain and the United States on Jan. 9, 1943—a few days behind Manchukuo and Thailand.

Theoretically Wang's Nanking government controlled the greater part of China. Included in his territory were the entire coastline, 90 per cent of the railroads, the bulk of the population, and the land that produced 78 per cent of the cotton and 75 per cent of the livestock.

Actually, Japanese armies occupied much of this ground. Guerrilla Chinese fighters ruled the rest and cut up the communications. Wang's writ ran no farther than Japanese infantrymen could march.

Wang, it was reported, became a millionaire after the Mitsui and Mitsubishi corporations of Japan appointed him a vice president for their "development" enterprises in China. The Chinese retorted by bombing his newspaper, The Central China Daily News, and his Shanghai bank, and his home in Nanking was surrounded by a twenty-five-foot concrete wall and an electrified barbed-wire fence picked out by searchlights.

As Secretary of State Hull remarked when he publicly refused recognition of the Nanking regime in 1940, the Chungking Government apparently "had and still has the allegiance and support of the great majority of the Chinese people."

KWEILIN RADIO SILENT 2 DAYS

Chinese High Command Intimates City Is Lost

NOV 13 1944

Chungking, Nov. 12 (AP)—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in a speech here today declared: "Victory is in sight."

"We believe that after this war there will emerge an effective guarantee for international peace and security and means will be found for economic cooperation and mutual help among nations," he said.

Chungking, Nov. 12 (AP) — The Chinese high command admitted tonight that radio contact with Kweilin had been broken since Friday and that the Japanese were engaged in brisk fighting in the suburbs of Liuchow—both prime objectives of an enemy South China offensive.

[The Japanese claimed the capture of both these Kwangsi province cities Friday. Liuchow is 95 miles southwest of Kweilin.]

[A Domei war correspondent claimed Japanese forces advancing from Kweilin and Liuchow have sealed off 20,000 Chinese troops in a sector southwest of Liuchow and are inflicting "annihilative" blows upon them.]

The high command also acknowledged another Japanese success in the campaign to drive American air power from South China, the loss of Liucheng, 19 miles northwest of Liuchow on the railway to Kweichow province, one of the main lines of supply into Liuchow.

Enemy Forces Near Junction

Japanese forces which drove into Kwangsi province from the north appeared on the verge of a junction with those which invaded from Kwantung province on the east.

Such a junction would assure the Japanese of an all-land road from Hongkong to Manchuria.

Liuchow was in peril of encirclement as the Japanese who overran Liucheng struck southwestward toward a union with other forces from the east which seized Laipin, 45 miles south of Liuchow, and sped on 20 miles north.

Japs Reach Chienkiang

Another Japanese column driving west reached the outskirts of Chienkiang, 55 miles southwest of Liuchow on the highway leading to the old provincial capital of Yungning (Nanning). This column was being engaged hotly, the high command said.

Before the communications with Kweilin were broken, violent street fighting was in progress, with the Chinese reporting they inflicted numerous casualties on the enemy.

A communique from the headquarters of Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, chief of staff to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, said that Liberator bombers of the 14th Air Force sank a Japanese destroyer and a small freighter in the South China Sea Friday night.

Communists. They were broken off Oct. 2 after four months of discussion without agreement on even the slightest details.

The arrival of General Chou more than offsets the departure last week for Yenan of Lin Tsohan, chairman of the Communist administration, who had headed the delegation in talks with the Government.

Issues Before Negotiators

Subjects of the Chinese Central Government's negotiations with the Communists presumably have included some plan to give the Communists representation in the Government, removal of the Chiang blockade around the Communist areas in North China and related subjects.

At the time of the recall of Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell as American military commander in the China-Burma-India theatre, an Associated Press dispatch from New Delhi, India, said American Government representatives had expressed disappointment over failure of the Chinese Government to come to an agreement with the Communists so that they and the Central Government could be brought into a united front against the Japanese. Reorganization of the Chinese Government was urged.

Recognition of the accomplishments of Commander Curtis and his salvage crews came at the end of three years of work in waters from Amchitka to Sydney, in which 250,000 tons of shipping, worth an estimated $500,000,000, has been salvaged for the Navy.

Halsey Cautions U. S. On Japanese Peace Bid

By The Associated Press.

ABOARD UNITED STATES THIRD FLEET FLAGSHIP, in the Western Pacfic, Nov. 10 (Delayed)—Admiral Willaim F. Halsey, declarng, "I expect a Japanese peace feeler at any tme," sad today the Unted States should be prepared to reject inistiantly any Japanese proposal for a compromise truce.

He told a news conference that "the high-up monkeymen know the handwriting is on the wall. It is most important now that they do not weaken back home, because there must not be a compromise peace."

The Third Fleet commander said the strongest pressure for peace would come from big Japanese industrialists seeking to save their factories and other properties from destruction by American bombs and bullets.

opened their big guns on Iwo after "about 20" Liberators bombed the island in a daylight raid. The broadcast report was unconfirmed by Allied sources.

Over City For Four Hours

The air attack on Shanghai, second consecutive assault on that China port to be announced by enemy broadcasts, without Allied confirmation, was reported by the Nazi, Transocean agency in an English-language transmission to Asia.

It said that "for four hours Allied aircraft hovered over the city dropping bombs on the suburbs" and termed this the longest aerial assault of the Pacific war.

The German dispatch said "low-hanging clouds" made the bombing inaccurate and claimed anti-aircraft fire "prevented the raiders from approaching all strategical points."

Japanese broadcasts reported, again without confirmation, that B-29's raided Shanghai Saturday. Washington has announced Superfort raids that day on Nanking and Omura, Kyushu Island.

CLOSE OF AIR TALKS SEEN

Technicians May Have Gone As Far As Possible

Chicago, Nov. 12 (AP)—It was strongly indicated tonight that the International Civil Aviation Conference would not adopt finally the details of a technical convention for standardizing air flying practices but instead would recommend immediate and continuing study of the United States draft.

This step was proposed to the full technical committee by the steering committee, which comprises the sub-committee chairmen, even though there had been reported full agreement on about four fifths of the details.

Details To Be Studied

The adoption of the resolution may be interpreted as an indication that the technicians have gone about as far as they can go at this time, and that the remaining details must be submitted to the interested countries for study during the next six months. After that time the annexes either could be considered at another general conference or could be acted upon individually by the various countries.

The adoption of the resolution by the steering committee came as the chairman of the three leading participants in the conference—Adolf A. Berle, Jr., of the United States; Lord Swinton, of the United Kingdom, and H. J. Symington, of Canada—met for an hours-long conference, the purpose of which could not be learned immediately.

Considerable Progress

The resolution said that considerable progress had been made, "but the time has been too limited, and the number of personnel able to participate directly too small, to permit carrying the discussions to final conviction of the adequacy or correctness of certain of the determinations here to be made."

Despite the proposal to avoid commitment on final details, the conference still may reach an agreement to accept the annexes some time after May 1, 1945, the date set by the resolution for submitting recommendations for changes to the interested governments or the interim council.

Resolution Proposed

The resolution proposed that the conference be asked to accept the work of committee upon the basis that the present drafts be accepted for study and as constituting "models of the desirable scope and arrangement of the several annexes," and that pending formal adoption of the annexes the standards set out in them be accepted as "recommended practices toward which the national practices of the several States should be directed as far and as rapidly as ... ves practicable."

It proposed furth... hat when an interim council ... established it immediately employ... experts in the fields of science, ... which the draft annexes relate, to study and analyze them.

Meanwhile, questions concerning traffic by foreign air lines between two points within a country and the right of foreign aircraft to make technical stops were sent to the drafting committee to be written along the lines of the United States and Canadian proposals.

Chou En-lai, Communist, Is in Chungking; Hopes of Accord With Chiang Are Revived

CHUNGKING, China, Nov. 12 (AP)—Fresh but still dim hopes of an eventual compromise between the Government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and the Chinese Communists flickered in Chungking today with the unexpected return of Gen. Chou En-lai, who formerly was stationed here as representative of the Communists.

The general arrived on Friday from Yenan, Communist administrative center in North China. His return was unexpected because he recently gave interviewers in Yenan the impression that he believed it would be useless to resume talks.

It is believed his arrival presages the resumption of negotiations between the Government and the American Warships Bombard Iwo Island

San Francisco, Nov. 12 (AP)—An "undisclosed number" of American warships bombarded Iwo Island, about 750 miles south of Tokyo, for the fourth time in the Pacific war Saturday night and Allied aircraft blasted Shanghai the next day in the "longest air attack" of the conflict, enemy broadcasts reported today.

The Japanese Domei news agency said the American warships

TRADE RIVALRIES SEEN DEVELOPING BETWEEN ALLIES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12—(AP) A fierce commercial rivalry is beginning to develop among the Allies. Unless kept in bounds it could grow into economic war that would nullify military and political plans for preserving peace.

This is the interpretation placed by American political and economic authorities on several current incidents, ranging from the Anglo-American-Soviet competition for Iranian oil to negotiations over next year's British Lend-Lease requirements.

Trade Battles Expected

The commercial conflicts setting in as the European war moves toward its close are generally considered by officials here to be inevitable. The fear is that they may coincide with a wave of nationalism, resulting in tariff barriers, import and export quota controls and finally economic war between government-controlled economies.

The problem is among the toughest awaiting discussion by President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin.

"I'm afraid," one official said, "that a lot of people have been just waiting for the big final international conference to produce a ready-made utopia. It isn't going to happen that way. The end of the war is certain to bring a reversion to nationalism.

"That could express itself most violently in trade rivalries and in attempts to develop self-sufficient national economics in many countries. To prevent that in the interest of international cooperation will be an enormous job."

The Allied countries have made a start toward prevention in setting up an international oil agreement, proposing various other agreements at such meetings as the current aviation conference at Chicago and providing for an economic and social council in the proposed world peace organization.

Meanwhile here are some of the conflicting economic conditions and developments:

The United States government has laid down a basic policy of free world trade. It is opposed to special preferential agreements among a few countries and to preferences systems such as that of the British empire.

The British are undecided. Their empire finances are virtually bankrupt, as they may soon tell the world officially in a "White Paper." It is understood that within the British government is a controversy over economic collaboration versus a "lone hand" policy.

Russia remains an enigma. Some officials here regard the USSR as a Foreign Trade nation. Others predict the Russians will export only enough good and raw materials to import machines and skill they need for rebuilding their domestic economy.

The Russian policy question mark is written most clearly in Iran. A British company has an oil concession there and an American group was negotiating for one when the Russians stepped in with their usual hard-handed diplomacy. The Iran government wouldn't submit to the Russian demands and called off the American negotiations. Finally it had to resign. In 1919 the Russians gave up a similar concession, renouncing economic imperialism. There is some belief here they may be getting back in the game again now.

British Denounce Report

The British denounced, until finally American officials denied it, a report that United States business men were operating in Army officers' uniforms in Paris immediately after its liberation.

American business men long have alleged British use of American Lend-Lease supplies for their own commercial benefit and the British have denied it.

British producing officials and American Lend-Lease experts have been estimating their 1945 requirements for months. All have denied any British intention to reexport Lend-Lease goods in commercial channels.

Yet the British have told the American government quite frankly that they intend to build up their export trade to the limit when the European war ends. They point out that American interests will be doing the same thing.

British officials say their basic position is that the United States must go along with Britain on economic measures to build up the nation—else Britain will go under and this country lose its oldest ally in the European area.

The British would like to have some kind of Lend-Lease for the specific purpose of helping rebuild their country.

They insist that unless the United States helps them build and develop a free trade in a free world economy they will be compelled to switch over to some form of a state-controlled economy in the course of a ruthless fight for markets.

FDR WILL RETAIN PRESENT CABINET, CAPITAL BELIEVES

Vinson Expected to Succeed Byrnes as Head of War Mobilization.

CONGRESS RETURNING

Legislators Resume Sessions Tomorrow with 85 'Lame Duck' Members.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—(AP) President Roosevelt apparently plans to carry the old cabinet into his fourth term but is expected to name Fred M. Vinson as the new "assistant President."

Vinson, present director of the Office of Economic Stabilization, would succeed James F. Byrnes, now running the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion on an interim basis.

Byrnes has indicated he would prefer not to have the post for the regular two-year term Congress provided. The new setup adds the problems of reviving civilian economy to Byrnes' old job as war mobilization director.

Strategically placed sources predict that Vinson's name will go to the Senate shortly after Congress reconvenes Tuesday for confirmation in the new assignment. He is expected to retain his present job too.

As for the cabinet, possible replacement of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins remained a lively topic despite the absence of any indication from the White House that it is even being considered.

However, some reorganization of the administration's management of manpower appears inevitable, under mandate of Congress.

The act of creating the Office of War Mobilization requires that its director initiate a study of the "various executive agencies in the field of manpower"—which seemingly includes the Labor department—and develop a program for "reorganizing and consolidating such agencies to the fullest extent possible."

Hull to Stay

A rumor that Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who has been ill, was ready to leave the cabinet was quelled by Mr. Roosevelt's offhand remark last week that the Secretary was expected back soon.

Byrnes has been Mr. Roosevelt's policy-steerer and conflict-settler among the emergency war and demobilization agencies.

It is understood, however, that the new "assistant President" will not take over the Byrnes' offices in the White House but will occupy space in a downtown office where members of Byrnes' staff—notably Bernard Baruch and John M. Hancock—performed their official chores.

Mr. Roosevelt is expected to send to the Senate also appointments of at least two of the three members of the Surplus Property Board created by Congress to succeed William L. Clayton's Surplus War Property Administration.

The names of Sam H. Husbands, president of the Defense Plant corporation, and Lieut. Col. Joseph P. Woodlock, executive assistant to Clayton, have been mentioned. Clayton is leaving in the belief the new surplus disposal machinery is "unworkable."

These two members would be sufficient to start the board operating as a legal entity, but Mr. Roosevelt may round it out with simultaneous appointment of its third member. He said Friday he was ready with two names but was waiting to hear from the third. In the last few days the name of James Shepherd, Los Angeles attorney, has entered the speculation.

Appointment of Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans administrator, as director of retraining and re-employment—a post he now holds under executive order—was accepted as a foregone conclusion.

Many "Lame Ducks" in Congress

The immediate fate of a heavy legislative program may rest with 85 "lame ducks" who won't be back in Congress next session.

Although they fade out of the national picture next Jan. 3, either through their own volition or the voters' verdict, they will still have a say-so over the problems Congress must tackle when it reconvenes on Tuesday.

There are 76 "lame ducks" in the House and nine in the Senate and they hold on until the 79th Congress, elected last week, takes over next year. The great majority of them were made "lame ducks" by the voters, only 29 holding that status through their own decisions not to seek reelection.

The legislative docket tentatively includes:

Extension of miscellaneous war powers given the President. These powers will cease to be available after Dec. 31 unless renewed.

"Freezing" of the social security tax at its present one per cent rate. Unless halted by Congress—and an effort will be made to do it—the tax automatically rises to two per cent on Jan. 1.

Consideration of bills providing for a postwar highway program involving the expenditure of $1,475,250,000 in Federal funds.

Resurrection of the Federal crop insurance program, funds for which were refused earlier this year.

Disposition of a House-passed flood control and rivers and harbors improvement measure.

Await Pearl Harbor Action

Extension of the statute of limitations governing prosecutions or courts-martial that may result from the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

The Congressional leadership hopes to dispose of that program and head home for Christmas by Dec. 10.

Extension of the President's war powers probably will be a matter of routine, although the executive and some of his agencies are almost certain to face critical debate.

"Freezing" of the social security tax may be difficult to accomplish in view of staunch administration opposition.

Legislation extending the statute of limitations in the Pearl Harbor case may afford some of the "lame ducks" the vehicle for their final blast at the administration.

And there may be a final scrap over a deficiency appropriation bill carrying funds for a dozen or more executive agencies heretofore financed from the President's emergency fund.

SENATE GROUP HITS CARTEL SYSTEM

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 — (AP) A Senate Military sub-committee said today the German aggressors "are already deploying their economic reserves throughout the world in preparation for a third attempt at world domination."

The committee, headed by Senator Kilgore (D.-W. Va.), made this assertion in a formal report on the effect of cartels on national security.

"To crush German imperialism permanently and thus permit a peaceful and democratic Germany to arise, the structure and control of German industry must be so altered that it cannot serve again the purpose of war," the committee asserted, adding:

"This is as fundamental as military occupation and political change. The monopolies and cartels which are the artery of supply in the Nazi system must be broken up within Germany.

"Punishment of 10,000 of the leading imperialist-minded German industrialists will be more effective than punishment of 1,000,000 Nazi underlings who carried out the orders of the conspirators."

Germany's industry must be reorganized to eliminate its aggressive power, the committee suggested.

"A real disarmament program requires not only the dismantling of all direct munitions industries, but also the dismantling and removal to the devastated area of Europe of the primary indirect munitions industries, including the metallurgical and chemical industries."

The report, as transmitted to the full committee, was concurred in by a majority of the sub-committee, Senator Kilgore said.

Members of the sub-committee are Senators Thomas (D.-Utah), Johnson (D.-Colo.), Wallgren (D.-Wash), Murray (D.-Mont), Holman (R.-Ore.), Revercomb (R.-W. Va.) and Wilson (R.-Iowa).

Refining cartels as economic treaties or international trade agreements made by private business concerns "to safeguard profits and investments by eliminating competition," the committee said they should be outlawed as "a necessary first step to clear the way for a new expansionist era in foreign economic relations."

TESTS ARE SOUGHT FOR WAR VETERANS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12—(AP) War veterans should be required to obtain a passing mark in competitive tests before being entitled to preference consideration for government employment, a civil service assembly committee said today.

In a report to the assembly, composed of government personnel administrators in the United States and Canada, the committee also recommended:

Veterans' preference policies should recognize the principle of open competition for public employment on the basis of merit and fitness, and should not serve to exclude unduly the rising generation from opportunity for public employment.

Preference should be confined to examinations for entrance into the service and should not be applied to promotions within the service.

The amount of preference credit for non-disabled veterans should not be more than five credit points on the basis of 100; preference credit for disabled veterans should not be more than 10 credit points on the same basis.

The committee urged that employes on military leave should be reinstated or reemployed in former or similar positions and that they be given all rights and privileges they would have received had they continued in their civil positions, including pay raises, seniority credits and similar benefits.

Ex-Hunter Kills 17 Nazi Soldiers

Washington, Nov. 12 (AP)—Coyote shooting in a peacetime Montana helped Technical Sergeant Henry Schauer win the Medal of Honor in the Italian campaign, the War Department said today.

Schauer, awarded the medal in France last month by Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, Seventh Army commander, killed 17 Germans in 17 hours last May 23. His targets were snipers and machine gunners. The infantryman did his shooting while enemy riflemen, machine gunners and even tanks tried to pick him off.

The army said today that Schauer's friends at home in Scobey, Mont., recalled that he worked on a farm near that town. In his spare time, he tracked and shot coyotes and deer, specializing in knocking them over while they were on the run at varying distances. Schauer used one of the army's Browning automatic rifles for his hunting in Italy.

The infantryman was cited for "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at risk of life and above and beyond the call of duty."

SINCLAIR LEWIS' SON 'KILLED IN ACTION'

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP) Lt. Wells Lewis, 27, son of the novelist Sinclair Lewis and a former wife, Mrs. Grace Hegger Casanova, was killed in action in France Oct. 29, the War department notified his mother today.

A Harvard graduate, he was working on the New Brunswick, N. J., "Home News" when he enlisted in the Army about a year before Pearl Harbor. He was the author of a book, "They Still Say No."

Sinclair Lewis, said by associates to be in Chicago, was not immediately informed of his son's death.

Bulkeley Given Another Medal

New York, Nov. 12 (AP)—Commander John D. Bulkeley, PT boat hero who received the Congressional Medal of Honor for his part in the removal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur from Corregidor when the Philippines fell, has been decorated again.

The Third Naval District announced today he has been awarded the Legion of Merit for participation in the invasion of France. Bulkeley, from June 6 until July 14, commanded motor torpedo boat squadrons operating in the bay of Seine off the new Allied beachhead in Normandy.

Freedom to Gather News Is Called Vital to Peace

Jagger of A.P. Would Give Writers Diplomatic Right

CHICAGO, Nov. 12 (AP).—A news-agency executive and two university professors declared today that world freedom of news gathering and dissemination was essential if future international misunderstanding is to be prevented.

Speaking on the University of Chicago Round Table, Claude Jagger, assistant general manager of The Associated Press, said a free and untrammeled flow of news would prevent ruling cliques from taking control of avenues of information "and implanting prejudices and hates, eventually driving their people to war."

"The only way to overcome international difficulties peacefully is by increased information between nations," he said. "What we are seeking are not special rights for newspaper and radio correspondents, but guaranties of the basic rights of the peoples of all nations to information.

"There should be a definite international agreement on equality of access to news wherever it happens. Kent Cooper, executive director of The Associated Press, has proposed that newspaper correspondents be given diplomatic immunity in foreign countries, without being attached to any diplomatic corps.

"Under that arrangement, the correspondent would be protected against arrest by the police, and if he becomes persona non grata he would be granted the diplomatic courtesies."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—(AP) President Roosevelt apparently plans to carry the old cabinet into his fourth term but is expected to name Fred M. Vinson as the new "assistant President."

Vinson, present director of the Office of Economic Stabilization, would succeed James F. Byrnes, now running the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion on an interim basis.

Byrnes has indicated he would prefer not to have the post for the regular two-year term Congress provided. The new setup adds the problems of reviving civilian economy to Byrnes' old job as war mobilization director.

Strategically placed sources predict that Vinson's name will go to the Senate shortly after Congress reconvenes Tuesday for confirmation in the new assignment. He is expected to retain his present job too.

As for the cabinet, possible replacement of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins remained a lively topic despite the absence of any indication from the White House that it is even being considered.

However, some reorganization of the administration's management of manpower appears inevitable, under mandate of Congress.

The act of creating the Office of War Mobilization requires that its director initiate a study of the "various executive agencies in the field of manpower"—which seemingly includes the Labor department—and develop a program for "reorganizing and consolidating such agencies to the fullest extent possible."

Hull to Stay

A rumor that Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who has been ill, was ready to leave the cabinet was quelled by Mr. Roosevelt's offhand remark last week that the Secretary was expected back soon.

Byrnes has been Mr. Roosevelt's policy-steerer and conflict-settler among the emergency war and demobilization agencies.

It is understood, however, that the new "assistant President" will not take over the Byrnes' offices in the White House but will occupy space in a downtown office where members of Byrnes' staff—notably Bernard Baruch and John M. Hancock—performed their official chores.

Mr. Roosevelt is expected to send to the Senate also appointments of at least two of the three members of the Surplus Property Board created by Congress to succeed William L. Clayton's Surplus War Property Administration.

The names of Sam H. Husbands, president of the Defense Plant corporation, and Lieut. Col. Joseph P. Woodlock, executive assistant to Clayton, have been mentioned. Clayton is leaving in the belief the new surplus disposal machinery is "unworkable."

These two members would be sufficient to start the board operating as a legal entity, but Mr. Roosevelt may round it out with simultaneous appointment of its third member. He said Friday he was ready with two names but was waiting to hear from the third. In the last few days the name of James Shepherd, Los Angeles attorney, has entered the speculation.

Appointment of Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans administrator, as director of retraining and re-employment—a post he now holds under executive order—was accepted as a foregone conclusion.

Many "Lame Ducks" in Congress

The immediate fate of a heavy legislative program may rest with 85 "lame ducks" who won't be back in Congress next session.

Although they fade out of the national picture next Jan. 3, either through their own volition or the voters' verdict, they will still have a say-so over the problems Congress must tackle when it reconvenes on Tuesday.

There are 76 "lame ducks" in the House and nine in the Senate and they hold on until the 79th Congress, elected last week, takes over next year. The great majority of them were made "lame ducks" by the voters, only 29 holding that status through their own decisions not to seek reelection.

The legislative docket tentatively includes:

Extension of miscellaneous war powers given the President. These powers will cease to be available after Dec. 31 unless renewed.

"Freezing" of the social security tax at its present one per cent rate. Unless halted by Congress—and an effort will be made to do it—the tax automatically rises to two per cent on Jan. 1.

Consideration of bills providing for a postwar highway program involving the expenditure of $1,475,250,000 in Federal funds.

Resurrection of the Federal crop insurance program, funds for which were refused earlier this year.

Disposition of a House-passed flood control and rivers and harbors improvement measure.

Await Pearl Harbor Action

Extension of the statute of limitations governing prosecutions or courts-martial that may result from the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

The Congressional leadership hopes to dispose of that program and head home for Christmas by Dec. 10.

Extension of the President's war powers probably will be a matter of routine, although the executive and some of his agencies are almost certain to face critical debate.

"Freezing" of the social security tax may be difficult to accomplish in view of staunch administration opposition.

Legislation extending the statute of limitations in the Pearl Harbor case may afford some of the "lame ducks" the vehicle for their final blast at the administration.

And there may be a final scrap over a deficiency appropriation bill carrying funds for a dozen or more executive agencies heretofore financed from the President's emergency fund.

SENATE GROUP HITS CARTEL SYSTEM

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 — (AP) A Senate Military sub-committee said today the German aggressors "are already deploying their economic reserves throughout the world in preparation for a third attempt at world domination."

The committee, headed by Senator Kilgore (D.-W. Va.), made this assertion in a formal report on the effect of cartels on national security.

"To crush German imperialism permanently and thus permit a peaceful and democratic Germany to arise, the structure and control of German industry must be so altered that it cannot serve again the purpose of war," the committee asserted, adding:

"This is as fundamental as military occupation and political change. The monopolies and cartels which are the artery of supply in the Nazi system must be broken up within Germany.

"Punishment of 10,000 of the leading imperialist-minded German industrialists will be more effective than punishment of 1,000,000 Nazi underlings who carried out the orders of the conspirators."

Germany's industry must be reorganized to eliminate its aggressive power, the committee suggested.

"A real disarmament program requires not only the dismantling of all direct munitions industries, but also the dismantling and removal to the devastated area of Europe of the primary indirect munitions industries, including the metallurgical and chemical industries."

The report, as transmitted to the full committee, was concurred in by a majority of the sub-committee, Senator Kilgore said.

Members of the sub-committee are Senators Thomas (D.-Utah), Johnson (D.-Colo.), Wallgren (D.-Wash), Murray (D.-Mont), Holman (R.-Ore.), Revercomb (R.-W. Va.) and Wilson (R.-Iowa).

Refining cartels as economic treaties or international trade agreements made by private business concerns "to safeguard profits and investments by eliminating competition," the committee said they should be outlawed as "a necessary first step to clear the way for a new expansionist era in foreign economic relations."

TESTS ARE SOUGHT FOR WAR VETERANS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12—(AP) War veterans should be required to obtain a passing mark in competitive tests before being entitled to preference consideration for government employment, a civil service assembly committee said today.

In a report to the assembly, composed of government personnel administrators in the United States and Canada, the committee also recommended:

Veterans' preference policies should recognize the principle of open competition for public employment on the basis of merit and fitness, and should not serve to exclude unduly the rising generation from opportunity for public employment.

Preference should be confined to examinations for entrance into the service and should not be applied to promotions within the service.

The amount of preference credit for non-disabled veterans should not be more than five credit points on the basis of 100; preference credit for disabled veterans should not be more than 10 credit points on the same basis.

The committee urged that employes on military leave should be reinstated or reemployed in former or similar positions and that they be given all rights and privileges they would have received had they continued in their civil positions, including pay raises, seniority credits and similar benefits.

Ex-Hunter Kills 17 Nazi Soldiers

Washington, Nov. 12 (AP)—Coyote shooting in a peacetime Montana helped Technical Sergeant Henry Schauer win the Medal of Honor in the Italian campaign, the War Department said today.

Schauer, awarded the medal in France last month by Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, Seventh Army commander, killed 17 Germans in 17 hours last May 23. His targets were snipers and machine gunners. The infantryman did his shooting while enemy riflemen, machine gunners and even tanks tried to pick him off.

The army said today that Schauer's friends at home in Scobey, Mont., recalled that he worked on a farm near that town. In his spare time, he tracked and shot coyotes and deer, specializing in knocking them over while they were on the run at varying distances. Schauer used one of the army's Browning automatic rifles for his hunting in Italy.

The infantryman was cited for "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at risk of life and above and beyond the call of duty."

SINCLAIR LEWIS' SON 'KILLED IN ACTION'

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP) Lt. Wells Lewis, 27, son of the novelist Sinclair Lewis and a former wife, Mrs. Grace Hegger Casanova, was killed in action in France Oct. 29, the War department notified his mother today.

A Harvard graduate, he was working on the New Brunswick, N. J., "Home News" when he enlisted in the Army about a year before Pearl Harbor. He was the author of a book, "They Still Say No."

Sinclair Lewis, said by associates to be in Chicago, was not immediately informed of his son's death.

Bulkeley Given Another Medal

New York, Nov. 12 (AP)—Commander John D. Bulkeley, PT boat hero who received the Congressional Medal of Honor for his part in the removal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur from Corregidor when the Philippines fell, has been decorated again.

The Third Naval District announced today he has been awarded the Legion of Merit for participation in the invasion of France. Bulkeley, from June 6 until July 14, commanded motor torpedo boat squadrons operating in the bay of Seine off the new Allied beachhead in Normandy.

Freedom to Gather News Is Called Vital to Peace

Jagger of A.P. Would Give Writers Diplomatic Right

CHICAGO, Nov. 12 (AP).—A news-agency executive and two university professors declared today that world freedom of news gathering and dissemination was essential if future international misunderstanding is to be prevented.

Speaking on the University of Chicago Round Table, Claude Jagger, assistant general manager of The Associated Press, said a free and untrammeled flow of news would prevent ruling cliques from taking control of avenues of information "and implanting prejudices and hates, eventually driving their people to war."

"The only way to overcome international difficulties peacefully is by increased information between nations," he said. "What we are seeking are not special rights for newspaper and radio correspondents, but guaranties of the basic rights of the peoples of all nations to information.

"There should be a definite international agreement on equality of access to news wherever it happens. Kent Cooper, executive director of The Associated Press, has proposed that newspaper correspondents be given diplomatic immunity in foreign countries, without being attached to any diplomatic corps.

"Under that arrangement, the correspondent would be protected against arrest by the police, and if he becomes persona non grata he would be granted the diplomatic courtesies."

RCA-Victor Makes Records Again

New York, Nov. 12 (AP)—With Vaughn Monroe's Orchestra beating out the hot notes, RCA-Victor resumed recording here today less than 24 hours after James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians (AFL), lifted his 27-month-old ban against the company and two other major recording firms.

An RCA-Victor spokesman said the making of discs would be resumed in Hollywood tomorrow and in Chicago Tuesday.

Petrillo, who a month ago rejected a plea from President Roosevelt to end the ban, announced last night that RCA-Victor, Columbia Recording Corporation and the National Broadcasting Company's transcription division had bowed to the union's demands and signed three year agreements. Decca and several smaller recording firms signed with the union a year ago.

Under the agreements, Petrillo said, the companies will pay the union a royalty on each disc sold, ranging from a ¼ of a cent on a record selling for 35 cents to 2 cents on a record selling for $2. Petrillo estimated the union would realize $4,000,000 annually from the payments.

WHOLE BLOOD FOR WOUNDED

Method Is Developed To Keep Fluid Efficient

San Francisco, Nov. 12 (AP)—Life-saving whole blood will be available to wounded servicemen as far away as Leyte Island 48 hours after being drawn from a donor in San Francisco under a new aero-medical program being inaugurated here this week.

The plan, incorporating the use of a blood preservative, a lightweight portable refrigerator and the speed of mammoth navy transports, was announced by the 12th Naval District today.

Whole blood, as distinguished from plasma, has long been needed in combat areas because while plasma may save a man during the initial shock period, it fails when too great a loss of blood reduces oxygen in the system below a critical point. A major problem in supplying whole blood has been its extremely perishable nature, as it normally loses its value within a week.

75 P. C. Efficiency Retained

A solution has been developed which gives blood 75 per cent. of its normal efficiency 21 days after being drawn from the donor.

This, coupled with the invention of a lightweight refrigerator which weighs only slightly more than the blood it carries, has made it possible to ship the fluid safely over longer distances.

Beginning this week, a regular daily schedule will take the portable refrigerators and their contents from the San Francisco Bay area to Pearl Harbor and from there to island bases farther west. Los Angeles and Oakland will join with San Francisco Red Cross centers in providing the blood.

An army or navy medical officer at an advanced base will be able to radio to the nearest refrigerator bank for added supplies whenever he foresees a shortage.

Only "O" or general type blood is suitable for use in the new program.

Operation of the program is under navy jurisdiction but the navy will work with the army in providing for whole-blood needs.

AIR BOXCARS YEAR ON JOB

U. S.-India Flying Freight Line To Observe Anniversary

Miami, Fla., Nov. 13 (AP)—The Fireball Express, the world's longest, fastest air freight line, prepared to celebrate its first anniversary this week—with business as usual.

Destination will be India, with flag stops in Brazil, the African Gold Coast, Egypt and Aden at the mouth of the Red Sea when the giant flying boxcars operated by the Air Transport Command's ferrying division rise from the runways at the Miami terminus.

Four-star generals and buck privates will sit side by side in the Fireball's bucket seats, as usual.

14,000-Mile Round Trip

Pilots will glance over their ships' stores bound for the GI circuit, a cargo of ammunition or spare parts, or maybe just a load of cabbages and onions tagged for lonely Ascension Island.

In 1943, Lieut. Col. Joseph C. Mackey, commander of the first foreign transport group, was given the job of organizing the 14,000-mile round trip air express route to keep vital war materiel moving between the United States, India and way points.

On Thursday, it will be exactly one year since the Fireball started highballing.

Only Two Casualties

In that time, Fireball crews have flown 7,000,000 miles with only two casualties. No passengers have been injured.

Close to 40,000,000-ton miles of cargo, mail and passengers have been carried.

Crews have chalked up more than 1,200 ocean crossings.

In the past year, the entire Fireball fleet averaged well over ten hours per day aloft.

Combating temperatures that range from bitter cold to 158 degrees Fahrenheit, sandstorm 12,000 feet above the Sahara, and monsoons in India, the winged freight cars delivered the goods—safely—where it was needed the most.

Lieut. Comdr. Edith Lindquist of the Naval Hospital, Chelsea, Mass., and a delegation of nurses from the Brunswick Naval Air Station witnessed the launching.

Mrs. Higbee was the only woman to receive the Navy Cross while still alive. She died in 1941 and is buried in Arlington National Cemetery beside her husband, Lieut. Col. John Henley Higbee of the Marine Corps.

WITH A CAVALRY DIVISION IN WESTERN LEYTE, P.I., NOV.12-((AP)-A JOB REMINISCENT OF THE TORTUOUS HUMAN PACK TRAINS OVER NEW GUINEA'S OWEN STANLEY MOUNTAIN RANGE IS BEING REPEATED ON THIS DIVISION'S MOUNTAINOUS BATTLE FRONT SOUTHWEST OF CARIGARA.

THE ACTION IS OF STRATEGIC IMPORTANCE BECAUSE IT IS THROUGH THE PASSES OF THIS 4,000-FOOT MOUNTAIN SECTOR THAT TROOPS ARE DRIVING SOUTHWARD, TRYING TO BOTTLE UP JAPAN'S POWERFUL REINFORCEMENTS IN THE ORMOC AREA.

IT IS ALSO OUT THROUGH THESE GAPS THAT THE ENEMY WOULD BE EXPECTED TO TRY AN INFILTRATION EXPANSION FROM THE ORMOC POCKET.

SHARING LAURELS WITH FRONT LINE COMBAT TROOPS AS HEROES OF THE ADVANCE ARE DIVISION HEADQUARTERS COMPANY TROOPS AND HUNDREDS OF FILIPINOS WHO ARE CARRYING 45 POUNDS RATION BOXES AND AMMUNITION 6 AND 7 MILES UP BACK-BREAKING HILLS. ALWAYS IT WAS UP, UP, UP.

AND ALWAYS NATIVES ADVISED "JUST ONE MORE KILOMETER."

THE STURDIEST OF THE HUMAN PACKERS CAN MAKE THE GRUELLING TRIP IN 6 HOURS.

I GOT A FIRST HAND VIEW OF THE AREA WITH MAJ.GEN.VERNE D. MUDGE, THE DIVISION COMMANDER, ON A HIKE 6 MILES INTO THE MOUNTAINS.

THE SPIRIT OF THE MEN UP FRONT APPEARED GOOD AS THEY EXCHANGED QUIPS WITH GEN.MUDGE AND EXPRESSED SURPRISE AT SEEING TWO STARS ON A HELMET SO FAR FORWARD.

ABOARD U.S.CARRIER FLAGSHIP OFF LUZON, NOV.6-(DELAYED)-(VIA NAVY RADIO)-(AP)-NAVY FLIERS RAKED OVER EVERY JAPANESE AIR BASE ON

PRELIMINARY

LUZON ISLAND IN STRIKES YESTERDAY AND TODAY, WITH A PRELIMINARY TOTAL OF 639 NIPPONESE PLANES DESTROYED OR DAMAGED, PLUS 154 PROBABLY DESTROYED.

(ADM. CHESTER W. NIMITZ ANNOUNCED IN PEARL HARBOR NOV. 7 THAT 440 AIRCRAFT WERE DESTROYED IN THE TWO-DAY ATTACKS.)

THE ASSAULT WAS AIMED AT KNOCKING OUT JAPANESE BASES, IN DIRECT SUPPORT OF GEN. DOUGLAS MACARTHUR'S LEYTE ISLAND CAMPAIGN.

IN SOME AREAS THE JAPANESE FOUGHT BACK WITH INTENSE ANTIAIRCRAFT FIRE AND SWARMS OF FIGHTER PLANES, WHILE IN OTHER DISTRICTS THE YANK FLIERS HAD THE SKIES TO THEMSELVES.

AT TALOG IN THE NORTHERN END OF LUZON, LT.E.B.TURNER, 26, SPARTANBURG, S.C., STEERED HIS HELLCAT FIGHTER IN 12 SUCCESSIVE PASSES, BLAZING AWAY AT SOME 30 PLANES ON THE GROUND.

PASSES, BLAZING AWAY AT SOME 30 PLANES ON THE GROUND.

"THE JAPS HAD THEIR PLANES AROUND THE TREES, BUT WE WERE SO LOW--100 FEET--THAT WE COULD SEE THEM," SAID TURNER ONE OF THE SQUADRON'S TOP ACES, WITH SEVEN ENEMY PLANES.

"I STRAFED ABOUT SEVEN AND BURNED FOUR DEFINITELY," HE ADDED.

LT. FRED P.JACOBS, JR., 26, OF MEMPHIS, TENN., REPORTED THAT PROBABLY 50 ENEMY AIRCRAFT ATTEMPTED TO BREAK UP THE ATTACK ON MABALACAT AIRFIELD, NORTH OF MANILA, YESTERDAY.

"THEY WEREN'T TOUGH OPPOSITION," HE SAID.

JACOBS' OTHER FIGHTERS ENGAGED THE JAPANESE IN A BIG MELEE AS BOMBERS AND TORPEDO PLANES SCOOTED IN WITH EXPLOSIVES THAT WRECKED INSTALLATIONS AND MANY GROUNDED PLANES.

JACOBS SHOT DOWN TWO NIPPONESE PLANES.

IN A LATER STRIKE ON MABALACAT, ENS. WILLIAM REARDON, 23, OF WARWICK, R.I., SAID THE FIELD WAS STILL FULL OF PLANES, INCLUDING TWIN-ENGINED BOMBERS, BUT THE JAPANESE "DIDN'T SEEM TO BE SHOOTING AT US."

THE HELLDIVERS DROPPED DOWN AND ATTACKED PLANES IN THE REVETMENTS. "NO TWO MEN HIT THE SAME PLANE," SAID REARDON.

BOOKX Q IN

IN THE ATTACK ON CLARK FIELD, LT. (JG) JACK COCHRAN, 23, OF DINUBA, CALIF., TURNED THE GUNS OF HIS TORPEDO PLANE ON A ZEKE AND DROVE HIM OFF OF TWO AMERICAN FIGHTERS.

"THEN HE MADE A RUN ON ME," SAID COCHRAN, WHO RETURNED WITH SEVERAL HOLES IN HIS BOMBER. HIS SEATMEN WERE ARM 2/C RICHARD LYMAN, 20, OF MARCY, N.Y., AND AMN 2/C DONALD USELMAN OF FOND DU LAC, WISC.

NOV 13 1944

BOMBERS WENT DOWN ON MABALACAT TODAY AND ADDED MORE AIRCRAFT TO JAPAN'S MOUNTING SCRAP HEAP.

LT. NEIL J. HAGGERTY OF LOS ANGELES SAW SIX JAPANESE FIGHTERS IN A ROW BURNING. HIS GUNNER, ARM 2/C JOSEPH RAFFERTY, 28, OF YONKERS, N.Y., JOINED IN THE STRAFING.

ARM 2/C GEORGE A.KUTROVAC, 25, OF WHEELING, WEST VA., WAS CREDITED BY HIS PILOT, LT. (JG) LEONARD WISNYI, 24, OF MAYWOOD, N.J., WITH QUICK THINKING IN ACTION WHICH POSSIBLY SAVED

LIVES AND CERTAINLY SAVED A HELLDIVER.

JAPANESE ANTIAIRCRAFT CUT A BIG HOLE IN THE PLANE'S LEFT WING, WHICH STARTED BLAZING. WISNYI CUT OFF THE HYDRAULIC FLUID AND THE FIRE DIED OUT.

THE FIGHTER SQUADRON KNOWN AS THE "HELL'S ANGELES" NOW HAS SEVEN ACES. THOSE WHO HAVE SHOT DOWN FIVE OR MORE PLANES INCLUDE:

LT. (JG) JOHN D. STOKS, 23, CALCASIEU, LA., SIX.

LT. (JG) JOHN J. KENNY, JR., 26, NARBERTH, PA., BAGGED A PAIR YESTERDAY.

AMERICAN TANKS, SUPPORTED BY MORTAR FIRE, PLOWED INTO A POCKET OF RESISTANCE ON THE SOUTH SIDE OF THE RIDGE LATE YESTERDAY AND KILLED ABOUT 100 JAPANESE HOLDING THE AREA, WHICH CONTROLS THE ROAD. FIVE TANKS WERE DAMAGED, BUT MANAGED TO WITHDRAW. ANOTHER HAD TO BE ABANDONED, BUT THE CREW ESCAPED.

HEROIC AND SPECTACULAR WAS THE WORK OF THE TANKS IN YESTERDAY'S ATTACK. THEIR COMMANDER SUFFERED TWO WOUNDS EARLY IN THE FIGHT BUT REMAINED AFOOT IN THE FIELD DIRECTING THE ASSAULT. AFTERWARDS HE INSISTED ON CLIMBING A HILL TO A REGIMENTAL COMMAND POST TO MAKE HIS REPORT IN PERSON. HE WAS THEN TAKEN TO A HOSPITAL.

WE TRIED A SECOND LIBERTY SHIP WITH THE SAME ROUTINE AND THIS TIME FOR 100 PESOS WE GOT A DRINK OF ICE WATER--REALLY COLD.

ON A THIRD LIBERTY SHIP SCHEDLER CHANGED TACTICS AND ASKED FOR A CUP OF COFFEE, AFTER HANDING THE STEWARD 200 PESOS. THE STEWARD FINALLY INVITED US TO A LUNCH OF ROAST BEEF AND JELLO, BUT IT COST US 900 PESOS.

WALKING BACK TO CAMP IN THE HOT SUN, STILL CARRYING 2,900 PESOS, WE FOUND THAT WAVING THE PHONY MONEY IN THE FACE OF A TRUCK DRIVER WASN'T SUFFICIENT INDUCEMENT TO GET A RIDE.

BUT THERE ARE OTHER SUNDAYS AND OTHER LIBERTY SHIPS AND WE STILL HAVE 2,900 PESOS, WHICH WE WILL OFFER FOR TWO DISHES OF ICE CREAM.

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS,PHILIPPINES,NOV.12-(AP)-THE 6,000 HARDY, COURAGEOUS FILIPINO RESIDENTS OF THE LITTLE TOWN OF BASEY ON SAMAR ISLAND, WERE COMING BACK TO THEIR HOMES TODAY TO FIND THE JAPANESE LEFT NO SINGLE STICK OF FURNITURE UNBROKEN. IT WAS THEIR PAYMENT FOR FLEEING FROM JAPANESE CONTROL AND FIGHTING THEM IN BITTER, NO QUARTER GUERRILLA WARFARE.

THE STORY OF BASEY AND SURROUNDING TOWNS WHICH HAVE A TOTAL POPULATION OF ABOUT 31,000, WAS TOLD BY CAPT.SIDNEY C.JENKINS, FORMER PORTLAND OREGONIAN REPORTER, AND CAPT.VIRGIL ASHCRAFT OF NEWARK,OHIO, BOTH MEMBERS OF THE ARMY'S CIVIL ADMINISTRATION UNIT.

"WHEN A FORCE OF 200 JAPS ENTERED THEIR TOWN ON OCT.24, 1943, THE TOWNSPEOPLE QUIETLY PACKED EVERYTHING THEY COULD CARRY ON THEIR BACKS AND SLIPPED AWAY INTO THE MOUNTAINS," JENKINS RELATED.

"THEY DID AN AMAZING THING, THEY MOVED THEIR MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT AND ITS RECORDS INTO THE MOUNTAINS, AND WHILE THE WOMENUND CHILDREN RUSTLED FOOD, ALL ABLE BODIED MEN AND BOYS OVER 12 FOUGHT THE JAPANESE."

WHEN THE AMERICANS CAME THEY BEGAN TO STRAGGLE BACK. THEY HAD GIVEN THEIR MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT INTO THE HANDS OF MAJOR AVIA, SAMAR GUERRILLA CHIEF, AND ON THE FIRST OPPORTUNITY HE RETURNED

IT TO THE PEOPLE.
AFTER MANY HARDSHIPS, THE PEOPLE ARE RECEIVING AMERICAN HELP, PARTICULARLY FOOD AND CLOTHING. SOME OF THE WOMEN HAD ALL BUT ONE DRESS TAKEN FROM THEM BY THE JAPANESE AND OTHERS WERE NUDE. THEY WAITED FOR CLOTHING TO BE SENT THEM BEFORE THEY RETURNED. SOME WERE MADE INSANE BY THE HARDSHIPS.
BUT THE TOWN IS BEGINNING TO RETURN TO NORMAL, AND DEMOCRACY IS AGAIN AT WORK.

NAZI PROPAGANDA MINISTER PAUL JOSEPH GOEBBELS, BOASTING OF A HUGE GERMAN HOME GUARD EQUIPPED AND TRAINED IN THE LAST THREE MONTHS, PROCLAIMED TODAY (SUN) THAT GERMANY IS RESOLVED "TO DEFEND ITSELF HOUSE BY HOUSE AND STREET BY STREET."

HE SAID THAT "ENEMY HAS ADVANCED UP TO OUT FRONTIERS AND BELIEVES HE WILL BE ABLE TO DEFEAT THE REICH WITH HIS MATERIAL AND ALMOST INEXHAUSTIBLE RESERVES."

HE SAID THAT IF "AMERICANS THOUGHT TO WELCOME THEIR SOLDIERS HOME BY CHRISTMAS AND IF THE BRITISH EXPECTED THAT THE SHELLING OF THEIR CAPITAL BY OUR SECRET WEAPONS, WHOSE SERIES HAS NOT YET COME TO AN END, MIGHT BE AVERTED BY VICTORY OVER THE GERMAN PEOPLE, THEY HAVE MADE A MISCALCULATION."

THE TOKYO RADIO CLAIMED LAST NIGHT (SUNDAY) TWO AMERICAN TRANSPORTS WERE SUNK AND SEVEN DAMAGED YESTERDAY (U.S. TIME) DURING A JAPANESE RAID ON LEYTE GULF, OFF THE PHILIPPINES.

THE ATTACK OBVIOUSLY WAS AN EFFORT TO SLOW DOWN AMERICAN TROOPS TRYING FOR A KNOCKOUT PUNCH AGAINST ENEMY FORCES ON THE OPPOSITE SIDE OF LEYTE, BUT SUPPLIED THROUGH THE GULF.

(SPENCER DAVIS, ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR CORRESPONDENT WHO WITNESSED THE ATTACK, SAID IT ALSO WAS IN RETALIATION FOR RECENT DAMAGING AMERICAN RAIDS ON JAPANESE REINFORCEMENT SHIPPING).

RADIO TOKYO, BEAMING ITS BROADCAST TO THE U.S. WHERE IT WAS PICKED UP BY THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION, EMPHASIZED THAT THE RAID WAS BY "SUICIDE SQUADRONS" WHO TRIED TO CRASH EXPLOSIVE-LADEN PLANES INTO AMERICAN VESSELS.

(TOKYO RADIO FAILED TO MENTION THAT AT LEAST FOUR JAPANESE PLANES WERE SHOT DOWN. THEIR DESTRUCTION WAS OBSERVED BY DAVIS. HE SAID ONE AMERICAN SHIP WAS SET ON FIRE AND ANOTHER WAS STRUCK BY A BOMB.)

15 More Towns Enveloped in Gains of One to Three Miles.

NAZIS WITHDRAW GUNS

NOV 14 1944

Rundstedt Asserts Bastion Has Fulfilled Task of Holding Patton.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris Tuesday, Nov. 14. — (AP) American infantry stormed and captured three of the forts surrounding Metz yesterday against scant opposition as a half dozen divisions swinging around the citadel from the southeast drove through the snow to within 15 miles of the German border.

The main prize in the lightning stab was Fort L'Aisne—actually a series of subterranean fortresses joined together on much the same plan as bloody Fort Driant, across the Moselle to the west which the Third recently tried and failed to take.

The other two are somewhat smaller ones, and all three are near Verny, 5 1-2 miles south of Metz, which is one of four towns captured by the Yanks while seizing the forts.

Meet Little Opposition

The operation was described officially as being carried out "practically without a fight," suggesting the Germans pulled out in the face of attack.

Principal opposition came from the guns of another fort, which boomed out in the first intervention of Metz's guns in the battles raging at the city's approaches.

The surprising capture of these outward defenses of Metz came as the Third army plunged ahead all along a 40-mile front south and southeast of Metz, enveloping at least 15 more towns in gains of one to three miles, thereby maintaining the steady pace of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's offensive through the sixth day.

(First intimation that the Germans might not make a last-ditch fight for Metz came in a broadcast from headquarters of Field Marshal Gen. Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt which asserted "Metz has fulfilled its task" in holding back Patton while "front zone fortifications" were deepened.)

Far to the north of the menaced city, the Koenigsmacher bridgehead over the Moselle river was expanded and a German fort in that area was captured.

Withdraw From Metz

It also was disclosed officially that there were signs the Germans were withdrawing from the Metz area, but there still were no reports of actual evacuation of the city itself or of other forts in the defense ring, some of which stand between the city and those which fell yesterday.

Among the towns captured south of Metz were Lichon, Pommerieux, Verny and Corny. Corny is 1 1-2 miles southwest of Metz on the banks of the Moselle almost due east and across the river from Fort Driant.

The Germans offered serious resistance on only one sector of the Third army front.

That was on Patton's right flank, where the 26th infantry division burst through the eastern edge of the Foret de Bridge et de Koecking, only to be pushed back about a mile by German counter-blows launched from the south.

(A front dispatch said this counter-action appeared to be designed to keep the Americans from a ridge in the forest which dominates the enemy base of Dieuze more than 30 miles southeast of Metz).

To the northwest, the Americans across the Nied river reached a point five miles beyond their first bridgehead at Han-Sur-Nied and were within 15 miles of Germany's Saar frontier.

In this drive they cleared the Germans from Thicourt, five miles to the east. Many, four miles east, and from Arraincourt, Holacourt, Lesse and Vatimont in the same general area.

To the southeast and north of Dieuze and threatened the encirclement of Morhange.

back with Mortars, machine guns and light artillery).

Activity on the Holland front was confined to patrolling and artillery fire from both sides. Planes were grounded on all sectors of the Western front by bad weather.

As the American forces driving head-on against Metz reached a point five miles to the south, the big guns of the outer forts opened up for the first time. Patrols operating around Sorbey, seven miles to the southeast, were the first to feel the weight of the forts' fire.

Artillery Supports Infantry

Hard-working American artillery also was dishing it out. Besides supporting the ground advance under the difficult conditions of bad weather, artillerymen were blazing away at every garrison town within range to drive the enemy into the fields where a shortage of tents makes bivouacs difficult for the enemy in the freezing weather.

All day long the Germans hammered away at the base of another salient 26 miles southeast of Metz which, by unofficial reports, had been thrust two miles farther north to near Bermering, 17 miles south of the Saar border.

This action was believed to be designed to keep the Americans from overrunning wooded country through which a ridge lifts its heights dominating Dieuze, important road center. The Doughboys were five miles from Dieuze on both the west and north.

U. S. PINCERS TIGHTENING

Gap Between Two Prongs Cut Down to Eleven Miles—Thionville Entered.

London, Nov. 13 (A. P.).—The American Third Army broke into the fortress ring of Metz today on the sixth day of its offensive toward the Saar, and the Germans said American infantry had penetrated the east-bank part of Thionville, a second stronghold on the Moselle line of defenses in northeastern France.

The Americans captured their first fort in the ring guarding Metz, drove forward one to two miles in the battle to encircle the city from the southeast, and crossed the Moselle at a new point south of Thionville in a maneuver to cut off that stronghold also. Thionville is sixteen miles north of Metz.

Fort Verny, five and one-half miles south of Metz, and four villages, Verny, Pommerieux, Lieh-on and Corny, fell to the Fifth Infantry Division, with the Germans failing to make a serious fight. The towns are six to seven miles south of Metz, now encircled except for an eleven-mile gap to the east.

Metz Front Is Widened.

Fighting through snow, mudfields and fog without air support, the Fifth Division broadened its frontal attack on Metz to five miles, although its capture did not advance the Americans any closer to the fortress city.

The Americans farther south drove through the forest of Bride and Koecking, north of Dieuze, but the Germans, throwing in their strongest attack in this area since the start of the offensive, sent Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's men back a mile. Here an American wedge by-passed

Last Rail Line Menaced.

The new bridgehead across the Moselle below Thionville citadel, where the Germans said fierce fighting was raging for the Thionville citadel inside the town, threatened the Germans' last useful railway out of Metz.

Armored spearheads swinging around Metz from the south advanced on a twenty-mile front seventeen miles south of the Saar border.

One of these wedges by-passed the stronghold of Dieuze on its south flank and fanned out behind the famous world war battle town of Morhange on its north flank. This wedge was reported to have reached Bermering, three miles east of Morhange, where French and Germans fought in one of the first big battles of the first world war, and reached Lidrezing, five miles north of Dieuze, where flood waters loosed by Allied dam bombings protected Gen. Patton's right flank.

To the south the Seventh Army, fighting on a fifteen-mile front east of Rambervillers and Bruyeres, captured villages only a mile west of St. Die in the entrance to a Vosges pass, and but thirty-three miles from the Rhine.

Nazis Seen Pulling Out.

Southeast of Metz the Germans were reported in front line dispatches to be pulling out men and material before Gen. Patton's encircling threat, but they were destroying dams on canals and rivers to the northeast of the city and holding tight.

Front reports said they were pulling guns out of Metz itself, but Supreme Headquarters believed it unlikely a real evacuation was under way.

Only two railways remained to the Germans out of Metz. The southern arm of Gen. Patton's army was within two miles of the lower line running northeast through Boulay to the Saar and close enough to bombard daylight traffic.

The second line running northeast to the Saar apparently was the target of the new thrust across the Moselle south of Thionville, an important fortress town already menaced by American bridgeheads to the north.

The part of Thionville west of the Moselle already was in American hands.

95th Won Crossing.

The 95th Infantry Division won the crossing, and Supreme Headquarters announced that it was being reinforced. The rail and highway town of Metzervisse, five and a half miles east of Uckange, where the crossing was made, apparently was one of the immediate objectives of this drive.

Gen. Patton now has two columns driving eastward north of Metz toward the Saar border. American troops in the first bridgehead over the Moselle in the Koenigmacher area above Thionville turned back a German counter-attack yesterday and the Ninetieth Divison then won back the mile-and-a-half wedge which the enemy had managed to gain with this blow.

Pincers 11 Miles Apart

Third Army tanks and infantry sought to close the 11-mile gap separating the two jaws of a pincers above and below Metz and drive on to the rich Saar basin with its steel and coal.

South of Metz, infantry of the Fifth Division fought through increasingly bitter enemy defenses to the vicinity of Coin-sur-Seille, only five miles below the city.

To the east armor-led spearheads were across the Nied river on a seven-mile front between Sanry-sur-Nied and Herny, 15 miles ahead of the positions they held when the offensive began six days ago.

Forest Cleared Of Nazis

North of Chateau-Salins, other units had cleared the enemy out of the Chateau-Salins forest and entered the villages of Chateau-Brehain, Oron and Dalhain. Northeast of these positions, the Fourth Armored Division had thrust a slender wedge to the vicinity of Rodalbe, north of Dieuze, and had repulsed German attacks from Morhange. There was an unconfirmed report that this division had gone a mile and a half farther north to Bermering, 12 miles northeast of Chateau-Salins.

German resistance southeast of Metz was still spotty and was growing softer. The Germans were putting up a strong defense south of Metz, and north of the fortress city their resistance became more determined.

Germans Admit Setback

The Germans finally admitted the loss of Koenigsmacher itself, but claimed that the Allied bridgehead there was under heavy artillery fire. A Transocean News Agency report said this bridgehead was still small, and added: "The bridge the Americans have built across the Moselle has already been wrecked three times, and the enemy could only bring a few tanks across the river."

On the Seventh Army's front east of Bruyeres in the Vosges foothills, the Allied communique reported small advances, including the capture of the villages of Le Bolle and Les Moitresses, immediately west of St. Die, and of La Chappelle, southeast of Bruyeres.

2 LOST COMPANIES RESCUED IN REICH

U. S. Soldiers Cut Off for 3 Days in Hurtgen Forest.

By DON WHITEHEAD

ZWEIFALL, Germany, Nov. 13.—(AP) Two companies of American soldiers deep in the snow-mantled Hurtgen forest were safe again today after being cut off for three days by Germans who brought up tanks in an effort to wipe them out.

For three days the men held together while ringed by the enemy and beat back every attempt of the Nazis to annihilate the group.

Once the Doughboys fought off tanks with machineguns and bazookas.

Yesterday Lt. Col. Bill Sibert of Hohokus, N. J., led his battalion through the dense pine trees and snow-covered mud and rescued the two lost companies.

This fight was typical of the difficulties faced by the Doughboys in slugging their way through the forest.

The roads are muddy trails which troops must sweat and labor to keep open for supplies. But even jeeps in some places cannot reach the forward troops and every pound of food, water and ammunition must be carried to them by hand. Every wounded man must be carried by hand back through the woods to a point where a vehicle can penetrate the dense growth.

The Yanks have devised ways to keep out the cold and get as much comfort as possible under these adverse circumstances. Some have made small log houses, chinked with mud and covered with sandbags and camouflaged with evergreen boughs. Stoves made of oil tins keep the cabins warm.

Capacity, 2 SS Men

"Capacity, two SS men."

Luxurious Command Post

With American Forces in Germany, Nov. 13 (AP)—A field artillery observation battalion commanded by Lieut. Col. Calvin Dickey, of Bryant, Texas, enjoys one of the classiest command posts east of the Siegfried Line.

It has steam heat, hot showers galore, white, shiny tile walls and even private "bedrooms" for the officers.

"This is the first time we have had a taste of any luxury," Dickey said. "We were just lucky to get a place like this and I guess we'll almost hate to leave it."

Dickey in peacetime was a seismograph expert for the Texas Oil Company at Houston.

The private "bedrooms" formerly were private washrooms but the GI's put doors across the tops of the tubs and placed their portable cots on the doors, converting them into beds.

Paris, Nov. 13 (AP)—The Army newspaper Stars And Stripes in an editorial today declared "there just isn't enough blood being given by the folk back home" for the blood bank in the European theater of operations.

(Ed. Note—Last week Baltimore fell 303 blood units short of its quota.)

Under the editorial headlined "It Takes Blood to Win a War," appeared a picture of British girls donating blood with the caption: "Stack This Against What Medical Headquarters Reports About Blood Shipments from the United States to the ETO."

Far Under Quota

The editorial went on to say that medics have a quota of five pints of blood for every GI in combat and thus far they have been able to store up only two pints for every man in action.

"For the lack of that blood—some suffering GI—many suffering GIs will die," the editorial stated.

Follow Trend Of War

"Strangely enough, blood donations in the States rise when the war news is bad and fall when it gets good," it continued. "But when the war news is good is when the blood is needed, because it takes blood—lots of blood—to make it good."

The editorial concluded: "All honor to these patriotic British girls," adding "American patriots please copy."

Cigarette Lack Spreads To Paris

Paris, Nov. 13 (AP)—The American cigarette shortage has spread to the European war theater. Enlisted men in Paris were informed today they would get no cigarettes this week.

At post exchanges for officers the ration was reduced to five packs a week, which seems low to heavy smokers, but added to the chagrin of soldiers who get none at all.

Cigarette supplies at the front also were low, with soldiers reported cut to two packs weekly in some sectors.

American cigarettes — all diverted from army supplies—still were available on the black market in Paris at $1.50 a pack, and the price was rising. French cigarettes are rationed to civilians at six packs monthly. They sell on the black market many times the legal price of 24 cents a pack.

PRETENDER TO THRONE OF FRANCE ARRESTED

PARIS, Nov. 13 — (AP) The French government today ordered the arrest of the pretender to the throne of France, the Comte de Paris, who was reported wounded at Perpignan after crossing the Spanish frontier into France.

The Interior ministry issued a warrant to all department prefects on two counts—illegal entry into the country and violation of a law against the residence on French soil of the head of a family in exile.

Reports from southern France said the Comte was in hiding after being wounded, but there was no report on the cause of the injury.

Given "Provisional Liberty"

Paris, Nov. 13 (AP)—Sacha Guitry, actor, detained last August by the French Forces of the Interior for questioning on his activities during the German occupation, has been given "provisional liberty," a magistrate's announcement said tonight. Guitry, in failing health, entered a clinic.

Churchill, De Gaulle Agree On Saar Mines

Paris, Nov. 13 (AP)—Agreements for the demilitarization of the Saar—with France in control of the mines, as was done after the last World War—full participation by France in the post-war development of Europe, and the speedy rearmament of the French army, were reached during the week-end conferences between Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Gen. Charles de Gaulle, it was reliably reported tonight.

German radio reports of an Armistice Day attempt to assassinate Churchill and de Gaulle as they were riding along the Champs Elysees were laughed off here as a propaganda attempt to make the German home front believe life in Paris was worse than life in Berlin.

Although almost 1,000,000 persons turned out over the week end and cheered the two leaders, only one isolated case of violence was reported.

Strong Army To Be Equipped

In addition to giving France a seat on the European Advisory Commission, Churchill and de Gaulle were reported agreed that a strong French fighting force should be equipped as quickly as possible and that the French should participate in the military occupation of Germany along with the British, Russians and Americans.

[British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, who accompanied Churchill to Paris, has returned to London, it was announced officially last night.

[Prime Minister Winston Churchill visited French First Army troops on the Vosges front yesterday.]

The exact area to be assigned France in the Reich was reported left to the European Commission to decide. In the first deliberations of this question the commission assigned eastern Germany to Russia, the southern area to the United States and northwestern Germany to Great Britain.

New Military Call Likely

In connection with the occupation of the Reich, French officials were said to have urged speedy rearmament of the republic's troops because, according to unofficial reports, they believed "that an army of occupation cannot be raised at the last moment and it must have shown its moral and technical superiority on the field of battle" before attempting to occupy a defeated nation.

It was generally believed that as soon as equipment was available the de Gaulle Government would issue new calls for military service.

With a veteran victorious army at her disposal, France would be in a position to guarantee her own security and help in maintaining peace in western Europe.

Italy, Spain Problems Go Over

Churchill and de Gaulle were reported to have shelved such specific problems as the Italian Levant question and Spain to concentrate on general principles for common action.

The press, in its first appearance since Churchill departed—there still being no morning newspapers—continued to sound an exultant note.

Liberation Soir said by France's admission to the European Commission "an intolerable injustice is righted" and "France has regained her place among the great powers."

Winston Churchill the assurance that Great Britain desires to see France possessed of a powerful army and united under the government of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Speaking in French before a cheering assemblage yesterday in the Hotel de Ville, Churchill said the Germans might be beaten within the next six months.

"We don't want to prolong the war merely to give your army the opportunities it desires," he added, "but we hope as much of the French army as possible will be able to engage in the final battles."

Safeguard Angle Cited

Churchill visualized a powerful and well-equipped French army as an aid in reestablishing stability in Europe, and a United France as a help in "protecting us from a repetition of German aggression."

He declared that "fortunately you have at this moment at your head an incontestably able chief," adding with a grin that he had had "some slight differences" with him from time to time.

Then he added in great earnestness: "But rally to him so that France remains united, indivisible."

Col. Zemke, American Air Ace, Reported Missing Over Reich

J-KING

A UNITED STATES FIGHTER BASE, England, Nov. 13—(AP) Col. Hubert Zemke, 31-year-old fighter pilot from Missoula, Mont., known as the "fightingest" American pilot commander in Europe, has been missing since Oct. 30, it was announced today.

Fellow pilots saw him go down inside Germany while leading his Lightning-Mustang group on a bomber escort mission. At that time, he was the leading American ace operating on the Western front, credited wth shooting down 19 1-2 Nazi planes and destroying 8 1-2 on the ground.

It was learned today that he had planned to make the Oct. 30 mission his last as he had requested that he be relieved from combat duty on Nov. 1 earlier in his career, he had rejected offers of assignments that would have removed him from active participation in the air war over Europe.

Zemke's fate is not known, but his wing man thinks he may have been the victim of poor flying weather.

"We were flying at about 28,000 feet," said Lt. Richard D. Creighton of Los Angeles, "escorting bombers to Hamburg when Zemke appeared to be having trouble. The weather was very bad.

"I was having trouble about the same time and found myself on my back, hanging by my safety belt. Before I managed to get straightened out, I lost track of him in the clouds."

Zemke had not only destroyed almost every type of German military aircraft including the jet, but had gotten at least one victim with each type of American fighter plane used in this theater, being credited with 25 in a Thunderbolt, two in a Mustang and one in a Lightning.

Three days after Zemke went down his score was passed by Maj. George Preddy, Greensboro, N. C., who ran his total to 29 1-2 in the battle over Merseburg when Eighth air force fighters destroyed 153 Luftwaffe planes.

Zemke shared the jet plane with Lt. Norman R. Benoit, Furnace, Mass., who was his wing man more often than any other pilot.

"When we had finished a fight," Benoit said today, "he always asked me if I was okay and if I had enough gas left. We used to call him the big Z. The name came from the initial that always marked his plane."

Born March 14, 1914, he studied forestry at the University of Montana. His wife, Mrs. Anna Zemke, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benny Zemke, live in Missoula.

When he was graduated from the the University, Zemke enlisted and was commissioned in the airforce in June, 1936. He went on active duty two years later and visited England and Russia as an observer and to demonstrate the Kittyhawk fighter.

After returning from Russia, he always referred to his plane by the Russian name Tovarich (Comrade).

Had ... Aces ...

Zemke had a passi... fighting which caused ... to ... desk jobs. At one time there were 30 aces in a Thunderbolt fighter group he commanded—a group the Nazi radio denounced as "Zemke's murderers."

Among Zemke's more noted proteges were Lieut. Col. Francis S. Gabreski, of Oil City, Pa., who was shot down after destroying 31 Nazi planes and now is a prisoner in Germany; Capt. Bob Johnson, of Lawton, Okla., who was the leading American ace in Europe when he returned to the United States, and Major Walker Mahurin, of Fort Wayne, Ind., first American pilot to bag 20 German planes.

He drove his pilots as hard as he drove himself.

"To let a Hun get away is a criminal offense," he told them. "It's a worse blunder than getting shot up yourself. The only way to shoot down German planes is to get in close and shoot them down."

Slight—he fought as a lightweight at Montana—Zemke looked even younger than his 31 years. He liked to roam around the base and exchange small talk with the enlisted ground crews to keep them peppered up along with the flyers.

Before the United States went to war Col. Zemke was sent to Russia in 1941 to teach Red Army pilots how to fly Tomahawks. The Russians made such an impression on him he called his plane "Moy Tovarich" (My Comrade). After Pearl Harbor he returned to the United States and came to England to lead one of the first American fighter groups here.

Scrappiest Fighter Is Missing

Col. Zemke, Leader of Ace Combat Group, Is Shot Down Inside Germany.

J-KING

A United States Fighter Base, England, Nov. 13 (A. P.).—Col. Hubert Zemke of Missoula, Mont., known as the fightingest American fighter pilot commander in Europe, is missing in action, it was announced today.

The boyish-looking 31-year-old colonel, who turned down desk jobs and possible promotion to general to keep on flying, was shot down inside Germany on October 30 while leading his Lightning-Mustang fighter group on a bomber escort mission.

Col. Zemke was leading American fighter pilots over here at that time with twenty-eight planes destroyed—twenty-two in the air and six on the ground. Three days later Major George E. Preddy ran his total to 29½—23½ in the air and six on the ground.

His Group Loaded With Aces.

Col. Zemke's men inherited the colonel's fighting spirit. At one time there were thirty aces in a Thunderbolt group he commanded—a group the Germans admittedly feared even when their air force was toughest. Nazi broadcasts denounced the group of "Zemke's murderers."

One of Col. Zemke's top proteges was Lieut.-Col. Francis S. Gabreski of Oil City, Pa., who was shot down after bagging thirty-one German planes, (twenty-eight in the air), and is now a prisoner of war in Germany. Others were Capt. Bob Johnson of Lawton, Okla., who was the leading American ace in Europe when he returned to the United States, and Major Walker Mahurin of Fort Wayne, Ind., first American fighter pilot to get twenty planes, who was forced to bail out over German-occupied France before the invasion, but who escaped.

For Col. Zemke, one of the first American aces in the European theater, being shot down was the only way to keep him on the ground. Flying and fighting were his passion. He was a member of the American Army Air Corps in peacetime, and he loved a good scrap—ever since he was a Golden Gloves champion at the University of Montana.

A Cardinal Sin.

"To let a Hun get away is a criminal offense," he often said. "It's a worse blunder than getting shot up yourself. The only way to shoot down German planes is to get in close and shoot them down."

Nazi Battleship Tirpitz Is Sunk By Bombers in Norwegian Port

EDMSON

LONDON, Nov. 13. — (AP) The 41,000-ton German battleship Tirpitz, last "unsinkable" giant in Adolf Hitler's fugitive navy, capsized and sank yesterday morning in the icy Norwegian waters of Tromso Fjord when hit squarely by three six-ton earthquake bombs dropped by RAF Lancasters, the British announced tonight.

Attacking out of the Arctic mists it took the British only a few minutes to finish off this great potential killer which never had engaged in a single surface battle, and which the Germans were five years in building at a cost of $50,000,000.

British Lose One Bomber

The cost to the British was one bomber, out of an attacking force of 29, an Air ministry communique said.

Three bombs landed on the deck of the Tirpitz, which blew up inside, keeled over, and sank slowly, ending a three-year chase by the British and Russians.

The Lancasters struck at 10:30 a. m. from a height of 5,000 feet, and 15 minutes later the ship burst into flames and turned over. Reconnaissance showed the ship had capsized, with 700 feet of her keel sticking out of the water. Around the wreck was a great oil pool.

Sister-Ship of Bismarck

The sister-ship of the ill-fated Bismarck went to her grave just a few days after reports from neutral countries had speculated on an imminent invasion of Norway by the Allies.

The Tirpitz, already crippled by previous air and midget submarine assaults, had been a threat to the Arctic supply lines to Russia, and a potential menace to any landing in Norway. She had kept some units of the British home fleet watching her moves for a long time.

Obviously these vessels were freed by the sinking and possibly would be available for the battle in the Far East much earlier than if the Tirpitz had remained afloat. The German navy, already a skeleton, now has its backbone snapped.

The successful mission of the big bombers, carrying the new streamlined, armor-piercing 12,000-pound earthquake bombs, was led by Wing Commander J. B. Tait and Squadron Leader A. G. Williams, taking off from Britain on the historic flight the planes "landed away from base," presumably in Russia.

Get 3 Direct Hits

Roaring in before the Germans could throw up their usual protective smoke screen, the Lancasters caught the battlewagon in an explosive vise and the three direct hits were registered in quick succession.

"Her guns had been firing like blazes when we first arrived," said an Australian pilot, Flight Lt. B. A. Buckham of Sydney. "The guns stopped after the first bomb. Not a shot came up after that. Smoke began to pour up. It spiralled first in a column. Then it spread out over the ship in the shape of a mushroom.

"Afterwards there were several explosions. One of them was very big and one of my crew shouted out over the inter-com, 'she's on fire, skipper. She's on fire.'

"The fire did not seem to last very long, not more than two or three minutes—I should say. It was difficult to see exactly what was happening."

"The ship was already on its side when we came off our run," his tail gunner said.

Only Keel Shows

After capsizing, the Tirpitz settled on the bottom of the shallow fjord. Only the keel and some parts of the bottom can be seen above water.

To the British Air ministry went the honor of announcing the inglorious end of the Tirpitz, named after the famed Grand Admiral Alfred Von Tirpitz whose unrestricted submarine warfare advocacy carried the United States into the First World War.

The Tirpitz, one of the most powerful warships in the world, had been hounded and attacked persistently, but the British navy was never able to bring her to battle. She bristled with eight 15-inch guns in two turrets, also had 12 six-inch and 16 four-inch guns, carried four planes, and a normal crew of 1,600 men.

The German's only other ship of this class, the Bismarck, was sunk by the Royal Navy on May 27, 1941, following a 1,700-mile chase after the Bismarck had sunk the British battle cruiser Hood between Greenland and Iceland.

Two other ships of the Tirpitz class were under construction when the war started, but they never were completed. The Germans originally believed the Bismarck and Tirpitz were "unsinkable."

Christened in April 1, 1939

The Tirpitz was christened April 1, 1939, when Adolf Hitler, standing behind bullet-proof glass, delivered another of his derisive political speeches in the months just before ordering his troops into Poland. The ship was not completed, however, until 1941. Its keel had been laid in 1936.

Admiral Adolf Von Trotha in his christening speech at the time, termed the 791-by-118 foot ship "a messenger of peace."

Much of the Tirpitz' life was spent in repair docks and in hiding. She was not ready for action until just after the Bismarck was sunk, and made only two operational sorties of consequence.

She led the shelling of Tallinn, Estonia, in the Gulf of Finland in August, 1941, and on Sept. 9, 1943, in company with the now-dead Scharnhorst and a screening force of destroyers she raided Spitzbergen.

TIRPITZ SUNK, LAST BIG SHIP OF NAZI NAVY

R. A. F. Bombers Finally Get German Battleship in Tromso Fjord.

SCORE SEVERAL DIRECT HITS

Frequently Battered Sister Ship of the Bismarck Capsizes and Goes Down.

London, Nov. 13 (A. P.).—It was announced officially tonight that the 41,000-ton German battleship Tirpitz had been sunk.

The Air Ministry declared that the Tirpitz, the German Navy's last big ship, was sent down yesterday morning by Lancaster bombers of the Royal Air Force that attacked her in Tromso Fjord along the north coast of Norway. It was the eighth time that R. A. F. bombers had attacked her. They scored direct hits yesterday with 12,000-pound bombs.

The communique follows in full:

"The Tirpitz has been sunk. Yesterday morning twenty-nine Lancasters of R. A. F. Bomber Command, led by Wing Commander J. B. Tait, D. S. O., D. F. C., and Squadron Leader A. G. Williams, attacked the German battleship Tirpitz with 12,000-pound bombs. There were several direct hits and within a few minutes the ship capsized and sank.

"One of our aircraft is missing."

Hitler Called Her Unsinkable.

For much of her career the Tirpitz had been laid up for repairs from numerous Allied attacks. Her sister ship, the Bismarck, was sunk in May, 1941, in a battle with the British Navy and planes after a chase on the North Atlantic. Her tonnage had been variously estimated at more than 35,000 tons. The latest edition of Jane's Fighting Ships gives the figure as 41,000.

Hounded persistently, the Tirpitz had been bombed and torpedoed in at least eight separate actions since her launching on April 1, 1939, when Adolf Hitler declared she was unsinkable. Bristling with eight fifteen-inch guns in two turrets, twelve six-inch and sixteen four-inch guns, she had been so closely watched by the British Navy, however, that she long had been reduced to a nuisance rather than a threat. For three years she had led a hide-and-seek existence among the Norwegian fjords and shelters, only occasionally daring to venture on a cruise along the convoy routes to Russia.

Attacked by Midget Subs.

Her biggest action was in August, 1941, when she tried out her guns in the shelling of Tallinn in the Gulf of Finland.

Three months later the Russians caught her in Danzig harbor and bombed her, and that was the start of the chase. It is believed that she never came closer than 200 or 300 miles to attacking an Allied convoy on any of her ventures into the open sea. Each time she would be spotted far in advance, Allied planes would straddle her with bombs and she would limp back to an anchorage and hiding place.

One of the most daring actions against her was that carried out by a unit of British midget submarines in September, 1943. These two-man submarines penetrated fifty miles of mine fields and planted torpedoes in her hull after getting inside her protective anti-submarine nets.

Last April she was subjected to the largest carrier plane force ever concentrated against a single vessel in the European phase of the war. Forty-two dive bombers ripped her with fourteen direct hits. Four months later, after 800 repair men had worked on her, seventy more dive-bombers swarmed down on her in the Alten Fjord.

Last September R. A. F. Lancasters flew 1,750 miles from a Russian base near Archangel and aimed six-ton earthquake bombs at her. Last month, to escape the threat of Russian armies moving across northern Norway, she was moved to Tromso.

FORRESTAL HAILS SINKING OF TIRPITZ

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—(AP) Navy Secretary Forrestal said today the sinking of the German battleship Tirpitz removed "a definite threat to Allied operations in the North Atlantic."

Forrestal, referring to the Tirpitz as the last major fighting unit in the Nazi fleet, declared in a statement that "the British Navy is to be congratulated for its dogged perseverance which led to the destruction of the German's largest warship."

RUSSIANS STRIKE IN FLANKING MOVE AGAINST BUDAPEST

Soviet Forces Break Into Communications Center of Jaszapati.

SEIZE 10 MORE TOWNS

Germans Resist Savagely With Tanks and Flame Throwers.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 14—(AP) The Second Ukrainian army of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky swept northward along two railways yesterday in an outflanking move against Budapest, capturing the terminal of Jaszapati and, said a German announcement, breaking into the important communications center of Jaszybereny, 37 miles east of the Hungarian capital.

Associated Press Correspondent Daniel De Luce reported from Moscow that Jaszbereny was under siege from three sides and that the southern column of Malinovsky's forces apparently had made a solid junction with another column striking from the northeast after crossing the upper Tisza.

Nazis Resist Fiercely

The Germans were resisting savagely with tanks and flame throwers, but the Russians seized at least ten towns during the day in a drive which carried 13 miles in its deepest penetration.

German commentators, asserting the fighting on the Hungarian capital's flank had reached new fury with both sides throwing in reinforcements, said the Russians were attempting to encircle Budapest, with Red army troops in Czechoslovakia likely to join Malinovsky's forces in a vast maneuver.

The official broadcast German communique said Soviet troops had penetrated into Jaszbereney, 28 miles southwest of Fuzesabony, a junction of the Budapest-Miskolc railway, but claimed the attackers had been thrown back.

Moscow did not mention Jaszbereny in its broadcast communique, but announced the capture of the suburb of Jasztelek, five miles southeast. It was probable, therefore, that forward units already were battling inside Jaszbereny, a city of more than 30,000 population, from which highways and railways radiate in several directions.

Meanwhile, Marshal Tito announced in a communique that his Yugoslav partisan forces had broken into Skoplje on the railway escape route for German forces fleeing from Greece toward the homeland.

The bulletin said the outer defenses of the city had been overcome and the Yugoslavs, capturing a bridge across the Varda river, broke into the heart of the city where heavy fighting was in progress.

It was not clear whether any Germans remained south of Skoplje, a city of 65,000, which lies 120 miles northwest of Salonika and about 200 miles southeast of Belgrade. But control of the city would block through rail traffic from the south.

Reds Gain Six Miles

The early morning supplement to the Russian communique said the Soviet advance around Budapest's eastern flank had swept six miles northwest of Cegled during yesterday and that more than 1,000 prisoners had been taken in the fighting in Hungary.

The objective of both the southern and eastern wings of Malinovsky's army appeared to be Hatvan, a big rail center 14 miles northeast of Jaszbereny and 27 miles of Budapest. From Hatvan a rail line extends northward through the mountains to Czechoslovakia, 34 miles beyond.

Jaszapati, biggest of the prizes won today by the Russians, is 11 miles due east of Jaszbereny and 45 miles east of Budapest.

Among the other places captured were Jaszkiser, five miles southeast and five small towns spread along a 20 mile front north of Cegled. These places—Benye, Pand, Tapio-Bicske, Kava and Tapio-Szt-Marton—all were taken in the northward sweep toward Jaszbereny and Hatvan and marked out the Russians' obvious intention of sweeping around the flank of Budapest before striking directly at the capital.

Taken In Northward Sweep

Among the other places captured were Jaszkiser, five miles southeast, and five small towns spread along a 20 mile front north of Cegled. These places — Benye, Pand, Tapio-Bicske, Kava and Tapio-Szt-Marton—all were taken in the northward sweep toward Jaszbereny and Hatvan and marked out the Russians' obvious intention of sweeping around the flank of Budapest before striking directly at the capital.

A German broadcaster, Col. Ernst von Hammer, said the Russians were fighting in Vecses, five miles southeast of Budapest, but Moscow made no mention of this. He also said Soviet forces held a bridgehead on the Danube at Dunaharaszti, opposite Csepel Island, five miles south of the capital.

The Berlin radio reported lively Soviet reconnaissance in East Prussia and said new concentrations of Russian armor had been observed. Increased pressure by the Russians in southern Latvia likewise was reported.

Reds Increase Pressure On Budapest

London, Nov. 13 (AP)—The Red army, already in the southern outskirts of Budapest, increased its pressure on the besieged Danube river capital today with the capture of Monor, 14 miles to the southeast, and the seizure of enemy positions within 30 miles to the east.

A broadcast Moscow communique announced the fall of Monor, which meant the Russians had swept the Germans from nearly all of the 50-mile Budapest-Szolnok trunk railway.

Farmos Is Captured

In the push from the east the Soviet troops fanned out from captured Ujszasz, a junction on the secondary Budapest-Szolnok railway, drove 11 miles through Tapiogyorgye and Tapioszele and captured Farmos, 30 miles from Budapest, the communique disclosed.

Dispatches from Moscow said today that furious counterattacks by German and Hungarian troops failed to dislodge Soviet spearheads from their positions in the southern suburbs of Budapest.

Yugoslavs Storm Skoplje

Meanwhile, a communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters said his troops were storming Skoplje, a city of 65,000 in southern Yugoslavia on the Belgrade-Athens railway, and an important German position protecting the southern corridor through which some of the 100,000 enemy troops threatened with entrapment have been fleeing from the southern Balkans.

Both Berlin broadcasts and the Tito bulletin asserted that large numbers of Russian troops were surging across the Danube near Apatin, in northern Yugoslavia, moving westward to flank the Hungarian capital and also to head off the German retreat from the south.

The Russians announced that they killed 800 enemy troops and seized Mezokovesd, 65 miles northeast of Budapest. Mezokovesd is a strategic road town on the railway to Miskolc, and with its capture the Red army gained firm control of a 25-mile section of that main Axis artery connecting the German armies around Budapest with those defending eastern Slovakia.

A Soviet column that pushed northwest of Ujszasz captured the rail station of Boldoghaza in a six-mile march along the railway to Jaszbereny, the last major Axis bastion guarding Budapest from the east.

The Germans and Hungarians were meeting heavy losses in that area, the Russian bulletin said, with one Soviet unit killing 600 Germans. A total of 700 enemy troops were captured during the day and 30 localities seized, the bulletin added.

Goebbels Asserts Hitler Is In "Excellent Health"

London, Nov. 13 (AP) — Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels swung into a campaign today to persuade the world that silent, secluded Adolf Hitler is in "excellent, vigorous health," and not a ghost upon whose prestige Heinrich Himmler is trading as the real master of Germany.

Despite these protestations, the mystery appeared deeper than ever and the subject of increasing speculation within as well as outside the Reich.

There were increasing signs Himmler had taken over as No. 1—possibly even militarily.

Himmler Signs Army Orders

The Moscow radio said orders given German officers in East Prussia to "fight to the last man" were signed by Himmler.

The Berlin radio spokesman, Dr. Rudolf Semmler, said Himmler, in broadcasting Hitler's proclamation yesterday, acted as the Fuehrer's closest collaborator. Semmler claimed the words were Hitler's, but he said the German people "will follow their leaders"—using the plural.

German news agencies—solely for export and not in their home services — declared that the fact Himmler, and not Hitler, broadcast the proclamation issued yesterday under Hitler's name "was in no way proof" of widespread reports that Hitler was incapacitated or dead.

German People Perplexed

But the perplexed German people could know only that, in their gravest hour, their Fuehrer had forsaken them visibly and audibly. They had only the explanation that he was "too busy at headquarters, working unremittingly to bring a turn in our fortunes" to appear in public or make broadcasts.

That there were perplexities, doubts and fears in Germany was reported by Moscow radio. Quoting advices from "inside Germany," Moscow said "fantastic rumors about Hitler" were spreading. . . .

Under Four Doctors, Latest Rumor

That again yesterday—on the delayed celebration of the November 9 Munich beer cellar Putsch anniversary—the Nazis resorted to a "Hitler proclamation" read by Himmler lent conviction to suspicions in well-informed quarters here that Hitler is out and Himmler is in the saddle. It was widely suspected that the proclamation was ghost-written.

The latest report on Hitler's condition, coming from a generally reliable source, was that he was last week under the care of four doctors, including Professor Horster, an outstanding brain specialist, who treated Field Marshal Erwin Rommel before he died. The other doctors were named as Professor Morell, Hitler's permanent medical adviser; Dr. Zabel, attending physician regularly attached to his staff, and Professor Suerbruch, famed German surgeon who was known as anti-Nazi and thus would have been called in only for dire necessity.

London Hears Fuehrer Was Under Care of Four Doctors Last Week.

London, Nov. 13 (A. P.).—A report was received in London today from a person whose information usually is reliable that Adolf Hitler was under the care of four doctors last week and that his strange proclamation of yesterday commemorating the Munich beer cellar putsch may have been written by somebody else.

The doctors were named as Prof. Morrell, Hitler's permanent medical adviser; Dr. Zabel, the attending physician regularly attached to his staff; Prof. Horster, an outstanding brain specialist who treated Field Marshal Erwin Rommel before he died, and Prof. Sauerbruch, one of Germany's most prominent surgeons.

Prof. Sauerbruch operated on Hitler about eight years ago for what he called a non-malignant growth in the Fuehrer's throat. A person close to German affairs said Prof. Sauerbruch at one time, and possibly even today, was known among his intimates as strongly anti-Nazi. He expressed surprise that the surgeon had been called in.

Points Out Discrepancies.

The same source said he had spotted six passages in Hitler's "fight to the death" proclamation yesterday that had been taken from the Fuehrer's book, "Mein Kampf" and others that clearly came from some of his old speeches. He expressed belief the proclamation had been written by some one other than the man who gave the excuse that he was "too busy" to come to the microphone.

The proclamation yesterday was read by Heinrich Himmler, Gestapo chief.

Meanwhile the German overseas radio service, Transocean, which is beamed for strictly German consumption, said today: "In reply to rumors circulating abroad, authoritative circles in Berlin state that the Fuehrer is in excellent health."

Transocean argued that his failure to read yesterday's proclamation was not proof of illness, since "Hitler has never read proclamations himself." The proclamation, it claimed, "gave orders in his own vigorous manner."

Official British spokesmen, who have always been cautious about commenting on Hitler rumors in the past, asserted flatly, that the proclamation had a "phony ring." The most widely accepted belief here was that the proclamation—which carried the solemn overtones of a last-ditch appeal—was written by Himmler and Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels to curb rumors within Germany of Hitler's serious illness or death.

The German people have not heard a broadcast by Hitler since July 21, when a voice purporting to be his spoke over the radio to announce that a plot against his life on the preceding day had been thwarted.

Yesterday's manifesto, sounding every appeal to steel the German will, was a feature of the postponed celebration of the Munich beer hall putsch of November 8, 1923, and the mass swearing in of men in the German Home Guard. The Berlin radio called it a "day of national rising."

Fortunes Not So Good.

Making use of the first person, the manifesto reiterated the Nazi bugbears on the menace of "international Jewry" and "Bolshevist barbarisms," and declared: "If in these times I speak seldom or little to the German people, this is due to my being at work in order to fulfill the tasks intrusted to me, and which must be fulfilled in order to turn our fortunes."

Those fortunes, the proclamation tacitly admitted, had not been good for the Germans "since the Russian armies broke through the Romanian front on the Don in November, 1942, since the subsequent disintegration of the Italian and Hungarian formations, with all the severe consequences involved for our strategy. . .

The proclamation appealed strongly for fanatic Nazi loyalty to Hitler, and while promising that Germany would triumph despite every obstacle declared: "We must be willing to sacrifice life in order to preserve life. Whoever attempts to sow doubts among others, whoever lifts a sword or throws a bomb against Germany, will be mercilessly and ruthlessly destroyed."

Japs Their Greatest Ally.

The proclamation was devoid of references to any German military offensive, but rather placed fervent emphasis on "fanatical spirit of resistance." It praised Japan as "our greatest ally" and said that that country "has viewed the struggle from its first day as what it really is—a decisive clash in which existence itself is at stake."

In other exercises in Germany yesterday, Goebbels and other Nazi leaders held up the harakiri fanaticism of the Japanese as an example for Germans as they sought virtually to pledge Germany to national suicide. After first transmitting the explanation that Hitler was too busy to appear(DNB, the German official news agency, said that a recording by Hitler of the proclamation would be broadcast. Signals were changed again, however, and Himmler—himself a busy man who recently has come rapidly forward as Germany's strong man—broadcast it from Munich.

The putsch celebration, the Berlin radio said, had been delayed from November 8 until yesterday in order not to interfere on a week day with Germany's total mobilization. Goebbels, in his speech to the Volkssturm, said the home guard was prepared to send "up to twenty divisions to the front, if necessary, and that Germany would be defended "house to house and street to street."

E [illegible] BLOC FORMIN[illegible]

Britain, France, Belgium And Holland As Sentinels

London, Nov. 13 (AP)—Responsible quarters in London tonight reported progress toward a program for creation of a western European bloc composed of Britain, France, Belgium and Holland to take over sentinel duty against German aggression after the post-victory occupation period.

[Editor's Note—In a dispatch in The Sun last Saturday, Philip W Whitcomb, Sunpapers staff correspondent in France, described this bloc, or "Western Union," as a combine of the British Empire France, Belgium, Norway and perhaps Denmark, Sweden, Spain and Portugal, which would rank with the Pan-American Union and the Soviet Union as a third sphere of world influence.]

The plan has reached the point of diplomatic discussions among representatives of the four countries, these sources said, and the long-range aspects probably will be laid before Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Marshal Stalin at their imminent conference, to determine if such alliances could operate within the framework of the future world security organization.

Churchill and Gen. Charles de Gaulle probably discussed the program's workability during their Paris conference, it was said.

Similar Combine On East

These same sources expressed belief that a similar combine would be formed in the East, with Russia at its head, and with Czechoslovakia and eventually Poland as partners in guarding against a rebirth of German militarism.

The London Times said the idea of a western European bloc would fall directly within the category of "regional arrangements or agencies" for maintenance of peace and security foreseen in the Dumbarton Oaks plan and "its application is indeed necessary beyond the strictly military sphere."

Supporters of the western plan, basing their conclusions on experiences after the last war, contend popular sentiment will prevent keeping large occupation armies in Germany for long periods, even though the need of policing the country continues.

As a reult, they express belief that occupation forces eventually will be reduced to an Allied air force, requiring far fewer men but possessing easy maneuverability for suprevision of a wide area, while responsibilty for checking any future German uprising on land would fall on German's immediate neighbors.

France To Keep Large Army

As a part of this plan of a western bloc, France would maintain a strong army—already advocated publicly by Churchill—Britain would keep a powerful fleet and air force, and Belgium and Holland would waive their former attitude of neutrality to provide air bases near Germany's borders.

This, after the Allied forces have been withdrawn entirely from Germany, would give the western alliance a combination able to act quickly in concert by sea, land and air.

British ideas of a western bloc have been frankly aired in the British press, although the signing of any agreements undoubtedly would await the end of the war and creation of the larger world security organization.

General De Gaule has mentioned prospects of "a western union" based chiefly, but not exclusively, on economic collaboration.

Belgium Would Join In Reich Occupation

London, Nov. 13 (AP)—Belgium has asked the Allied powers formally for permission to participate in the occupation of Germany, Paul-Henri Spaak, Belgium Minister for Foreign Affairs, announced tonight.

Spaak, speaking at a press conference before his return to Brussels, said one of the prime matters discussed with the British here had been the feasibility of "immediately equipping a Belgian army so that it can participate in the occupation of Germany next spring."

"If an international control is placed over the Ruhr and Rhineland" Spaak said, " we naturally would want to participate. It is a problem of necessity to Belgium."

The other outstanding Belgian problem discussed with British officials Spaak said, concerned the grave food situation in his country.

Non-Nazi Germans Trained For Police Role

London, Nov. 13 (AP)—Ninety non-Nazi Germans are being trained in democracy at a school within occupied Germany to become policemen under military government officials.

The group is being instructed by Capt. John J. Knecht, of Philadelphia, in a school commanded by Capt. Ulrich C. Urton, of Lancaster, Ohio. The men are housed in a stable that has been converted into a neat barracks and eat and sleep there. Their food is from captured German military supplies.

These 90 Germans are the first of many who will be trained, it was stated today. They are being taught English and the laws and proclamations by which Germany will be governed.

60,000 'Awaiting Justice' In Belgium

London, Nov. 13 (AP)—The Belgian news agency said today that about 60,000 persons are being held in prisons and internment camps in Belgium to "await justice."

Forty-five commissions have been appointed to advise the Minister of Justice on the possible release or trial of the prisoners.

Nazis Hit By 638,880 Tons Of U. S. Bombs

London, Nov. 13 (AP)—German industrial and military targets have been blasted with 638,880 tons of explosives through October 31 by American heavy bombers of the Eighth and 15th air forces, the United States Strategic Air Forces in Europe said in a summary of operations yesterday.

Germany itself felt the weight of 330,000 tons.

Since the Eighth Air Force began operations from England in August, 1942, and the 15th from Italy in November, 1943, the fighters and bombers have destroyed 15,210 enemy planes, getting 12,640 in the air and the rest on the ground.

Combined American losses were 5,708 bombers and 2,449 fighters, the report said.

ROBOTS SEEN CURBED

London, Nov. 13 (A. P.).—Allied air attacks on German synthetic oil plants during the past two weeks were believed to have curtailed the production of fuel for flying bombs and V-2 rockets. Large sections of refineries in the Ruhr and elsewhere have been battered.

Each rocket burns an estimated 2,500 gallons of fuel a minute, so that in a five-minute flight from their launching sites they use 12,500 gallons—to deliver between one and two tons of explosive.

Belgian newspapers announced that a belt of Allied anti-aircraft devices has been set up to shoot down flying bnmbs attacking Belgium, the London radio reported today in a broadcast recorded by CBS.

FOE REPORTS PLOT TO KILL CHURCHILL

London, Nov. 13 (A. P.).—An enemy radio station, broadcasting in French, reported today that an unsuccessful attempt had been made on the lives of Prime Minister Churchill and Gen. Charles de Gaulle, head of the Provisional French Government, during the former's visit to Paris. The broadcast, recorded by BBC, was described officially in London as "obviously an enemy propaganda story" and "a complete bogus."

The attempt, the enemy radio said, was made by a number of armed individuals when Mr. Churchill and Gen. De Gaulle were riding down the Champs Elysees together. The police succeeded in arresting thirty men, the station added.

The broadcast originated from a new station known as Henri-Robert, which is believed here to be located not too far from Berlin. Little is known about it so far, however, except that it broadcasts in French and comes in clearly.

LEHMAN IN LONDON

London, Nov. 13 (A. P.).—Herbert Lehman, director general of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, arrived in London today in an effort to speed up work of bringing aid to liberated areas of Europe. His first task will be to obtain greater co-ordination with the military forces. The second problem is transportation difficulties.

JERSEYMEN HONORED

London, Nov. 13 (A. P.).—The Bronze Star Medal was awarded recently to Commander William Law McDonald, U. S. N. R., of 1310 79th street, North Bergen, N. J., for his work as commanding officer of two Navy advance amphibious bases in England. Commander McDonald was formerly the North Bergen municipal engineer. His citation said in part:

"In these commands he exercised outstanding professional skill and executive ability, supervising the operations, training, maintenance, logistics support and, at one base, the combat loading of landing ships and craft attached."

Physician Recommends Special Diet For Fathers

London, Nov. 13 (AP)—A well-known London physician suggested today that husbands-to-be should feed on cod-liver oil and orange juice before they get married and start raising families.

In forwarding the suggection to the Ministry of Health, Dr. George De Swiet said Britain could have better babies if men began to attend paternal welfare centers and went on a special diet three months before they married.

"I think men should pay just as much attention as the mothers to the child they hope to have," he told a conference of working women's organizations.

"Stockbreeders pay great attention to the sire of their cattle. We should attend to our fathers."

Swedes and Nazis to End Formal Trade on Jan. 1

Treaty Expires and Renewal Is Held Not Justified

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 13 (AP).—Formal trade relations between Sweden and Germany will end Jan. 1 when their present trade treaty expires, it was learned reliably tonight.

The usual renewal trade talks held annually at this time will not be undertaken, and Sweden has no intention of signing a new agreement, a reliable source said.

"Our trade with Germany now has dwindled to a point where a treaty no longer is necessary," the Swedish informant said. "Whatever business will be done in 1945 will be done without agreement, probably through special export licenses and on a pure conversation basis without credits."

Partially as a result of Allied pressure, Sweden gradually has cut down its exports to Germany until the Nazis can trade only through Sweden's western ports and in a volume which the Swedish say is "very small."

GERMANS MAY QUIT RAVENNA

British Cross Ghiaia Canal, See No Signs Of Enemy

Rome, Nov. 13 (AP)—British Eighth Army troops have crossed the Ghiaia canal, next to the last water obstacle before the German-held port of Ravenna on the Adriatic coast, and there were indications tonight that the Nazis were preparing to evacuate the city.

After crossing the canal, before which they had been stalled for several weeks, the British moved into a thick pine forest only four miles south of Ravenna. Still before Ravenna is the Fiumi Uniti river, less than a mile from the city's southern limits.

Patrols thrusting ahead of the main Allied force reported they saw no sign of German troops. To the southwest, however, the Nazis held firmly to their positions on the north bank of the Ghiaia canal to prevent the Eighth Army from by-passing Ravenna.

Progress Toward Bologna

An Allied communique said Eighth Army forces pushing northwest from the captured road junction of Forli toward Bologna, 38 miles away, had made further progress against "very strong resistance."

While the German withdrawal on the Adriatic was not on a large scale, the giving up of ground on the very approaches to Ravenna might indicate that the Nazis are planning to pull back to a new line behind Ravenna and spare the ancient town.

Ravenna, a city of 30,000, dates back to the first century and was once the capital of the Ostrogoths, who established a kingdom in Italy (403-555).

Alexander To Patriots

General Sir Harold Alexander, Allied ground commander in this theater, frankly stated in a message to Italian Patroits in northern Italy that the battle at the edge of the Po Plain must inevitably slow down because of the cold and mud of winter. He asked the Patroits to cease all large-scale organized activity, but to keep their weapons oiled.

"The winter is upon us, and there are certain constant factors in warfare—of which winter is one—which have the inexorable force of laws from century to century, whatever may be the new inventions at the disposal of a commander," Alexander's spokesman said in a radio message to the Patroits.

"The slowing down of the tempo for regular armies has a parallel in the slowing down in the ancillary activities of Patroits, who are playing their part in the campaign to destroy the Germans and drive them out of Italy."

The spokesman emphasized that the Allies never had more than a 'slight superiority in numbers" in Italy, adding that the terrain in which they are fighting is "the best possible for defense and the worst possible for attack."

Allies Advance In Drive On Ravenna

Rome, Nov. 13 (AP)—Patrols of the Eighth Army, crossing the Ghiaia canal below Ravenna, have moved into a thick pine forest four miles south of the city in an advance of two miles, Allied headquarters announced today.

The advance was made after German troops guarding the southern approaches to the big city on the Adriatic coast withdrew from some of their positions on the canal.

The next and final water obstacle before Ravenna is the Fiumi Uniti—less than a mile from the southern limits. The Fiumi Uniti, or "United Rivers," is formed by the Montone and Ronco which join south of Ravenna.

May Abandon City

Patrols crossing the canal below Ravenna were able to move well forward in the wooded area without making contact with the enemy, it was announced.

The German withdrawal suggested that the Nazis may intend to give up Ravenna.

In the San Stefano area southwest of Ravenna the Germans held to their positions on the north bank of the Ghiaia Canal in order to prevent the Eighth Army from bypassing Ravenna and trapping the German troops there.

Outposts Attacked

A stiff fight developed when Allied units attacked German outposts on the north bank.

The Allied communique said "further progress" has been made northwest of Forli despite "very strong resistance." Elsewhere "there is no change in our forward position," the communique added.

Lie Low, Patriots Told

Meanwhile, General Sir Harold Alexander, pointing out that winter has brought an inevitable slowing down of the Italian campaign ordered Italian Patriots north of the battle line to "lie low" and cease large-scale organized activity.

In a message broadcast from Allied headquarters the Patriots were told to keep their weapons oiled and take advantage of any "targets of opportunity" and continue general sabotage.

Hampered By Terrain

Alexander's spokesman said the Allies never had more than a "slight superiority in numbers" in the Italian campaign, adding that terrain in which they are fighting is "the best possible for defense and the worst possible for attack."

"No less than were Hannibal's elephants, the tanks are hampered by the rain and mud," he said.

Gen. Myers Staff Chief Of U. S. 12th Air Force

Rome, Nov. 13 (AP)—Brig. Gen. Charles T. Myers, of San Antonio, Texas, has been appointed chief of staff for the United States 12th Air Force.

A veteran of 21 years in the army and a graduate of West Point, General Myers has been on training assignments during the most of his army career. Until two months ago he was wing commander of the Central Flying Training Command at Foster Field, Victoria, Texas.

Rome, Nov. 13 (A. P.).—Technician, Third Grade, William H. Rutledge of Arlington, N. J., was among a group of forty-eight flight surgeon technicians who were decorated with the Air Medal yesterday by Major-Gen. John K. Cannon, commander of the Twelfth Air Force.

Forty-four flight nurses as well as the forty-eight technicians of the 802d and 807th Medical Evacuation Squadrons were honored for helping an aerial evacuation of 170,000 sick and wounded from forward areas since March, 1943.

NEYLAND IN CALCUTTA

New Delhi, Nov. 11 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Major-Gen. Gilbert Cheves, 49 years old, who has gone to China to become chief of the Army Service Forces there, built up a reputation for getting things done when he was assigned to the job of increasing the capacity of Calcutta's docks a year ago. Succeeding him as commander of the Army Service Forces in Calcutta is Col. Robert Neyland, former coach of the Tennessee University football team.

AFRICANS SHELLING JAP BASE IN BURMA

Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 13 (A. P.).—The British Imperial forces today converged on two sides of Kalemyo, fifty - five miles inside the Burmese border, and brought that key Japanese supply center under shell fire.

Driving over the Chin Hills into the Kabaw Valley, Indian troops cleared the stockades, two strong points on the road east from Tiddim, and pushed to a point less than ten miles west of Kalemyo. East African troops, driving south down the valley, brought the town under fire of their guns.

In the Irrawaddy Valley, 160 miles to the northeast, Chinese troops advanced to within seven miles of Bhamo in an attack from the northeast. The British Thirty-sixth Division pushed to within seven and a half miles of Naba Junction, sixty miles to the west. Both of these communication points, roughly 165 miles north of Mandalay, were being defended with increasing stiffness.

The British announced that they were now laying mines in enemy water, presumably on Japan's sea route to Burma.

FALL OF LIUCHOW SEEN AS BLOW TO YANK AIR POWER

MACOSA

CHUNGKING, Nov. 13—(AP) The Japanese drive to clear American air power out of southeastern China appeared near completion tonight with the Chinese High command reporting only localized street fighting in Liuchow, former site of the last main U.S. air base in that area.

The city, which the Japanese announced last Friday they had taken, was abandoned by the U.S. 14th air force on Nov. 8 after all runways and installations had been destroyed.

The current enemy offensive already had swept the Americans out of air bases at Hengyang, Lingling, and Kweilin.

Associated Press Correspondent Clyde A. Farnsworth in a dispatch from Kunming said that with the loss of Liuchow "southeastern China for a long time to come, if not forever, thus has been eliminated as a possible zone of an inland offensive against the Japanese armies."

The Chinese communique said another Japanese force, which had cut the Kwangsi-Kweichow railway 11 miles west of Liuchow, was striking toward Ishan, 43 miles west of Liuchow, and had attacked Chinese positions only 18 miles from the town.

Another Japanese column which by-passed Liuchow on the south also was reported cutting westward in the general direction of Ishan apparently in an effort to link up with the force from the north. A junction of the two groups would give the Japanese an all-land route from Canton to Manchuria and completely seal off the Chinese forces trapped in the Liuchow area.

The Japanese apparently had completed occupation of Kweilin, 95 miles north of Liuchow. The Japanese declared the city, which the Chinese earlier had said would be made "China's Stalingrad" had fallen last Friday. The High command acknowledged there had been no radio contact with the garrison since then.

Yank Air Base At Liuchow Evacuated

Chungking, Nov. 13 (AP)—The United States air base at Liuchow has been destroyed and evacuated, Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer's headquarters announced today.

The United States 14th Air Force struck on all fronts over the weekend, destroying a Japanese navy tender, 13 river steamers, 14 locomotives and three rail bridges in French Indo-China, an American communique said. Three radar stations were disabled at Yochow.

The Japanese in Kwangsi province, appeared on a verge of meeting from north and east to provide a continuous land route from Canton to Manchuria.

Evacuated Nov. 7

The Japanese already were in Liuchow, last known American air bases in southeast China, because Wedemeyer's communique said "P-41s drew fire from Liuchow when they attacked Japanese positions in support of Chinese ground forces." The communique added:

"The air base at Liuchow was destroyed and evacuated November 7. Most of the evacuation was done by air. The Air Transport Command made a total of 44 trips to the field, operating in extremely poor flying weather, to bring out personnel and essential equipment. Gen. (Claire L.) Chennault personally commended the Air Transport Command for its superior performance."

Reports Are Grave

Chinese reports on the Japanese drive in Kwangsi were grave.

A Chinese communique said yesterday that the northerly enemy column had captured Liucheng, 19 miles northwest of Liuchow on the railway leading to Kweichow province.

Laipin Captured

At the same time another Japanese force was reported to have seized Laipin, 45 miles south of Liuchow, and driven on 20 miles. Still a third enemy column reached the outskirts of Chienkiang on the highway leading to the old provincial capital of Yungning (Nanning.)

The situation in Liuchow remained uncertain, with the Japanese reporting the city had fallen Friday and the Chinese maintaining yesterday the garrison still was holding out.

Kweilin—capital of Kwangsi province and also a former United States air-base site 95 miles north of Liuchow—appeared lost. The Chinese high command acknowledged that it had not been in contact with the garrison by radio since Friday—the day the Japanese reported capture of the city.

Yanks Blow Up Airfield At Liuchow

By Clyde A. Farnsworth

Kunming, China, Nov. 8 (AP—Delayed)—Abandoning their fourth Southeastern China base to the Japanese offensive, United States 14th Air Force demolition teams set off the last bombs buried in runways and taxi strips on Liuchow Field before dawn today and escaped westward in jeeps.

They left behind them the debris of the base, which after the abandonment of Kweilin stood as the main center of American air power in Southeastern China. In the blackened embers was the last hope that 11th-hour deliveries of American arms and ammunition, slim though they might be, would save the foothold.

Southeastern China for a long time to come, if not forever, thus has been eliminated as a possible zone of an inland offensive against the Japanese armies.

Transmission Delayed

(As in the case of a dispatch October 28 reporting the final destruction of the abandoned Kweilin air base, transmission of this dispatch was held up by the 14th Air Force for maximum security and until the Japanese actually were on the Liuchow Field).

As with Hengyang, Lingling and Kweilin, the 14th Air Force withdrew from Liuchow only when the margin of warning on the approach of Japanese planes had been so reduced the base could not properly be defended by fighters or anti-aircraft fire.

A week of soupy weather, during which gray clouds masked the tips of Liuchow's hills, allowed the Japanese army to advance unhindered by the fighters and bombers of Brig. Gen. Clinton D. Vincent's composite wing. The weather was so bad there had been some question whether the transport planes would be able to assist in removing personnel and equipment or whether the fighters could be flown away.

Weather Lifts

The weather lifted however, and on November 7 the C-46s and C-47s heavily loaded with equipment and personnel, began flying away from the field.

Even so most of the transport flying was done under conditions considered less than the safety minimum.

Fighter planes were led out through the overcast in at least one instance by a C-47 transport plane. Vincent, who had been planning to fly out his B-25 "Silver Slipper" changed his plans at the last minute and took the place of an ailing Mustang pilot and led out one fighter formation.

The fighters buzzed the field through a pall of smoke from the burning buildings before roaring away. The fires were started November 6 and by the next day the destruction was general.

Hotel Left Standing

One again engineers and technicians of the air service command applied the now all too familiar technique of rolling a gas drum into a building, setting waste afire next to it and then releasing the gas by standing off and shooting a hole in the drum. Both American and some Chinese-owned buildings were destroyed.

Luchow's best hotel, which had been headquarters of the air service command, was exacuated but left standing.

As the planes departed, air-field demolition squads went about fusing 80 1,000-pound bombs and 30 100 pounders which long had been buried, tails up, in the two runways and in the taxistrips.

At 3 P. M. on November 7 small convoys of the last remaining vehicles started moving out in small groups to avoid congestion on the escape route. By 9 P. M., all the vehicles except a few jeeps and a truck were on the road.

Sees Final Preparations

Col. Richard S. Wise, Princeton, N. J., sector commander for the Air Service Command, saw the final preparations before flying out. He left Capt. James Sabel, Cadiz, Ky., six other engineers, Lieut. Willard G. Freeman, Boston, Mass., base commander, and 13 men under him to carry out the demolitions.

Also staying over to come out with the last convoy was Major Douglas C. Tomkins, Huntington, W. Va., liaison officer of the outfit, which had been working with the Chinese armies.

The taxi strips were destroyed bit by bit, the blasting lasting through the night to about 4 A. M. November 8.

After that job had been completed, the demolition crews sped into free China.

Chungking, Nov. 13 (A. P.).—The Chinese newspapers, commenting today on the death of Wang Ching-wei, the Quisling Premier of the Japanese puppet-government of China, said that he was lucky to have escaped execution in the future as a war criminal.

criminal. The Chinese press in general said that his death did not redeem his crimes, and that he died a traitor, dishonored and despised.

A thin psychological thread which had bound thousands of Chinese to the puppet government has been snapped by the death of Wang, and the result may be an important reversal for Japan's intensive campaign to create a complacent citizenry in occupied China. Wang was the most prominent pre-war official the Japanese succeeded in enticing to their elaborate system of puppet governments.

Many Chinese remembered, as the Japanese intended that they should, that Wang had been a confidant of Chiang Kai-shek and the second most important man in the Chinese Central Government. There was a widespread belief that Wang had accepted service under the Japanese on the explicit orders of Chiang.

Dislocate Enemy Preparations for Counterattack Near Ormoc.

U. S. FORCES ADVANCE

Five Imperial Divisions Reported Ready to Launch Big Offensive.

NOV 14 1944

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Tuesday, Nov. 14—(AP) The artillery-backed American offensive on Leyte island, which made short new gains today, has dislocated Japanese preparations for a counterattack with the five divisions they are known to have committed to this pivotal Philippine battle.

Today's communique reported five Imperial divisions had been identified, without specifying whether they were estimated at their full strength, which would mean probably more than 60,000 men.

5 Divisions in Action

The Japanese First division has been thrown into the battleline along the Pinamopoan-Ormoc highway, and the 26th division has been identified by its dead. The 16th, 30th and 102nd divisions previously had been reported in action.

The American offensive drive, said the communique, has "penetrated his (the enemy's) potential assembly areas, compelling him to premature and piecemeal commitments of his forces for the defense of the main bastion of the Yamashita line."

That line runs through the rugged hill country surrounding shell-blackened Ormoc, Japan's last stronghold on the island. Fresh troops, under Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, were preparing a large-scale attempt to break American encirclement on three sides.

Yank infantrymen and dismounted cavalrymen, plunging through jungles and mountains, continued the steady pressure which has thrown this plan off balance.

Yanks Consolidate Positions

Advance elements of the U. S. First Cavalry division are consolidating positions they have seized on Mt. Catabaran and Mt. Cabungangan, dominating peaks east of the Pinamopoan-Ormoc highway.

The cavalrymen extended their left flank to include another key height, termed Hill 2926, eight miles south-southwest of Carigara. Patrols are probing westward.

The main force of the 24th division, pushing down the twisting Ormoc highway, "is closing slowly along the Ormoc road in the face of increasingly strong opposition," the communique said.

To the east, the 96th division has broken organized Japanese resistance in the hills flanking Dagami and Patok, in central Leyte valley.

The communique continued a week's silence concerning movements of the 7th division, approaching Ormoc from the south along a coastal road.

American long-range artillery "continues to create havoc" along the Ormoc corridor, the communique reported, and divebombers Saturday attacked bivouacs at Valencia, near the center of the road. Numerous buildings were destroyed and many casualties resulted from strafing.

A headquarters spokesman disclosed the Japanese have infiltrated some American positions and sent small suicide squads against the moving Yank line. These assaults were stopped before causing any substantial damage.

Jap Resistance Stiffens

General Japanese resistance, however, is stiffening along the Ormoc road. Enemy air activity "continues at a moderate scale, with persistent harassing attacks on shipping and ground installations," the communique said. Nine Nipponese planes were shot down.

Associated Press Correspondent Fred Hampson, with the 24th division, reported a significant change in enemy tactics. With larger forces and more automatic weapons and artillery than previously, the enemy, Hampson said, has lessened the number of his harassing night attacks but is concentrating on bitter defense of every defensible point on the road from Pinamopoan to Ormoc.

Hampson said some officers interpreted the new enemy tactics as indicating increasing weakness, and added that evidence has been produced of the booby-trapping of Japanese and American dead and the laying of new anti-tank mines.

Yanks Tighten Squeeze On Leyte Foe

MACARTHUR

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 13 (AP)—A 2,300-foot peak overlooking the bloody Ormoc corridor battleground was in American hands today as the determined Yanks tightened their squeeze on probably 45,000 bitterly resisting Japanese in the climactic fight for Leyte Island.

While Ormoc itself was dealt an effective 62-ton bombing, infantry units of the 24th Division driving south toward that last enemy reinforcement port gained three miles at one point to capture strategic Mount Catabaran yesterday.

Still Hold Initiative

Along the main Carigara Bay-Ormoc road, the main column of the 24th, aided by strong tank and air support, made "good progress against heavy opposition," Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported today.

Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita's reinforced troops continued their attempts to break the American pressure, but a headquarters spokesman said the Yanks still held both the initiative and the preponderance of numbers.

No more enemy reinforcements were reported landed at Ormoc, where the Japanese lost six destroyers, four transports, 13 planes and most of 8,000 troops Saturday as American carrier planes wiped out a convoy.

Resistance Stiffens

Southeast of the 24th Division sector, First Cavalry troops were meeting increasing resistance on the Mount Pina saddle. Tanks and mortar fire helped eradicate enemy pockets on both sides of the ridge.

The bombing of Ormoc caused "extensive destruction," MacArthur reported. The port on Leyte's west coast has been hit repeatedly by American bombers and fighters.

Meanwhile, a spectacular daytime attack by Japanese fighters and divebombers on American shipping in San Pedro Bay on Leyte was reported by Associated Press Correspondent Spencer Davis.

Ships Hit, He Says

"From the bridge of this ship," Davis wrote, "it was possible to see five different attacks under way simultaneously during a five-minute period.

"One enemy plane scored a direct hit on the deck of a ship, which burst into flames. A moment later a second ship was hit on the stern."

He saw four of the attackers downed.

Japs Report Action

(Japan, in proclaiming the action in an imperial communique today, said one "enemy" battleship and one transport were sunk in Leyte Gulf by Nippon's "sure-hit-and-sure-death" suicide pilots.)

American aces added to their totals over the week end. Major Richard I. Bong, of Poplar, Wis., America's top fighter pilot, shot down two more to make his score 36. Major Thomas B. McGuire, second highest-scoring ace in this theater, scored his 27th and 26th.

LST OFF LEYTE SERVES AS HOSPITAL AT FRONT

ABOARD AN LST HOSPITAL SHIP, Leyte, Oct. 28 (Delayed) (AP)—It looked like any other snub-nosed LST [landing ship, tank], beast of burden in the Navy's trans-Pacific caravan.

There was no coat of white paint, no red cross on the bridge, nothing to distinguish it from other landing ships that opened their ramps off Leyte's invasion beaches.

This LST, however, was an answer to one of the Navy's more serious problems—getting surgical attention closer to the wounded on the beach. This and other ships like it have during the battles of the Marshalls, Marianas, Palaus and Philippines provided hospitals to bolster and continue the front-line work of surgeons.

The hospital LST brings modern surgical instruments and all the other paraphernalia of emergency operations not only within gunfire but up to the beaches where American blood is being spilled.

Navy Capt. Albert T. Walker of Oakland, Calif., Seventh Fleet Air Force surgeon, adopted for the Philippines the idea of using LST's as hospital ships after it had first been tried in the atoll operations farther east.

ABOARD LST 1,025—A loud speaker today was calling insistently, "Dr. Roser wanted in surgery. Dr. Roser wanted in surgery"—sounding like the announcer system in any ordinary hospital.

Major McGuire Downs 28th Jap

A Fighter Base, Leyte, Nov. 13 (A. P.).—Major Thomas B. McGuire, second highest-scoring fighter ace in the Southwest Pacific, scored his twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth kills yesterday when he shot down two Jap navy fighter bombers near Cebu.

The Ridgewood, N. J., ace is beginning to crowd Major Richard I. Bong of Poplar, Wis., who has thirty-six notches in his aerial guns.

SPENCER

Seventh Fleet Headquarters in the Philippines, Nov. 3 (AP—Delayed)—A single patrol torpedo boat carrying three New Yorkers fired three torpedoes at a Japanese battleship and came back to tell the story.

The daring attack was in the historical naval battle of Surigao Strait, off Leyte island in the Philippines, October 22-27, in which 16 Japanese warships were sunk. The New Yorkers were Ensign Howard I. Green, executive officer; Pat J. Amico, motor machinist's mate (third class), and John L. Henning, quartermaster (second class).

In Advanced Station

With Lieut. Robert Leeson, of Boston, aboard as coordinating officer in tactical command of the P-T unit, the P-T took up its station at an advanced spot at the southern end of Panoan Island off Leyte. About midnight a large group of enemy ships was observed approaching.

Lesson ordered the P-T to make for the center of the group and there was the enemy battleship. The Japanese spotted the P-T and suddenly a brilliant searchlight flashed full on it.

"Her 40-millimeter batteries and her 14-inch main batteries turned night into day," said Green. "There was considerable 5-inch gun fire as well. The destroyers must have opened up, too, and tracers, smoke, exploding shells and fire were everywhere."

Heads Into Searchlight

The PT dashed on with Green in the conning station near the wheel and Amico and Henning at their battle stations at guns. It headed into the enemy searchlight at full speed and when 1,500 yards away let go three torpedoes.

Then the PT's guns fired at the blinding searchlight as the little craft zig-zagged in search of refuge in the black waters near the island.

"Three minutes later we could hear—and feel—several underwater explosions. There was no flash, no flame, but the whole boat shook from the concussion," said Green. "That's the first time any PT ever took on a whole enemy task group by itself and got away with it, but not a single piece of shrapnel hit our boat."

Ringside Seat For Battle

Fearing the worst the PT hugged the shore. It stood by as six Japanese destroyers steamed past, then swung aroud and let the last torpedo go, but it was a clear miss.

Silently the men watched the Seventh Fleet warships come up and engage the Japanese force. The PT could not help. Its ammunition was running low. Its torpedoes were gone. All the men could do was watch. Green told the story:

"We could see star shells, flashes of tracer fire and gun bursts in the distance. We could feel the concussion of the shells in the naval artillery duel. There were flames and columns of smoke hundreds of feet in the air. Later we saw a Jap cruiser come limping out burning amidship. Two cans (destroyers) were ahead screening her and she seemed to be getting the flames under control."

Brush With Jap Plane

The next day, October 26, the PT had another brush with the Japs when a Zeke fighter attempted to bomb the PT's tender.

"The bomb fell wide and exploded about five feet off our bow as we swung away from the tender's side," said Amico. "We were under air attack all the way into San Pedro Bay.

"I was so glad [illegible] see our fleet that I almos[illegible] came through all this act[illegible]."

Green received his commission in the naval reserve in October 1943 and in seven months in the Pacific has taken part in thirty-seven combat patrols. He is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania.

Amico enlisted in the naval reserve in October, 1943, and received recruit training at Sampson, N. Y. Henning enlisted eight days after Pearl Harbor and received recruit training at Great Lakes, Ill. He has been on thirty-five combat patrols in nine months.

P-T Boat Fights Battleship Alone, Gets Away Unscathed

HAMPSON

Leyte, Philippine Islands, Nov. 3 (Delayed) (A. P.).—The Japanese made a widow of Concordia, a Filipino woman, and forced her to give up her three daughters. But she made them pay. She joined the guerrillas as a nurse, and for three years she cared for these roving fighters as they slaughtered Japanese.

Today Concordia accompanied the guerrillas in from the mountains to the command post of the American Twenty-fourth Division, where they are being equipped with American arms, clothing and food. In a pair of blue fatigue overalls, a G. I. khaki shirt, a broad straw hat and sandals, she looked more like a village belle on a picnic than a 30-year-old mother with three years of guerrilla fighting behind her.

How did she manage to keep her hair so sleek and glossy, and her complexion so clear and fresh?

"Oh, one learns, one learns," she smiled.

Husband Was an Officer

Her husband was an officer of the Ninety-second Philippine Division. He joined the guerrillas and was killed by Japanese. A high school graduate, Concordia herself then joined the guerrillas and was commissioned a lieutenant nurse.

"I didn't have many wounded to attend," she said. "Our men are too fast for the Japs. But there were many skin ulcers because of poor diet and sometimes we had much illness."

Asked whether the guerrillas were anxious for Philippine independence, she replied: "We'll worry about independence after we get the Japs out of here. Get rid of the Japs first. Free the Philippines of their looting and stealing and maltreating of the natives."

Second Lieut. Filomeno Corton, a company commander, said that the Guerrilla Battalion had once hidden four Americans—Charles Miller of Ohio, manager of the Firestone branch at Cebu, and his wife Jane; Hugo Miller, author of books on Philippine geography and of a guerrilla novel, "Thunderstorm," the manuscript of which the Japanese captured, and a man named Wing who managed a hardware company in Davao. Charles Miller and his wife were taken to Mindanao and escaped to Australia on an American submarine.

Jap Attempt To Break Ormoc Pocket Foreseen

With First Cavalry Division, Western Leyte, Nov. 13 (AP—Via Army Radio)—Indications that the Japanese may attempt to break out of the Ormoc pocket, across west Leyte's mountainous backbone into the Carigara area, was seen here yesterday when First Division troops made contact with advance patrols of well-equipped and well-conditioned Nipponese reinforcements.

One Japanese officer was identified as being with Japan's seasoned First Infantry. The development presaged the approaching second phase of the ground battle for Leyte.

Terrain Hampers Yanks

Terrain continued to be the First Division's toughest foe. Japanese resistance was scattered and light. The dismounted American cavalrymen advanced to control 4,000-foot Mount Catabaran, on the right flank, just short of the Ormoc-Carigara Bay highway.

An American patrol lost five men late yesterday five miles back of advanced lines when it stumbled onto well-entrenched Japanese machine gunners. Artillery and mortar fire was turned on the area during the night. A reinforced patrol found no further trace of the enemy there today.

Another significant indication that the Japs are turning attention to the Carigara Bay sector was their first attempt to bomb two bridges along supply arterials.

GENERAL'S PATE DRAWS JAP FIRE

Leyte, P. I., Nov. 13 (A. P.).—Brig-Gen. Kenneth Cramer, deputy commander of the Twenty-fourth Division, and Lieut. (j. g.) J. T. Sutton of Lawrencebourg, Tenn., a Navy mine detection expert, were watching the battle for the Ormoc Road from an artillery outpost. Lieut. Sutton noticed that every time Gen. Cramer removed his tin hat to wipe away the perspiration, a Japanese sniper fired at them.

They soon discovered that it was the gleam of Gen. Cramer's bald pate that was attracting the sniper's attention. The general promised to keep his tin hat on.

12 JAP PLANES DOWNED BY YANKS

GENERAL MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Tuesday, Nov. 14—(AP) American planes shot down 12 Japanese fighters while encountering "strong enemy air cover" in raids on other Visayan islands surrounding Leyte, a supplementary communique reported today.

Four other Nipponese fighters probably were destroyed, as the Yank planes continued to paste airfields and installations on islands from which the Japanese have sent reinforcements and aerial raiders to Leyte.

Near Palawan, the American pilots shot down two more Japanese planes, one a transport, and damaged a coastal freighter.

Two Yank planes were lost in the strikes.

The Japanese again raided American-held Morotai, in the Halmaheras, "without causing damage," the communique said.

Other American bombers raided targets from Timor to the Solomons, and light naval craft shelled Japanese positions on New Guinea and New Ireland, Bougainville, and Choiseul islands.

JAPS TAKE ISLAND IN PALAU GROUP

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 13—(AP) Two hundred Japanese troops occupied tiny Ngeregong island, eight miles northeast of

30.24 — 20357

American-held Peleliu in the Palau group, last Tuesday night, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

A small U. S. Marine patrol, which had been on the island for reconnaissance, quickly evacuated, and the enemy was subjected to ships' fire and aerial bombing and strafing.

No U. S. Casualties

Nimitz said in his communique the Marines were removed aboard LCI's (landing craft, infantry) without casualties.

The Japanese were equipped with knee mortars and machine-guns. Probably they came in small boats across the reef-infested denges passage from Eil Malk island two miles north of Ngeregong.

Ngeregong is triangular and only one mile on each side.

The purpose of the enemy occupation is vague but probably was for reconnaissance.

The Japanese could bombard Peleliu and other American-held Palau islands from Ngeregong, but they would have difficulty in moving in artillery. The tiny islet, moreover, would give them little advantage over Eil Malk.

Nimitz said the Japanese landed under cover of a storm.

Ships Bombard Japs

One U. S. destroyer and two gunboats quickly blocked denges passage to cut off possible further landings and bombarded Ngeregong.

During Thursday night American planes bombed and strafed the islet and sank one barge.

Land-based aircraft centered their activity Thursday and Friday on the Palaus.

Planes sank a previously damaged Japanese destroyer near Golou and sank a barge at Ngesang on Babelthuap island, largest of the group, and set fire to fuel tanks and other ground installations.

HALSEY PREDICTS JAP PEACE FEELER

Aboard the Flagship, Third United States Fleet, in the Western Pacific, Nov. 10 (Delayed) (A. P.). (Via Navy Radio).—Declaring that "I expec. a Japanese peace feeler at any time," Admiral William F. Halsey said today that the United States should be prepared to reject instantly any Japanese proposal for a compromise truce. He told a press conference: "The high-up monkey-men know that the handwriting is on the wall. It is most important now that they do not weaken back home, because there must not be a compromise peace."

The strongest pressure for peace will come from big Japanese industrialists seeking to save their factories and other properties from being destroyed by American bombs and bullets, he declared, adding that the United States should be on guard constantly against any such proposal.

JAPANESE LAUNCH DRIVE FOR SILVER

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Japan launched a nation-wide drive last night for collection of silver to be used in airplane motors with the official statement that heavy air losses were sustained in the "victories" off Formosa and the Philippines.

Shigenobu Matsukuma, vice minister of finance, said in announcing the drive that the metal was needed to "replace our aircraft losses" and to "produce many, many more superior planes in preparation for the ensuing enemy attacks." His broadcast was recorded by the Federal Communications commission.

The finance officials declared "aircraft losses were hidden" behind the "brilliant successes" in recent naval-air engagements. He said silver would be used in propeller mountings because the copper and lead alloy formerly used was "unsatisfactory."

Soliciting everything from silver coins to heirlooms, Matsukuma said:

"Even enemy America, who boasts of material wealth, is carrying out collection movements for metals and other essential war materials."

(Japan also is in the midst of a drive for platinum and diamonds. The government in 1939 first began to pressure its people for the sale of silver.)

...PERFORT ...VER JAPAN AGAIN

The Tokyo radio said today that a single American Superfortress had flown over the central part of the Jap homeland this morning, apparently for reconnaissance purposes, the Associated Press announced.

The broadcast, recorded by the FCC, said the plane was sighted over Ise Bay (Owari Bay) on the south side of Honshu Island. Nagoya, important industrial center, is situated on Ise Bay.

The Japanese news agency Domei said the Superfortress apparently was from an American base in the Marianas. It withdrew after a half-hour without dropping any bombs, the agency added.

The Jap Domei News Agency in a broadcast said "enemy" planes bombed Manila today. The broadcast, recorded by the FCC, claimed churches and homes were destroyed. No mention was made of damage to military installations.

The Domei agency also reported that an "undisclosed number" of enemy warships had bombarded Iwo Jima in the Volcano Islands last night after a daylight raid of about twenty Liberator bombers. The dispatch recorded by United States Government monitors claimed that "damage caused to our side was extremely slight." The Volcano Islands are about 750 miles south of Tokyo.

COURT WON'T HELP FREE TYLER KENT

Washington, Nov. 13 (A. P.).—The Supreme Court refused today for the second time to consider the case of Tyler Kent, convicted in a British court of violating the British official war secrets act. Kent, a code clerk in the American embassy in London, was sentenced to seven years' imprisonment.

His mother, Mrs. Ann H. P. Kent of this city, asked the Supreme Court to intervene in the case. The tribunal first declined to act last month. Today it refused her second appeal.

$133,931,513 aid By Britain In RFC Loan

Washington, Nov. 13 (AP)—Britain has made payments of $133,931,513 on her loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Reporting this today, the RFC said the bulk of this, $120,457,037, came from interest and dividends earned by securities pledged as collateral, while $13,474,476 represented proceeds from the sale of some of the securities.

A total loan of $425,000,000 was authorized in July, 1941, but only $390,000,000 actually has been delivered to Britain.

Americans In Romania Apparently Unharmed

Washington, Nov. 13 (AP)—Acting Secretary of State Stettinius today said American citizens living in Romania apparently are well and unharmed."

Roy M. Melbourne, a foreign service officer who has arrived in Bucharest on the staff of Burton Y. Berry, United States representative in Romania, sent the report based on personal interviews with Americans and on statements of the Swiss legation which has been in charge of American interests.

URGES PALESTINE AID

Washington, Nov. 13 (A. P.).—Representative Celler (D.-N. Y.) declared today that Great Britain will no longer be able to shy away from her responsibility in opening Palestine to mass Jewish immigration.

Reminding that both major party platforms pledged support to the opening of the Jewish homeland, Mr. Celler urged speedy action by the House Foreign Affairs Committee on a resolution calling for the abrogation of the British White Paper of 1939 which limits Jewish immigration to Palestine.

ARMY CASUALTIES

Washington, Nov. 13 (A. P.).—The War Department announced today the names of 1,801 casualties in the Asiatic, Central Pacific, European and Southwest Pacific areas. Included in the list are the following with their next of kin:

CONGRESS OPENS SESSIONS TODAY

FDR's War Powers Expected to Be Extended Without Serious Controversy.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13 — (AP) Extension of the President's war powers, without serious inter-party controversy, was indicated today as the 78th Congress gathered for its final sessions.

House Republican Leader Martin, of Massachusetts, told newspapermen he knew of no planned opposition to prolongation of the powers—including the authority for priorities—which under present legislation Expire Dec. 31, He commented:

"Congress is going to give the President all the power he needs to fight the war."

The old Congress, with a house numbering 215 Democrats and 212 Republicans, convenes at noon tomorrow. Among the members will be about four score "Lame Ducks" who must help dispose of a heavy pre-Christmas roster of legislation.

It will clear the stage for momentous war and peace debates in the new Congress, with a stronger Democratic flavor, which needs Jan. 3. In this Congress the Democrats will have a plurality of at least 50 members in the House.

Indications are that the "cleanup" sessions will get off to a slow start tomorrow. Many lawmakers are resting back home after strenuous political campaigns. The House will mark time this week, having no legislative program.

However, in addition to extension of the war powers, these important questions confront the old "Congress:

1. A decision whether to "freeze" the Social Security tax at its present one percent rate. Unless stopped by Congress, the payroll tax automatically rises to two percent each on employer and employe January 1. A sizzling scrap is expected on this "freeze."

2. Whether to extend the statute of limitations governing prosecutions or court martials that may grow out of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. This might afford opportunity for some blasts at the administration-an aftermath of the political campaigns.

3. Bills providing for a postwar highway program involving expenditure of around $1,500,000,000 of Federal funds.

4. Resurrection of the Federal crop insurance program, funds for which Congress has refused. Both major parties sanctioned crop insurance in their platforms.

5. Disposition of the House-approved flood control and rivers and harbors improvements measure.

6. Action on a proposal to revive the Bituminous Coal law, which Congress refused to extend earlier this year. This act sets up machinery intended to prevent ruinous competition in the soft coal industry.

Martin said he believed the old Congress could complete its labors by Dec. 10.

Stimson Won't Retire Veterans Of The 34th

Washington, Nov. 13 (AP)—Secretary of War Stimson rejected a suggestion that some 3,000 members of the 34th Division, now resting at their homes, be relieved of further combat duty.

He wrote Senator Gillette (D., Iowa) that to permit them to remain in this country "would be in neither the military nor national interest."

Gillette made public the letter which added that "personal desires cannot be given precedence over military needs" and that any change in existing orders might cause "harmful effects on the morale of other men in similar status overseas."

Gillette said he had taken the matter up with Stimson after a number of members of the 34th from his State, some of them recuperating from wounds, had opposed ... ning to the South Pacific where they had been on combat duty two and two and a half years.

NAVY REVEALS SIN... OF SUBMARINE DAR...

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—(AP) The Navy announced today the submarine Darter was destroyed by its own crew to prevent capture by the enemy after it had run aground in an undisclosed area.

All the complement of 65 officers and men escaped to an advanced naval base.

The year-old 1,525 ton vessel was the thirty-third submarine lost by the United States fleet since Pearl Harbor. In that time the fleet has lost a total of 218 combat vessels including the undersea craft.

Lieut. Commander David H. McClintock of Benton Harbor, Mich., was the skipper of the Darter. He holds the Silver Star for submarine duty, sinking a light cruiser when he was serving as torpedo officer early in the war.

Another International Labor Group 'Possible'

Washington, Nov. 13 (AP) — CIO delegates to the World Trade Union Conference in London in February will seek a place for the CIO in a formally organized international labor movement.

That might include the formation ... a new world wide

tion of a new world-wide group, President Philip Murray, of the CIO, told a conference of foreign correspondents today.

At present, the American Federation of Labor is the sole American representative in the International Federation of Trade Unions, of which AFL President William Green is vice-president.

The CIO has sought representation in the IFTU—which meets in January — but the AFL has made plain its desire to continue as the sole American member.

LT. KINNICK MISSING IN SOUTH PACIFIC AREA

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—(AP) Lt. Ben Kinnick, Marine Corps flier and brother of Nile Kinnick, All-America quarterback at Iowa in 1939, is missing in action in the South Pacific, the Navy announced tonight.

Lt. Kinnick was reported missing Sept. 17 on a flight over Kavieng peninsula, New Ireland, the Navy said.

Nile Kinnick, a Navy ensign, was killed in a plane crash in the gulf of Paria, in the Caribbean, June 2, 1943.

Lt. Kinnick's wife, Mrs. Benjamin Greave Kinnick, is a resident of Staten Island, N. Y. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Nile Kinnick of Omaha, Neb.

AMMUNITION DEMANDS SOAR

Eisenhower's Needs Outpace Production, Says Patterson

Washington, Nov. 13 (AP)—Robert P. Patterson, Under Secretary of War, reported today that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower "has an imperative need for much more artillery ammunition than we are producing."

He told a news conference that troops on the Western front are firing 35 days planned supply of heavy artillery ammunition in ten days and there are no reserves in this country. That implied a tremendous drain on ammunition stockpiled in Europe.

Amount Used Is "Staggering"

"Although our production of artillery ammunition has tripled since the beginning of this year the needs of our armed forces have gone up even faster," Patterson said.

"The amount of ammunition which has been used in the campaigns of Western Europe, especially in the major offensives, has been staggering.

"General Eisenhower has cabled that the present needs for one month for the troops in Northwestern Europe alone approximate 6,000,000 rounds of artillery and 2,000,000 rounds of mortar ammunition. The First Army alone used more than 300,000 rounds of 105-milimeter howitzer ammunition in a two-week seige of Aachen.

"Expenditure of ammunition in the course of the European campaign has thus far exceeded 375,000 tons. If General Eisenhower's operations are to receive adequate support, it is necessary to fire four to five thousand pounds of ammunition every minute, 24 hours a day. This means 3,600 tons of ammunition per day."

Needs Rising In Other Theaters

Patterson said that at the same time there is increased demand for ammunition from every other active theater. General MacArthur's troops in the Philippines are expending a gretater quantity of artillery ammunition this month than in the past 16 months combined. The Fifth Army in Italy likewise is calling for bigger shipments.

SENATE PROPOSAL SEEN BOLSTERING NAZI RESISTANCE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13 — (AP) Senator Revercomb (R.-W. Va.) said tonight a Senate Military subcommittee proposal to strip Germany of much of her industry might serve to bolster a Nazi resistance in the war.

Revercomb, a member of the sub-committee, disclosed that he had not signed the group's report, called its issuance "untimely and unfortunate," and declared it would bring no benefits to the Allied cause.

Action Called 'Untimely'

Likening the proposal to Treasury Secretary Morgenthau's plan to reduce Germany to an agricultural state, Revercomb told reporters that it was "a subject to be dealt with later"—not now.

"Of course," he added, "the armament industries of the enemy must be eliminated but there is no purpose to be gained by taking away from them the means of making a peaceful living."

As yet no definite policy on a post-war Germany has been made public by the State department but the trend there is toward control as strategic bottlenecks. The talk is of some middle ground between Morgenthau's plan and the opposing contention that Germany's manufactures are necessary to the reconstruction of Europe.

Most recent discussion has revolved around uprooting Germany's war potential by keeping a tight check on strategic war-contributing industries and imports, rather than carrying actual destruction much beyond arms plants.

Acting Secretary of State Stettinius said at his news conference today that he was sending for the report of the Kilgore sub-committee, but declined to comment.

The Senate group's recommendation for removal of all metal and chemical works would in effect deindustralize Germany unless she were allowed to import large quantities of machinery.

One proposal under consideration is that an average standard of living should be set for the German people and production generally reduced to that level through controls of key materials, with anything left over confiscated as reparations.

Plan Signed

Thought on removal of industries tends more toward satisfying demands of economically ravaged Allies such as Russia rather than transplanting factories for the purpose of getting them off German soil. In this connection, it is pointed out, that Germany's basic strength—coal mines, and hydro-electric power—cannot be moved, and that they are no good to anybody without machinery at the spot.

Suggested techniques of control range from establishment of a giant agency comparable to the War Production board, to singling out key products and services such as alloy metals and electricity as the master reins on Germany economy.

Strict curbs on German foreign trade appear to have won acceptance here. However, there is one school of thought which holds that the more dependent Germany is made on foreign imports the more difficult will be her demobilization.

Some exports would be considered likely so that Germany can buy abroad necessities she might otherwise seek ways to make domestically.

MOVE TO INCREASE JOBLESS BENEFITS SEEN IN CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—(AP) A surprise move to revive a modified version of the Murray-Kilgore bill for more liberal postwar benefits for unemployed developed today in Congress.

Backers of the bill are sounding out members of the State Military committee to determine whether they would support another attempt to pass the legislation which Congress rejected after a bitter fight three months ago.

The Administration's election victories furnished the main impetus. Another factor was the campaign stand of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey pledging Republican support of a broadened social security program.

Senator Kilgore (D-W.Va.) was reported hopeful of bringing the bill up in a compromise form that would have the backing of some of the southern Democrats and Republicans who formed a coalition to defeat it before.

Aides of Kilgore said, however, the revival attempt might not be pressed immediately if Republican and southern Democratic leaders show no willingness to go along.

The modified version would provide maximum unemployment insurance payments of $20 or $25 a week, instead of the original Murray-Kilgore proposal of benefits as high as $35 weekly.

Administration would be left in the hands of the states, with the Federal government supplementing state awards up to the uniform level fixed by Congress.

This would be in line with the plan advocated by War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes when the issue was before Congress previously. Present state payments to unemployed range up to $22, with most in the neighborhood of $15 and some considerably lower. Byrnes held that in most instances the payments are inadequate. Present law leaves state jobless pay standards intact.

The tentative "compromise" also would revive the proposals for Federal payment of transportation costs of "stranded" jobless war workers back to their homes or to new jobs, and Federally-financed vocational training to prepare unemployed persons for available jobs.

It would extend unemployment insurance protection to some 2,500,000 Federal employes not now covered by the state laws.

The latter feature was approved by the Senate when it passed the over-all reconversion bill of Senator George (D-Ga.) as a substitute for the Murray-Kilgore measure, but the House then struck it out.

FLY'S RESIGNATION ACCEPTED BY FDR

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—(AP) President Roosevelt today accepted "with great personal reluctance" the resignation of James Lawrence Fly as chairman of the Federal Communications commission. It is effective Wednesday.

The President told the FCC chairman, who announced his resignation last week:

"You are only on 'furlough.' I shall have to have your help from time to time, particulary in the field of international communications, and I know I can expect you to respond."

In submitting his resignation Fly said he was quitting for personal reasons but assured the chief executive he will be ready "from time to time and in a private capacity to assist in any manner possible."

Fly will return to the private practice of law.

In a letter filled with praise for the FCC chairman Mr. Roosevelt said, "You should take great satisfaction from the knowledge that in all your public endeavors you have not only advanced the public interest, but in the end gained the respect of most of your opponents for requiring them to face, for the public good, the need of adjustments necessary to protect their own long-range interests."

Before going to the FCC, Fly was with the anti-trust division of the Justice department and also served as general counsel of the Tennessee Valley authority.

Senate Presidency Sought By McKellar

Washington, Nov. 13 (AP)—Senator McKellar (D., Tenn.) became an avowed candidate today for president pro tempore of the next Senate, a post now held by Senator Carter Glass (D., Va.).

McKellar made known his candidacy in personal letters to his Democratic colleagues. In the letters he said he had been informed that Senator Glass would "not be an applicant" for reelection. Glass has long been in ill health.

A member of Congress since 1911, the 75-year-old McKellar now is acting chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee and also heads the Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads. He was in the House three terms and now is in his fifth Senate term which will expire in 1947.

Democratic Senators will choose a president pro tempore in a caucus when the 79th Congress convenes in January. That officer presides over the Senate in the absence of the Vice-President.

McKellar will be dean of the Democrats in the 79th Congress.

3 SEEK TO QUIT WAR LABOR BOARD

Members Ask to Resign Posts for Personal, Business Reasons.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—(AP) Three of the four men who have had the decisive vote in wartime labor disputes want to quit when they wind up their work on the current wage control controversy.

They are Chairman William H. Davis, vice chairman George W. Taylor, and Dr. Frank P. Graham, public member, of the War Labor board. The fourth public member is Lloyd K. Garrison. Other members are four labor representatives and four management men.

With the board makeup, the controlling voice on momentous decisions often has been that of the public members.

There was no indication that any policy issue or disagreement with other sections of the Administration lay back of the resignations, all presented weeks ago and announced today. Personal and business reasons were advanced in each case.

Garrison said he had known for some time of his colleagues' desire "to be relieved of the heavy burdens which they have been carrying."

He said he had sought to dissuade them from sending in their resignations, and expressed hope that for "the sake of the board and the country these resignations will not become effective."

Chairman Davis, on his 65th birthday August 29, asked to be relieved by January 1, if possible, to permit him to return to his patent law practice in New York.

Vice Chairman Taylor asked that President Roosevelt make his departure possible around December 1. Dr. Taylor is the real author of the Board's "Little Steel" formula, wage control policy now under attack by organized labor.

Dr. Graham wants to leave after the current crucial deliberations of the board. Dr. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, has been mainly concerned with union security and maintenance of membership provisions, which the board has ordered in many cases.

The board at the moment is in the midst of one of its most important phases—preparing a report to the President on the status of the wage earner in the face of increased living costs, and determining scores of other demands of more than 2,000,000 workers, mainly CIO members.

The AFL and CIO both have urged the board to recommend abandoning the Little Steel formula, which limits general wage increases to fifteen per cent above the level of January 15, 1941. The Labor groups insist that living costs have soared as much as 45.3 per cent.

13 FORMER MEMBERS WIN CONGRESS SEATS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP) The old saying that "they never come back" doesn't apply to Congressmen.

Thirteen of the 78 newly-elected House members who will be sworn in in January are men who succeeded in comeback attempts after having been out of Congress for at least one term.

Neely had served previously in both the Senate and the House.

Representative-elect Berkeley L. Bunker (D-Nev), served in the Senate by appointment.

Two members of the present House, Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash) and J. William Fulbright (D-Ark) will be in the Senate when the new Congress convenes in January. Representative Francis J. Myers (D-Pa), is leading in Pennsylvania's senatorial race, which may be determined by the count of service votes.

HIGH COURT REJECTS WARD COMPANY APPEAL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP) The Supreme court declined again today to interfere with a lower court decision that courts can neither review nor enforce War Labor Board orders.

Without comment, the tribunal turned down an appeal of Montgomery Ward & Co., from a ruling by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. The latter court held that WLB actions are administrative and "at most" simply advisory to the President.

The WLB, in case its orders are disregarded, turns cases over to the President for action.

The mail order firm contended the WLB exceeded its statutory powers in issuing orders involving union maintenance, dues check-off and grievance machinery for C.I.O. employes at four Ward stores in Detroit, and one each in Jamaica, N. Y., and Denver.

The Supreme court previously at this term had rejected an appeal by a group of trucking companies from a similar decision by the Court of Appeals.

ed of seeking to have Stephen Patrick (Tex) Sullivan, a boxing associate, testify falsely in his behalf before the court martial.

The 13-man military court deliberated three hours and 25 minutes before the verdict was announced by Col. Ralph Slate, president.

Gould, who had pleaded innocent to all counts, heard the decision with no show of emotion.

The man who once managed exheavy weight champion James J. Braddock was found guilty of four specifications in the charge of violating the 96th article of war. Specification three was changed to read that he had received an amount in excess of $1,600 instead of $18,000 as originally charged.

Specifically, Gould was convicted on the four specifications as follows:

Of conspiring with Milton A. Henry, president of the Cornwall company, between May and November, 1943, to defraud the government by wrongfully influencing the award of contracts for war materials, including life rafts to Henry's company: of conspiring with Henry to receive secret compensation for services in connection with the award of the contracts: of receiving bribes of more than $1,600 from the Cornwall company for such services, and of unlawfully attempting to have Sullivan testify falsely that he (Sullivan) had been employed by the Cornwall company from October, 1943, to April, 1944, as a publicity agent.

The $1,600, it was testified at the trial, represented the total amount received from the Cornwall company by Sullivan and purportedly turned over to Gould.

Capt. Gould Gets 3 Years At Hard Labor, Discharged From the Army for Bribery

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—(AP) Capt. Joseph Gould, 48-year-old former boxing manager, was sentenced to three years at hard labor, fined $12,000, and dismissed from the Army today following his conviction by a general court martial of conspiracy to accept bribes for the award of Army contracts.

Gould, charged with accepting more than $1,600 in connection with the awarding of contracts worth $1,000,000 to the Cornwall Shipbuilding Co., Inc., also was convict-

Due To Review Monetary Plan

Rye, N. Y., Nov. 13 (AP)—An indication that the International Business Conference may give some measure of approval to the monetary proposals adopted at Bretton Woods last July was given today as delegates resumed their discussions of post-war trade problems.

It was learned from an authoritative source that the American delegation will put before the conference a recommendation that the Bretton Wood agreements for an international monetary fund and a world reconstruction bank be given "careful consideration" in any discussion of post-war currency problems.

Currency Important Question

One of the main subjects being considered by this conference of some 300 businessmen from 52 nations is that of currency relations among nations, and the United States representative on the currency panel is Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank of New York.

In recent discussions of the Bretton Woods proposals, American bankers have been generally opposed to the money stabilization fund and only lukewarm to the world bank for reconstruction.

It was pointed out that any sign from United States banking or business circles which is in any way favorable to the Bretton Woods plans would go a long way toward getting conference approval for both the fund and the bank, and, although this conference has no official standing with any of the nations represented here, its membership should carry weight with the various governments.

Nation's Approval Needed

The monetary fund, aggregating more than $8,000,000,000, and the world bank, which would be capitalized at $9,000,000,000, must be approved by the governing bodies of the various United and associated nations before they come into existence. Action by the United States Congress is expected early next year. Under the draft outlined at Bretton Woods this country would subscribe a total of approximately $6,000,000,000 to the fund and the bank.

Another subject attracting much attention is that of the commercial policy of nations, which has to do with tariffs and trade controls. Of almost equal importance is the question of cartels, or trade agreements governing the flow of goods or raw materials. The conference's attitude on this subject will not be made public until Saturday, last day of the conference.

32,000 AIRCRAFT WORKERS ARE IDLE

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 13. —(AP) The Wright Aeronautical corporation said today 32,000 employes of its five North Jersey plants were idle after 1,800 supervisors struck.

The Wright Aircraft Supervision association (unaffiliated), whose members voted yesterday to strike at 10 a. m., today, alleged company violations of the status quo through transfers of supervisors while awaiting settlement of a dispute on union recognition and working conditions.

The War Labor board at Washington telegraphed a plea to stop the strike, which the company charged was "in direct defiance" of a temporary regional WLB decision last week on the dispute, which resulted in a six-day strike last September by the unrecognized Supervisors' union.

David Newcomb, union president, replied with an announcement of a vote to stay out "until the Army takes over the management of the Wright plants."

The United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.), bargaining agent for 30,000 Wright employes, charged the company had shut off power at 10:45 a. m. and "is making us take part by locking out our members," local President Albert Capone said.

In a statement today the company said it had notified Army officials of the "gravity of the situation."

The statement said "production of cyclone 18-cylinder aircraft engines for the B-29 Superfortresses was crippled today" and added, "we will be forced to close down vital departments as soon as the ratio of supervisors to production workers becomes too far out of balance."

Newcomb estimated 28,000 out so far with four plants shut down and that 14,000 more on tonight's night shift would be affected.

Newcomb announced the union had voted to throw picket lines around the five plants and had wired President Roosevelt for intervention in its behalf.

Japanese Butler Has Lost Two Sons in U. S. Army

Letter of One Is Disclosed, Praising America Fervently

BELMONT, Mass., Nov. 13 (AP).—"America is a damn good country, and don't let any one tell you otherwise."

That's an excerpt from George Saito's letter to his father, Kiichi, a Japanese butler, after another son of the family, Calvin, had been killed in action in Italy on July 7. Three months later George also died in action in France.

They were two of the first five Japanese-Americans at the Amache, Colo., relocation camp to volunteer for Army service when the War Department granted the privilege in February, 1943. Still another son, Shozo, is in the armed forces.

Mr. Kiichi's sorrow is great, but the pride in his sons has made it bearable.

George's letter reciting the details of how Calvin died a hero, "personally directing and guiding the fire on positions which routed the enemy" helps. The letter said:

"Dad, this is no time to be preaching to you, but I have something on my chest which I want you to hear. In spite of Cal's supreme sacrifice, don't let any one tell you that he was foolish or made a mistake to volunteer.

"Of what I've seen in my travels on our mission I am more than convinced that we've done the right thing in spite of what has happened in the past.

"America is a damn good country, and don't let any one tell you otherwise."

Mr. Kiichi was born in Morika, Japan, came to this country as a young man, served as a head waiter in a Los Angeles hotel and later worked as a gardener on the coast.

His fourth son, Kazuo, is a war worker in Chicago, and his only daughter, Mary, is employed at the International Institute House in Boston.

2 War Prisoners Caught On Philadelphia Ship

Philadelphia, Nov. 13 (AP)—Two German prisoners of war who escaped from a Nebraska prison camp last July in an effort to return to Germany to fight for "Hitler, our leader," were in Federal custody today after being discovered aboard the Spanish merchant ship Castilla Ampudia at a South Philadelphia pier.

FBI agents announced their capture last night after an intensive search which finally revealed them hiding in empty oil drums. Customs guards instituted the search, aided by the Volunteer Port Security Force, after the ship's carpenter reported he had seen two strangers sneak aboard.

The men, who escaped the Scotts Bluff (Neb.) prisoner-of-war camp, were identified as Karl Tomola, 46, an infantryman, and Wolfgang Kurzer, 22, bomber copilot.

John F. Sears, special agent in charge of the FBI here, said the men denied that any member of the ship's crew had helped them.

Freighter Grounded, 3 Die

The Lake Folcraft Victim of Oct. 17 Hurricane on Cuban Coast

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 13 (AP).—Chris Daly, Miami War Shipping Administration representative, revealed today that the United States freighter Lake Folcraft was driven aground on the Cuban coast, with a loss of three lives, during the hurricane of Oct. 17. Salvage operations were completed and the ship was taken to port before the announcement was made.

Mr. Daly said the vessel, owned by the Lykes Bros. Steamship Company, of New Orleans, and commanded by Capt. William H. Swift, of Bon Secour, Ala., was piled on a reef off Havana. She was outbound from New Orleans with military supplies. The dead were listed as including Oiler Melvillew Webster, whose mother, Mrs. Mildred Webster, lives in Jamaica, N. Y. An injury to his leg has kept Seaman Arthur A. Rauhauser, of the Bronx, N. Y., confined to the Naval Hospital at Key West.

FLEES IN PLANE, PRISONER CAUGHT

Army Flier Serving Term of 30 Years Nabbed by FBI in New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 13—(AP) Robert G. Kaslow, former army air officer, who escaped from the Craig Field, Ala., guard house Friday night and fled in an army plane, was apprehended here tonight by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The assistant special agent in charge of the New Orleans FBI office, Zack J. Van Landingham, called a news conference at 7:45 p.m. to announce that Kaslow, 21, who was serving a 30-year sentence at the Alabama Field for violations of the articles of war, was taken in custody at 5 p.m. in the cocktail lounge of a New Orleans hotel.

Dressed in Full Uniform

Van Landingham said Kaslow was dressed in the full uniform of a second lieutentant in the United States Air Corps and was accompanied by "a New Orleans girl whom he had known approximately one year." The agent said the girl was being held for questioning but he declined to identify her He said she was about 25 years old.

The FBI agent said Kaslow would be held in the parish jail here tonight and that Federal charges are to be filed against him tomorrow "for possession of a stolen army plane in this area."

He already had been charged with theft of the plane in Alabama.

The plane in which the flier was said by Craig field officers and FBI agents to have escaped crashed Saturday at Higgins airport near here. It was unoccupied.

Parachuted from Plane

Van Landingham said Kaslow told FBI men he parachuted from the plane at 5,000 feet above a swamp near here and made his way into the city on foot.

The FBI announcement said Kaslow, a resident of Johnson City, N. Y., broke from the stockade at Craig field sometime Friday night, obtained a parachute by breaking into a storage room at the field and found his uniform in a room where he knew it to be stored.

The FBI quoted the flier as saying he tried two planes before he found one with sufficient gasoline. He then took off, ignoring radioed orders from the field and followed the air beam from Craig Field at Selma, Ala., to Mobile, Ala., where he took the New Orleans beam and turned westward "for no reason at all."

At the time of his escape Kaslow was being held for transfer to the Federal penitentiary where he had been sentenced to 30 years by an army court martial for violation of eight articles of war, including forgery, assault with intent to kill, larceny and desertion.

ACCORD IS SOUGHT ON AVIATION LINES

CHICAGO, Nov. 13—Edward P. Warner, vice chairman of the Civil Aeronautics board, expressed the belief today that some complete agreements essential to hopes for immediate reopening of commercial airplanes, would be reached at the International Civil Aviation conference although the full technical job cannot be accomplished here.

As an example, he said, there was likely to be acceptance of some "rules of the road" for international air transports and also adoption of a plan for conducting accident search and investigation. Such a step would facilitate operation of airlines pending the adoption of a full technical convention.

A method to complete the remaining details of an agreement covering the technical phases of international flying was recommended yesterday.

Interest in the Anglo-American conversations increased today when Adolf A. Berle, Jr., the United States chairman, failed to appear for his usual press conference. It is understood that the talks, involving Berle, H. J. Symington of Canada and Lord Swinton of Great Britain, were continuing today in an effort to resolve certain differences among the three proposals for a world aviation authority.

On the technical side, there seemed to be general agreement on the Canadian proposal for handling international airline accidents. This would provide that search for missing aircraft should be started as quickly as possible by the nearest country with adequate facilities. An international pool has been suggested to finance such searchers.

Eire has proposed that the convention avoid any provision which would prevent a nation from establishing a customs-free airport. Warner said that this principle seemed to be widely accepted, since the value of being able to transfer from one plane to another without going through customs was obvious.

licensing of the personnel and aircraft, registration and identification, collection and exchange of meteorological data, maps, airports and customs procedure. The goal is a convention such as was adopted by 33 nations at Paris in 1919.

"Recommended Practices"

The matter already agreed upon would be accepted by the participating countries as "recommended practices, toward which the national practices of the several States should be directed as far and as rapidly as proves practicable."

The resolution said that it was not possible to reach a final conviction on some of the details at this time, and proposed that the draft be used as the base for further consideration by the various countries, which are to report any suggested changes by next May 1. If an interim assembly has been established, as appears likely, the changes would be submitted to it; otherwise they would be sent to the United States for transmittal to the other nations.

Air Group Gets U. S. 'Standardization' Plan

Chicago, Nov. 13 (AP)—Establishment of machinery for adopting world standards and procedures for aircraft operation has been recommended to the International Civil Aviation Conference so that the technical work begun here can be completed some time after next May 1.

Officials said this represented the goal outlined by the United States in its agenda, which called for recommendations for setting up and adopting standards in certain fields and also for drafting "definitive proposals for submission to the interested governments."

80 P. C. Agreed Upon

T. P. Wright, civil aeronautic administrator and technical secretary of the conference, said that the delegations were 100 per cent. agreed on 80 per cent. of the detailed matter. Committees will report Wednesday.

The recommendation in the technical field aims at standardization of aviation activities involving communications, traffic control

FEDERAL JUDGE

CHICAGO, Nov. 13—(AP) Federal Judge John P. Barnes today dismissed the suit of Montgomery Ward and company which sought to nullify a War Labor board order providing arbitration between the company and the United Mail Order, Warehouse and Retail Employes union (CIO).

The company had asked a declaratory judgment, contending the WLB order was not issued in compliance with War Labor Disputes act. The WLB had appointed Judge William L. Knous of Colorado Supreme court to arbitrate grievance hearings between the company and the union.

Harry Rand, special assistant to the U.S. Attorney General, told the court a similar suit was dismissed by the Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington. He said that court maintained that WLB findings are advisory and not subject to court review.

Stuart Ball, company attorney, contended that although the WLB has taken the position that its orders are not enforceable, its actions show it intends them to be enforced.

In his ruling, Judge Barnes upheld Rand's contention, saying that since the circuit court had denied a similar Montgomery Ward suit, "it would be foolhardy for me to rule otherwise."

"I dislike very much to hold that Congress was play acting when it adopted the Labor Disputes act and stated its orders were not legally enforceable," he continued.

"I am not well satisfied with what seems to be the law set up by the Circuit Court of Appeals but it is my duty to speak out what seems to be the law. I must bear in mind that they (the Appeals court) had every opportunity to correct any errors of the lower court."

The union contended the Court lacked jurisdiction since the Union was a New York organization. Besides the Union, Wards named Judge Knous and Francis Heisler, CIO attorney, as defendants.

The original WLB order was issued June 6 and among other things directed Wards to continue its expired contract with the Union, and to submit grievances to arbitration.

Company attorneys subsequently challenged WLB's right to order continuance of the contract, and the motion to dismiss the suit was filed by the Union attorneys Sept. 9. Previous negotiations for a new contract ended in stalemate.

The suit and order were outgrowths of difficulties extending back to Feb. 12, 1942 when the union was certified as bargaining agent following an election. The trouble culminated April 26, 1944, with government seizure of the huge mail order house on Chicago's north side, and the forcible ejection by the army of Sewell L. Avery, chairman of the company's board of directions.

Civil Air Pattern To Be Drawn

Oklahoma City, Nov. 13 (AP)—A pattern for post-war expansion of civilian aviation will be formulated at the Second National Aviation Clinic opening Wednesday.

Leaders from every phase of the industry will attend the session which will feature addresses by Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces; Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York, and top-ranking aviation leaders.

During the four-day meeting, problems of governmental regulations, the personal airplane, airport and traffic control, travel and trade by air, and training and education in the sciences and arts of the air will be examined.

State Vs. Federal Control

Orville M. Mosier, vice-president of American Air Lines and general chairman of the clinic, said one vital issue is the question of State versus Federal rights in the control of aviation.

Arguing the State side of the question will be Sheldon B. Steers, director of the Michigan Aeronautics Board. The Federal case will be discussed by John H. Fredericks, professor of transportation and industry, University of Texas.

The drive for uniform State aviation laws and retention of police powers by the State instead of complete Federal regulation came into the spotlight at last year's clinic.

Pre-Convention Sessions

In order to prepare a State rights plan in advance, the National Association of State Aviation Officials opened a two-day convention here today.

William L. Anderson, director of the Pennsylvania Aeronautics Commission, said he believed that State aviation officials will be able to submit a uniform program which "will remove the argument for complete Federal control of aviation."

DOCTOR'S DEGREE CONFERRED ON PYLE

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Nov. 13—(AP) War Correspondent Ernie Pyle became Dr. Pyle today as Indiana university conferred upon him the honorary degree of doctor of humane letters—the first ever given by the school.

William C. Pyle, his father, and others from his home town of Dana, Ind., watched as President Herman B. Wells presented the diploma to Pyle.

Dr. Wells said:

"Ernest Taylor Pyle, homespun Hoosier, world traveler, discerning reporter, unexcelled interpreter of the minds and hearts of men in war and peace, advocate for the rights of the soldier in the ranks, in recognition of your distinguished achievements, your university gladly confers upon you the degree of doctor of humane letters, with all the rights and privileges thereto appertaining."

Pyle, apparently overwhelmed, said nothing.

After the ceremony Pyle returned to Dana. His future assignment has not been announced.

Major Gable, who appears in the picture, is scheduled to be here in connection with the premier.

The picture tells the story of the 351st Bomb Group of the Eighth Air Force from its organization at Albuquerque through 25 bombing missions over Germany.

Her son, Sergt. Ronald Harbour Jr., fought on Saipan and is now in a rest camp. All five of her brothers are now in combat areas.

OFFICER TELLS OF PRINCETON

Capt. John M. Hoskins, Of Maryland, Lost Foot In Battle

San Francisco, Nov. 13 (AP)—The light aircraft carrier Princeton was in the battle of the Philippines because a shipboard fire reached one of the bomb stowage rooms, Capt. John M. Hoskins, one of the first casualties of the naval engagement to be returned to the United States, said today.

Captain Hoskins, who had been slated to relieve the Princeton's regular skipper, lost his right foot when the bomb-stowage room exploded.

Family In Maryland

"I just went along for the ride on that one," said Captain Hoskins, whose wife and three children live in Brookenville, Md. He said he boarded the Princeton the day she left the embarkation port for the drive on the Philippines but "they shipped me back before I took command as relief for Captain Buracker (William H. Buracker, Luray, Va.)"

"We had spent a few days' busting up the Nansei Shoto islands (the Rykuku's on most maps) and ten took a few swipes at Formosa before heading for the Philippines," he continued.

Japs Decided To Fight

"We got hit when the Japs decided they'd better come out and fight. Our task force tangled with some of the Nips coming from the north and one of their dive bombers planted a big one in us amidships."

With the aid of fire fighters from an American destroyer and light cruiser, the Princeton crew managed to extinguish most of the flames, but the warships had to leave before completing their job because of the appearance of enemy planes and submarines.

"We thought we still could save the ship," Captain Hoskins said, "but the fire in the after part made headway and along in the afternoon one of our bomb stowage rooms went up."

The Princeton later was sunk by American destroyer torpedoes.

THIRD NIGHT LEAD WESTERN FRONT (200 UP)
BY HOWARD COWAN

LONDON, TUESDAY, NOV 14-(AP)-THREE OF METZ'S 22 FORTS--ONE OF THEM A KEYSTONE IN THE SOUTHERN DEFEMSES OF THE CITADEL--FELL WITH ASTONISHING SPEED YESTERDAY TO U.S. THIRD ARMY TROOPS WHO STORMED THROUGH SNOW AND BITTER COLD ALL ALONG A 40-MILE FRONT.

THE GERMANS CEDED WITHOUT A STRUGGLE THE SUBTERRANEAN FORT L'AISNE, ONE OF NINE MAIN FORTS GUARDING THE CITY FIVE MILES TO THE SOUTH, AND TWO NEARBY SMALLER FORTIFICATIONS, INDICATING THEY WERE FALLING BACK INTO THE CITY'S INNER DEFENSES.

THE WHEELING MOVEMENT SOUTHEAST OF METZ PRESSED ON UP TO FOUR MILES TO WITHIN 15 MILES OF THE SAAR BORDER, HEIGHTENING THE PERIL OF ENCIRCLEMENT TO THE CITY.

FORT L'AISNE IS A SERIES OF UNDERGROUND FORTRESSES SIMILAR TO FORT DRIANT, SOUTHWEST OF METZ ACROSS THE MOSELLE RIVER, WHICH THE THIRD ARMY TRIED IN VAIN TO CAPTURE.

PRESSING THEIR HEAD-ON ATTACK AGAINST METZ, THE DOUGHBOYS CAPTURED THE VILLAGE OF CORNY, ONLY 4 1/2 MILES SOUTHWEST OF METZ ON THE EAST BANK OF THE MOSELLE ACROSS FROM FORT DRIANT.

THE FIRST INDICATION THAT FIELD MARSHAL GEN.KARL RUDOLF GERD VON RUNDSTEDT MAY NOT TRY TO HOLD METZ CAME IN A BROADCAST EARLY TODAY FROM THE GERMAN COMMANDER'S HEADQUARTERS IN THE WEST.

"CERTAINLY, METZ IS BEING FANATICALLY DEFENDED," THE BROADCAST SAID, "BUT METZ HAS FULFILLED ITS TASK ALREADY DURING THE MONTHS OF SEPTEMBER AND OCTOBER WHEN IT STOPPED THE ADVANCE OF THE THIRD ARMY AND THUS ENABLED THE GERMANS TO DEEPEN THEIR FRONT ZONE FORTIFICATIONS.

SANGUINARY FIGHTING WAS IN PROGRESS AT A NEWLY-WON BRIDGEHEAD ACROSS THE MOSELLE RIVER 12 MILES NORTH OF METZ NEAR UCKANGE, WHICH POTENTIALLY RAISES THE ENCIRCLING PERIL FOR METZ.

FOUR MILES FARTHER NORTH A FORT EAST OF THIONVILLE WAS SEIZED BY OTHER FORCES WHO HAD DARINGLY CROSSED THE MOSELLE TWO DAYS AGO.

THERE WERE CLOSE TO A JUNCTION WITH VETERANS OF THE 90TH DIVISION WHO DROVE THE ORIGINAL BRIDGEHEAD ACROSS THE STREAM AT KOENIGSMACHER, AND NOW WERE METHODICALLY REINFORCING IT WITHIN FOUR MILES OF THE GERMAN FRONTIER.

THE KOENIGSMACHER FORCES SMASHED THREE MILES SOUTH INTO THE TOWN OF VALMESTROFF, THREE MILES EAST OF THIONVILLE.

STUBBORN RESISTANCE WAS HOLDING BACK THIRD ARMY FORCES 4 1/2 MILES NORTH OF METZ IN THE MAIZIERES-LES-METZ AREA ON THE WEST BANK OF THE MOSELLE.

(THE BRAZZAVILLE RADIO QUOTED GERMAN SOURCES AS SAYING THE ALLIES HAD LAUNCHED AN OFFENSIVE AGAINST THE LONG-BESIEGED GERMAN U-BASE AT ST.NAZAIRE, IN BRITTANY, AND HAD BROKEN THROUGH THE OUTER DEFENSES, CBS SHORT WAVE LISTENERS REPORTED.)

THESE COUNTERBLOWS, CENTERING AROUND THE FORET DE BRIDE ET KOECKING NORTH OF DIEUZE, GAINED UP TO A MILE. BUT AT THE SAME TIME AMERICAN FORCES BROKE OUT OF THE EAST SIDE OF THE FOREST TO HARAUCOURT, 20 MILES WEST OF THE COMMUNICATIONS CENTER OF SARREBOURG.

UNCERTAIN FOOTING OF LORRAINE'S MUDDY BATTLEFIELDS, AS MUCH AS GERMAN RESISTANCE, SLOWED THE THIRD ARMY FORCES CUTTING AROUND METZ FROM THE SOUTHEAST ON THIS SIXTH DAY OF LT.GEN.GEORGE S. ATTON'S WINTER OFFENSIVE, SUPREME HEADQUARTERS DECLARED.

MEANWHILE, THE OUTFLANKING PERIL TO METZ WAS HEIGHTED BY U.S. INFANTRYMEN BREAKING ACROSS THE MOSELLE RIVER 12 MILES NORTH, NOT FAR FROM AN ORIGINAL CROSSING WITHIN FOUR MILES OF THE GERMAN BORDER.

THE NEW BRIDGEHEAD ACROSS THE MOSELLE--MOST FORMIDABLE OF ALL THE WATER BARRIERS GUARDING METZ--WAS THROWN ACROSS NEAR UCKANGE, FOUR MILES SOUTH OF THIONVILLE, AND WAS STEADILY BEING REINFORCED.

THIS CROSSING WAS EIGHT MILES SOUTHWEST OF THE FIRST BRIDGEHEAD AROUND KOENIGSMACHER, WHERE THE 90TH DIVISION DROVE THE GERMANS BACK OVER ALL THE GROUND THE ENEMY GAINED IN YESTERDAY'S COUNTER-ATTACK AND SOLIDIFIED ITS POSITIONS. THERE WAS AS YET NO INDICATION THE BRIDGEHEZDS HAD BEEN MERGED.

THE GERMAN COMMUNIQUE SAID THE AMERICANS STRIKING FROM THE KOENIGSMACHER BRIDGEHEAD HAD FOUGHT INTO THE EAST HALF OF THIONVILLE, ONE OF THE STRONGPOINTS GUARDING METZ'S NORTHERN APPROACHES. THE AMERICANS ALREADY HOLD THE WEST HALF ON THE OPPOSITE BANK OF THE MOSELLE.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS SAID TWO-THIRDS OF A FORT IN THE THIONVILLE SECTOR HAD BEEN CAPTURED, BUT THE EXACT LOCATION WAS NOT GIVEN.

ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT LEWIS HAWKINS REPORTED THE GERMANS WERE FALLING BACK IN THE FACE OF THE FLANKING SWEEP THREATENING TO CUT OFF METZ FROM BEHIND AND APPARENTLY WERE HEADING FOR THE SUBTERRANEAN FORTS RINGING THE CITY.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS DISCOUNTED REPORTS THE GERMANS WERE PULLING OUT OF METZ, A FORTIFIED CITY WHICH IN MODERN TIMES NEVER HAS FALLEN TO FRONTAL ASSAULT.

ALTHOUGH THE GAP BETWEEN THE FORCES NORTH OF METZ AND THOSE SEVEN MILES TO THE SOUTHEAST HAD BEEN SQUEEZED TO 13 MILES AND WAS WITHIN RANGE OF AMERICAN ARTILLERY, AT LEAST TWO RAILROADS AND NUMEROUS HIGHWAYS FUNNEL INTO METZ OVER WHICH THE GARRISON CAN BE SUPPLIED FROM GERMANY.

HAWKINS SAID THERE STILL WAS NO SUBSTANTIAL SIGN OF ANY ENEMY WITHDRAWAL FROM METZ, EVEN THOUGH THE GERMANS PUT UP LITTLE OPPOSITION TO THE CAPTURE OF VERNY, POMMERIEUX, LIEHON AND CORNO, SIX TO SEVEN MILES SOUTH OF THE CITY.

THE AMERICANS WERE ABOUT 4 1/2 MILES NORTH OF METZ AT THE POINT OF CLOSEST APPROACH, AND ON THE SOUTH WERE FIGHTING INTO THE OUTSKIRTS OF COIN-SUR-SEILLE, FIVE MILES FROM METZ. RESISTANCE IN THIS QUARTER WAS STRONG.

THE U.S. SEVENTH ARMY ON PATTON'S RIGHT FLANK FOUGHT TO WITHIN A MILE OF ST.DIE, SENTINEL CITY AT THE ENTRANCE TO ONE OF THE PASSES THROUGH THE VOSGES MOUNTAINS TO THE RHINE. ITS FORCES CAPTURED THE VILLAGES OF LA BOLLE AND LES MOITRESSES, JUST TO THE WEST.

TEN MILES SOUTHWEST OF ST.DIE THE SEVENTH ALSO OVERRAN THE VILLAGE OF LA CHAPELLE.

SEE-SAW FIGHTING STILL RAGED IN THE GERMAN FOREST OF HURTGEN, SOUTHEAST OF AACHEN, WHERE THE ENEMY DROVE THE AMERICANS BACK YESTERDAY ONLY TO LOSE ALL GAINS TO A COUNTERBLOW.

IT WAS DISCLOSED THAT TWO U.S. COMPANIES HAD BEEN CUT OFF IN THE AREA SINCE LAST SATURDAY, BUT THEY NOW HAD BEEN RELIEVED. A FRONT DISPATCH LAST WEEK SAIS AMERICANS IN THE VOSSENACK AREA HAD IGNORED AN ULTIMATUM TO SURRENDER.

REPORTS FROM THE HOLLAND BATTLEFRONT SAID ARTILLERY DUELS WERE RISING IN TEMPO AND PATROL ACTION WAS VIGOROUS ON BOTH SIDES ALONG THE MAAS RIVER, BUT THERE WERE NO CHANGES ON THE MUD-BOGGED FRONT.

THE RIGHT FLANK OF PATTON'S ADVANCE WAS BELIEVED PROTECTED BY FLOODING NOT ONLY FROM THE RAINS THAT PLAGUE THE FRONT BUT BY AMERICAN BOMBING OF THE DIEUZE DAM.

HAWKINS SAID THE GERMANS ALSO WERE BLOWING UP SMALL DAMS AND LOCKS ALONG THE RIVER AND CANAL SYSTEM EAST OF THIONVILLE, BUT THE RESULTANT FLOODING WAS NOT EXTENSIVE AND THE PURPOSE OF THE MOVE WAS NOT APPARENT.

NOV 14 1944

THE REPORTED ADVANCE TO BERMERING IN THE DIEUZE SETOR PLACED THE AMERICANS THREE MILES EAST OF MORHANGE, SITE OF THE FIRST BIG BATTLE BETWEEN THE GERMANS AND FRENCH IN THE FIRST WORLD WAR.

THE DRIVE ON BERMERING CUT ACROSS THE SARREBOURG RAILWAY AT A THIRD POINT. THREE MILES SOUTH OF BERMERING, ELEMENTS OF THE FOURTH ARMORED DIVISION AND THE 26TH INFANTRY DIVISION FOUGHT INTO LIDREZING, THREE MILES WEST OF THE RAILWAY JUNCTION OF BERESTROFF.

THE COUNT OF PRISONERS REACHED 4,836 YESTERDAY AT THE END OF THE FIFTH DAY OF THE OFFENSIVE.

WITH LT.GEN.GEORGE S.PATTON'S OFFENSIVE NOW ENTERING ITS SIXTH DAY, AMERICAN UNITS DRIVING UP BEHIND METZ FROM POSITIONS SOUTHEAST OF THE CITY THUS FAR HAVE CUT THE METZ-SARREBOURG-STRASBOURG AND METZ-FORBACH-SAARBRUCKEN RAILWAY LINES. THE AMERICANS ALSO HAVE THRUST WITHIN TWO MILES OF THE METZ-SAARLAUTERN LINE SO THAT ITS USE CAN BE DENIED TO THE GERMANS WHENEVER THE ALLIED COMMAND WISHES, A FRONT DISPATCH SAID.

THE GERMANS STILL HAVE ANOTHER RAIL CONNECTION LEADING NORTHEAST FROM METZ BY A ROUNDABOUT WAY TO SAARLAUTERN AND SAARBRUCKEN, AND IT IS OF VITAL IMPORTANCE NOW TO THE GASOLINE-STARVED GERMAN ARMY.

DESPITE RAIN AND SNOW WHICH ROBBED PATTON'S MEN OF ALL AIR SUPPORT, AMERICAN TANKS AND INFANTRY SMASHED FORWARD FROM TWO TO FOUR MILES ALONG A 20-MILE FRONT SOUTHEAST OF METZ YESTERDAY, ADVANCING 15 MILES BEYOND THE ORIGINAL JUMP-OFF POSITIONS.

SEVEN MILES SOUTHEAST OF METZ THE SIXTH ARMORED DIVISION CROSSED THE NIED RIVER AT SANRY-SUR-NIED, CUT A RAIL LINK FROM SAARBRUCKEN AN STRASBOURG TO METZ AND PUSHED TO A POSITION 4 1/2 MILES FROM THE MAIN HIGHWAY TO SAARBRUCKEN, BRINGING THAT ROAD WITHIN ARTILLERY RANGE. THI RAILROAD WHICH WAS CUT DIVIDES FIVE MILES FARTHER ON INTO BRANCHE RUNNING NORTHEAST TO THE SAAR BASIN AND SOUTHEAST TO THE RHINE.

SIX MILES SOUTHEAST OF SANRY-SUR-NIED THE HAN-SUR-NIED BRIDGEHEAD WAS DEEPENED TO AT LEAST TWO MILES AND TANKS DROVE UP TO HERNY, ONLY 17 MILES FROM THE SAAR FRONTIER AND BUT SIX MILES FROM AN ENEMY BASE AT FAULQUEMONT, WHERE THE GERMANS WERE REPORTED WITHDRAWING MATERIAL.

FARTHER DOWN THE LINE THE FOURTH ARMORED DIVISION ADVANCED MORE THAN THREE MILES TO A POINT BEYOND RODALBE, 2 1/2 MILES FROM THE RAIL JUNCTION TOWN OF BENESTROFF.

BETWEEN THE TWO AMERICAN ARMORED FORCES THE 35TH INFANTRY DIVISION IN A FOUR-MILE ADVANCE SWEPT THE GERMANS FROM THE CHATEAU-SALINS FOREST, ONCE A MAJOR ENEMY STRONGHOLD, AND CONTINUED MORE THAN A MILE BEYOND TO THE VICINITY OF CHATEAU-BREHAIN. THIS DIVISION SCORED THE GREATEST GAIN YESTERDAY.

IN THEIR FIRST COUNTERTHRUST ALONG THE LINE SOUTHEAST OF METZ, THE GERMANS ATTEMPTED TO DRIVE EAST TOWARD HAMPONT, THREE MILES EAST OF CHATEAU-SALINS. THIS BLOW AGAINST THE BASE OF THE AMERICAN SALIENT IN THAT AREA WAS HELD BY THE 26TH INFANTRY DIVISION, WHICH THEN TOOK THE INITIATIVE ITSELF AND PUSHED A MILE AND A HALF TO HARAUCOURT, FIVE MILES SOUTHEAST OF CHATEAU-SALINS.

NINETEEN MILES NORTH OF METZ THE GERMANS HAMMERED A WEDGE A MILE AND ONE-HALF DEEP INTO THE KOENIGSMACHER BRIDGEHEAD OVER THE MOSELLE RIVER. THIS COUNTERATTACK WAS CHECKED NEAR KERLING, THREE MILES EAST OF KOENIGSMACHER, AND THEN THE 90TH INFANTRY DIVISION SEIZED OLD FORT KOENIGSMACHER, VIRTUALLY PART OF THE MAGINOT LINE, TAKING 300 PRISONERS.

ON THE SOUTHERN END OF THE 450-MILE WESTERN FRONT THE U.S.SEVENTH ARMY DREW UP ALONG THE MUERTHE RIVER AND PRESSED TO WITHIN TWO MILES OF ST.DIE, IN THE ENTRANCE TO ONE OF THE PASSES THROUGH THE VOSGES MOUNTAINS TO THE RHINE.

THESE TROOPS SEIZED HERBAVILLE, TWO MILES NORTHWEST OF ST.DIE, AND LA FOSSE, THREE MILES SOUTHWEST, CLEANING ALL BUT SCATTERED UNITS FROM OHE FORESTS OF MORTAGNE AND DE CHAMP SCREENING ST.DIE ON THE WEST. THEY ALSO TOOK THE VILLAGES OF ETIVAL AND PAJAILLE ON THE MUERTHE RIVER, SIX MILES NORTHWEST OF ST.DIE AND LE VIVIER.

NORTH OF THE THIRD ARMY AREA ALONG THE PORTION OF THE FRONT INSIDE GERMANY THE AMERICAN FIRST ARMY CLEANED OUT MORE PILLBOXES NEAR SCHMIDT, SOUTHEAST OF AACHEN.

LONDON, NOV 13-(AP)-PLANS FOR A STATE FUNERAL FOR WANG CHING-WEI, 62, PRESIDENT AND PREMIER OF THE PUPPET GOVERNMENT OF CHINA AT NANKING, WERE BEING COMPLETED TODAY IN NANKING.

THE DEATH OF THE CHINESE QUISLING WAS ANNOUNCED YESTERDAY BY THE TOKYO RADIO, WHICH SAID HE DIED FRIDAY IN A JAPANESE HOSPITAL OF DIABETES.

THE BROADCAST SAID A SPECIAL MEETING IN NANKING OF THE CENTRAL POLITICAL COUNCIL HAD NAMED CHEN KUNG-PO, FORMER PRESIDENT OF THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL OF THE NANKING GOVERNMENT, AS ACTING PRESIDENT AND THAT A COMMITTEE HEADED BY CHEN WAS COMPLETING PLANS FOR A STATE FUNERAL FOR WANG.

BEFORE DESERTING THE GOVERNMENT OF GENERALISSIMO CHIANG KAI-SHEK TO BECOME RULER OF THE JAPANESE-SPONSORED NANKING GOVERNMENT IN 1939, WANG HAD HELD HIGH OFFICES IN THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT OF CHINA. WITH THE 24TH DIVISION ON LEYTE, NOV.13-(AP)-EVERYTHING HAPPENED TO SERGEANT EATON DURING THE BREAKNECK RIDGE BATTLE NOV.12 THE TANK COMMANDED BY EATON---EDWIN EATON, OF PECK, MICH.--WAS HIT BY A 75-MILLIMETER SHELL AND HAD THE TURRET BLOWN OFF WHILE HELPING CLEAN JAPANESE AUTOMATIC WEAPONS OUT OF A THICKET.

EATON BEGAN THROWING GRENADES TOWARD BOTH SIDES OF THE TANK THROUGH THE OPEN HATCH, EXPLOSING ONLY HIS HAND AS HE THREW; BUT ON ONE HEAVE, A JAPANESE 50-CALIBER MACHINEGUN BULLET GRAZED HIS HAND WHILE HE WAS HOLDING A LIVEGRENADE IN IT. THE GRENADE FELL DOWN INSIDE THE TANK, WHERE IT EXPLODED ATOP A PILE OF AMMUNITION BUT FORTUNATELY DID NOT SET IT OFF.

NO FRAGMENTS HIT EATON, BUT ONE DID GO THROUGH THE TROUSERS OF CORPORAL ROBERT BAENEN, OF GREEN BAY, WISC., WHO ESCAPED INJURY.

OTHERS IN THE TANK MANAGED TO WITHDRAW THE DAMAGED VEHICLE FROM THE FIGHT. THESE THREE WORKING WITH LEVERS WHICH LOOKED ONLY FAINTLY LIKE THE ORIGINALS, WERE PRIVATE GNE WOOLLEY, OF RIO, ILLINOIS; CORPORAL ALLEN HANSON, OF MADISON, WISC., AND PRIVATE HENRY WORCHESTER, OF OLD ORCHARD BEACH, MAINE. NONE WAS INJURED.

THE INTERIOR EXPLOSION PUT ALL THE TANK'S PERISCOPES OUT OF COMMISSION, LEAVING THE CREW BLIND. THE VEHICLE, BLUNDERING THROUGH THE WOODS, WAS FINALLY GUIDED TO SAFETY BY FIRST LT.LEON HUBBELL, OF DULUTH, MINN., WHO GAVE THE CREW DIRECTIONS BY RADIO FROM A NEARBY HILLTOP.

BEFORE IT CAUGHT THE ENEMY SHELL, SERGEANT EATON'S TANK HAD KNOCKED OUT TWO MACHINE GUN NESTS AND KILLED SEVERAL JAPANESE.

WITH 24TH DIVISION ON LEYTE, P.I., NOV. 13-(AP)-TWENTY-FOURTH DIVISION TROOPS ARE FIGHTING A DEADLY BATTLE ON "BREAK-NECK" RIDGE IN AN ATTEMPT TO BOTTLE UP A RE-INFORCED ENEMY ON THE ROAD LEADING TO ORMOC, SOME 20-ODD MILES AWAY.

THE ENEMY FORCES ARE LARGER AND HAVE MORE AUTOMATIC WEAPONS AND ARTILLERY, BUT THEY ARE STAGING FEWER NIGHT ATTACKS. THIS USUALLY CAN BE TAKEN AS AN INDICATION, OFFICERS SAID, THAT HE IS LOSING HIS AGGRESSIVE FORCE. ON THE OTHER HAND, HE STILL IS RESISTING AT EVERY FAVORABLE DEFENSE POINT ALONG THE ROAD. EVIDENCE HAS BEEN FOUND THAT HE IS BOOBY TRAPPING HIS OWN AND U.S. DEAD, AND IS LAYING MORE ANTI-TANK MINES.

MEANWHILE, OTHER REGIMENTS OF THIS DIVISION ARE ENGAGED IN A BITTER RIGHT FLANK SKIRMISH WITH THE JAPANESE FOR POSSESSION OF THE ROAD NEAR THE LITTLE TOWN OF LIMON.

FAR TO THE LEFT OF THE ROAD IN THE MOUNTAINS SEPARATING LEYTE VALLEY FROM THE ORMOC CORRIDOR, FIGHTING CONTINUED ON DIM, MISTY HILL 1525. THIS IS A 2,000 YARD LONG SERIES OF RIDGES, HILLS, VALLEYS AND PEAKS. THE JAPANESE HOLD PART OF IT AND THE YANKS HOLD THE REMAINDER.

NEW YORK, NOV. 13-(AP)-LT.MERRILL V. ALDERS, A NAVY DIVE-BOMBER PILOT FROM YOUNGSTOWN, O., SPENT A WEEK ADRIFT WITH MEMBERS OF HIS CREW AND WAS RESCUED AND RETURNED TO A CARRIER OF ADMIRAL WILLIAM F. HALSEY'S THIRD FLEET AFTER TWO CRASHES AT SEA AND A NARROW ESCAPE FROM A JAPANESE SUBMARINE, HE TOLD LESLIE NICHOLS, MUTUAL BROADCASTING CORRESPONDENT, IN AN INTERVIEW BROADCAST TODAY.

ALDERS' SHIP WAS HIT IN AN ATTACK ON A JAPANESE FLEET OFF THE ISLAND OF SAMAR ON THE SECOND MORNING OF THE SECOND BATTLE OF THE PHILIPPINE SEA.

HE GOT HIS PLANE AWAY FROM THE ENEMY VESSELS, BUT HAD TO MAKE A CRASH LANDING ON THE WATER. SICK FROM SWALLOWING SEA WATER AND WITHOUT FRESH WATER SUPPLIES, ALDERS AND HIS MEN FLOATED IN THEIR LIFE RAFT FOR THREE DAYS. THEN A NAVY TBM FLEW OVER AND SPOTTED THE RAFT. THE CREW OF THIS PLANE DECIDED BY VOTE TO ATTEMPT A LANDING TO PICK UP ALDERS AND HIS CREW.

NOV 14 1944

THEIR LANDING WAS SUCCESSFUL, BUT A HOLE IN THE TAIL OF THE SHIP ADMITTED WATER AND IT CRACKED UP IN THE TAKE-OFF. ALDERS, HIS MEN AND THE CREW OF THE TBM WERE ALL PLUNGED INTO THE SEA.

THERE WERE SO MANY OF THEM THEY COULDN'T ALL CROWD ON THE LIFE RAFT OF THE TBM. ONE MAN DIED AND WAS BURIED AT SEA. SHARKS ATTACKED THEM SEVERAL TIMES BUT NONE OF THE GROUP WAS INJURED. ONE JAP PLANE FLEW OVER, BUT APPARENTLY DID NOT SEEM THEM.

AT LAST A DESTROYER WAS DIRECTED TO THE DRIFTING LIFE RAFT BY NAVY SCOUT PLANES AND PICKED UP THE 15 MEN AND STARTED TO RETURN TO THE FLEET. AN HOUR LATER A JAPANESE SUBMARINE FIRED A TORPEDO, MISSING NARROWLY.

NEW YORK, NOV. 13- (AP)-THE SINKING OF THE TIRPITZ BY RAF LANCASTERS USING SIX-TON EARTHQUAKE BOMBS IS A TRIUMPH FOR A BLIND MAN WHO LOST HIS SIGHT BY A GERMAN BOMB BLAST IN THE ATTACKS ON LONDON IN 1940, THE BRITISH INFORMATION SERVICES SAID TONIGHT.

HE IS AIR COMMODORE PATRICK HUSKINSON, MX M.C., DIRECTOR OF ARMAMENT FOR THE ROYAL AIR FORCE AND HE SHARES WITH HIS TEAM OF EXPER THE CREDIT FOR DEVELOPING THE DEVASTATING 12,000-POUND BOMB.

BEHIND THE SCENES, THE M SERVICE REPORT SAID, HE AND HIS EXPERTS HAVE MADE A CLOSE EXAMINATION OF THE RESULTS OBTAINED ON HEAVILY-ARMORED TARGETS. THEY FOLLOWED THE BOMBING OF THE SCHARNHORST AND THE GNEISENAU WHILE THEY LAY IN BREST, AND THEY NOTED THAT ALTHOUGH THERE WAS AT LEAST ONE DIRECT HIT AND MANY NEAR MISSES THE BATTLESHIPS SUCCEEDED IN ESCAPING.

THEY SET TO WORK DEVELOPING THE NEW ARMOR-PIERCING EXPLOSIVE AND STREAMLINED IT TO HAVE A SWIFT AND ACCURATE DESCENT AND A STRONG ENOUGH CASING TO STAND THE IMPACT WITHOUT BREAKING UP. WHILI THIS BIG BOMB WAS BEING BUILT THE BOMB BAYS OF THE LANCASTERS WERE MODIFIED TO CARRY IT. JHM BJS 4pm

NEW YORK, NOV.13-(AP)-A FEDERAL GRAND JURY, ASSERTING THAT GERMAN INDUSTRY-SECRETLY HINDERED AMERICAN WAR PRODUCTION THROUGH AGREEMENTS WITH CERTAIN AMERICAN CORPORATIONS, TODAY FILED A PRESENTMENT URGING CONGRESS TO TIGHTEN ANTI-TRUST LAWS.

NOV 14 1944

"NUMEROUS AGREEMENTS, IN VIOLATION OF THE ANTI-TRUST LAWS, BETWEEN FOREIGN AND AMERICAN CORPORATIONS HAVE RESULTED IN RESTRICTING THE PRODUCTION IN THE UNITED STATES OF MANY PRODUCTS OF VITAL WARTIME NECESSITY AND GREAT PEACETIME VALUE," IT WAS SAID IN THE PRESENTMENT.

LAWRENCE J.SOBEL, FOREMAN OF THE GRAND JURY, SAID SPECIFIC EVIDENCE WHICH LED TO THE GRAND JURY INVESTIGATION CONCERNED DEALINGS BETWEEN CERTAIN UNDISCLOSED AMERICAN COMPANIES AND PERSONS AND CERTAIN FOREIGN COMPANIES AND PERSONS WHICH CAUSED A SEVERE SHORTAGE IN THE UNITED STATES OF A VITAL RAW MATERIAL USED IN MODERN MILITARY

RADIO EQUIPMENT.

HALDEMAN JOHNSON, SPECIAL ATTORNEY FOR THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT'S ANTI-TRUST DIVISION, SAID THE PRESENTMENT URGED THAT ANTI-TRUST LAWS BE REVISED BY INCREASING PENALTIES AND BY FORCING FOREIGN NATIONS TO MAKE PUBLIC ANY STOCK OWNERSHIP OR INTEREST IN AMERICAN COMPANIES. HE SAID COPIES OF IT WOULD BE SENT TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND MEMBERS OF THE CONGRESS.

NOV 14 1944

SOBEL SAID GERMAN OWNERS OF STOCK IN AMERICAN COMPANIES HAD REGISTERED THEIR OWNERSHIP WITH SWISS BANKS IN AN EFFORT TO AVOID PUBLICATION OF THEIR IDENTITY.

THIS INTERFERED GREATLY WITH AMERICAN PREPARATION FOR WAR PRIOR TO PEARL HARBOR, HE DECLARED.

"WE FEEL THAT CERTAIN GERMAN INTERESTS WHICH CONTROLLED INDUSTRY IN GERMANY UNDER THE KAISER, UNDER THE REPUBLIC AND UNDER THE NAZIS, WILL, UNLESS STOPPED, CONTROL IT FURTHER UNDER ANY FUTURE GOVERNMENT, ESPECIALLY IN THE CHEMICAL, SYNTHETIC RUBBER AND TUNGSTEN CARBIDE FIELDS," SOBEL CONTINUED.

HE SAID VITAL CHEMICAL FORMULAS AND BASIC MATERIALS HAD BEEN WITHHELD FROM AMERICAN INDUSTRY THROUGH PATENT AND CROSS-PATENT ARRANGEMENTS WHICH GERMAN COMPANIES HAD WITH AMERICAN COMPANIES.

GERMAN OWNERS FREQUENTLY DID NOT REVEAL ALL ESSENTIAL PARTS OF PATENTS IN FILING THEM WITH THIS COUNTRY, SOBEL SAID, SO THAT IN MANY CASES SERIOUS EXPLOSIONS AND CASUALTIES OCCURRED WHEN AMERICANS TRIED TO PUT THE PATENT IN PRODUCTION.

"AMERICAN COMPANIES WHICH ARE PARTIES TO THESE AGREEMENTS ARE IN SOME INSTANCES UNDER FOREIGN OWNERSHIP OR CONTROL AS A RESULT OF STOCK OWNERSHIP," THE PRESENTMENT ASSERTED.

THE PRESENTMENT, FILED WITH FEDERAL JUDGE VINCENT L.LEIBELL, SAID PENALTIES NOW PROVIDED BY ANTI-TRUST LAWS IN MANY CASES WERE NOT COMENSURATE WITH THE GRAVITY OF THE CRIME AND WITH THE EXTENT OF INJURY TO PUBLIC WELFARE.

UNDATED CHINA INTERPRETIVE (360)
BY RUSSELL BRINES
ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR EDITOR

A THIN PSYCHOLOGICAL THREAD WHICH BOUND THOUSANDS OF JAPANESE-DOMINATED CHINESE TO THE PUPPET NANKING GOVERNMENT HAS BEEN SNAPPED BY THE DEATH OF "PRESIDENT" WANG CHING-WEI.

THE RESULT MAY BE AN IMPORTANT REVERSAL FOR JAPAN'S INTENSIVE CAMPAIGN TO CREATE IN OCCUPIED CHINA A COMPLACENT CITIZENRY.

WANG WAS THE MOST PROMINENT PRE-WAR OFFICIAL THE JAPANESE SUCCEEDED IN ENTICING TO THEIR ELABORATE SYSTEM OF PUPPET GOVERNMENTS. MANY CHINESE REMEMBERED, AS THE JAPANESE INTENDED THEY SHOULD, THAT WANG HAD BEEN A CONFIDANTE OF CHIANG KAI-SHEK AND THE NEXT MOST IMPORTANT MAN IN THE LEGITIMATE CHINESE GOVERNMENT.

THERE WAS WIDESPREAD BELIEF THAT WANG HAD ACCEPTED SERVICE UNDER THE JAPANESE ON EXPLICIT ORDERS FROM CHIAANG KAI-SHEK.

THIS BELIEF WAS GROWING AMONG BOTH PEASANTS AND EDUCATED CLASSES, PARTICULARLY IN CENTRAL AND NORTH CHINA, WHEN I RETURNED AS A REPATRIATE FROM SHANGHAI IN LATE 1943.

CHUNGKING AGENTS WERE OPERATING SO EXTENSIVELY IN AREAS SUPPOSEDLY UNDER TIGHT JAPANESE CONTROL THAT THEY EVEN COLLECTED TAXES. MANY MUNICIPAL OFFICIALS WERE CHUNGKING APPOINTEES WHO HAD REMAINED ON THE JOB.

THE IDEA THAT WANG MIGHT BE ONE OF THEM WAS STRENGTHENED, IN CHINESE MINDS, BY THE FACT THAT CHIANG HAD NOT SUFFICIENTLY DISCREDITED HIS ONETIME SUBORDINATE. THE PLACING OF A PRICE ON WANG'S HEAD WAS UNCONVINCING TO THE CHINESE, FOR THIS IS AN OLD ORIENTAL CUSTOM TO CLOUD THE ISSUE.

THOUSANDS OF CHINESE DID NOT ACTIVELY OPPOSE THE NANKING REGIME FOR THIS REASON, ALTHOUGH THE PUPPET GOVERNMENT AND JAPANESE OVERLORDSHIP BOTH WERE DISTASTEFUL TO THEM. THE JAPANESE CAREFULLY MATURED THIS TENUOUS HOLD ON THE PEOPLE.

THE JAPANESE NOW HAVE NO CHINESE CAPABLE OF RETAINING SUCH DELICATE ALLEGIANCE. WANG'S IMMEDIATE SUCCESSOR, CHEN KUNG-PO, WAS AN EARLY REVOLUTIONARY LEADER WHO EMERGED FROM MANY YEARS' OBSCURITY AS MAYOR OF SHANGHAI UNDER THE JAPANESE.

CHEN LONG HAS BEEN GROOMED AS OCCUPIED CHINA'S NO.2 OFFICIAL, RECEIVING FLATTERING ATTENTION FROM TOKYO, BUT HE HAS FAILED TO WIN THE CHINESE EVEN IN SHANGHAI. HIS INEPT ADMINISTRATION IN THAT PORT PROVOKED DIRECT CRITICISM IN JAPANESE-CONTROLLED NEWSPAPERS.

JAPAN'S EFFORTS TO BUILD AN "INNER FORTRESS" AROUND THE HOMELAND AND HER CONTINENTAL HOLDINGS REQUIRE A MINIMUM OF RESTLESSNESS IN DOMINATED CHINA. WANG'S DEATH MAY INTENSIFY NON-COOPERATION WITH THE NANKING REGIME. IN THAT CASE THE JAPANESE WILL FALL BACK UPON THEIR PRIMARY WEAPON--FORCE.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCES, Paris, Nov. 14—(AP) British troops struck eastward from Nederweert in a new assault preceded by a 400-gun bombardment today as the American Third army closed within two miles of the fortress city of Metz at the end of the first week of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Winter offensive.

A frontline dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent Ned Nordness said the British had seized Eind in the first hours of their attack, which jumped off at 4 p. m., and had made crossings of the Noord and Wesen canals east of Weert.

Nazis Abandon Miejel

Nordness said the Germans abandoned Miejel, indicating they were withdrawing their strength from the region west of the Maas (Méuse) river.

Associated Press Correspondent Lewis Hawkins said the fall of Metz, which never has been taken by storm in modern times, appeared to be a matter of days, if not hours, barring a suicide stand by the Germans in the inner ring of fortifications or fighting in the streets.

The Fifth division which took Fort L'Aisne yesterday captured Fort L'Yser today and drove to within two miles of Metz on the south and southeast, while the 9th launched a new attack from the west and pounded to a point three miles from the city.

Both forts which were captured were found to be without big guns and were given up without serious struggle, but Hawkins said the Germans were fighting to hold high ground closer to the city.

The surprising ease with which the Yanks were closing in on Metz posed a puzzle more baffling because the Germans who fought desperately to hold Fort Driant on the southwest have not been observed in any wholesale withdrawal from the city, which now is surrounded on three sides.

But it is possible that the enemy could have pulled out a considerable portion of the fortress garrisons under the cover of night and thick weather which has made observation from the air virtually impossible in recent days.

Besides capturing Fort L'Yser today, the Fifth division overran the towns of Pouilly, Curvy, Orny, Pontoy and Coin le Curvy and completed the job of cleaning out Bois de Hopital. All are close together south and southeast of the city.

West of Metz the 95th division swept past Chatel St. Germain in a two-mile push which carried to Rozerieules, three miles from the city. Only the guns of Forts Driant and Marival fired at these attackers.

Expand Moselle Bridgehead

At the northern extremity of the Third army front the 90th division expanded its Koenigsmacher bridgehead over the Moselle to Inglange, 3 1-2 miles southeast of Koenigsmacher and linked up with a smaller new bridgehead to the north. The original bridgehead still had not been joined with the one at Uckange, south of Thionville, however.

During the day the 90th seized the towns of Kerling, Freching, Kuntzng, Imeldange and Basse Yutz.

Farther north in the first army sector the Germans launched a counterattack which Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' troops repulsed with artillery fire. An indication of the stalemate there was given in reports to headquarters which showed only 53 prisoners taken by the entire First army during the day.

South of Metz, on the other hand, Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's Seventh army smashed forward in a two-pronged attack north of Baccarat and southeast of Bruyeres.

It was too early to tell the potential force of Patch's attack, but at the very least it was the strongest drive in weeks in that eastward bulge between Nancy and Belfort.

Yanks Take Leintrey

North of Baccarat the Americans captured Leintrey, Montigny and Migneville early in their push through the snow-drifted foothills of the Vosges mountains.

Patch's other spearhead punched through Aumontzey and Campdray, four and six miles southeast of Bruyeres.

(In a dispatch from the front late tonight Associated Press Correspondent Thoburn Wiant said the northern thrust had carried two miles east of Migneville against light opposition and had made substantial advances east and northeast of Montigny against stronger resistance. He said the Germans were fighting fiercely in the mountains east of Leintrey.

(Twenty-odd miles southward in the Bruyeres sector the Seventh overran the towns of Vienville, Ireux, Lanay and Granges-Survoloone, Wiant said, and the Germans appeared to be withdrawing to prevent being outflanked.)

On the southeastern flank of the swing around Metz, Patton's 26th infantry and Fourth armored divisions regained a mile lost to the strongest of nine enemy counterattacks yesterday and themselves went on to gain a mile, winning most of the forest of Bride and Koecking north of Dieuze.

80th Division Gains

The 80th division advanced from the vicinity of Herny to Arriance, 14 miles southeast of Metz, and the Sixth armored pushed into Vittoncourt, 12 miles southeast of the fortress city in a mile advance.

At least 707 more prisoners were bagged by the Third army yesterday, bringing to 5,606 the number known to have been taken since the drive began Nov. 8. The Nazis were known to have moved in several infantry and armored units in the past few days to oppose Patton's push, but nothing in front dispatches indicated a stiffening of enemy resistance.

The Berlin radio said "it would be a mistake to place exaggerated importance on the German citadel of Metz," and a German commentator said Metz had served its purpose by delaying the Allied offensive while the Siegfried line was strengthened.

British Cross 2 Canals in Venlo Sector After Barrage by 400 Cannon

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Nov. 14.—American troops, crashing in upon Metz from three directions, were only two miles from the famous fortress city on the south and southeast tonight, and a front dispatch declared its fall appeared to be but a matter of days, if not hours.

As the Americans closed in here for the kill the British 2d Army, 150 miles to the north, opened a strong drive in southeastern Holland and in the initial stages stormed across two canals and occupied at least two towns.

Lieutenant General George S Patton's forces, who opened their winter offensive just a week ago met astonishingly light resistance as they smashed in upon reputedly impregnable Metz. As the nearest forces came up from the south and southeast, other units advanced to points within three miles of the city on the west.

Fall Expected Soon

"Barring a stand in the old inner fortresses and house-to-house fighting, the fall of the city appeared to be a matter of days, if not hours," asserted Lewis Hawkins, Associated Press correspondent with the 3d Army.

He said there was strong indication that the Nazis meant to give up the great stronghold without a major fight and that the bulk of enemy forces had been withdrawn from the area under cover of long nights and bad weather, which had prevented Allied aerial observation of their movements.

As the fighting around Metz appeared to be rushing toward a swift and totally unanticipated climax, the British troops in southeastern Holland lashed out behind a barrage of 400 guns in a strong drive east of the Dutch village of Nederweert, eighteen miles southwest of Venlo and some thirty-eight miles northwest of Aachen.

An hour after Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery sent his forces churning toward the German border a spokesman for the British 2d Army declared "the attack is going according to plan." An Associated Press field dispatch said the assault was making "smashingly good headway."

Two Canals Crossed

Except for the size of the artillery barrage which preceded the jump-off at 4 p. m., there was no indication of the scope of the British attack. The Tommies quickly established bridgeheads across two canals near Nederweert, and dispatches indicated German resistance was not heavy. The town of Meijel, which the Nazis took a few weeks ago, was found to have been evacuated by the enemy. Eind, a village a mile and a half southeast of Nederweert, was quickly seized.

The battle for Metz was described by Kenneth Dixon, of The Associated Press, as a "modern foxhole struggle" inside the city's ancient defense ring. He said neither Fort L'Yser, captured today, nor Fort L'Aisne, taken yesterday in the doughboys' drive upon Metz from the south, was protected by anything bigger than machine guns.

The Paris radio reported the German garrison of Thionville, heavily fortified steel center sixteen miles north of Metz, had surrendered. For several weeks American troops have held the part of Thionville on the west bank of the Moselle, with Nazis clinging to the eastern half of the city. There was no Allied confirmation that the city had been captured.

While the southern assault force probed deeper into the Metz defenses and fighting flared anew at both ends of the 3d Army front, the American 95th Infantry Division launched an attack toward Metz from the west, the first concentrated effort against the enemy in that sector since the present offensive began.

The focal point of this assault was Chatel St. Germain, a small town four miles due west of Metz in hilly country sloping eastward to the Mosele River. First reports gave no word of the 95th's progress or of its proximity to the mighty forts protecting Metz on the west.

Patch Gains Two Miles

As Patton's forces pushed forward in rain and slush that grounded supporting air units for the third straight day, Lieutenant General Alexander M. Patch's 7th Army on the right lashed out in a two-pronged thrust, which netted two miles despite stubborn Nazi opposition in the snow-covered Vosges foothills.

Patch's troops captured Leintray, just south of the Luneville-Saarebourg railroad, and Montigny, ten miles farther south and six and a half miles northeast of Baccarat. Farther south they took the villages of Aumontzey, four miles southeast of Bruyeres on the Gerardmer road to the Schlucht Pass, and Champdray, six miles south of Bruyeres, after substantial gains.

Elsewhere on the 3d Army front American troops jabbed ahead at numerous points, increasing the threat of encirclement for the German defenders of Metz. In the Koenigsmacher bridgehead over the Moselle at the northern extremity of General Patton's front, the 90th Division advanced to within a mile and a half of the German frontier near the Luxemburg corner. The other Moselle bridgehead, in the Uckange sector, three miles south of Thionville also was expanded up to a mile, mainly in an easterly direction.

THIRD PUSHES TO WITHIN TWO MILES OF CITY

MOSELLE CROSSINGS WIDENED

British Launch an Attack in East Holland—Seventh Gains in Vosges.

London, Nov. 14 (A. P.).—American troops struck to within two miles of Metz from the south and southeast tonight, and others, closing in from the west upon that tottering city, were only three miles away.

A front-line dispatch said that the fall of Metz—never before stormed successfully in modern times—appeared now to be but a matter of days, unless the Germans elected to stand in the city's formidable inner fortresses and in the streets.

Two of its main forts in the outer defenses—L'Aisne and L'Yser—and two subsidiary forts had already been breached with surprising ease, but the Germans were fighting hard to hold the high ground closer in.

British Launch Attack.

Meanwhile today the British Army in southeastern Holland launched a sharp attack, supported by 400 guns, toward the German border. They took the town of Enid, two miles southeast of Nederweert, and made three crossings of the Noord and Wesen canals, east of Weert.

Fort l'Yser, half a mile northwest of the town of Orny, was described officially as a powerful system of underground defense works.

So far as was known at Supreme Headquarters, Fort l'Yser fell without resistance from its turreted batteries—just as Fort l'Aisne and two satellite bastions to the southwest were taken yesterdaw. L'Aisne was the first of nine main fortress groups in the Metz system to fall, and l'Yser the second. They were stormed by troops of the Fifth Division of Lieut.-Gen. Patton's Third Army.

Resistance Still Slight.

The Americans pushed on into the Hopital Forest for their closest approach to Metz, and were striking toward that city from the south along a nine-mile front. Nothing in front dispatches indicated any stiffening of resistance, and the apparent German pullback suggested Metz itself might be forfeited to avoid encirclement of its strong garrison.

British troops in eastern Holland struck in a violent attack today in the Nederweert area, eighteen miles southwest of the German-Dutch border city of Venlo, a front dispatch declared. More than 400 guns gave thunderous support to the push.

Actions flared from the Vosges foothills, below Metz, to Holland, with the Third Army's drive in the Metz area on the largest scale.

Even as this fourth fortress fell, and all of Metz's roads of reinforcement or retreat were brought within artillery range, American infantry on the left flank of the seventy-mile Third Army front shoved forward in their Moselle bridgehead to within one and a half miles of the German border near the Luxembourg corner.

South of Metz, the Seventh Army pushed forward in two-mile gains at either end of a ten-mile front, spreading the American attack into the snow-drifted foothills of the Vosges Mountains.

Fifth Division units, driving through unexpectedly light resistance, had captured Fort Aisne and two of its satellites near Verny yesterday, and seized the towns of Corny, Pommerieux, Verny, and Liehon.

The fortifications at Orny fell to the Tenth Regiment of the Fifth Division, but battlefront reports did not disclose whether it was taken without a struggle.

With capture of Fort Aisne and the town of Corny earlier, the Americans had cut up behind formidable Fort Driant, on the Moselle's west bank.

The speed with which this invasion has penetrated the German defenses south of Metz raised the question of whether the enemy actually plans to yield without a fight this strongest fortified city in all western Europe. A dispatch from Supreme Headquarters said the answer to this riddle may come within the next twenty-four to forty-eight hours.

Corny is on the banks of the Moselle almost due east and across the river from Fort Driant, which like Fort L'Aisne was one of the nine main forts in the Metz defense system. A frontal assault by American troops on Fort Driant some weeks ago failed.

Near Reich at Luxembourg.

On Gen. Patton's northern flank, troops of the Ninetieth Division thrust ahead two and a half miles in their hard-won bridgehead over the Moselle near Koenigsmacher, reaching within one and a half miles of the Reich's border. Their chief opposition was strong artillery fire. Immediately north of Metz, the Germans still gave stubborn resistence in the area of Maizieres.

In six days, through yesterday, of Gen. Patton's new offensive, 5,600 prisoners had been taken.

Southeast of Metz, German gains of up to a mile in counter-attacks seeking to save Dieuze were wiped out by elements of the Twenty-sixth and Fourth Armored Divisions, and the Americans added another mile in fresh advances. Infantry now controlled almost half the Bride and Koecking Forest astride a ridge dominating Dieuze.

Elements of the Sixth Armored Division rode into Vittoncourt, twelve miles southeast of Metz in a mile push, and the 317th Regiment of the 80th Infantry in the same sector won a half mile of ground, going into Arriance fourteen miles southeast of Metz.

Weather Curbs Reconnaissance.

There was no explanation why the Germans yielded the great underground Aisne fort at Verny, south of Metz, and let the Americans cut in almost squarely behind Fort Driant, if they intended to make a suicide stand for Metz itself. Bad weather prevented aerial reconnaissance from learning whether Metz was being reinforced, or possibly evacuated.

Possibly the forts which the enemy yielded were not needed for a close siege defense of the city, the dispatch pointed out. The capture of the three bastions was not believed to open an actual gap into Metz itself as the whole zone is covered by the cross-fire positions of guns in flanking forts. It was believed, too, that between the captured forts and the city limits there may be one or more additional fortifications.

An intimation that the Germans might not make a last-ditch fight for Metz came in a broadcast from the headquarters of Field Marshal Gen. Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt which asserted that "Metz has fulfilled its task" in holding back the Americans while "front zone fortifications" were deepened.

Aisne And Driant Big Forts

Fort l'Aisne and Fort Driant are among the nine main forts in the Metz defense system, which contains 22 bastions in all. Both actually consist of a series of subterranean fortresses.

Some weeks ago American troops made a limited effort to take Fort Driant, but withdrew after forcing their way into part of the fort and engaging the defenders in a weird struggle underground.

Despite snow and bitter cold, the Third Army's wheeling movement southeast of Metz enveloped at least 15 more towns in gains of one to three miles.

This part of Patton's offensive got within 15 miles of the Saar Basin when tanks of the Sixth Armored Division entered Many, 16 miles southeast of Metz, and Thicourt, a mile and a half farther down the line. Now that division was within four miles of the enemy base at Faulquemont.

Seventh Army's Gains

The Seventh Army's left-flank troops captured Veney, four miles north of Raon-l'Etape, one of the towns guarding the Vosges passes to the Rhine.

The weeks-old battle for the Vosges approaches became more intense as a German attack southeast of Baccarat was broken up by artillery fire with heavy losses to the enemy.

"Substantial gains" southeast of Bruyeres were reported by the Allied communique, with American troops capturing Aumontzey and Champdray and occupying surrounding heights.

Leintrey, Montigny Taken

Fighting in snowstorms east of Luneville, American units advanced about two miles against strong resistance and captured Leintry and Montigny.

There was little activity on the United States First Army front inside Germany, where the Hurtgen Forest struggle southeast of Aachen had dwindled to limited fighting. The Americans made small gains southwest of Hurtgen, and repulsed a German attack west of Schmidt.

In Holland the activity was limited to patrolling and artillery duels. Bad weather, with low ceilings and snow flurries, held air support to a minimum.

DEATH DECREE FOR WEAKLINGS

Himmler Tells Soldiers To Shoot All Who Talk Surrender

With the Second Armored Division, Nov. 14 (AP)—Declaring that "our will to resist is the only thing we have left" against the material superiority of our enemy, the Nazi party has advised all German soldiers to shoot anyone contemplating surrender.

Promising again that new weapons are coming, the soldiers were told "whoever sabotages our will to resist must be smashed."

Applying these instructions to anyone, "whether he be a superior officer, an ordinary fellow or a close buddy," the party publication Scorpion, which is distributed to the troops, said these admittedly "revolutionary" measures were formulated by Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler.

Copy Of Scorpion Captured

A captured copy of Scorpion containing this advice indicated the same principle would be applied by Himmler's "people's army."

Himmler, it said, "for the first time has given the common soldier an opportunity to execute the will of the people, even if he is forced to take up arms against his superior."

The paper then went on to remark that "any scruples that military discipline may be endangered by such individual action shall not frighten us . . . even if it should happen that cowardly, treasonable elements take advantage of this right in order to remove unpopular superiors, this newly won liberty of action should not be restricted."

Warns Against "Chaos"

While it cautioned soldiers not to allow their "new right of unscrupulous action" to "degenerate into a state of chaos," it acknowledged that "cases of cowardly murder of superior officers" which occurred during "hard rear-guard battles" were due to "that certain lack of discipline which accompanies every disorderly retreat."

Then it summed up that when soldiers observed "even the tiniest spark of softness or cowardice" it was time to "eradicate the cancer before it causes disaster . . . if your responsible commander thinks or speaks about retreat, then you must act or the position is lost."

Death Of 'Soft' Nazis Ordered

With the United States Second Armored Division on the Western Front, Nov. 14 (AP)—A captured German document disclosed today that the Nazis had ordered all soldiers to shoot their comrades or officers instantly "like a dog" if they observe the slightest decline in battle morale.

The order was published in Scorpion, a Nazi news commentary distributed to troops. The order was specifically applied to any German contemplating surrender. It was attributed to Heinrich Himmler, Gestapo head and commander of the German Home Army.

Only "Will To Resist" Left

The Nazis acknowledged the critical position of the Reich in these words:

"Our will to resist is the only thing that we have left against the material superiority of our enemy until the new weapons are ready for the front. Therefore, whoever sabotages our will to resist must be smashed."

Scorpion said that Himmler "for the first time has given the common soldier an opportunity to execute the will of the people even if he is forced to take up arms against his superior."

Considerable space then was devoted to adverse effects which the "no capitulation" order might have on military discipline, with every man given carte blanche to shoot his officer or companion. Scorpion explained:

"Any scruples that military discipline may be endangered by such individual action shall not frighten us. Even if it should happen that cowardly, treasonable elements take advantage of this right in order to remove unpopular superiors, this newly won liberty of action should not be restricted.

Warned Of Chaos

"Cases of cowardly murder of superior officers that occurred during rear-guard battles were due to that certain lack of discipline which accompanies every disorderly retreat."

Nazi soldiers were then cautioned against allowing their "new right of unscrupulous action to degenerate into a state of chaos."

Scorpion summed up:

"If soldiers observe even the tiniest spark of softness or cowardice, that is the time to act and to eradicate the cancer before it causes disaster. If your responsible commander thinks or speaks about retreat, then you must act or the position is lost."

U. S. SOLDIER FINDS FORTUNE

Discovers Silver And Jewels In German Castle

With American Forces in Germany, Nov. 14 (AP)—A Minnesota GI browsing through a bookcase in an ancient German castle got the shock of his life when he stumbled on a hidden treasure of diamonds, pearls, gold and silver heirlooms worth a fortune.

"I'd read a lot of stories about treasures," said Sergt. Robert Awe, St. Paul, today, "and thought they only happened in books. When I found this stuff myself it sure gave me a funny feeling."

On German-Dutch Border

The incident occurred in the four-story brownstone Rimburg Castle located on the border of Germany adjoining the Dutch town of Rimburg. It was a former residence of German barons but in recent years has been occupied by Siegfried von Brauchitsch, who was arrested by the Gestapo because of his anti-Nazi feelings.

The castle was badly wrecked when the Yanks ousted the Germans from the building. Poking through the debris, Awe noticed a piece of black cloth back of a bookcase and peered behind it out of curiosity. There hidden away in the wall were gold chalices and jewelry, more than 100 pieces of family silver, Chinese art trinkets, a fur opera cape and a valuable coin and stamp collection.

But the eyes of Awe and a companion, Corporal Charles Triggs, of Delphi, Ind., really popped when they lifted out a sparkling tiara of diamonds and pearls.

Yanks Left Breathless

"It was made of six big pearls and 40 or 50 diamonds," Awe said. "It left us breathless. Then we got scared it might get stolen and we called our captain."

Capt. James W. Edwards, Enterprise, Ala., in turn summoned a civil-affairs officer who arranged for the valuables to be stored in a safe place.

"I was glad to see the last of it—it was too much for me," Awe declared after the treasure had been safely stored away.

Lieut. John Ball, Auburn, Ala., praised Awe for seeing that the treasure got into safe hands and said "all the credit goes to the sergeant."

Seven At Front Get Trip Home

By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE

With American Troops in Germany, Nov. 14 (AP)—Seven soldiers were called today from the frozen mud of their foxholes and told that the impossible dream of nearly every fighting man was true for them—they were going back home. They had been selected to return to the United States on a national tour to help promote the war bond drive and also to have leave with their people.

30.24 — 20377

Seventh Man Refuses

Pfc. Leo Crivello, of Alton, Ill., looked after them with wistful hopelessness, for he had been selected as an alternate, and he knew that rarely any alternate had less chance of being called upon. But an hour later his officers came for him. The seventh man of the original seven—and his story and his reasons cannot be told—had declined to go.

In a miserable little command post I saw Crivello this afternoon, a tired man of 35 who had been a mailing desk worker in a mail-order house in civilian life.

Of all those who are going home he is the only one who is married, and this fact above all other seemed to strike him with overwhelming force.

"You can't figure this thing," he said twice. "How can you figure this thing? How can you figure the odds that one man out of seven will turn down a trip home and his alternate will get it? Do you know I have seen my wife just two weeks in our married life? We got married January 1, 1942, and I went away to the army two weeks later."

Crivello is one of the best gunners on a self-propelled 105-millimeter gun in one of our best armored divisions.

Standing around him were the other six men who are going to take that trip—Corporal Myles Gates, of Kingsley, Iowa; Pfc. Marshall Thompson, of Eagle Grove, Iowa; Corporal Lars C. Larson, of Thompson, Iowa; Sergt. Richard Vanderbloemen, of West De Pere, Wis.; Pfc. Harry Gaby, of Frisco, Texas, and Pfc. Louis Cocozza, of Lawrence, Mass.

Was Digging Foxhole

Sergeant Vanderbloemen, 24, blond and unmarried and obviously the natural military leader of all this group in spite of his youth, grinned and said:

"I was digging another foxhole when they came and told me. I figured right off it was a damned lie."

Crivello looked over at him and smiled. "It's fantastic," he said, it's fantastic, that is what it is."

V-2 Bomb Site Washed Out

MIDDELBURG, Holland, Nov. 13 (delayed) (AP).—On three successive days in early September the Germans launched V-2 rocket bombs in the direction of England from a small village now under water on this almost totally inundated island of Walcheren.

"They went up at an angle of probably 70 degrees," a Dutch man said. "They traveled to a great height and then seemed to level off. The noise they made in the take-off was terrific, and people who were near by told me the Germans had to do some sort of stoking for almost six hours before they were ready to set off the rockets. They believed there was a considerable number of casualties among the handlers."

Captured U. S. Pilot Awarded Service Cross

United States Ninth Air Force Headquarters, France, Nov. 14 (AP). Capt. Wallace Emmer, American Mustang pilot now a prisoner in Germany, was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross today. It will be sent to his mother, Mrs. Blanche Emmer, St. Louis, Mo.

Emmer, who had 17 German planes to his credit when he was forced to bail out of his crippled plane over enemy territory last August, was given the DSC for leading eight Mustangs against 40 German fighters near St. Lo July 6. The Mustangs downed nine Nazi planes without loss to themselves, and prevented an attack on American troops. Emmer himself shot down two of the enemy craft.

FRENCH START REVERSE AID

Eiffel Tower, Work Of 30,000 Civilians, Lent U. S.

Paris, Nov. 14 (AP)—Reverse lend-lease already has started in France and within three months this country should be giving American armed forces as much as is Great Britain under the program, Brig. Gen. Wayne R. Allen said today.

The Eiffel Tower is one lend-lease item, requisitioned as a United States radio station.

The general, the army's chief purchasing agent in Europe, said French contributions began with supplies of fresh fruits and vegetables in Normandy.

33,000 Civilians At Work

He said more than 33,000 civilians now were working for the Americans under the program. He also listed countless buildings and other installations, the output of a new war industry which already is rebuilding tanks and motors and manufacturing gasoline cans and other articles.

France, under reverse lend-lease soon will start manufacturing tires for United States Army vehicles with synthetic rubber imported from America, thus relieving tire factories in the United States. As rehabilitation of French industry proceeds, many other products will be supplied.

All Cost Borne By French

All wages and other costs of the program are borne by the French Government and will be offset eventually against American lend-lease to France. The French contribution so far is in nowise comparable in value to American assistance to France, but it is of vital aid in waging the war here and cannot be wholly measured in cash value, Col. George A. Spiegelberg, chief of staff of the procurement section of supreme headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, said.

West European Bloc Accord Reported

Paris, Nov. 14 (AP)—Britain and France were reported in accord today on the desirability of forming a bloc of western European nations to help keep Germany in check during the coming years of peace.

Responsible quarters said Belgium and Holland may become original signatories to such a regional pact along with Britain and France and that eventually Norway, Sweden and Denmark may come in.

Summarizing the week-end discussions of Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Gen. Charles de Gaulle, a French news agency expressed the view that "the French and British Governments would consider favorably the possibility of concluding such regional accords."

Eastern Bloc Seen

(A dispatch from London said sources in the British capital expressed belief that a similar combine would be formed in the east by Russia, Czechoslovakia and Poland and that at their next conference Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Premier Stalin may consider whether such alliances can operate within the framework of the proposed future world-security organization.

(The Times of London said the idea of a western European bloc would fall directly within the category of "regional arrangements or agencies" foreseen in the Dumbarton Oaks plan.)

It was believed that the Churchill and de Gaulle parleys were a sequel to recent negotiations in London involving British, Belgian and Dutch officials. Paul-Henri Spaak, Belgian Minister for Foreign Affairs, is expected to visit Paris soon.

French Rearmament

Churchill and de Gaulle were reported agreed on speedy rearmament of the French army to have it ready to share military occupation of Germany.

(London sources said France's part in the proposed western bloc would be maintenance of a strong army; that Britain would keep a powerful fleet and air force, and that Belgium and Holland would provide air bases near Germany's borders.)

COUNT OF PARIS ORDERED SEIZED

Paris, Nov. 14 (A. P.). — The French Government has ordered the arrest of the Count of Paris, pretender to the non-existent throne of France, reported to have been wounded at Perpignan after crossing the Spanish frontier into southern France.

Thus the Government adhered to an old law which prohibits pretenders to the throne from residing on French territory, and created another problem in the aspirations of the 36-year-old Henri de Guise.

A warrant issued by the Interior Ministry to all department prefects charged him with illegal entry into the country and violation of the law against residence on French soil.

Reports from southern France said the Count was in hiding after having been wounded. He had been in North Africa when Admiral Darlan was assassinated. Some French royalists tried without success to rally support to him for a regal restoration. The Count fled to Spanish Morocco after the arrival of Gen. Charles de Gaulle in Algiers.

The Count became chief of the House of France after the death of his father, the Duke de Guise, in 1940. At that time he announced he had become "the depository of the royal traditions," and took "a solemn oath to continue to serve France with all my forces."

Most French royalists support him, but some prefer claimants to Napoleonic lineage.

14 JAP SHIPS DAMAGED IN MANILA RAID

Some Of Warships May Have Been Sunk; Floating Drydock Also Hit

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 14 (AP) — American Third Fleet carrier planes sank or damaged 14 Japanese ships and one floating dock, shot down 28 planes and strafed 130 more in renewed raids on the Manila area Sunday.

The enemy counterattacked the carrier task group, but only one American ship was damaged, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced in a communique today.

[Both Tokyo radio and the Japanese-controlled Manila radio announced earlier that 800 American planes struck Manila Bay shipping, hitting the Cavite navy yard and Clark airfield. Tokyo claimed one American battleship was sunk by suicide pilots east of Luzon Island.]

Sums Up Damage

Nimitz summed up this damage inflicted by Hellcat fighters, Avenger torpedo planes and Helldiver bombers:

One light cruiser badly damaged.

Two destroyers exploded (possibly sunk, but the communique did not so specify).

An estimated 11 cargo ships and oilers sunk or left ablaze.

One floating dock torpedoed.

Many docks in the Manila Bay area and Cavite navy yard were struck.

May Have Been Hit Before

There was no indication whether any of these ships were previously damaged in the October naval action in the Philippines or by carrier strikes, or whether they were newly arrived at Luzon and thus may be added to the previous high toll of Japanese shipping.

Ten Japanese planes were shot down while attacking the carrier group and 18 out of 20 which intercepted the American raiders were shot out of the air over Luzon.

An estimated 130 to 140 single and twin-engined planes strafed Legaspi, Manila and Clark fields on Luzon.

Sherman Commands Force

Admiral Nimitz disclosed that Rear Admiral Frederick C. Sherman commanded the carrier task groups involved.

Marine Corsair planes sank a small enemy vessel in a bombing and strafing run on the northern Palaus Saturday. Hellcats and Liberators bombed Koror, Malakal and Arakabesan islets in the Palau group.

Foe Says U. S. Planes Struck Yesterday, 400 Sorties Were Flown Today.

CAVITE NAVAL BASE ALSO HIT

Enemy Radio Version of Attacks Indicates Blows Were Heavy and Continuous.

Waves of American planes battered Manila and nearby air fields yesterday and today, Manila time, doing slight damage to warships, installations and shipping, the Tokyo radio and the enemy - controlled Manila radio said today, according to the Associated Press.

Four hundred planes blasted Manila, Cavite and Clark Field yesterday, and 400 sorties were flown over the same targets today, the enemy said in broadcasts recorded by the FCC. Cavite is the site of the former American naval base.

Domei, the Japanese official news agency, said that yesterday's raids resulted in "some damage to our warships," but that the ground facilities were not damaged.

The enemy claimed that seventy-three of the planes were shot down or damaged by Japanese interceptors in the two-day period.

Referring to yesterday's raid alone, the Japanese communique asserted:

"After about one hour's violent aerial battle, our air force shot down several tens of planes, including ten uncertain. However, our side also suffered a valuable sacrifice of one plane by self-blasting and four which did not return to the base."

There was no confirmation of any of the assertions made by the communique, the Tokyo radio or the Manila radio.

Tokyo claimed the American planes came from a task force.

Other American raids were reported by the Japanese. The Nipponese home radio said that thirty medium planes yesterday hit the western part of Mindanao Island, south of Leyte in the Philippines and about twenty-five P-38s raided Cebu on Cebu Island, west of Leyte, in daylight the day before yesterday. The same day, the Japanese said, twenty-nine B-24s and P-38s raided the Negros Islands in the Philippines.

Japs Land On Isle Near Peleliu

Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 14 (AP)—The simmering campaign in the Palau Islands broke into brief activity last week when 200 Japanese troops occupied Ngeregong islet, eight miles northwest of American-held Peleliu, in an apparent reconnaissance move.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, announcing the development yesterday, said a small United States marine reconnaissance patrol was removed without casualties from the islet aboard LCIs.

The Japanese landed Tuesday night, under cover of a storm. Evidently they came in small boats across Denges passages from Eil Malk Island, two miles north of Ngeregong.

Seaway Blocked

An American destroyer and two gunboats quickly blocked Denges passage to check possible further landings and bombarded Ngeregong. The islet also was raked by bombs.

From Ngeregong the Japanese could bombard Peleliu and other American-held islands, but they would have difficulty moving in artillery.

By-Passed Targets Hit

Navy, army and marine land-based planes concentrated on by-passed Palau targets Thursday and Friday. They sank a previously damaged destroyer near Golou, sank a barge and set fire to fuel tanks and other installations.

Nimitz announced that army and marine planes are using airfields on Peleliu and Angaur islands, conquest of which was completed in early October.

AMERICANS SPRING NEW LEYTE TRAP

Japs Face Annihilation by Yanks in Bloody Ormoc Corridor.

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Wednesday, Nov. 15.—(AP) Successful enveloping movements by veteran Americans of the 24th Infantry and dismounted First Cavalry divisions have fashioned a new trap which threatened today to annihilate the Japanese forces on the north end of Leyte island's bloody Ormoc corridor.

The 24th Infantrymen drove a spearhead through the rugged mountain country southwest of Pinamapoan to threaten the Yamashita line below Limon, Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported today.

Trap Well Executed

The strategy was well executed. While units of the 24th fighting along the Ormoc road maintained pressure to contain the Japanese, other elements of the division swung through the mountains to the southwest and cut back toward the Ormoc road.

At the same time, the First Cavalry swung toward the road from the east and southeast.

This placed the Japanese in the position of having to retire or face possible annihilation.

MacArthur estimated the Japanese force thus threatened as "a reinforced regiment." This would give no exact indication of the size.

On the southern end of the Western Leyte battlefield, small scale Japanese attempts to bring in reinforcements were repulsed by troops of the American Seventh division which caught the enemy moving forward in small barges toward Damulaan, 14 miles south of Ormoc.

This was the first mention in more than a week of the Seventh division driving toward Ormoc, only remaining reinforcement port for the enemy, from the south.

Battle Near Ormoc

Meanwhile fighting was heavy along the bitterly-contested road which runs from Ormoc to Carigara bay, sole land supply line for the Japanese along the Ormoc corridor.

Units of the American First cavalry are closing in on the Ormoc road from hill 1525 and Mt. Catabaran, the communique said, with the effective support of artillery.

Heavy enemy casualties were reported in that sector. Numerous gun positions were destroyed.

MacArthur reported ineffective enemy harassing raids on shipping and shore installations and said 13 enemy aircraft were shot down by fighters and ackack.

Massed Enemy Forces on Leyte Trapped by U. S. Artillery

Guns Almost Obliterate Ormoc Road Town in Which Foe Was Seen Concentrating —Yank Infantry Gains Ground.

Gen. MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 14 (A. P.) (Via Army Radio).—Japanese reinforcements and equipment in the Ormoc road town of Limon became a bloody shambles today when trapped by an American artillery barrage as the American infantry moved on the town from three sides.

Observers on Breakneck Ridge, near Ormoc Valley, where the bodies of more than 600 Japanese were counted after one day's fighting, saw large concentrations of Japanese reinforcements, troops, trucks and guns rolling into Limon. The American artillery roared throughout the night and today the town was a mass of flaming wreckage, and apparently uninhabited.

Major-Gen. Fred Irving, commander of the 24th Division, said that he was reluctant to say the Japanese force in Limon had been knocked out. If they had been, however, the prospects were bright for the American forces, he declared.

The Japanese have elements of five divisions fighting the Americans in the Philippines, Gen. MacArthur has announced.

Slow but Steady Headway.

Gen. MacArthur reported that the steady but painfully slow American drive had broken the enemy's plans for a counter-blow "by compelling the Japanese to premature and piecemeal commitments of his forces for the defense of the main bastion of the Yamashita line."

While American artillery raked the enemy in the Ormoc vise, elements of the dismounted American First Cavalry Division seized another elevation, Mount Cabungangan, overlooking the battlefield, in a three-mile advance from Mount Catabarah, where their positions were being consolidated. Their left flank also took in another height, called Hill No. 2926.

A spokesman for Gen. MacArthur said that the Japanese had infiltrated some American ridge positions to send suicide squads against the Yanks, but that the effort was mainly ineffective.

Gen. MacArthur said that the bulk of the American Twenty-fourth Division, moving down the tortuous highway toward Ormoc from Carigara Bay, was proceeding slowly in the face of increasingly strong opposition. To the east, organized Japanese resistance in the hills flanking Dagami and Patok, in central Leyte Valley, was broken by the Ninety-sixth Division pressing westward.

Both Air Forces Active.

Aerial activity continued on both sides. American fighters dive-bombed enemy bivouac areas near Valencia, destroying numerous buildings. Nine Japanese planes of a force raiding shipping and ground installations were shot down.

On the other hand, American planes shot down twelve Japanese fighters while encountering "strong enemy air cover" in raids on islands surrounding Leyte, a supplementary communique reported. Four other enemy fighters probably were destroyed, as the American planes continued to paste airfields and installations on islands from which the Japanese have sent reinforcements and aerial raiders to Leyte.

Near Palawan, the American pilots shot down two more Japanese planes, one a transport, and damaged a coastal freighter. Two American planes were lost in these operations.

The Japanese again raided American-held Morotai, in the Halmaheras, but without causing damage, the communique said. Other American bombers raided targets from Timor to the Solomons, and light naval craft shelled Japanese positions on New Guinea and New Ireland, Bougainville and Choiseul islands.

GETS NAVY CROSS FOR TRICKING JAPS

Admiral Halsey's Flagship, Nov. 14 (A. P.) (Via Navy Radio).—Rear Admiral Robert Bostwick Carney, head of Admiral William F. Halsey's "dirty trick department," was awarded the Navy Cross today for gallantry and caginess in operations that brought defeat to the Jap fleet in the second Philippines sea battle from October 23 to 26.

Admiral Carney, serving as Admiral Halsey's aid and chief of staff, was instrumental in formulating plans which the citation said resulted in "sinking or damaging of a major portion of Japanese capital ships and carrier aircraft."

"His keen appreciation of situations, his initiative and efforts, together with his timely advice to the commander of the Third Fleet contributed immeasureably to the success of the operations," the citation continued.

Admiral Halsey's staff, headed by 49-year-old Admiral Carney, has become known as the "dirty trick department" during the last several months because of its success in thinking up plans for defeating the Japanese.

Admiral Carney, a veteran of the Solomons naval campaigns, already has two Distinguished Service Medals and the Legion of Merit. He was graduated from Annapolis in 1916. His wife, Grace, lives in Washington, D. C.

The admiral's son, Robert Jr., is a Marine captain. His daughter is the wife of Navy Lieut. Jay Kay Taussig, who was commander of anti-aircraft on the battleship Nevada at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941.

Record One-Day Toll Of Jap Dead On Leyte

With the 24th Division, Leyte, P. I., Nov. 14 (AP)—Doughboys slogging down the southern slopes of Breakneck Ridge near Ormoc Valley, found a mountain wall littered with the greatest one-day toll of Japanese dead in the Philippines campaign.

Long before they reached the base of the ridge one battalion counted 550 Japanese bodies. Another counted 93. And the field of death still stretched ahead.

Col. William Verbeck, of the spearhead regiment, said he thought the Japanese Limon force—an estimated reinforced regiment of the First Division—has been crushed as a unified fighting unit.

Worst Seen Yet To Come

Weary riflemen of the hard-slugging United States 24th Division were moving on Limon on three sides. This was doubly good news as it appeared at nightfall the worst was yet to come.

Observers on Breakneck Ridge saw big enemy reinforcements in Limon—trucks, troops, guns and ammunition wagons. Immediately an artillery barrage opened against the town and continued all night.

In the morning the town appeared to be an uninhabited mass of wreckage.

"Prospects Look Good"

Maj. Gen. Fred Irving, commanding the 24th, hesitated to say that this force had been knocked out but he agreed that prospects looked good.

If the Limon force is knocked out, the position of the 24th is exceptionally favorable. An American flanking force has the Ormoc road under fire south of the town. It would be possible to intercept any further Japanese forces in the Ormoc corridor.

The division has three miles of hill country to go to break into Ormoc valley where the main body of the Japanese force is concentrated.

Photographer On Leyte Killed By Jap Sniper's Bullet

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 14 (AP—Via Army Radio)—A Japanese sniper's bullet killed Frank Prist, 30, veteran Acme news picture photographer, during heavy fighting in the Ormoc sector yesterday.

Prist was the fourth war correspondent to die in action since the Philippine campaign started and the 13th killed in the Pacific area since the war started.

He was buried today after a graveside service held in the same cemetery where two other correspondents—Asahel Bush, of the Associated Press, and Stanley Gunn, of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and Houston Chronicle—were interred after their death in a Japanese bombing raid October 26 at Tacloban. John B. Terry, of the Chicago Daily News, injured in the Tacloban raid, died aboard a hospital ship October 31.

Awaiting Replacement

Prist, who photographed American troops in action all the way from Buna in New Guinea to the Philippines, was killed while waiting for a replacement, Willard Hatch of San Francisco, to permit him to return to the United States. He had been given an opportunity to return a few months earlier, but rejected it so he could "cover" the Philippine campaign.

He, Cliff Bottomley, Australian Department of Information photographer, Irving Smith and Earl Crotchett, both of Universal Newsreel, reached a tank-assembly point in the Pinamopoan ridge front shortly before noon yesterday. Heavy fighting was in progress.

Shot In Heart

They found the tanks as they started into action and Prist was turning his jeep around for the return trip when the sniper fired somewhere on the flank of the ridge. The bullet entered Prist's heart.

Prist's body was taken back to MacArthur's headquarters for funeral services, which were conducted ed by the chaplain, Capt. Howard J. Johnson, of Fort Worth, Texas.

Prist is survived by his wife, now living in Los Angeles. He was on assignment with the wartime still photo pool and was the second Acme photographer killed in the Pacific. Carl Thussgaard died when an army Liberator was shot down in New Guinea.

Navy Flyers Win GIs' Affection

By Fred Hampson

With the 24th Division on Leyte Island, Nov. 14 (AP)—Torpedo bombers and Hellcats from Third Fleet carriers flew over this battle area November 11 to blast a ten-ship Japanese convoy attempting to land reinforcements at Ormoc, and the pilots should have heard the cheers.

This division, which already had been in action for 22 consecutive days, is charged with liquidating the Japanese forces in western Leyte. A short time before, rumor had new enemy reinforcements arriving, to make the job tougher.

Tin Hats Tossed Into Air

When they saw the navy planes, tired, sweaty soldiers in the line threw their tin hats into the air and cheered:

"God bless the navy! Halsey's back!"

A top kick yelled:

"They won't get any more Nips ashore now."

The navy did such a grand job of blasting the Japanese out of the hills along the coast below Palo on October 21 that the 24th thinks there's nothing like a navy flyer.

Had Done A Lot Of Praying

When Maj. Gen. Fred Irving, division commander, saw the flight, he said:

"Lord, I'm glad to see those planes. We've done a lot of praying for air support to stop those Ormoc landings and from what I saw on October 21 I think those navy boys can do it."

(The navy flyers destroyed four transports and six destroyers, and only remnants of an estimated 8,000 Japanese reached shore.)

Filipinos On Samar Fought The Japs

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 14 (AP)—The 6,000 hardy, courageous Filipino residents of the little town of Basey on Samar Island, were coming back to their homes today to find the Japanese left no single stick of furniture unbroken. It was their payment for fleeing from Japanese control and fighting them in bitter, no-quarter guerrilla warfare.

The story of Basey and surrounding towns which have a total population of about 31,000, was told by Capt. Sidney C. Jenkins, former Portland Oregonian reporter, and Capt. Virgil Ashcraft, of Newark, Ohio, both members of the army's civil administration unit.

They Fought Japs

"When a force of 200 Japs entered their town on October 24, 1943, the townspeople quietly packed everything they could carry on their backs and slipped away into the mountains," Jenkins related.

"They did an amazing thing, they moved their municipal government and its records into the mountains, and while the women and children rustled food, all able-bodied men and boys over 12 fought the Japanese."

When the Americans came they began to straggle back. They had given their municipal government into the hands of Major Avia, Samar guerrilla chief, and on the first opportunity he returned it to the people.

Democracy Works Again

After many hardships, the people are receiving American help, particularly food and clothing. Some of the women had all but one dress taken from them by the Japanese and others were nude. They waited for clothing to be sent them before they returned. Some were made insane by the hardships.

Gen. Krueger's Tent Raked

Sixth Army Headquarters, Leyte, P. I., Nov. 14 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Walter Krueger, Sixth Army commander, took time out for breakfast recently, thereby probably saving his life.

While the general was out, a Japanese Zero came over on a strafing attack. Three bullets ripped into the general's tent in a direct line with the commander's head—had he been there.

Proud Papa Blasts Japs

Melbourne, Australia, Nov. 14 (AP). The birth of a girl in Columbus, Ohio, was responsible for a terrific mortar bombardment of Japanese near Breakneck ridge on Leyte Island in the Philippines, Australian Correspondent Reg Harris reported today.

Lieut. James Crosswell, of Columbus, had just returned to his mortar batteries from an observation post when mail was delivered. Crosswell opened two letters and then let out a shout:

"Whoopee! It's a girl!"

When the mortar detachment heard the news, Harris reported, every crew dropped a shell into its mortar. It was one of the heaviest salvos of the campaign.

Children On Guam Go Back To School

San Francisco, Nov. 14 (AP)—Children of Guam have exchanged the picks and shovels thrust on them by the Japanese for school books, Jack Cooley reported yesterday in a broadcast from Guam.

Maj. Gen. Henry L. Larson, of the United States marines, has reopened the George Washington High School in the town of Agana. More than 200 students have enrolled.

Before the war there were 27 schools and almost 5,000 students in Guam, but, Cooley reported, the Japanese banned teaching of English, turned the high school into barracks, taught the boys and girls to clean the streets and assist in public works with picks and shovels.

U. S.-Philippine Radio Service Restored

San Francisco, Nov. 14 (AP)—Commercial radio facilities for the transmission of news between the Philippines and the United States were reestablished today for the first time in nearly three years.

A civilian crew employed by Press Wireless reopened commercial service for news from Leyte Island. Press Wireless planned to take over the bulk of news transmission from the Philippines, heretofore handled by army radio voicecasts.

Last news from the Philippines before the fall of Corregidor early in 1942 was by army radio.

FALL OF BUDAPEST APPEARS IMMINENT

Soviet Troops Straighten Lines for Death Blow Against Capital.

LONDON, Nov. 14—(AP) Soviet Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky set the stage tonight for the fall of Budapest, straightening his lines by advances northeast and south of the Hungarian capital and moving his armor, artillery and infantry into a strangling semicircle around the city.

Most of the day's operations of the Red army on the sodden eastern front were aimed at getting into position for a death strike at Budapest. The Russian communique announced capture of more than 30 towns in a line extending for 45 miles east and northeast of Hitler's last satellite capital and liquidation of the enemy bridgehead on the east bank of the Danube with capture of Solt and Duna Egyhaza, 45 and 42 miles south.

Holding fast to their positions within easy medium artillery range of Budapest on the south, Malinovsky's men drove north and northwest from Monor and took Uri and Peteri, registering gains of three to five miles.

Farther east they took the big railway town of Nagykata, 27 miles east of Budapest and 10 miles south of Jaszbereny, and extended their hold closely on both sides of the latter important center, with Heves, 17 miles northeast, the largest town taken.

The whole operation had the effect of straightening out the previously sinuous line stretching 80 miles northeast from the Budapest vicinity to positions south of Miskolc.

The German radio said the Russians had dug in less than two miles from Jasbereny and acknowledged that they had made various penetrations along the line from Monor northeast. The Germans also intimated that a strong drive for Miskolc, a big railway junction, appeared to be developing from the south.

In eliminating the Germans' Danube river bridgehead south of Budapest, the Russians used three infantry divisions, according to German accounts, which admitted that the position had been evacuated in favor of newly-prepared holdings on the west bank.

Between November 10 and 13 the Russians have taken 3,600 prisoners in Hungray, said the Soviet communique. This, it said, brought the bag since November 8 to 7,700. On all fronts Monday 18 German tanks were knocked out and 21 planes destroyed, the communique added.

Aside from the Hungarian front, however, it said there was only reconnaissance activity again Tuesday.

The German radio said Soviet attacks continued west of Auce, in southwestern Latvia.

The Bulgarian command announced the capture in Yugoslavia of Skoplje, important rail junction and key to the Vardar Valley route through the Balkans. Marshal Tito's Yugoslav Partisans had reported the previous day that they had broken into the town.

A later communique from Tito confirmed the Bulgarian announcement that Skoplje had fallen to the Allied units, crediting the victory to the 42d and 50th Divisions of Tito's army.

Tito's announcement said the Germans were pursued out of the town and that 1,700 were killed and 995 captured.

Nazis Augment Defenses In Hungary

LUCE

Moscow, Nov. 14 (AP)—Russian forces have driven into the important rail city of Jaszbereny, 37 miles east of Budapest, and are engaging the enemy in hand-to-hand fighting, front dispatches said today.

The Germans were reported hurling in new tanks and scores of anti-tank weapons in an attempt to check the Soviet drive to outflank the Hungarian capital. The Nazis were offering the most determined armored resistance since the big tank clashes in which they were beaten back in the Debrecen area last month.

Reds Repulsed, Nazis Say

(The Germans admitted Soviet units had penetrated into Jaszbereny, but asserted the attackers were hurled back.)

Red army columns striking from the northeast after crossing the Tisza river apparently had made solid contact with the main forces of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukrainian Army, and were aiding in drawing the assault line close to Jaszbereny from the east, west and south.

Front dispatches said the Germans resisted strongly, using Panther tanks and flame-throwers in an attempt to wipe out advanced Russian infantry elements.

Jaszapati Captured

Despite the fierceness of the enemy opposition the Russians captured at least ten towns, including the rail terminal of Jaszapati, 11 miles east of Jaszbereny and 45 miles east of Budapest.

(Moscow dispatches made no mention today of Russian forces previously reported in the southern outskirts of Budapest. A German broadcaster, Col. Ernst von Hammer, said the Russians held a bridgehead on the Danube at Dunaharaszti, opposite Csepel Island, five miles south of the capital.)

Front advices declared that in the muddy tablelands southwest of Jaszbereny the Russians were less than 25 miles from the eastern limits of Budapest, but the attack had the character of a huge encircling movement rather than a frontal assault on the capital's defenses.

Prisoner Toll Of 1,000 Reported

The Soviet war bulletin said the Russian drive around Budapest's eastern flank had swept six miles northwest of Cegled and that more than 1,000 prisoners were taken.

There was no information in Moscow from either official sources or front dispatches shedding light on the situation on the west bank of the Danube near the Yugoslav-Hungarian frontier, where Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin was reported building up a powerful force.

One view was that he would march north as the arm of a pincers to assure the capture of Budapest.

the far north, the first detachments to return since the ill-fated 1940 campaign joined the Russians as the Germans, in retreat over the barren wastes of Finnmark, prepared defense lines in the south against a possible Allied invasion from the west linked with an all-out Soviet drive.

The small vanguard, numbering under 500, was led home by Col. Arne Dahl, commander of the famous Alta battalion during [illegible] last bitter days of Norway's [illegible]less stand at Narvik.

Dahl also returned as [illegible] a Norwegian military mission which includes representatives of the Navy, Air forces, and a number of government departments.

One was a representative of the minister of justice, sent to carry out measures to deal with quislings and traitors.

With the annquncement that Norwegian troops were operating on home soil, a government spokesman reported "increasing numbers" of Germans in retreat from Finnmark to Troms province, who were leaving a trail of "nightmarish devastation."

Large units of German infantry and motorized troops were said to be moving west along highway 50, the main force now being at Porsangen fjord.

The spokesman said the far northern coastal towns of Vadsoe and Vardoe had been "completely wiped out" and that their inhabitants had been sent fleeing into the

Norwegians Re-Invade Homeland, Operate with Russians in Arctic

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON, Nov. 14 — Norwegian troops, re-invading their own homeland from the British Isles, have landed in Norway and are operating with the Russians against the Germans on the Arctic front, the Norwegian exiled government announced tonight.

Swarming ashore somewhere in barren wastes without shelter or food.

The Germans were also reported to have razed the fishing settlements of Mehavn, Berlevaag, Gamvik, and Kamoeyfjord. The only buliding left standing in Kantokeino was the old people's home.

Nazis Destroy Towns

The spokesman said the Germans were reported to have ordered the destruction of every building from Narvik northwards, and the removal of the whole population.

Military observers believed the news of the Norwegian landing would heighten German tension throughout Norway.

It appeared likely that other Norwegian detachments from the British Isles will soon follow those which have joined the Russians.

Many of the first detachments were highly skilled commandos, trained to fight under extreme Arctic conditions and familiar with the barren far north country.

Meanwhile, the first units of Norway's police force, trained in Sweden during the past two years, were expected to arrive later this week in territory liberated by the Russians.

The Norwegian announcement explained that its military mission was under the control of Maj. Gen. William Steffens, Norwegian military attache in Moscow, and that the troops were under the direct command of Marshal Kirill Meretskov, Russian commander in Norway.

The arrival of the Norwegian detachments coincided with a stepped-up Allied sea and aerial offensive along the Norwegian coast, especially in the north where military operations, other than guerrilla fighting, are impossible on the inland waters.

General Eisenhower's warning to Norwegians to expect a complete blockade of their country caused the Germans, according to reports from Norway, to speculate on imminent large-scale operations in the Arctic zone.

Nazis Move South

Norwegian government sources estimated Hitler's Norwegian garrison numbered about 200,000 men. Latest reports of the German retreat from Finnmark indicated that the Germans were planning to move south as far as Narvik and Tromsoe where, Norwegian underground agents reported, defense lines have been erected in the hope of halting the Russians.

Until Dahl led these first Norwegian troops home, only special agents had been back in Norway. Many Norwegians, however, had entered the country during the last four years to organize sabotage and underground movements whose members were told to delay action until King Haakon gives the signal for a countrywide uprising.

When organized Norwegian resistance ended in Norway, King Haakon, members of the government and many officers, including Dahl, escaped by boat to England where, during the past four years, they have been building up an armed force to return to the country.

Dahl was described by friends as a blond, tall, handsome, man of 50. From 1941 until 1942 he was head of the Norwegian conscription board in New York. He was director of the Norwegian military academy from 1935 to 1937. From 1916 to 1919 he was attached to the Norwegian military [illegible] London.

Forces Arrive on Arctic Front to Fight Under Russians in Liberation Campaign—Nazis Destroy Towns in Retreat.

London, Nov. 14 (A. P.).—The first Norwegian detachments to return home since the ill-fated 1940 campaign have landed in Norway and are operating with the Russians against the Germans on the arctic front.

The Norwegian exiled Government announced this tonight. The vanguard, small but specially picked and highly trained in Arctic fighting, sailed recently from a north British port.

Hoping for early liberation of their country, the Norwegians also sent a military mission, composed of representatives of the navy, air forces and a number of Government departments.

Police Also Arrive.

The first units of Norway's police force, trained in Sweden during the past two years, are expected to arrive later this week in territory liberated by the Russians.

Many of the Norwegians, who landed at an undisclosed Arctic port, were Commandoes who had participated in the British combined operations against Norwegian islands last year.

The official announcement said the military mission was led by Col. Arne Dahl, commander of the famous Alta Battalion during the last bitter days of the 1940 campaign around Narvik. The mission, however, is under control of Major-Gen. William Steffens, Norwegian military attache in Moscow. The Norwegian troops are under the direct command of Marshal Kirill Meretskov, Russian commander in Norway.

Nazi Pillaging In N. Norway Reported

London, Nov. 14 (AP)—The Germans in northern Norway are "burning and destroying everything," including whole towns, in their retreat southward, the Norwegian Government reported today.

The far northern coastal towns of Vadsoe and Vardoe have been wiped out and their inhabitants sent fleeing, a spokesman said. Parts of Hammerfest, northernmost town in the world, and Honningsfjord have been devastated by fire.

Thousands of Norwegians in Finnmark are homeless, the spokesman said, adding:

"Burning their homes, stealing their food and destroying their production, the Germans have sent these Norwegians into the Artic night without a shelter over their head, compelling them to follow the stream of evacuess west and south."

Jonas Lie, Minister of Police in Quisling's government, in taking charge of the evacuation of Finnmark, told Norwegians that "war operations may mean that the population may have to face the winter without shelter or food."

5 DIRECT HITS SANK TIRPITZ

LONDON, Nov. 14—(AP) Members of the famous RAF "dam buster" gang related today that at least four and possibly five direct hits with 12,000-pound bombs sank the Tirpitz Sunday in Tromso fjord on the Norwegian coast.

Each of the 29 aircraft dropped an earthquake bomb, making a total of 164 tons plummeted on the target. The crewmen said that before the 41,000-ton German battleship went down, she made one last desperate attempt to save herself by firing on the Lancasters with her 16-inch guns.

These picked crews—Canadians, Australians, Englishmen and Scotsmen—had flown more than 10,000 miles in the last two months trying to get the Tirpitz.

Today they came to London, where they were wined, dined, and paraded.

"We knew we could sink her if we could get a clear visual run," said Wing Commander James B. Tait, 27. He said two special duty Lancaster squadrons had been doing little else but planning the knockout blow on the Tirpitz for two months.

Tirpitz Hit Hard, Nazis Admit

London, Nov. 14 (AP)—The great German battleship Tirpitz, sunk Sunday by six-ton British earthquake bombs, was "put out of action in shallow water just off the Norwegian coast" and a great part of her crew of possibly 1,600 was saved, the German communique asserted today.

The broadcast requiem for the 41,000-ton superdreadnaught said:

"The German battleship Tirpitz, engaged in protecting the north Norwegian coast, has repulsed, in the last two years, numerous air attacks by strong special British bomber formations and shot down a large number of enemy machines.

"In Shallow Water"

"On November 12 the Tirpitz was again attacked by British planes with super-bombs. The battleship, lying in shallow water just off the Norwegian coast, was put out of action. A great part of the crew was rescued."

Earlier, London observers said they expected the sinking of the Tirpitz to release additional strong units of the British home fleet for service against the Japanese in Far Eastern waters.

Stockholm Hears Berlin Is Bewildered by Fate of Warship.

The Stockholm Tidningen asserted today that 1,200 Germans died on the battleship Tirpitz Sunday, when British bombs sent it to the bottom of an Arctic fjord in Norway.

Many of the 800 rescued from the 2,000 in the crew were injured seriously because "the first direct hit compressed the exits and prevented the crew from getting out," the dispatch, distributed by OWI, said.

The Stockholm newspaper said "the greatest dismay" prevailed in Berlin naval circles. An investigation was reported started to determine why the superdreadnought did not have better fighter plane protection, promised but not provided, the newspaper added.

"Berlin now believes in a British landing in Norway, and that the German Army in Finland will be isolated completely," the dispatch said.

The sinking of the Tirpitz by R. A. F. Lancasters using six-ton earthquake bombs is a triumph for a blind man who lost his sight by a German bomb blast in the attacks on London in 1940, says the British Information Services.

He is Air Commodore Patrick Huskinson, M. C., director of armament for the Royal Air Force, and he shares with his team of experts the credit for developing the devastating 12,000-pound bomb.

Behind the scenes, the report said, he and his experts followed the bombing of the Scharnhorst and the Gneisenau, and they noted that although there was at least one direct hit and many near-misses the battleships escaped.

They began developing the new armor-piercing explosive and streamlined it to have a swift and accurate descent and a strong enough casing to stand the impact without breaking up.

Tirpitz Sinking Celebrated

New York, Nov. 14 (AP)—American merchant seamen, veterans of the Murmansk run, today celebrated the sinking of the German battleship Tirpitz, with 25 Royal Air Force flyers as their guests of honor.

Some of the seamen said they feared the Tirpitz more than they did submarines and planes.

V-2 ATTACK ON U. S. IS OFF

London Reports 12-Ton Warhead Robot Was Failure

London, Nov. 14 (AP)—Months of unsuccessful experiments with 20-ton rockets have delayed the Germans' V-2 timetable and convinced them it would be impossible to use rockets against America in this war, a usually well-informed source suggested today.

The monstrous rocket originally was designated as V-2, this informant said, and had a 12-ton warhead. Large supplies of critically needed war material were given top priority for its production.

Hundreds of the rockets were launched toward experimental zones, but failed to reach the ground. German scientists theorized that friction created by their great weight and speed caused them to disintegrate in the stratosphere.

Size Of Rocket Reduced

The Germans finally decided to reduce the size of the rocket. The present V-2 weapon with a one-ton warhead was the outgrowth. Experiments with such missiles of the size needed to be fired against America virtually have been abandoned because of the disappointing results of the original V-2, he said.

"The Germans would like to have been able to launch 1,000 or more rockets daily against England this winter," he asserted. "But the delay in precious time and wastage of material in these experiments undoubtedly have upset the timetable."

ROBOT LULL ENDS

London, Nov. 14 (A. P.).—After a lull of several days the Germans launched a brief flying bomb attack on southern England during the night. An official announcement said that some damage was done in the London area and in outlying districts.

Earlier the Ministry of Home Security disclosed that 172 civilians were killed and 416 hospitalized during October as a result of air raids on the United Kingdom.

Nazi Last-Ditch Weapon May Be Huge Rocket Gun

New York, Nov. 14 (AP)—Germany is preparing a last-ditch, rocket fight, not with the spectacular V-1 and V-2 but with short-range weapons, in the opinion of Edward F. Chandler, who has been experimenting in rocket propulsion for many years.

Chandler has made experimental rockets and their launchers for plpane and other uses and agrees with the opinions published from Allied experts that Germany is too late with the Flying Telegraph Pole type of rocket to affect this war. "However," he says, "I do believe it is possible that they are preparing to make their ultimate stand behind thousands of powerful, large caliber, short-range rocket guns of great destructive power against both tanks and infantry.

Simple And Inexpensive

"Such equipment is simple and inexpensive to produce in quantities. The terrific fire-power will be more important than extreme accuracy and the guns may be so disposed throughout enemy territory as to be difficult to locate and destroy from the air.

"By this meahs they may hope to prolong the war and greatly increase Allied casualties. It is logical to expect them to turn to rocket ordnance on a vast scale, not only because of its demonstrated effectiveness but because of the relative ease with which such equipment may be turned out."

Launcher Is Cheap

A rocket launcher is lightweight and cheap, as against artillery construction. The huge rocket emplacements of concrete and steel, found on the Calais and Normandy coasts, are not the type for short-range rocket weapons.

"The simplest, least expensive and most destructive weapon so far demonstrated in the present war is the rocket," Chandler declares.

"Material requirements are low, highly skilled labor is not essential and extensive plant equipment is not required. Short-range rockets of large caliber and guns for launching them can be manufactured far more economically and faster than ordinary guns and ammunition.

Blown From Pl[illegible], Then Chutes T[illegible] Ground

London, Nov. 14 (AP)—When Lieut. Daniel F. Gilmore's Flying Fortress exploded on a mission over Europe the Luling (Texas) bombardier had just picked up his 'chute. He was blown through the nose of the plane and fell 10,000 feet holding the 'chute in his hands before recovering enough from the explosion to snap the hooks and pull the rip cord. He landed three miles from the German lines.

The pilot and copilot were killed outright and three other members of the crew hospitalized.

NAZI SHIPPING HIT BY BRITISH FLEET

LONDON, Nov. 14 — (AP) The British Home fleet struck another blow at what is left of German seapower Sunday night, soon after the sinking of the battleship Tirpitz by the R.A.F., when it blew up or sank nine ships of an 11-ship convoy off Norway and drove a tenth Nazi vessel ashore, it was disclosed tonight.

Two cruisers and four destroyers swooped down on the German convoy rounding Lister fjord, south of Egersund, Norway, travelling north and inflicted the losses without any material damage to themselves. The Nazi convoy, an Admiralty communique reported, included several M-class minesweepers and was taken entirely by surprise.

"In order to carry out the attack," the communique said, "his Majesty's ships had to steam close inshore, bringing them within range of enemy coastal batteries. The shore batteries joined in the action, but their fire, although spectacular, was ineffective and none of his Majesty's ships sustained any material damage."

It added that there was a small number of British casualties.

An interpretation of aerial photographs today revealed the Tirpitz did not turn over completely when she was sunk because her superstructure is lodged in the seabed.

Only a part of the bottom and the starboard side of the vessel can be seen. The total length above the water is approximately 720 feet. The center and starboard propeller shafts can be seen, but the port shaft is under water.

CHURCHILL IS BACK FROM TRIP TO PARIS

London, Nov. 14 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Churchill and his aids returned from Paris late today.

Paris, Nov. 14 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Churchill this week visited the French First Army in the Jura Mountain approaches, Germany, and in rapid succession (1) a tire on his car blew out, (2) the chains came off on a perilous, ice-caked road, and (3) the car was bogged down in a snowdrift for fifteen minutes.

"Thank heavens, the Grand Old Man didn't get out in the bitter cold to push, one of the party said. It's a wonder he didn't. There surely is a limit to what the Prime Minister should be asked to do in such weather."

In the party were Gen. Charles de Gaulle, Marshal Sir Alan Brooke, Miss Mary Churchill and Major-Gen. Jean de Lattre de Tassigny, who commands the French First Army.

Driving to a nearby town from the French command post 3,000 feet in the mountains, Mr. Churchill stood hatless in a heavy snowstorm to receive the cheers of the French people.

BRITISH STRESS FRIENDSHIP WITH DEGAULLE REGIME

SINGLETON

LONDON, Nov. 14—(AP) A new high in Anglo-French friendship was proclaimed today by Foreign Minister Anthony Eden, strengthening belief in London that Britain is bent upon formation of a western European bloc to guard against postwar German aggression.

Eden strode to the well of the House of Commons to tell in glowing terms of the re-emergence of France as a great power, to pledge Britain's support in that effort, and to say that never before has the friendship of the two peoples rested on a "surer foundation."

Reporting on the British good will mission to Paris, he spoke in the absence of Prime Minister Churchill, who returned by air from the French capital several hours later looking tired but happy at the results of his mission. Churchill met Gen. Eisenhower before leaving France this morning.

Eden's stress on the Anglo-French friendship came amidst reports here that Churchill—in advance of the imminent meeting of the Big Three—is attempting to line up an alliance among Britain, France, Belgium and Holland to stand sentinel over Germany after the post-victory occupation period.

This development is understood to be designed to match a similar eastern alliance which would be formed around Soviet Russia with both combines so constituted that they would be able to function within the framework of any future world security league.

Amid cheers from his colleagues, Eden offered this tribute to General DeGaulle—"the man who today is unquestionably the inspirer and the man who personifies the unity of the French people." He spoke also of the vigor and confidence of the French troops.

The Foreign Secretary hinted those volunteer troops might yet get a chance to turn their weapons of vengeance upon Germany.

"No one can doubt," he said, "that when time and opportunity presents these men will give as suitable an account of themselves against the hated Nazi in the field as they have already given in the bitter and bloody warfare in France itself."

The Foreign Minister made no attempt to minimize the difficulties which confront France. He told commons that 2,500,000 of her men—prisoners of war, political deportees, and forced laborers—are still held in Germany. In Paris itself, he said, life "is a constant struggle without material difficulties."

Eden said that the effect of German propaganda against Britain, "together with the sufferings of French people in this period of tyrannous enemy rule, has been to place our friendship with France on a surer foundation than ever existed in the history of our two countries."

NOV 15 1944

Anglo-French Amity Called Firm By Eden

London, Nov. 14 (AP)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told Commons today that Germany's "tyrannous" rule over France had resulted in placing Britain's "friendship with the republic on a surer foundation than ever before."

In a report on the welcome accorded Prime Minister Churchill and the British delegation to the Paris conference with General de Gaulle, the Foreign Minister declared:

"We felt behind the tumultous greetings of these last days orderly crowds the heart beat of a nation once again united with its allies and confident of its own future."

Powers Of Recuperation

"France will recover," Eden said. "Before now in her history, she has shown powers of recuperation which astonished the world."

He paid high tribute to General de Gaulle—"the man who today is unquestionably the inspirer and the man who personifies the unity of the French people."

The French leader, he added, has surrounded himself "with a band of young and vigorous colleagues who have proved their worth in the ordeals through which France has passed."

Spoke For Churchill

Eden spoke on behalf of Prime Minister Churchill who yesterday was reported inspecting French troops in the Vosges region.

"France's determination to work together with her allies," Eden said, "expresses, I am sure, the heartful wish of the French people. This will of the people is the only sure foundation of a foreign policy in a free land."

Commons And Post-War Trade

London, Nov. 14 (AP)—British concern over post-war markets flared in the House of Commons today with Sir Patrick Hannon, Conservative, declaring that "careful plans are in progress in the United States to seize practically the whole of South American trade."

Hugh Dalton, speaking for the Government as president of the Board of Trade, which has been under recent criticism on export matters, cautioned a calm approach to the subject. He said discussions on Latin-American markets have been proceeding with the United States, but Emanuel Shinwell, Laborite, commented that "while discussions are taking place we are slowly but surely losing a lot of trade."

Steel Export License Denied

Neil McLean, Laborite, touched off the debate with an assertion that a Manchester firm had been denied a license to export steam piping to a textile firm in Brazil.

The firm was told, said McLean, that the United States had made itself responsible for the export to South America of all finished steel.

"How many agreements of this kind have been made between this country and the United States?" he asked. "Are any reciprocal advantages going to manufacturers in this country?"

Dalton Explains

Dalton told the House that British steel production was insufficient to meet essential requirements and no surplus was available for export to South America. Britain herself imports steel products from the United States, he added.

"These matters must be reviewed against the historical background of lend-lease," said Dalton. "Lend-lease has been a valuable and indispensable contribution to our war effort.

"It is only reasonable that any change in the arrangements should take place in a spirit of mutual trust between ourselves and the United States. That is now going on."

EIRE TOO EASY ON REFUGEES

State Department Says Answer Doesn't Go Far Enough

London, Nov. 14 (AP)—Generalissimo Franco was accused in a Moscow broadcast by the Russian Commentator I. Yermashev tonight of preparing Spain as a haven for Hitler and other war criminals.

Washington, Nov. 14 (AP)—The United States let it be known tonight that Eire's stand on the question of barring refugee Nazis was not wholly to the Government's liking.

The United States and other Allies have been trying to get neutrals to close their doors to war criminals. In London today the House of Commons was told that Eire had taken the stand she would accept political refugees should "justice, charity or the honor of the nation" so require.

Paul Emrys-Evans, British Under Secretary for Dominions, said, however, that Eire had made plain she would deny admission to aliens whose presence would injure Irish neutrality or the interests of friendly states.

Text Of Statement

The State Department statement said:

"The United States Government made the same representations to the Irish Government that it made to other governments sometime ago in regard to refuge for war criminals. These representations are discussed in Secretary Haull's statement of September 28, 1944.

"A reply has been received from the Irish Government. If it is to be made public it would have to be given out by that Government.

"Certain other countries have already expressed themselves publicly, as you know.

"We are glad to have the assurances in the Irish reply, but it did not go as far as we would have liked in all particulars."

Text of Statement

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 (AP).—Following is the text of the State Department statement on the question of asylum for war criminals in Eire:

"In response to inquiries regarding the reply of the Irish government to this government's representations concerning the possible refuge of war criminals in Eire, a State Department spokesman said:

"The United States government made the same representations to the Irish government that it made to other governments some time ago in regard to refuge for war criminals. These representations are discussed in Secretary Cordell Hull's statement of Sept. 28, 1944.

"A reply has been received from the Irish government. If it is to be made public it will have to be given out by that government.

"Certain other countries have already expressed themselves publicly, as you know.

"We are glad to have the assurances in the Irish reply, but it did not go as far as we would have liked in all particulars."

IRISH BAR PLEDGE ON WAR CRIMINALS

London, Nov. 14 (A. P.).—Eire has informed Great Britain that it can give no assurance against granting asylum to political refugees from Axis countries.

Paul Emrys-Evans, Under-Secretary of State for the Dominions, told the House of Commons today that Prime Minister Eamon de Valera, replying to Allied representations seeking to bar enemy war criminals from all neutral countries, took the stand that his country would accept such fugitives should "justice, charity or the honor of the nation" so require. Mr. de Valera made it plain, however, that Eire would deny admission to aliens whose presence would injure Irish neutrality or the interests of friendly States.

Can't Exempt Last Sons

LONDON, Nov. 14 (AP).—Deputy Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee told the House of Commons today that Britain's man-power problems made it impossible to assign to non-operational duty the last surviving son in a family in which there had been one or more casualties. Such a plan was announced recently in the United States.

German General Killed

London, Nov. 14 (AP)—The German Transocean News Agency reported tonight that Lieut. Gen. Georg Rosenbusch, inspector of the land fortifications for Germany in the north, had been killed in action.

Commons Votes Longer Tenure

LONDON, Nov. 14 (AP).—The House of Commons voted today to prolong the life of Britain's nine-year-old Parliament for twelve more months. The measure goes to the House of Lords.

U. S. Potal Forces Increased

LONDON, Nov. 14 (AP).—United States Army and Navy postal forces in England have been increased 25 per cent to handle a total of 650,000 bags of mail containing Christmas packages and letters for forces in this war theater, which expected to flood ports and bases by Dec. 1.

GERMAN MINISTER SCORES SWEDES

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 14—(AP) Dr. Paul Schmidt, German foreign office spokesman, in a statement in Berlin today accused the Swedish press of fomenting "enmity" between Sweden and Germany, and declared Sweden as "being systematically exploited by belligerent America as an assembly place for its bombers."

(Swedish-German relations have deteriorated recently, with Sweden formally protesting announced German intentions to sink any ship in the Baltic sea and gulf of Bothnia without warning, and with Stockholm reporting Monday night that the Swedish-German trade treaty would be allowed to expire Jan. 1.)

The German foreign office spokesman's statement, as reported here by Swedish newspapers' Berlin correspondents, said, "I must point out that thousands of Norwegians being trained in Sweden as policemen could be used in action in Norway.

"Furthermore, I must declare that American Flying Fortresses are not landing in Sweden by chance."

This was the first public recognition by a responsible German official that Norwegians trained here for the announced purpose of policing liberated sections of Norway could be used to fight the Germans as well as simply to preserve order.

The German spokesman also expressed surprise at Sweden's protest against Germany's intentions in the Baltic, saying that the German declaration of sinking plans "is no way contrary to international law."

HITLER MYSTERY

Stockholm, Nov. 14 (A. P.).—The newspaper Tidningen today published a "private report" about Adolf Hitler stating:

"Rumors circulating in Berlin that Hitler is dead have been intensified by a report that all visits to the Fuehrer have been canceled, including tomorrow's visit of Tiso, President of Slovakia."

The Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet quotes informed circles as reporting that Adolf Hitler has had a shock and the right side of his body is paralyzed and his power of speech has been affected, said a Moscow broadcast recorded today by CBS.

Switzerland's Doors Closed To War Criminals

Bern, Nov. 14 (AP)—Switzerland will not open her doors to those who have violated the laws of war or to persons whose conduct has been "irreconcilable to the fundamental traditions of right and humanity," the Federal Council announced today.

In reply to a councilor's question, the council said it is likewise clear that asylum will not be granted to persons whose attitude has been hostile to Switzerland.

The Federal Council will continue to grant asylum to "worthy" fugitives, but is "not inclined to authorize without examination" the entrance of all who may ask asylum in Switzerland. The number of fugitives in this country "already had reached disquieting proportions," it was stated.

Sweden To Tighten Laws

Stockholm, Nov. 14 (AP)—A Swedish Government commission is reviewing this country's alien laws in order to close any avenues which might be open for the entry of war criminals or other undesirable refugees seeking haven in Sweden, a spokesman said today.

"Naturally, we can't have a guard stationed on every foot of Sweden's border," this source said. "Persons wanted by the Allies therefore do have a chance to slip into our country but, as Minister of Interior Moeller stated, we intend to eject them."

BRITISH IN ITALY CAPTURE BRIDGE

Troops Advance Two Miles In Area Around Forli

Rome, Nov. 14 (AP)—The British Eighth Army has won the coastal highway bridge over the Ghiaia canal before Ravenna and in important gains of up to two miles in the Forli area has captured the village of San Tome, Allied headquarters announced today.

Eighth Army units which crossed the Ghiaia canal yesterday cut back across Highway 16—the coastal highway—and captured the German rear guard holding the bridge. The Germans were surrounded while engaged in meeting the Allied frontal attack from south of the canal, and the expertly executed maneuver gave the Allies an important new foothold on the approaches to Ravenna.

100 Prisoners Taken

In capturing San Tome northwest of Forli the Allied troops took 100 prisoners. Mopping up of German parties west of the Ronco river, north of Forli, continued, with additional prisoners taken.

The desert air force was cooperating closely with ground troops advancing slowly northwest of Forli on a 1,500-yard front against German infantry and tanks.

Southwest of Forli, the town of San Varano was found to be clear of the enemy but heavily mined, and British troops crossed the Montone southwest of the village at two points. The Germans counter-attacked strongly at the lower crossing, but Allied positions were maintained.

Poles Gain Two Miles

In the hills south of the Rimini-Bologna highway, new features were captured. At one place Polish troops advanced nearly two miles, capturing Monte Ghebbi, a 1,450-foot peak. Hard fighting was in progress just west of Monte Casole in the neighborhood of the village of Cella.

On the Fifth Army front, action again was limited to patrolling and shelling. Scattered showers were reported from the entire front.

It appeared that the next serious German delaying stand on the eastern end of the front would be made along the Montone river, flowing in a northeasterly direction to a point south of Ravenna.

Oil Line Across Po Bombed

Tactical Air Force Thunderbolts hit hard at the enemy far behind the ground front by bombing transfer points of the German oil pipeline across the Po river about ten miles east of Mantua, which lies in the heart of the Po Valley 55 miles north of Bologna.

This line, established after all the Po bridges were knocked out by the Allied air forces, provides gasoline for front-line troops. Tank trucks unload fuel into tanks on the north bank and the oil is pumped across to similar tanks on the south side.

The attack was part of a coordinated program to throttle German supplies, with particular emphasis on keeping the rail lines through the Brenner Pass out of operation.

Allies Gain 2 Miles In Forli Sector

Rome, Nov. 14 (AP)—British Eighth Army troops thrusting northwest from Forli, on the eastern sector of the Italian battlefront, have advanced two miles in some places, capturing the village of San Tome after bitter fighting, Allied headquarters announced today.

Other Eighth Army units which crossed the Ghiaia Canal south of Ravenna yesterday, cut back across Highway 16, the main coastal route, and captured German rear guards.

Cross Montone River

The Allied communique, which described the gains in the Forli area as "important," said that southwest of Forli, British troops pushed across the Montone river at many places and advanced into the foothills.

Two miles west of Highway 67, leading to Forli, Polish troops captured Bagnolo and cleared enemy troops from Monte Casole.

Nazi Positions Raked

Excellent results were reported by Tactical Air Force fighters and fighter-bombers bombing and strafing enemy troop concentrations, strong points and gun positions.

The Mediterranean Allied air forces flew approximately 1,100 sorties, including attacks on Adriatic shipping and communications targets in Yugoslavia. Twelve planes are missing.

Drive In Burma Beats Schedule

Combat Headquarters, Allied Troops in North Burma, Nov. 14 (AP)—Chinese troops pushing across North Burma toward their native land have by-passed Japanese-fortified Bhamo and may bring Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's two-year-old dream of a road to China to realization within weeks.

The Chinese drive south from Myitkyina has progressed so fast that heavy equipment has been hard-pressed to keep pace with the advance and the air force has not yet been called upon for close support.

In a month these troops have covered 122 miles without meeting serious resistance from the Japanese. The Chinese have another 100 to go—60 miles southeast to Namhkam and another 40 back to the northeast—before getting back on the old Burma road and into China.

Ahead Of Schedule

Now, however, the Chinese are not having to fight their way through jungles. They are on an all-weather highway that will lead them to China.

As a result of the weak Japanese resistance to the post-monsoon campaign the drive through north Burma is ahead of schedule. The small Japanese garrison remaining in by-passed Bhamo for an "until-the-death" stand does not constitute a serious Japanese attempt to slow down the Chinese advance.

Extensive enemy fortifications along the route from Myitkyina to Bhamo were found abandoned and were occupied by the Chinese without firing a shot.

CHINESE TROOPS APPROACH BHAMO

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 14—(AP) Chinese troops moving down from the northeast have reached positions just two miles short of the Japanese north Burma stronghold of Bhamo, while other forces scored gains in a flanking maneuvers to the southeast, the Allied command announced today.

The troops northeast of Bhamo advanced approximately five miles in winning their new positions, but the forces east and southeast of the stronghold were meeting stiff opposition. Despite this one unit, advancing southwestward from the Momauk area reached a point only two miles from the road leading south from Bhamo, the Allied daily communique said.

To the west in the Myitkyina-Mandalay railway corridor British troops advanced slightly against "determined" enemy resistance, the bulletin said.

Chinese Only 2 Miles From Bhamo In Burma

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 14 (AP)—A five-mile advance carried Chinese troops today to within two miles of the Japanese stronghold of Bhamo, in Burma's Irrawaddy Valley.

Another column to the east made slight progress yesterday against stiff opposition, a communique said. A unit moving southwest from the Momauk area also has reached a point two miles from the road leading south from Bhamo.

One hundred and sixty miles to the southwest British Imperials were exerting ever tightening pressure from north and west on Kalemyo, Japanese base 55 miles inside the Burma border. The communique reported some progress.

Heavy bombers of the Eastern Air Command yesterday attacked bridges on the Burma-Thailand railway.

CHINESE REVEAL LOSS OF LIUCHOW

CHUNGKING, Nov. 14 — (AP) The Chinese command acknowledged today the loss of Liuchow, big south China base which the Japanese had claimed last week and where the U. S. Air forces already had abandoned their last airfield.

A Chinese communique said Liuchow was lost on Nov. 11 and that the town of Chienkiang, 55 miles southwest of Liuchow on the Nanning highway, had fallen the same day.

The Chinese said the Japanese assailing their positions 18 miles east of Ishan on the Kwangsi-Kweichow railway 45 miles from Liuchow had suffered heavily and that the attacks had weakened. It was added, however, that a Japanese column moving northwest on the railway had attacked Locheng, 40 miles northwest of Liuchow.

It was not yet clear whether the Japanese thrusts west from Liuchow were a drive for Kweichow province, or merely screening operations for the right flank.

Loss of Chienkiang meant the Japanese had advanced more than 250 miles since they projected their westward push into Kwangsi province from the Canton area.

Describing the loss of Liuchow, the Chinese command said that at dawn on Nov. 11 heavy Japanese reinforcements broke into the city after Chinese street fighters had eliminated a large portion of those who had gained entry earlier.

Renewed street fighting lasted all day the eleventh, with both sides suffering heavily, and during the night the Chinese pulled out to new positions "where they were prepared to deal blows to the enemy's rear positions," the communique said.

A communique from the U. S. 14th air force announced concentrated raids on Japanese river shipping, supply lines and troops Sunday and Monday in the Liuchow sector, with four Japanese interceptor planes shot down, two others probably destroyed and nine damaged.

CHIENKIANG FALLS TO JAPS IN CHINA

Chungking, Nov. 14 (A. P.).—The Chinese High Command admitted tonight that Liuchow had been abandoned on Saturday, and that Chienkiang, fifty-five miles below Liuchow on the highway to Yungning, fell to the Japanese that same day.

The Fourteenth United States Air Force announced yesterday that the Liuchow air base—the last American base in southeastern China—had been destroyed and abandoned. Today's American communique said that the sector was bombed yesterday and the day before. Liuchow was still smoking when the fighters attacked Pheze, south of the city, in support of the Chinese ground forces, it was added.

The fall of Yungning would leave the Japanese only 110 miles to go to establish a link between Manchuria and French Indo-China. Today one Japanese column was moving northwest along the Kwangsi-Kweichow railway, in a thrust aimed at Locheng, forty miles north-west of Liuchow. It was not yet clear, however, whether this represented the beginning of a drive toward Kweichow Province, or was merely intended to establish a screen to safeguard the enemy's right flank.

Ambassador Gauss Leaves China By Plane

Chungking, Nov. 14 (AP)—Clarence E. Gauss, who recently resigned as United States Ambassador to China, left for home by plane today following farewell parties topped by a dinner given by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Pending arrival of a new Ambassador, Embassy Counsellor George Atcheson, Jr., will serve as charge d'affaires.

Traveling in the same plane with Gauss was Lieutenant Commander Frank Harrington, United States embassy doctor and assistant naval attache, who served as personal physician to Mrs. Chiang Kai-shek.

Production Board Set Up

Chungking, Nov. 14 (AP)—A Chinese war production board designed to mobolize the maximum possible Chinese resources for the war against Japan was established today under the Minister of Economic Affairs, Wong Wen-hao.

Wong, famous as a geologist, will work with Donald Nelson, who is returning to China from the United States.

17 Killed in Crash Of Transport Plane

HONOLULU, Nov. 14 — (AP) Seventeen persons were killed in the crash of a four-engined C54 Army transport plane only 50 miles off Oahu enroute from Hawaii to the United States mainland, the Army announced tonight. Date of the crash was not given.

They included two Army officers, seven army enlisted men, two Navy enlisted men and the crew of three officers and three men.

It was the first reported loss of a C54 by the Pacific wing of the Army transport command. The cause was not known. Some of the Army mail aboard has been recovered.

Sweating Out The War

Eniwetok, Nov. 14 (AP)—A Seabee who worked in the sun all day stripped to the waist, wrote home for some sun-tan oil. A brother in cold, damp England wrote home at the same time asking for a sweater. Mom got the requests mixed up and the Seabee in the Marshalls got a turtle-neck sweater, while the sun-tan oil went to foggy England.

Making Sure Of Seat

A Marshall Island Base, Nov. 14 (AP)—When it was common knowledge that Carole Landis was due, GIs on many a South Pacific isle moved their cots into the makeshift theater the night before to insure having front seats.

WHEAT IS SENT TO AID BOLIVIA

U. S. Diverts Shipload From Australia To Block Argentina

Washington, Nov. 14 (AP)—Countering what looked like an Argentine pressure move on Bolivia, the United States has sent a shipload of wheat to meet a threatened shortage in Bolivia.

The whole story of what has been going on between Argentina, which at present is combatting a non-recognition policy followed by most American republics, and Bolivia, which is friendly to the non-recognition countries, is not known here. But several pertinent facts are known.

Argentine Cuts Export

The Argentine Government notified Bolivia without any preliminary warning that wheat shipments from Argentina to Bolivia would be cut 50 per cent.

30.24 — 20383

The reason advanced was that Argentine army maneuvers had dislocated rail transport. This was a sort of double meaning explanation, pointedly reminding the Bolivians that the Argentine army was on the move and ready for action.

The wheat cut created a serious situation in Bolivia, where storage facilities are inadequate. Failure to receive supplies would lead swiftly to a food shortage.

U. S. Then Steps In

The United States Government ordered a ship bound from Australia with wheat to put in at a Chilean port and unload cargo for transshipment to Bolivia.

Reports have been current for months that Argentina has been using threats and indirect pressures to break down the solidarity of the American republics, which, like the United States, refused to recognize the Government of President Edelmiro Farrell. United States officials have described the Farrell regime as a source of Fascism in this hemisphere.

U. S. Sends Bolivia Wheat In Emergency

La Paz, Bolivia, Nov. 14 (AP)—The United States has sent 10,000 tons of wheat to Bolivia to alleviate a shortage due to failure to receive customary supplies from Argentina, it was disclosed today.

To meet a request for help, the United States Government directed Australia-bound ships to put in at the Chilean ports of Antofagasta and Arica, where the wheat was discharged for transshipment overland to Bolivia. Bolivia has no outlet to the sea.

Bolivian officials, expressing their gratitude, said failure to receive the expected Argentine shipments resulted from a dislocation of rail transport partly attributable to Argentine army maneuvers.

It is the first time that any North American wheat has been imported to Bolivia, the officials said.

Three Mountain Peaks Named For Big Three

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 14 (AP)—Mountain peaks in the northeastern corner of the Peace river block and British Columbia have been named after Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Marshal Stalin, Lands Minister Kennedy announced today.

All 9,500 feet high, the peaks lie north of the Finlay river and just south of the Alaska highway.

Nine Killed In Plane Crash In Newfoundland

Harmon Field, Newfoundland, Nov. 14 (AP) — Army officials announced today that nine persons were killed and nine others injured in a crash Sunday of an army transport plane against the side of a mountain 30 miles west of the Air Transport Command base here.

Total complement of the plane was 12 passengers and six crew members, officials said.

Reich Bank Panic Is Reported

New York, Nov. 14 (AP)—The Gestapo has arrested the managing directors of Germany's "two greatest banks," causing a panic in German financial circles "greater than the panic following the bank crash in 1931," the Swedish newspaper Stockholms-Tidningen said in an article reported today by the OWI.

The bankers were listed as Dr. Oswald Roesler, managing director of the Deutsche bank, and Karl Goetz, managing director of the Dresdner bank.

The newspaper said they were arrested for refusing to accept short-term German treasury notes "thus expressing doubt in a German victory." The story said "people stormed the banks to withdraw their deposits and big industries attempted to cancel their accounts."

JAPS SAY RUSSIANS TO STAY NEUTRAL

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tokyo radio said today "It can safely be assumed" that Soviet Russia will not break her neutrality with Japan in the immediate future "to play a belligerent part in the Pacific war."

In a broadcast beamed to the United States, a "specific commentary written by Dr. Kosaka Tomula, Doctor of Law and authority on international relations," manifested continued concern over Soviet Marshal Joseph Stalin's characterization of Japan last week as an "aggressor nation."

Tomula interpreted the reference as a "light diplomatic gesture."

He asserted Britain and America were "suffering much from the extremely independent character of the Soviet European policy," and were "forcing themselves to be genial with the Soviet Union, simply because they have a strong enemy to fight with Soviet aid."

Therefore, the broadcast said, if Stalin's speech could be called more friendly to Britain and America than those he made in previous years, that could be interpreted as Stalin's "idea of alleviating the natural resentment of the Anglo-American government against the Soviet Union for its diplomatic successes in Europe by lip service, and calling Japan an aggressor nation would be the easiest service of the kind."

Tomula said Stalin, too, could have used the term "aggressor" in a sense that would have no "profound political implication."

The broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications commission, declared Stalin's characterization of Japan as an "aggressor" could be "more appropriately taken as an elegy condoning the watery funeral of a substantial part of the United States Navy in the Pacific —a fitting diplomatic courtesy."

FRENCH SEEKING 2 BILLION WORTH OF U. S. EXPORTS

Huge Quantity of Goods Is Sought During Next 12 Months.

PLAN NEAR COMPLETION

Problem of Financing Program to Be Worked Out by FDR, Congress.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 — (AP)

The French are seeking mately two billion dollars w United States exports durin next 12 months for use in re ing their country, it was lea tonight.

Arrangements for the huge procurement program already are nearing completion. Some of the goods may be shipped on Lend-Lease because they are considered necessary to France's war effort against Germany or Japan but the great bulk will go partly for cash and, officials hope, partly on credit.

Seek 700 Locomotives

The French program, probably the farthest advanced of the economical plans to come out of liberated Europe, calls for purchasing 700 locomotives as well as comparable quantities of railway rolling stock and track equipment; trucks for highway transport; huge shipments of cotton, fertilizers, and other raw materials.

It has recently been revised as a result of the discovery upon the liberation of France that the ravages of war had not been as great as officials first believed. The amounts of factory equipment desired have been sharply reduced and the amounts of raw materials required to keep existing French factories running have been greatly increased. Similarly there was a reduction in food required and an increase in fertilizer and other food producing materials.

The biggest problem is how to finance the French program. The answer will depend on what kind of overall export finance program is worked out by President Roosevelt and Congress in the next few months.

A hint of what may be coming was given in San Francisco today by Charles P. Taft, a State department economic official, who called for repeal of the Johnson act, which prohibits U. S. lending to nations that defaulted on World War I debts, and for expansion of the export-import bank's lending authority.

The experience of American and French officials in negotiating the French program touches at many points on problems that are expected to become more and more common in foreign economic relations as the war draws to a close.

The French tentatively projected their post-liberated requirements while they were still functioning as the National Committee of Liberation months ago.

France Received Many Supplies

On this basis the American army has taken into France limited supplies of food and clothing for the immediate relief of the French population. The army also has found it necessary to ship into France several hundred locomotives. These are not of a type that the French like although they will have to use them until others have been manufactured.

The French had a Lend-Lease agreement for North Africa and it was under that pact that they began building up their new army of approximately 300,000 men. About the time that the liberation of France began they set in motion machinery to get a Lend-Lease agreement for metropolitan France covering both supplies for a much greater French force and such civilian goods as might be considered essential to France's future war efforts.

The Lend-Lease agreement has been virtually completed and is understood to await only President Roosevelt's final approval. Officials indicate, however, that Lend-Lease is being interpreted strictly and that there will be no shipments of civilian goods under it except those really "essential to the war effort."

French Need Credit

The French have realized all along that most of their goods would have to be obtained on some other basis. When their procurement authorities recently added up estimates of goods desired in the next 12 months and reached a total of $2,000,000,000 they explained to the American negotiators that full cash payments would pretty well exhaust their resources. Thereupon a formula was worked out to permit procurement to begin since such items as locomotives take a long time to produce. Principal provisions of the formula are:

1—The United States has agreed to ship the goods to France, reserving the right to take any item for shipment elsewhere if war necessities require.

2—At the moment all the procuring has to be done on a cash basis and it understood that all supplies obtained by the French through the Army will be paid for in cash.

3—For the rest—the great bulk—France's purchases will, where military necessity justifies, be placed on a Lend-Lease basis and civilian supplies which do not come under lend-lease—by far the greatest portion—may either be paid for in cash or charged under whatever system of long term credits eventually is worked out.

Nomination of Caffery Is Sent to the Senate

Envoy Already in France Is Named for Ambassador

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 (AP).—President Roosevelt sent to the Senate today the nomination of Jefferson Caffery as American Ambassador to France.

Mr. Caffery is already functioning in that capacity, having gone to Europe shortly after the liberation of Paris as this government's representative to the De Gaulle government.

The President also nominated Harllee Branch, of Georgia, for another term on the Civil Aeronautics Board, and Captain Harry L. Merring, United States Navy, retired, of Cameron Mills, N. Y., to be a rear admiral. Captain Lindon Spencer, of 49 Broad Street, Hamilton, N. Y., was nominated to be a rear admiral in the Coast Guard.

'Victory In Sight,' Says Roosevelt

Washington, Nov. 14 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today "ultimate victory, both in Europe and in the Far East is in sight."

He made the statement to Sir Frederick William Eggleston, new Minister from Australia, who presented his credentials.

Saying that together the United Nations have largely solved the problems of waging war, Mr. Roosevelt added that the time has come to organize the peace "without for a moment diminishing our war effort."

He said the United States "especially looks forward to a mutually beneficial cooperation with Australia in the Pacific."

Sir Frederick responded that "now that the period of acute danger to Australia is over Australia is determined to contribute her due share in bringing to other countries the security which she now enjoys."

Allies In Europe Lose 500 Tanks Each Month

Washington, Nov. 14 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's forces are losing 500 tanks and 900 trucks a month, says Under Secretary of War Patterson.

And Eisenhower is in "imperative need" of more artillery ammunition than we are producing, Patterson told a news conference, explaining that the general should have 3,600 tons a day for adequate support.

Patterson gave this general picture of the military supply situation:

Our artillery ammunition production has tripled since January 1, but needs have risen even faster.

Other equipment essential if we are to intensify our offensives is running short, despite rising output.

We are short on tent cloth, airborne radar equipment, and other important items.

Reserves Short

Our war production job is "still enormous," with the army alone letting new contracts since January 1 at a yearly rate of more than $28,000,000,000.

Battlefield stockpiles of some vital materials are being dented, because there are no reserves in this country. These materials are distributed as fast as they are produced.

The problem does not result because anything is falling down, he said. Requirements are met on most parts of the supply program. Production has been rising even on those which are short.

"But it is not coming up fast enough," Patterson declared.

145 Vessels Launched In U. S. In October

Washington, Nov. 14 (AP)—Merchant shipbuilding in the United States in October soared to 145 vessels with gross deadweight tonnage of 1,310,295, Chairman Bland (D., Va.), of the House Merchant Marine Committee, reported today.

The October output of merchant shipyards was the highest in four months. It boosted to 1,378 ships, with tonnage of 13,555,877, the production since the first of the year.

Since December 7, 1941, Bland disclosed in a report to the House, 4,029 ships of 40,976,411 tons displacement have been built. The peak month was December, 1943, when 2,044,239 tons of shipping slid down the ways.

House Group To Fly To European War Front

Washington, Nov. 14 (AP)—The House Military Committee has arranged to fly to Europe next month for an inspection of battle fronts.

Chairman May (D., Ky.) said today all arrangements have been made and only the date of departure remains to be determined. The trip will last three weeks.

SECOND KINNICK IS WAR CASUALTY

Lieut. Benjamin Missing—Nile Lost In Caribbean

Washington, Nov. 14 (AP)—Nile Kinnick, one of Iowa's greatest football stars, lost his life in the Caribbean area, June 2, 1943, when his plane was forced down at sea.

Almost 18 months after Nile's death, the Navy Department today disclosed the area in which the All-American halfback went down. Previous reports did not mention where he died.

Kinnick's plane made a forced landing. A crashboat arrived at the scene within a few minutes. Although Kinnick had been seen to fall free of the plane, he could not be found.

The area where Nile Kinnick died came to light following an announcement that his brother, Benjamin Greave Kinnick, a marine flyer, is listed as missing in action since September 17, after a flight over Kavieng peninsula.

Third Son Is Naval Student

Nile, mainstay of the University of Iowa's 1939 "Ironmen," won almost every major honor available to a college football player.

He was All-America, received the John W. Heisman memorial trophy, won the Associated Press poll as the "athlete of the year," was voted the most valuable player in the Big Ten Conference, and took other awards.

Lieut. Benjamin Kinnick was the second of three Kinnick brothers. The youngest, George, 18, is a naval student at Colorado College.

Ben played high school football, but decided not to follow Nile's footsteps in college. Ben attended Iowa State College's engineering school, entering the Marine Corps in 1942. Nile enrolled in the navy in September, 1941, and began training in Kansas City three days before Pearl Harbor.

Parents Withhold Comment

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 14 (AP)—Because of "hope and expectation" that the announcement may prove wrong, Mr. and Mrs. Nile Kinnick, of Omaha, declined today to make any statement regarding a navy announcement that their second son, Lieut. Benjamin Greene Kinnick, may be a victim of the war.

Benjamin's wife, Mrs. Eleanor White Kinnick, is a WAVE lieutenant (j. g.) at Staten Island, New York.

ARMY CASUALTIES

Washington, Nov. 14 (A. P.).—The War Department made public today the names of 1,401 casualties in the Asiatic, Central Pacific, European, Mediterranean and Southwest Pacific areas. Included in the list are the following with their next of kin:

World Free Of Cartels Urged By American Officials

Washington, Nov. 14 (AP)—Final success in smashing Germany's historic ability to muscle in on world trade, say American officials, hinges largely on plans for international agreement against cartels.

In line with declarations by President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull, an interdepartmental committee has suggested a world agreement or treaty outlawing these international combines on the grounds of restricting trade.

Nations Would Promise

Neutrals and even defeated enemy countries would be brought into the agreement, each nation would promise to prevent its own industries from joining up with foreign companies to carve the world into exclusive markets, peg prices and stifle competition.

The Senate Kilgore subcommittee in its report on economic controls for Germany recommended that cartels be shattered into such pieces that they could never be put together again.

Officials working on details of such plans say that this can be done inside Germany with comparative ease during the period of military occupation.

However, two knotty problems remain to be solved before there can be assurance against a new German attempt at economic invasion of the world:

1. Control of cartels in the rest of the world and in Germany after the occupation ends.

2. Liquidation of German economic control in neutral countries—often concealed.

Wide Range Of Reactions

Unofficially, United States representatives have talked about an international anti-cartel agreement with other nations. Reactions range from lukewarmth to high enthusiasm.

In Britain, opinion appears divided and no Cabinet decision has yet been made.

Army Transport Version of B-29 Is Given Tests

Boeing Aims at Post-War Production of Plane With 100-Passenger Capacity

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 (AP).—A military transport version of the B-29, with the speed, range and high-altitude performance of the Superfortress, is undergoing tests.

This was disclosed today in an announcement by the Boeing Aircraft Company of a "stratocruiser" for post-war production. The transport, the announcement said, will have these features:

A maximum capacity of 100 passengers or 35,000 pounds of cargo; a top speed of 400 miles an hour, with a cruising speed of 340; a ceiling of 30,000 feet, with a pressurized cabin keeping atmospheric conditions equivalent to those of 8,000 feet; powered with four engines with a maximum of 3,500 horsepower each; an operating range of 3,500 miles, providing non-stop New York to London or transcontinental flights.

Built in Secrecy

The announcement said:

"A military prototype of the stratocruiser, built in secrecy, now is undergoing tests, making the airplane the first of the greater post-war supertransports to be completed by any aircraft company.

All present models of the plane will be for military service.

In appearance, the plane closely resembles the combat B-29, using the same wing of 141 foot spread and the same tail surfaces. The fuselage is 12 feet longer than that of the B-29; the gross weight of 130,000 pounds is 10,000 more than the Superfortress.

Has Many Combinations

The two decks result from building one fuselage on top of the other, with the wing structure running between. The plane can be operated in various combinations:

Carrying 100 passengers in three cabins, two on the upper and one on the lower deck, with remaining space used for cargo and baggage.

As a sleeper, with 36 berths or 72 days seats.

As an all-cargo plane, with a drive-up ramp in the rear and internal cargo handling equipment. Used this way, the maximum load is 35,000 pounds.

C. L. Egtvedt, the designer, estimates that as a post-war transport the plane will have an operating cost of one cent a passenger mile or five cents a ton mile. The announcement notes that operating cost per mile "should not be confused with fare per mile, but is one of the most important factors in determining fare."

War Training Bill Appears Stymied

Washington, Nov. 14 (AP)—A mountain of opposition has piled up against plans of Congressional leaders to seek early action on legislation to require military training in peacetime.

So formidable has it become that backers of the proposal say they would just as soon postpone consideration until some time next year.

Earlier plans had called for action soon on a bill providing that every youth take a year of military training upon reaching the age of 18.

No Hearings Slated

Chairman Reynolds (D., N. C.) of the Senate Military Committee said there would be no hearings this year on the legislation before his committee. In the absence of Chairman May (D., Ky.), members of the House Military Committee said they do not believe they will tackle the subject for some time.

"So far no time has been set for hearings," said Chairman Woodrum (D., Va.) of the House Post-War Military Policy Committee.

And Senator Johnson (D., Col.), of the Senate Military Committee, said he would regard enactment of the proposed law as "a display of an utter lack of faith in maintaining future peace."

Flyer Plan Urged

Johnson suggested the training of 100,000 volunteer pilots annually to keep up a strong air force.

The War Department, through Secretary Stimson, has sent to Capitol Hill a request for continuation of the expiring position of Under Secretary of War, in which Stimson made this comment:

"While the question of universal military training in the United States during the post-war period has not been determined the necessity for a much larger post-war military establishment than previously maintained is apparent."

Size Of Army Studied

The size of the post-war army is one of the problems being studied by the Woodrum committee. Most of its members feel that with universal training and a resulting large pool of trained reserves a big professional army would be unnecessary.

Major opposition to the legislation has come from churchmen, educators and other groups who have flooded the committees with petitions and letters. Indorsements have been received, committee spokesmen said, from the American Legion and other veterans' organizations.

Virgin Island Cities In Row

Washington, Nov. 14 (AP)—The municipal council of St. Croix in the Virgin Islands is angry with the municipal councilmen of St. Thomas and St. John, and told on them to Congress today.

The St. Croix city fathers dispatched copies of "a resolution in protest of insult and disrespect directed against the municipal council of St. Croix by the municipal council of St. Thomas and St. John.

Sought Judge's Recall

The St. Croix body, it developed, previously had adopted a resolution seeking the recall of Herman E. Moore as district judge. St. Thomas and St. John came right back with a resolution supporting Moore and declaring the St. Croix's council's action was "a result of mass hysteria and tends to recognize mob rule."

St. Croix got out another resolution blank and charged Saints Thomas and John with having "violated the principles of democratic government by encroaching upon the rights of this council as an independent legislative body and attempting to dictate what its action should be."

Must Be Sent To Congress

Congress was cut in on the quarrel because the islands' basic law requires that all laws and resolutions passed by the municipal councils must be transmitted by the Governor to the Secretary of the Interior, who hands them to Congress.

For what it's worth, the St. Croix council budgeted $600 this year for "fetes and concerts" and $300 for "license bounties."

Mexico Has Relaxed Passport Regulations

Washington, Nov. 14 (AP)—Mexico has relaxed passport regulations to facilitate visits by American nationals on business trips to that country, the State Department said today.

It informed Representative Thomas (D., Texas) that passports now can be obtained directly from Mexican immigration officials at the border by the following categories of Americans:

Produce buyers and inspectors of packing companies operating in the Mexican states of Sonora, Sinaloa and Nayarit; cattle buyers in the northern zones of Mexico, mining prospectors, actors performing under contract in Mexican border towns and firm members and accountants of American companies having business in towns along the Mexican border.

The new regulations are valid for six months.

BYRNES TO STAY IN WAR JOB TILL REICH'S DEFEAT

Will Continue as Chief of Mobilization and Reconversion.

AT REQUEST OF ROOSEVELT

Consent to Serve Eliminates One of the Major Appointments Awaiting the President.

Washington Nov. 14 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt announced today that James F. Byrnes will continue as Director of War Mobilization and Reconversion until Germany is defeated

Mr. Byrnes has been serving under a temporary appointment, having told the President he did not want the job on a permanent basis. However, Presidential Secretary Early called reporters to his office shortly after noon today and read them this statement from the President:

"In view of the importance of continuing the winning of the war at top speed, and at the personal request of the President, Mr. Justice Byrnes has consented to continue as the Director of the Office of War Mobilization until the elimination of Germany from the war.

"The President is very much gratified by the willingness of Justice Byrnes to do this, and the work of the office will, therefore, continue as at present."

Mr. Byrnes left the Supreme Court to enter the administration's war program and became head of the Office of War Mobilization—a post which frequently won him the unofficial title of "Assistant President."

When the Reconversion bill became law, he accepted a temporary appointment from the President with the understanding that a successor would be named when Congress reconvened. When Congress recently passed its Reconversion bill as the first cog in a post-war program, however, he estimated that the man who accepted the directorship under that bill would have to devote at least two years to the job. In several public statements he said he did not want it.

His agreement to continue at the head of the office—announced the day Congress came back to Washington—eliminated for the time one of the major appointments awaiting presidential action. There had been speculation that Fred M. Vinson, Director of Economic Stabilization, might have been placed in the Office of War Mobilization as Mr. Byrnes's successor.

STADIUM TO SEAT 200,000 IS URGED

Washington, Nov. 14 (A. P.).—A giant national memorial stadium in Washington designed to attract air-transported athletic teams from throughout the world was proposed in Congress today.

Representative Weiss (D.-Pa.),

30.24 — 20385

30. 24 — 20385

a professional football official as well as a Congressman, introduced legislation to create a commission to survey sites and plan financing. He has in mind a plant to seat 200,000 spectators.

"This stadium," he said, "should be near the top of the nation's list of projects for post-war construction. As a giant memorial to our servicemen who died in this war, it would bring teams together from all over the world and in that manner help serve to maintain lasting peace by encouraging friendly relationships in sport."

MANY NEW BILLS FACE CONGRESS IN FINAL SESSION

NOV NOT 15 1944

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14—(AP) A flurry of requests for new legislation greeted Congress today as it reassembled for a six weeks session before giving way to the newly-elected Congress next January.

Fewer than half the members were on hand, however, when Speaker Rayburn and Vice President Wallace banged their gavels at noon. Leaders leaned to the view that it was useless to undertake more than a brief legislative program in the dying days of this Congress.

Extension FDR's Power

They began mapping a short schedule topped by extension of the President's extraordinary war powers, now due to expire Dec. 31, and revival of crop insurance which both Democratic and Republican party platforms endorsed.

Rayburn said he thought a Federal-State highway program also should be passed since 42 of the 48 state legislatures convene early next year. A $1,500,000,000 program is pending and the state legislatures cannot act to assure state cooperation until Congress acts.

While the newly gathered legislators busily swapped election congratulations and condolences, the following proposals were placed before them:

From President Roosevelt—$400,000,000 in supplemental appropriations for a score of Federal Agencies, including $339,112,445 for the Navy's bureau of yards and docks.

From acting War Food Administrator Ashley Sellers—a boost from $3,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000 in the limit on the commodity credit corporation's borrowing powers. Sellers estimated that farm prices supports will be needed at least through 1946. He also asked an easing of restrictions on sales of cotton held by the CCC, saying that otherwise domestic users may be unable to obtain adequate quantities.

From Attorney General Biddle—legislation allowing arrest without warrants of persons suspected of being aliens violating immigration laws.

Continuation of SWPC

From Chairman Maury Maverick of the smaller war plants corporation—a request that the agency be continued after the war and its capital increased from $150,000,000 to $350,000,000.

While most of these appear destined to await the decision of the new Congress, Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) put in a proposal demanding a decision before the year's end. This was a bill extend the Social Security tax for another year at its present rate of one percent on employer and one percent on employe. Without action, it is scheduled to double.

The time element also is pressing on another question. This is whether to extend again the time in which court martials may be brought as a result of Pearl Harbor. Congress extended the time last June until Dec. 7, anniversary of the Japanese attack on the Hawaiian naval base.

Both Chairman Doughton (D-NC) of the House Ways and Means committee and Chairman George (D-Ga) of the Senate Finance committee, the tax-writing groups, said they could see no prospect of lowered taxes on 1945 incomes. Their committees in the new Congress expect, however, to begin drafting post-war tax programs.

With so many members still out of town, neither Senate nor House expects to buckle down before next week on the legislative program for this Congress.

IS BACK IN CAPITAL AS SENATE MEMBER

Washington, Nov. 14 (A. P.).—William E. Jenner, who once worked as elevator boy on Capitol Hill, returned today to take his seat as short-term Senator from Indiana.

Recently released from the Army Air Forces, Mr. Jenner, a Republican, becomes the first discharged veteran of this war to serve in the Senate. At 36, he is also the youngest member.

"It's changed a lot since I was here last," he said. "That was in 1930 when I had a $4 a day job running an elevator in the old House Office Building. I was just an Indiana University student earning some pocket money during the summer."

When his Senate term expires in January, Mr. Jenner plans to resume his law practice in Bedford, Ind.

"We're still waiting for my certificate of election to arrive," Mr. Jenner said. "I will be sworn in as soon as it comes."

Here for the ceremony are blonde Mrs. Jenner, wide-eyed on her first visit to Washington, and Mr. Jenner's white-haired father, L. L. Jenner of Marengo, Ind. Left at home in Bedford was 3-year-old William, still too young to watch his father take his place as Senator.

Mr. Jenner succeeds Senator Samuel D. Jackson (D.), who was appointed following the death of Senator Frederick Van Nuys (D.).

NOV 15 1944

Tall and eager, Mr. Jenner says his prime interest during his seven weeks in office will be veterans' legislation. He was more concerned with a conference on that subject on his first day than in obtaining office space for himself.

2-Party Bloc Asks Crop Insurance

Washington, Nov. 14 (AP)—Substantial Republican support lined up with the Administration today behind a revived proposal for the Government to take risks with farmers against floods, droughts, storms and grasshoppers.

Representative Hope (R. Kan.), ranking minority member of the House Agriculture Committee, said, "I hope to see Federal crop insurance legislation passed before Christmas.

Speaker Rayburn (D., Texas) put crop insurance on the schedule for consideration in the session beginning today. Congress refused last year to provide further funds and ordered liquidation.

Backed In Platforms

In response to this action, President Roosevelt voiced hope that such insurance some day would be as popular as R. F. D. mail. Last summer both major political parties gave the insurance their blessing, through the party platforms.

Congress abandoned the project as too costly after the Government had invested more than $60,000,000 over a five-year period, insuring wheat and cotton, the only two crops covered.

Weakness Cited

Hope said the fundamental weakness so far was that only a small percentage of wheat and cotton farmers took the insurance, but he expressed the view that the program would "prove out." He added:

"I don't think there could be a greater thing to stabilize agriculture than a well-worked-out system of crop insurance."

Support Fund Sought

Also on the farm front, the War Food Administration said that the price-support program will be needed at least through 1946. Under this arrangement the Government buys up surplus crops to keep them from causing low farm prices.)

Acting WFA Administrator Ashley Sellers made the statement in a letter to Rayburn asking legislation to raise the limit on the Commodity Credit Corporation's borrowing power to $5,000,000,000. The present limit is $3,000,000,000.

"While demand may continue at such a high level that support activities will be minimized, farmers must produce enough to meet the maximum demand, and if this is done, there is always a probability that too much of some things will be produced," Sellers wrote.

Sees Great Increase

Sellers estimated that "we may end the war with over-all agricultural production about 25 per cent. above the average level prevailing during the pre-war years 1935-39."

He also asked legislation to allow CCC to sell more than 300,000 bales of cotton monthly, saying that "unless these restrictions on the sale of cotton are removed or modified, it is likely that domestic users of cotton will be unable to obtain adequate quantities . . . to satisfy their needs."

F. D. R. Seeks More Funds

Washington, Nov. 14 (AP)—President Roosevelt asked Congress today to add about $400,000,000 to funds previously appropriated for more than a score of Federal agencies.

The total includes $339,112,455 for the Navy Department, the bulk of which was for the Bureau of Yards and Docks. There was no detail on how the funds would be used.

Other items included $13,900,000 for the Treasury Department, $10,010,000 for the army, $15,000,000 for the Federal Works Agency, $11,036,682 for the Interior Department and $7,401,000 for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

FDR TO CONSIDER RESIGNATIONS OF 3 WLB MEMBERS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 — (AP) President Roosevelt disclosed today he is looking into the whole labor set-up in his administration while pondering the pleas of three War Labor board members that they be relieved.

The President told his news conference he could not tell when there would be any action on the requests by Chairman William H. Davis, Vice-Chairman George W. Taylor, and Dr. Frank P. Graham, that they be permitted to quit the board. They have served since it was started in January, 1942.

All three members are public representatives on the board. With Lloyd K. Garrison, the fourth public member, they have cast the decisive votes on most questions within the Board, which also has four labor and four industry members.

The President said he was looking into the whole question, and could not tell when he would have an answer.

Pressed further on whether he meant just the WLB, or had other agencies in mind, he replied that there are one or two others involved.

Grinning, the President allowed that didn't tell the newsmen anything.

However, the U. S. Conciliation service of the Labor department is tied into the situation. John R. Steelman, for seven years head of the service, tendered his resignation effective November 25.

The conciliation service gets first crack at most of the nation's labor troubles. It tries to settle them before sending them to the War Labor board. Steelman says actually it does settle 90 per cent of the disputes before they become strikes.

The 44-year-old former college professor has been mentioned for secretary of labor in the event Frances Perkins should step out.

Steelman himself has laughed at such suggestions. Secretary Perkins, mentioned for a job as the United States' representative on the International Labor organization (ILO), is not talking about leaving her present post, either.

FDR Bans Usual Inaugural Pomp, Plans Ceremony at White House

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—(AP) President Roosevelt has decided to do away with the usual inaugural trappings and take his fourth term oath in a simple White House ceremony.

His decision to forego the customary Capitol Hill formalities and parade was announced today by a congressional inaugural committee which applauded it as a sensible wartime move.

Amplifying at his news conference on this announcement, Mr. Roosevelt said he made his choice because it would save money. He figured the whole affair could be held to $25,000, he said, adding that most of that would go for consomme, chicken a la king and coffee at a reception.

The congressional committee had been contemplating expending about $25,000, Mr. Roosevelt said. It is headed by Senator Byrd (D-Va.), a leading congressional advocate of economy, and the President got obvious enjoyment out of relating how he had told Senator Byrd's committee how to save money.

As he was expanding on this theme, some of he reporters began to chuckle. Turning to two women reporters, Mr. Roosevelt said they seemed to be surprised at what a good housekeeper he was.

"That's not what surprises me, Mr. President," one rejoined.

Later Mae Craig, one of the women reporters, said what really fascinated her was the way the President "just sat there talking about the price of chicken a la king and saving money while he was shattering an (inauguration) tradition the country has had for I don't know how many years."

The President proposes to take the oath on the curving south portico of the Executive Mansion. Those invited to witness the ceremony would stand on the lawn which falls away in a sloping sweep. Mr. Roosevelt said that tickets would have to be issued, for otherwise it would look like an Easter egg hunt. The south lawn in pre-war years was opened each Easter for egg rollers.

Any possesor of a $20 bill has a first class picture of the location of the 1945 inauguration. The reverse side of that denomination of currency shows the stretch of lawn which is expected to accommodate the members of Congress and other notables who will receive invitations to the ceremony.

President Roosevelt communicated his choice of inaugural sites last Saturday night to Col. Edwin A. Halsey, secretary of the Senate, and David Lynn, Capitol architect.

Today the inauguration committee met briefly, then announced:

"This choice has been made by the President in view of war conditions which necessitate the abandonment of normal ceremonial activities, the restriction of travel, scarcity of hotel accommodations, shortage of critical materials, the economies involved, the comfort of guests, and the convenience of the main participants.

"It is understood that the President desires that the Congress, the Cabinet, the Supreme court, the Diplomatic corps and other distinguished guests, and the wives of those included, be invited to witness the ceremony."

The main participants, of course, will include Senator Harry S. Truman of Missouri, who will be sworn in as Vice President at the same place.

Inaugurations as a rule are lavish and attract many thousands of visitors to the Capitol. In the past they have been accompanied by a multitude of private parties, balls and receptions, rich with furs, orchids and full dress uniforms. Huge stands have been built in the past at the Capitol entrance, with secret service men checking each spectator minutely as he entered.

President Roosevelt will not, however, be the first President to be inaugurated at the White House. Rutherford B. Hayes took the oath there in 1877.

Sam Rayburn Indicates Probes Are Through

Washington, Nov. 14 (AP)—Speaker Sam Rayburn gazed into the future for the 79th Congress today and said, in effect:

Phooey on investigations!

"I never saw an investigation that gave birth to any legislation," the Texan told reporters, "either here or over in the Senate."

Rayburn made it pretty plain that some of the investigating committees, of the House anyhow, died with this election.

Thinks Them "Dead"

He didn't say so outright, but the Speaker might as well have put the Federal Communications Commission group and the Dies committee in the "dead duck" class when he commented:

"Most of the members of investigating committees seem to have departed."

The Dies committee, established to inquire into un-American activities, lost its chairman, Dies, of Texas; Costello, of California; Starnes, of Alabama, and Busbey, of Illinois. Parnell Thomas, of New Jersey, survived.

The FCC committee lost its most vocal critic of James Lawrence Fly, who since has quit as head of the agency — Representative Louis Miller (R., Mo.) was defeated for reelection. In addition, Magnuson (D., Wash.) transferred to the Senate.

Would End Electoral College

Abolishment by constitutional amendment of the Electoral College which chooses the President and Vice-President is proposed in a bill introduced today by Representative Lea (D., Cal.).

Under the proposal voters would ballot directly for the candidates, but a system of electoral votes would be retained. Each State would have the same number of electoral votes as at present. Each candidate would receive electoral votes in proportion to his popular vote in each State.

Representative Randolph (D., W. Va.) today introduced a bill to allow publishers to deduct for income-tax purposes money spent to hold or increase circulation.

A similar proposal, sponsored by Senator Wherry (R., Neb.), is pending in the Senate. The bills would amend the internal revenue code to apply to publishers of newspapers, magazines and other periodicals.

will continue to give their full support to the war and the building of an enduring peace. We will continue to be a militant and vigorous force for sound government and the American way of life."

Martin, former chairman of the Republican National committee, issued his first formal statement on the role of the Republicans in Congress, following the Democratic triumphs in the election last week.

"The 1944 election," he said, "demonstrated the strength of the republic; that we could unitedly prosecute a world war and at the same time we could engage in a hard fight for the economic policies in which we believe.

"The election being over we must press harder than ever the prosecution of the war to the end we can win a complete and early victory. We must prepare wisely for the postwar days ahead so the transition from war to peace will not bring too many hardships."

While conceding that the election was "a disappointment to the Republicans," Martin said "the closeness of the vote gives the party every right to look forward with expectation to victories in 1946 and 1948." He added:

"The election itself was the closest since 1916, and it would have required very little to tip the scales in favor of the Dewey and Bricker ticket. A change of some 325,000 votes probably distributed in the states of Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Illinois, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Nevada, New Hampshire, Michigan, New Jersey, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Oregon and Pennsylvania, would have produced eight more electoral votes for Governor Dewey than was needed to win.

"The Republicans emerged from the election with strong representation in the House and Senate; giving assurance of the continuance of the two party system of government."

MARTIN PLEDGES G.O.P. WILL WORK FOR WORLD PEACE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14—(AP) Full support of Republicans in Congress toward "the building of an enduring peace," was pledged today by House Minority Leader Martin, of Massachusetts.

Sweeping aside campaign charges and counter-charges concerning "isolationism," he declared:

"The Republicans in Congress

CHANGE IS PROPOSED IN ELECTORAL VOTING

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14—(AP) Abolishment by constitutional amendment of the Electoral College which chooses the President and Vice President is proposed in a bill introduced today by Republican Lea (D-Calif.).

ROOSEVELT REVEALS LETTER FROM DEWEY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14—(AP) President Roosevelt said today he has received a letter from Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, unsuccessful opponent of the fourth term, but he gave no hint of its contents.

When they asked at his news conference what the letter contained, Mr. Roosevelt said he is sorry reporters can't see his personal

NEGRO FIREMEN BEFORE COURT

Supreme Tribunal Hears Test Against Union

Washington, Nov. 14 (AP)—An attorney for two Negro locomotive firemen told the Supreme Court today that a labor union was making a "blanket attempt" to sweep all Negro firemen from their jobs on Southeastern railroads.

Counsel for the union contended, however, that agreements with the railroads—the basis of the Negroes' complaints—were made in the interest of efficient railroad operation but to provide competent railroad men.

Aid of the Supreme Court was asked by Bester William Steele, Negro firemen on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, and Tom Tunstall, Negro fireman on the Norfolk Southern Railway. Each brought suit against the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and their railroad employers.

Alleges Agreements

Their attorney, Charles H. Houston, said the brotherhood excluded Negro firemen from membership and made agreements with 21 Southeastern railroads restricting employment of "non-promotable" firemen. Under present rules, the court was told, Negro firemen are "non-promotables."

Tunstall said he was forced out of his job and replaced by a white man. Lower Federal courts dismissed his complaint. He asked the high tribunal to determine whether he was entitled to assistance under the Railway Labor Act. Steele contended the railroad and brotherhood had discriminated against him and adversely affected his seniority rights. The Alabama State courts dismissed his suit.

Counsel for the firemen contended that the brotherhood, by accepting the designation as representative of the entire craft or class of firemen under the Railway Labor Act, was obliged to represent them fairly, impartially and in good faith.

Government Represented

The Justice Department, presenting its views as a friend of the court, said that Congress incorporated the principle of majority rule in the Railway Labor Act in the belief that, although the minority was deprived of separate representation, it was not harmed, since it was to receive all the advantages which the majority obtained for itself. The department contended, therefore, that the Federal courts have the jurisdiction to prevent discrimination against a minority. The question of the Supreme Court's jurisdiction was raised frequently during argument, however.

James A. Simpson, counsel for the brotherhood, said that the arguments advanced by the Negro firemen should have been addressed to a committee of Congress.

"This court construes the act—it does not write it," he asserted.

7 TVA WATERWAYS SEEN BY ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14—(AP) President Roosevelt said today the administration hopes in time to have seven waterway authorities similar to the huge Tennessee Valley authority.

He did not set out the seven regions to his news conference, but he mentioned such water sheds as the Missouri river, the Mississippi, Arkansas, Columbia and Ohio rivers.

The subject arose over a reporter's statement that a Senator had said the Missouri Valley authority plan "would be dead" if the plans drawn by the Army engineers is adopted.

The President said he does not know details of the Missouri Valley plan but explained to the reporters that the government has two dam-building units, the Army engineers for navigation and the Interior department for irrigation.

On all waterway projects, Mr. Roosevelt said, there is feeling among the states of the watershed. But, he added that TVA affects seven states and not one of them now feels it has been unfairly treated.

Mr. Roosevelt suggested that all the states affected by the Missouri Valley plan should get together, talk things over and make a decision. He said he doesn't care much who does the actual building of the dams, the Army engineers or the Interior department.

Discussing an Arkansas Valley authority, the President noted that the river rises in western Colorado and meanders through a lot of states, becoming a flood menace long before it reaches its mouth in Arkansas. That would be an ideal thing to put under an authority, he added.

Discussing the long proposed St. Lawrence seaway, Mr. Roosevelt said he believed that project could be built either by legislation or by a treaty between this country and Canada. He added that he doesn't care much which way it is done so long as we get action.

BOWLES WARNS AGAINST INFLATION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 — (AP) Inflation will be an "even more powerful and dangerous enemy" after the war than now, Price Administrator Chester Bowles asserted today.

Participating in a special "closed circuit" Blue Network broadcast to grocer-consumer anti-inflation committees gathered in 125 radio station studios throughout the country, Bowles said:

"By actual practice we have proved that ceilings are an effective way to keep war time prices down. We have held food prices down a lot better during this war than during the last one—but this is a big job and will continue long after the last Nazi or Jap holds up his arms in surrender. Inflation will be an even more powerful and dangerous eenmy after the war than it is now.

"We learned that the hard way in the first World War—when almost half the inflation occurred after the armistice. We saw prices go up almost twice as fast in the two years after the war as they did before it."

Speaking with Bowles were Mrs. Rose Kiefer, of Chicago, secretary-manager of the National Association of Retail Grocers and Mrs. Stanley G. Cook of Indianhead, Md., of the National Congress of Parents-Teachers, representing consumers.

"The first aim of grocers in this campaign is to get our ceiling price lists posted where every customer can see them in all of our stores," Mrs. Kiefer said.

Mrs. Cook said it is the job of consumer committee members "to make every housewife in America realize the importance of ceiling prices and the necessity of using them everytime she shops."

Rationing of Cigarets Despite Shortages, Bo

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14—(AP) Price Administrator Chester Bowles declared today that rationing of cigarets "is not contemplated" despite acute shortages in some areas.

"I have just talked with War Food Administrator Marvin Jones about the cigarette problem. Both WFA and OPA agree that rationing at this time is completely impractical," Bowles said in a statement.

A rationing program, he explained, would be expensive and impose serious burdens on the public and the trade.

Bowles said poor distribution of cigarettes in this country and the difficulty of obtaining popular brands were "due partly to the fact that makers of some of the better known brands have been shipping large quantities overseas to our armed forces."

He added, however, that the manufacturers of lesser known brands are now making "many more" cigarettes than before the war.

Production for domestic consumption, excluding all output for shipment overseas, is now greater than in any year but 1943 but demand has risen sharply since the war began, Bowles said.

Fears of shortages rather than actual shortages, he said, have contributed greatly to the present situation.

"Scare reports have led some distributors to hoard," Bowles said. "The public likewise has contributed to this situation by attempting to overbuy."

Reports from cigaret manufacturers, he added, show they are shipping cigarets about as rapidly as they are produced. Bowles also labeled "incorrect" published reports which, he said, indicated that there is an impending supply shortage of cigaret tobacco.

Concurrently with the Bowles statement, the Office of War Information reported that this country's armed forces abroad smoked about one sixth of America's total of cigaret production last year and that during the first seven months of this year they smoked slightly more than one-fourth of the overall output.

SYNTHETIC RUBBER IS MADE FROM SAND

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 — A new synthetic rubber, made mainly from sand, and which forms a bouncing putty, was announced here today by the General Electric company.

The rubber is a silicone, which means that it comes from silica and that it is made from the same base which produces glass.

In the form shown today, this silicone rubber is snow-white, soft as putty, pulls like taffy candy, but unlike either, if you drop a piece of it, it bounces higher than a rubber ball.

This unheard-of action is due to the peculiar fact that when silicone rubber is pressed slowly it is a plastic like molding clay. When stress hits it suddenly, like the impact in dropping onto the floor, the stuff becomes momentarily completely resilient.

It may go into the making of golf balls and many other articles. At present the entire supply is going to the Army and the Navy, for making gaskets that will stand both extreme cold of 60 below zero and extreme heat of more than 500 degrees fahrenheit.

No other rubber will stand both. In fact no other rubber stands 60 below very well. Silicone's temperature resistance is due to the large amount of sand or silicon, plus the way this silicon is linked with oxygen.

Two of the military uses were announced today. One is gaskets for the superchargers of the B-29 Superbombers. Superchargers compress rarefied air of high altitude to sea level pressures. Without them superchargers flights above 30,000 feet are not possible.

Superchargers run with their metal parts cherry-red hot.

The Navy is using the new rubber to support lenses in searchlights that work alongside the big guns, where the lights are subject both to extreme heat and to great vibration.

LONG WAR IS SEEN BY RICKENBACKER

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 — (AP) Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker said today he believed there was only a 50-50 chance that the Nazis could by defeated by next Spring and that another 18 months to three years of warfare with Japan would follow.

30.24 — 20387

30.24— 20387

And after Japan capitulates, he told several hundred young women members of the New York War Fund's Eagle squadron, "there'll probably be guerrilla warfare for maybe 10 or 15 years all over the East."

"There years ago," Rickenbacker added, "I said we would have a million casualties before this war was over. Now I see that I was being conservative.

"I don't believe Germany can be defeated short of the Spring or Summer of next year and there's only a 50-50 chance of that. And there will be guerrilla warfare in Europe for many more months."

Rickenbacker said, that "after that, I believe we will have a year and a half to three years of deadly warfare in the Pacific. If Japan is in trouble, we're in trouble, too. And when Japan finally capitulates, there'll probably be guerrilla warfare for maybe 10 or 15 years all over the East."

Canada Boosts Output Of Newsprint In October

New York, Nov. 14 (AP)—The Newsprint Service Bureau reported today Canadian mills produced 258,301 tons of newsprint in October, lifting the 1944 total to 2,490,050 tons or 13,282 more than in the comparable period of 1943.

United States mills turned out 61,994 tons in October against 61,529 in September, but for the ten months were 80,094 tons behind 1943. Newfoundland mills made 23,903 tons against 25,476 in September, and for the ten months were 36,664 tons ahead of last year.

Aggregate North American output for October was 347,229 tons, compared with 331,214 in September, for a ten-month total of 3,312,-3 tons or 30,148 less than in the 43 period.

with soldier ballots still to be counted in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Baltimore and St. Louis.

Four years ago Roosevelt received 6,152,096 in the 13 metropolitan centers, compared with 4,238,-162 for Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican nominee.

New York, Chicago Buffalo, San Francisco and Los Angeles, the survey showed, were responsible for Roosevelt's 1944 big city vote being larger than in 1940. Each of these five turned in larger totals for him than four years ago, while the other eight cities produced smaller totals.

Importance of the big city vote in a presidential election showed in a comparison with state pluralities. The President, for example, received 769,849 more votes in New York city than Governor Dewey, yet carried New York state by only 316,013 votes. He carried Chicago by 415,129 votes, but merged with a lead of only 142,384 in Illinois.

The survey showed that Dewey polled larger totals in seven of the cities than Willkie did in 1940. They were New York, Boston, Detroit, Milwaukee, Cleveland, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

The 1944 votes by cities:

	Roosevelt	Dewey
New York	2,039,932	1,270,083
Boston	208,062	125,798
Milwaukee	159,497	98,905
Buffalo	146,017	116,873
Philadelphia-x	459,733	328,685
Baltimore-x	152,015	107,800
Pittsburgh-x	159,735	102,813
Detroit	550,111	315,395
St. Louis-x	191,514	127,612
Cleveland	330,372	216,835
Chicago	1,123,755	708,626
San Francisco	192,752	124,301
Los Angeles	843,364	629,905
Totals	6,556,859	4,273,631

(x—denotes cities in which soldier ballots have not yet been counted).

Big City Votes Helped Win Fourth Term for Roosevelt

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 — (AP) President Roosevelt again made a clean sweep of the nation's big cities in winning his precedent-shattering fourth term, an Associated Press survey showed today.

In so doing, he piled up a larger total in them than he did in 1940 and carried every state except Ohio in which the cities are located.

The cities—13 with populations of more than 500,000 each—gave Roosevelt a total of 6,556,859 votes and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey 4,273,631.

REVISION OF U.S. TARIFF URGED

International Conference Told Of American Position

Rye, N. Y., Nov. 14 (AP)—The United States must revise its tariffs to encourage the increase of imports from other countries, the International Business Conference was told today by Curtis E. Calder, New York utility executive, in presenting the American delegation's position on foreign investments.

"The American delegation recognizes the urgent need for a general reduction of tariffs throughout the world and the elimination of other barriers to international trade," Calder said in a statement he read to the panel on encouragement and protection of investments.

U. S. Leadership Urged

"We feel the United States should assume a position of aggressive leadership in this movement, and, to the extent that revisions in tariff may be necessary to reverse our previous American trade balance, such tariff revisions should be made."

The American statement was greeted with enthusiasm by the delegates from other nations for it represented the first time that business leaders in this country had taken so pronounced a stand on lower tariffs.

American Delegation

The American delegation, in addition to Calder, is composed of Henry F. Grady, president of the American President Lines; Edward Riley, vice-president of General Motors; Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank; Harper Sibley, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and George W. Wolf, president of the United States Steel Export Company.

WRIGHT AIRCRAFT STRIKE CONTINUES

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 14—(AP) A conference between officials of the Wright Aircraft Supervisory union, unaffiliated, and Army and Regional War Labor Board officials at the Alexander Hamilton hotel tonight ended in a deadlock, David Newcomb, union president, said.

The conference was held at the request of Thomas Knowlton, assistant director, disputes division of the RWLB.

Both Knowlton and Major Julius Cass of the Second Naval command, urged the union officials to end the two-day strike of an estimated 2,900 supervisory employes which has forced into idleness approximately 32,000 production employes of the five Wright plants in the Paterson area.

Newcomb and the four other union officers attending agreed not to ask union members to return to work until assurance is received that "the company will not continue to violate the WLB directive of Oct. 4 last, which urged the Wright corporation to maintain a status quo among supervisory employes until the WLB made a final decision," Newcomb said.

A meeting of the employes of the union, scheduled to be held in the Paterson armory tonight, was not held, and is now scheduled for 10 a.m. tomorrow at the Lafayette Friends club.

Officials of the Wright corporation, which manufactures cyclone engines for B-29 Superfortresses, were not invited to attend tonight's conference, Newcomb said. Company officials were unavailable for comment on the result of the meeting.

Newcomb said that neither he nor other officials of the union will go to Washington tomorrow in accordance with a telegram received from the WLB to appear there for a hearing at 10:30 a.m., if the strike is not ended.

He said transportation difficulties were partly responsible for the decision of the union officials not to attend, but added that the matter was now squarely up to the WLB and the next move must come from them.

CHILDREN FLEE TO PALESTINE

New Yorker Says 12,000 Found Refuge In Decade

Cleveland, Nov. 14 (AP) — More than 12,000 Jewish children from almost every Nazi-dominated country in Europe have fled to Palestine during the last ten years under the aegis of Youth Aliyah (immigration) movement, Mrs. Seigfried Kramarsky of New York, said today.

The honorary secretary of the national Youth Aliyah committee told the 30th annual convention of Hadassah, Women's Zionist organization of America, that 1,595 of this number sought refuge in the Holy Land during the past year.

"Hundreds of these children have seen their parents and close kin murdered," declared Mrs. Kramarsky.

Saved By Christians

"Others have escaped massacre because courageous Christians snatched them from the hands of the Nazis and hid them until the fury passed."

Mrs. Harry P. Fierst, of New York, said children of Palestine must be protected from any outbreak of rickets, skin diseases, dysentery and trachoma.

Mrs. Fierst said American vitamins, powdered milk, canned fish, rice and other cereals sent to Palestine by Hadassah last year were factors in the fight against malnutrition.

She reported infant mortality rates among every 1,000 Jewish children born in Palestine today stood at 44 compared to 144 deaths per thousand births in 1922.

The convention adopted a budget of $300,000 for child welfare and vocational educational work in Palestine during the ensuing year. The amount represents a 60 per cent. increase over last year's amount.

Lt. Vereen Bell Is Missing

ATLANTA, Nov. 14 (AP).—Chief Justice R. C. Bell, of the Georgia Supreme Court, was advised by the Navy Department tonight that his son, Lieutenant Vereen Bell, widely known Georgia author, is missing in action. Lieutenant Bell wrote, among other works, "Swamp Water," a novel about Georgia's Okefenokee Swamp. The book later was made into a movie. The writer entered the Navy last May.

Ex-Army Flyer Who Fled Guardhouse Pleads Guilty

Is Held in New Orleans After Jumping From Stolen Plane

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 14 (AP).—Robert G. Kaslow, twenty-two years old, former Army officer who fled a Craig Field, Ala., guardhouse and parachuted from a stolen Army plane into custody of the F. B. I. here, pleaded guilty today to a Federal charge of "applying to his own use and disposing of the plane."

Kaslow appeared before United States Commissioner R. H. Carter jr., and was placed in custody of a United States marshal. Bond was fixed at $25,000.

Kaslow, formerly of Johnson City, N. Y., already is under a thirty-year court martial sentence for a series of Army offenses. He escaped the guardhouse Friday night and abandoned his plane near New Orleans. The ship crashed near the Higgins Airfield while Kaslow parachuted into a swamp.

The former officer was arrested last night in a hotel cocktail lounge. An unidentified young woman companion, taken into custody with him, was released by F. B. I. agents today.

Upton Close Says Communists Have Forced Him Off The Air

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 14 (AP)—Upton Close, veteran radio news commentator, said today "National Broadcasting Company, pressured by various sources, has served notice on my radio sponsor, Sheaffer Pen Company, that it will no longer sell them time on the air if I am not dropped."

Close told a Press-Scimitar reporter that "certain radical and Communistic elements" were responsible for the action that will remove him from the Sunday afternoon spot he has occupied for 27 months. He was objectionable, he said, because of discussion on "The Dangers of Communism" during his commentary.

To "See Thing Through"

"I'm perfectly willing to be the guinea pig to determine whether freedom of the air can be maintained in the face of un-American pressure to destroy American principles," Close said, adding he would "see the thing through." He declined to discuss his next move.

Close said his sponsor had accepted the NBC decision "from necessity" and that, in turn, networks are "fighting for their lives" and are in no position to protest vigorously.

In Fort Madison, Iowa, C. R. Sheaffer, president of the pen company, said the firm did not hire Close direct, but arranged for his services through NBC.

"It's true that NBC notified us it wouldn't sell Close after December 10," Sheaffer said. "We aren't in a position to state the reasons because we don't know them. Our contract concerning Close's services has always been direct with NBC. We have no contractual relations with Close and never have had."

In New York, a spokesman said the National Broadcasting Company would have no comment to make.

Air Conference Likely To Okay Interim Plan

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP)—The International Civil Aviation Conference probably will produce this week an interim plan for world air transport operation in the form of an executive agreement which could readily be put into effect, informed officials said today.

The interim period is described as the time from the end of this 54-nation conference to the effectiveness of some permanent convention, an outline of which also is being drawn.

Would By-Pass Ratification

There is little likelihood of an attempt to use anything stronger than an executive agreement, it was explained, because of the time which would be lost in obtaining ratification. The agreement must lie within the scope of American law, officials say, 1938 Civil Aeronautics Act, since the executive branch cannot go beyond that without referral to Congress.

A treaty, which is the form expected for the permanent objective, must be ratified by the Senate and can override existing law.

Thus the United States could go as far as the Senate would permit in agreeing to the provisions for a world aviation authority.

Cabotage Protection

Cabotage rights of the United States are being carefully protected in the conference discussions, an official said. Cabotage is the transporting of traffic between two points within a country.

The United States proposes to reserve such rights within its home borders and between the mainland and its territories. Other nations would reserve similar rights.

A prohibition against exclusive agreements probably will be included in the interim plan.

Latin-American Reaction

The interim-plan proposals were the subject of united action by the Latin American republics last week, when they pushed through a change from the United States' suggestion for an executive council with most of the seats arbitrarily assigned.

The Latin Americans demanded equal representation for all on an assembly which would "freely elect" the executive council.

The least that is expected is a standard form agreement for use in bi-lateral negotiations during the interim period. There is some prospect that this will include provision for fixing of rates and fare by operators' conferences within geographic regions, as is done now by steamship operators.

European Bloc Efforts

One trend of conversation which was revived in a relatively small way is the danger of renewed attempts to organize a European bloc if some sort of economic powers are not included in the permanent treaty outline.

The British Empire countries want economic powers given to the world air body, and they have support from France and perhaps other countries.

However, a British-led move in the direction of an exclusive bloc before the conference failed, and a new attempt would have to consider something which did not exist then—the Latin American republics united in their post-war aviation aims. Many smaller countries wanted to join the American bloc. In addition, China has taken a strong stand in line with the major American objectives.

LT. HEMINGWAY PRISONER

CHICAGO, Nov. 14—(AP)—Lt. John H. Hemingway, son of Mrs. Paul Scott Mowrer and her former husband, Ernest Hemingway, author, was captured by the Germans on the 7th Army front on Oct. 28, the war department advised Mrs. Mowrer today. Lt. Hemingway is 20. He enlisted in January, 1943.

Buys 218 Cartons Of Cigarettes At Auction For $903

Price Administrator Bowles says rationing of cigarettes "is not contemplated" despite actual shortages.....Page 24

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP)—A chain drug store bought 218½ cartons of "name brand" cigarettes for $903 at a postoffice auction today, and arranged to deliver the packages to a Loop store tomorrow on an armored truck.

The smokes, purchased for an average of 41 cents a pack, will be resold to the public at Illinois' ceiling price of 18 cents. Twenty cartons will be donated to Edward Hifs, Jr., Memorial Hospital for Veterans.

Almost a hundred hopeful smokers rushed to open the auction. They felt less hopeful when the first batch of 12 cartons was knocked down to the drug chain for $106.

The sky was the limit on prices because, Postmaster Ernest Kruetgen said, the OPA ruled in 1943 that ceiling prices were not applicable to sales of "undeliverable matter."

Lt. Zamperini, the Miler, Is Killed in Pacific Action

Captured Nazi Flag as Souvenir at 1936 Olympic Games

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 14 (AP).—Lieutenant Louis Zamperini, the distance runner who once climbed a flagpole at Hitler's chancellery to collect a Nazi flag, is now listed as killed in action.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Zamperini, of nearby Torrance, have been notified that their son, an army bombardier reported missing in South Pacific action May 27, 1943, is now believed dead. He was twenty-five years old.

A record-breaking miler at the University of Southern California, Zamperini ran in the 1936 Olympic games at Berlin. It was there he nearly created an international incident when he captured the Nazi flag as a souvenir. He was allowed to keep the flag after Hitler was convinced it was merely a boyish prank.

Lieutenant Zamperini's 1938 national collegiate mile record of 4:08.3 at Minneapolis still stands. He was holder of the I. C. A. A. A. record of 9:12.8 for the two-mile. He began his running career at seventeen when he won the Los Angeles mile in 4:12.2, which, at the time was said to be the best time ever turned in by a schoolboy.

He was born in Olean, N. Y., the home town of Joseph J. McGraw, and moved to Los Angeles with his family at the age of two. Lieutenant Zamperini once told interviewers he was half Irish, explaining that his mother came from the County Mayo in Ireland. His father is of Italian descent.

LONDON, NOV 14-(AP)-BRITAIN'S STAKE IN SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE TOUCHED. OFF A LIVELY DEBATE IN COMMONS TODAY DURING WHICH HUGH DALTON, PRESIDENT OF THE BOARD OF TRADE, DECLARED THAT "ANY DISCUSSION OF CHANGES IN ARRANGEMENTS SHOULD TAKE PLACE IN A SPIRIT OF MUTUAL TRUST BETWEEN US AND THE UNITED STATES."

SIR PATRICK HANNON, CONSERVATIVE, HAD ASKED IF MEMBERS KNEW THAT "CAREFUL PLANS ARE IN PROGRESS IN THE UNITED STATES TO SEIZE PRACTICALLY THE WHOLE OF OUR SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE," AND INQUIRED WHAT PROGRESS WAS BEING MADE IN BRITISH-AMERICAN RELATIONS CONCERNING THAT TRADE, ADDING THERE WAS A POSSIBILITY OF BRITAIN'S LOSING OUT ALTOGETHER.

NEIL MAC LEAN, LABOR MEMBER, HAD ASSERTED THAT A LICENSE HAD BEEN REFUSED A MANCHESTER FIRM TO EXPORT STEAM PIPING FOR A BRAZILIAN TEXTILE MILL ON THE GROUND THE UNITED STATES HADMADE ITSELF RESPONSIBLE FOR THE EXPORT TO SOUTH AMERICA OF ALL FINISHED STEEL. HE HAD ASKED HOW MANY SUCH AGREEMENTS HAD BEEN MADE BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES AND WHETHER ANY RECIPROCAL ADVANTAGES WERE GIVEN BRITISH MANUFACTURERS.

DALTON REPLIED THAT BRITISH PRODUCTION OF STEEL PRODUCTS WAS INSUFFICIENT TO MEET THE NATION'S ESSENTIAL REQUIREMENTS AND THAT THERE WAS NO SURPLUS FOR EXPORT TO SOUTH AMERICA.

"THESE MATTERS MUST BE VIEWED AGAINST THE HISTORICAL BACKGROUND OF LEND-LEASE, WHICH IS AN INDISPENSABLE CONTRIBUTION TO THE WAR EFFORT," DALTON SAID.

WITH THE U.S. THIRD ARMY IN FRANCE, NOV. 14-(AP)-UNITS OF LT. GEN. GEORGE S.PATTON'S THIRD ARMY SQUEEZED TO WITHIN TWO AND THREE MILES OF THE BELEAGURED FORTRESS CITY OF METZ FROM THREE DIRECTIONS TODAY AGAINST PUZZLINGLY MILD RESISTANCE.

THE COMPARATIVE EASE WITH WHICH TODAY'S ADVANCES WERE MADE, ALTHOUGH FIGHTING WAS STIFF IN MANY SPOTS, LED TO CONJECTURE THAT PERHAPS SOME OF THE GERMAN FORCES DEFENDING METZ HAD BEEN EVACUATED.

THE TENTH INFANTRY REGIMENT UNDER COMMAND OF COL. ROBERT P.BELL OF MONTCLAIR, N.J., TOOK POUILLY, TWO AND A HALF MILES SOUTHEAST OF THE CITY'S EDGE, AND PUSHED ON ANOTHER HALFMILE NORTHWARD. OTHER ELEMENTS OF THE TENTH CLEANED OUT THE BOIS DE HOPITAL, MOVED ON NORTHWARD AND TONIGHT WERE FIGHTING FOR A RIDGE OVERLOOKING THE CITY ABOUT TWO MILES AWAY.

THE ELEVENTH REGIMENT, COMMANDED BY COL. CHARLES W.QUILL OF VANDERBILT, MICH., CAPTURED CUVRY AND COIN LES CUVRY, THREE AND THREE AND A HALF MILES SOUTH OF THE CITY AND THEN DROVE ANOTHER MILE NORTHWARD, MAKING THE DIVISION'S GAINS FOR THE PAST 24 HOURS TOTAL FROM ONE TO FOUR MILES.

CAVALRY PATROLS ATTACHED TO THE FIFTH ALSO WERE REPORTED IN THE VINCINITY OF AUGNY, TWO MILES SOUTHWEST OF METZ.

THE 9TH INFANTRY'S 379TH REGIMENT SLOGGED AHEAD ABOUT TWO MILES AND NEARED THE VILLAGE OF ROZERIEULES, THREE MILES WEST OF METZ.

THE 9TH AND 19TH DIVISIONS JOINED UP EAST OF THIONVILLE IN ADVANCES WHICH BULGED THE KOENIGSMACHER-THIONVILLE BRIDGEHEAD OVER THE MOSELLE ABOUT FOUR MILES SOUTHWARD, GIVING IT AN OVERALL LENGTH OF 12 MILES. SEVERAL VILLAGES WERE TAKEN IN THE PROCESS AND IT WAS PRESUMED THAT THE REMAINDER OF THIONVILLE ON THE EAST BANK OF THE RIVER WAS MOPPED UP, ALTHOUGH THERE WERE NO OFFICIAL REPORTS TO THAT EFFECT.

AT THE END OF THE FIRST WEEK OF THE THIRD ARMY'S ATTACKS IN WHICH SIX INFANTRY AND TWO ARMORED DIVISIONS SHARED, IT ADVANCED ITS LINES FROM EIGHT TO 15 MILES ALONG A 20-MILE FRONT IN THE TWELFTH CORPS AREA, BIT ACROSS THE MOSELLE IN TWO PLACES AND SWIFTLY DEVELOPED A GRAVE THREAT TO METZ IN THE TWENTIETH CORPS ZONE.

THE GERMANS ARE USING RELATIVELY SMALL NUMBERS OF MEN, BUT ARE EMPLOYING DEMOLITIONS AND MINES EXTENSIVELY AND ARE TAKING ADVANTAGE OF THE TERRAIN AND FOUL WEATHER. THEY HAVE BEEN RESISTING STOUTLY IN THE MAIN AND HAVE MADE THE ADVANCE SLOW BUSINESS.

INSIDE FORT L'AISNE WITHIN THE METZ FORTRESS RING, NOV. 14-(AP)-THE BATTLE FOR METZ TONIGHT WAS A MODERN FOXHOLE STRUGGLE ON THE RAINSWEPT POUILLY RIDGE INSIDE THE ANCIENT DEFENSE RING.

THE DOUGHBOYS WHO SWARMED PAST THIS TOOTHLESS, MOSSBACKED AND BURIED FORTRESS ARE TRYING TO ROUT THE GERMANS DUG IN ON THAT KEY RIDGE.

OVERLOOKING METZ FROM THE SOUTHEAST, POUILLY RIDGE CONTROLS THE ONE MAIN HIGHWAY ESCAPE ROUTE OUT OF THE CITY. WELL INSIDE THE OUTER FORTRESS RING, IT HAS ONLY FOXHOLE FORTIFICATIONS, BUT IT IS PROVING TOUGHER THAN THE TWO FANGLESS FORTS NOW CAPTURED BY THE AMERICANS.

NEITHER FORT L'AISNE NOR FORT L'YSER HAS NOV 15 1944 GUNS OR EMPLACEMENTS. MACHINEGUN MOUNTS WERE THE ONLY INDICATION OF ARMAMENT FOUND IN THEM. SHELLS AND BOMBS BOUNCED OFF THIS TORTOISE SHELL FORT LIKE PEBBLES, BUT PROTECTION WAS ITS ONLY VIRTUE. IN THE END, THE GERMANS WALKED OUT AND WE WALKED IN.

BUT BARREN AND SHELL-POCKED POUILLY RIDGE IS ANOTHER STORY.

ONLY A LITTLE WHILE AGO, A BUNCH OF YANKS WAS FORCED TO CHARGE WITH BAYONETS FIXED, SHOOTING FROM THE HIP, ACROSS AN OPEN SPACE TO ROUTE THE STUBBORN FOXHOLE DEFENDERS.

THEY ROUTED THEM, CAPTURED 92 PRISONERS AND KILLED AND WOUNDED A LOT OF OTHERS, BUT NOT WITHOUT "TAKING CASUALTIES OURLVES," SAID STAFF SGT. FLOYD WILLIAMS OF WURTLAND, KY., A RIFLEMAN.

THE RIDGE REMAINS A ~~HOTSPOT~~ ABOUT 8,000 YARDS LONG AND SOME 620 FEET HIGH. IT HAS FORTS--STILL IN ENEMY HANDS--AT ONE END AND WOODS AT THE OTHER. ENEMY GUNS THUS COVER ITS SLOPES BOTH WAYS, ALTHOUGH BOTH ENDS ALSO ARE BEING KEPT BUSY ENOUGH HANDLING ATTACKS IN THEIR SECTORS.

THERE IS A POSSIBILITY THE GERMANS HAVE BLUNDERED BY PULLING CRACK SS (ELITE GUARD) TROOPS OUT OF METZ TO MEET OTHER AMERICAN ATTACKS, LEAVING THE POUILLY RIDGE SECTOR SLIGHTLY SOFTER THAN THEIR FLANK EXPOSED TO THE FIFTH DIVISIONS'S ATTACK. IF THIS IS TRUE, METZ MAY BE DEFENDED ONLY BY GARRISON TROOPS.

THE GERMANS OBVIOUSLY USED THESE FORTS OF THE OUTER RING ONLY AS BARRACKS AND EVEN AS BARNS DURING THE SEIGE OF METZ AND DID THEIR FIGHTING FROM FOXHOLE AND SLIT TRENCHES AND MODERN TEMPORARY EMPLACEMENTS. THEIR OPINION OF THE USEFULNESS OF THE OLD TYPE OF FORTRESS IS INDICATED BY THE FACT THAT THEY ALREADY ARE HAVING CIVILIANS DIG FOXHOLES INSIDE METZ, JUST AS THEY DID IN THIS SECTOR.

TODAY FORT L'AISNE WAS USED BY THE DOUGHBOYS AS A FIRST AID STATION WHERE SCORES OF AMERICAN AND GERMAN WOUNDED WERE BROUGHT AS THE BATTLE NEARED POUILLY RIDGE.

"THE LIEUTENANT'S ... HE WAY AND WE JUST KEPT SHOOTING FROM THE HIP AND RUNNIN... . ALFRED MASON OF RICHMOND, VA., SAID. "THAT WAY WE KEPT ... PINNED DOWN UNTIL WE WERE ON TOP OF THEM."

PVT.HARRY LAUER OF PHILADELPHIA, ANOTHER COMPANY G RIFLEMAN OF THE SECOND BATTALION, TENTH REGIMENT, FIFTH DIVISION, NODDED AGREEMENT AS HE TURNED SOME PRISONERS OVER TO THE GUARDS. "WE CROSSED A LITTLE GARDEN IN AN OPEN SPACE AND LANDED IN A FOXHOLE RIGHT ON TOP OF THEM ALL RIGHT," HE SAID.

LT.COL.WILLIAM BRECKENRIDGE OF LEXINGTON, KY., ASSISTANT COMMANDER OF THE TENTH REGIMENT, SAID THE FATE OF POUILLY RIDGE PROBABLY WOULD DECIDE SOON THE FATE OF METZ. HIS MEN MADE THREE MILES TODAY IN THIS ATTACK.

ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR CORRESPONDENT

(WX) COLOMBO,CEYLON-(DELAYED)-AN ITALIAN OFFICER WHO WORKED FOR THE JAPANESE NAVY TOLD THE ASSOCIATED PRESS TODAY HOW SINGAPORE WAS REBUILT AND HOW ITALIAN SUBMARINES HAULED SPECIAL GERMAN MILITARY EQUIPMENT AND GERMAN ENGINEERS TO JAPAN.

IN SHORT--HE RELAYED THE LAST INFORMED WORD OUT OF JAPANESE-OCCUPIED TERRITORY. HIS RECITAL CONTAINED:

A WARNING THAT SOME NATIVES ARE BELIEVING JAP PROPAGANDA; A CONVICTION THAT THE JAPS "ARE OPERATING, AS YOU SAY, WITH SHOE-STRINGS"; AND THAT GERMAN SUBMARINES ARE OPERATING OUT OF JAPANESE-HELD PORTS, BUT THAT GERMANS ARE TREATED WITH SUSPICION BY THE JAPANESE.

THIS OFFICER HAS HAD TWO ESCAPES: FIRST FROM THE BRITISH WHEN HE FLED NASSAUA HARBOR, ERITREA, MARCH 1941, AND SAILED WITHOUT REFUELING TO KOBE, JAPAN; SECOND FROM THE JAPANESE WHEN HE ESCAPED FROM SINGAPORE AFTER ITALY CAPITULATED.

"THOSE DAYS WERE FORCED ON US BY MUSSOLINI," HE SAID, HARKING BACK TO JAPANESE-COOPERATION, "WHAT ELSE COULD WE DO? WHEN IT WAS GIVEN US TO ESCAPE WE JOINED THE ALLIES GLADLY. NOW WE ARE HAPPY."

NOV NOCT 151944

WHILE SERVING WITH THE JAPS HE WAS IN KOBE, JAPAN; SHANGHAI, CHINA, AND FINALLY IN SINGAPORE WHERE HE SAW THREE ITALIAN SUBMARINES WHICH BROUGHT PRECIOUS AXIS CARGO FROM BORDEAUX.

"THEIR HEAVY TORPEDOES AND TORPEDO TUBES WERE REMOVED AND THE SUBMARINES WERE FILLED WITH TONS OF TIN, MACHINE-GUN MODELS, SPECIAL BOMBS AND NEW BRANDS OF SMALL GERMAN TANKS AND NEW RADAR AND IMPORTANT PASSENGERS INCLUDING THREE GERMAN ENGINEERS AND A JAP COLONEL WHO HAD BEEN ALL OVER THE GERMAN WAR THEATER IN EUROPE."

DISCHARGED, THE SUBMARINES WERE LOADED WITH RUBBER BUT THEY NEVER GOT A CHANCE TO LEAVE JAP PORTS "AND I BELIEVE THEY SCUTTLED WHEN ITALY BECAME A CO-BELLIGERENT WITH YOU ALLIES."

THAT THE ITALIAN SUBMERSIBLES WERE STILL IN JAP-OCCUPIED PARTS FOUR MONTHS AFTER ARRIVING WAS DUE TO THE SUSPICIONS OF THE JAPS. "THEY WOULD LOAD THEM AND THEN TELL THEIR COMMANDANTES: 'SO SORRY, THIS SHIPMENT WRONG' AND REMOVE IT AND MOVE THE SUBMARINE TO ANOTHER BERTH AND THEN KEEP THEM THERE LONGER.

"OUR SUBMARINE MEN DID NOT LIKE THE JAPANESE ANY MORE THAN THE MEN ON MY SHIP. AFTER THEIR LONG 66-, 71- AND 75-DAY TRIPS IN CONFINED QUARTERS, THE JAPANESE DID NOT OFFER THEM QUARTERS ASHORE FOR REST--AND FINALLY, UNDER GREAT PROTEST, GAVE THEM TWO MISERABLE HUTS.

NOV NOV OCT 151944

"I HAD AN EXCUSE FOR GOING TO SEBANG (ON THE NORTHWESTERN TIP OF SUMATRA) AND BEING A-SEA IN MALACCA STRAIT WHEN OUR GENERAL BADOGLIO DECLARED AN ARMISTICE AND INSTRUCTED ALL ITALIAN SHIPS TO PROCEED TO ALLIED PORTS OR SCUTTLE. IT WAS DANGEROUS WITH OUR SLOW SHIP BUT WE WERE HAPPY TO BECOME ALLIES."

AMONG SHIPS SCUTTLED IN JAPAN WERE TWO SMALL WARSHIPS, LEPANTO AND CARLOTTE AND THE 20,000 TON LINER CONTE VERDE AND "I HOPE THE THREE SUBMARINES."

NOV NOCT 151944

HE SAID THAT GERMAN SUBMARINES WERE OPEATING IN INDIAN WATERS "ON OFFENSIVE WORK PURELY."

HE SAID: "THE JAPANESE TREATED THE GERMANS WITH GREAT SUSPICION, LIKEWISE."

HE ADDED THAT SINGAPORE HARBOR HAS BEEN REPAIRED AND THAT THE JAPS ARE USING IT FOR A NAVAL BASE "PERHAPS TO ESCAPE AMERICAN VENGEANCE RAIDS UPON TRUK, PONAPE AND YAP." HE ADDED THAT A "LARGE FLOATING DRYDOCK WHICH THE BRITISH SCUTTLED HAS BEEN RAISED AND REPAIRED. THE JAPANESE I MUST ADMIT ARE VERY GOOD AT ALL SALVAGE WORKING."

30.24 — 20393

HE ADDED: "I DO BELIEVE THAT JAPAN IS RUNNING SHORT OF CARGO SHIPS AND TANKERS TOO BECAUSE THERE IS MUCH RUBBER AND OIL AND GASOLINE STOCKS IN THE DUTCH EAST INDIES BUT IT DOES NOT MOVE."

FOR HIM THE FOOD SITUATION WAS "NOT SO BAD. THEY GIVING US CAPTURED TINNED BRITISH FOODS, WHICH WAS BEGINNING TO SPOIL."

COMMENTING ON JAP PROPAGANDA, HE SAID: "JAP TREATMENT OF NATIVES IMPROVED DURING OUR STAY IN CHINA AND THE INDIES. I MUST SAY THAT IN CAPTURED CHINESE PORTS SOME OF THE CHINESE ARE TAKING TO THE JAP PROPAGANDA. TO HELP, IN THE SUMMER OF 1943 THE JAPS WERE GIVING BACK FACTORIES TO CHINESE TO OPERATE AND NATURALLY SOME OF THE MONEYED CHINESE WERE MAKING MONEY.

HE SAW WHITE PRISONERS IN SINGAPORE. "THEY WERE WORKING PARTIES AND THESE I SAW LOOKED QUITE FIT AND DID NOT GIVE APPEARANC MISTREATMENT." NOV OCT 151944

THERE ARE UNEXPLAINABLE PARADOXES. "EVEN UNTIL SEPTEMBER 1, 1943, I SAW AMERICAN MOVIES SHOWING IN SINGAPORE THEATERS. ALSO MANY ENGLISH PLATES AND STREET SIGNS WERE NOT REMOVED. BUT ONE THING I NOTICED THEY WERE SPREADING VERY MUCH THE TEACHING OF THE JAPANESE LANGUAGE EVERYWHERE."

JAP COCKSURENESS OF WINNING THE WAR WAS DIMINISHING BY SUMMER, 1943, "AND AFTER DRINKING SAKI (A WARM RICE WINE) JAP OFFICERS EXPRESSED WORRIES ABOUT AMERICAN PRODUCTION AND THE ABSENCE OF FOOD IN THEIR HOMELAND."

OF ITALIAN-JAP RELATIONS, HE SAID: "IT WAS NEVER GOOD AND IT DETERIORATED ITSELF CONSTANTLY. THEY WOULD PRETEND MORE AND MORE NOT TO UNDERSTAND US. THEN WHEN JAPANESE WARSHIPS ARRIVED THEY WOULD ALWAYS MOVE US AWAY FROM THEM." HE BELIEVES GERMANS ARE GETTING THE SAME TREATMENT.

HE SUMMED AN ASSISTANT ENGINEER, WHO HAS TRANSFERRED FROM AN ITALIAN MERCHANTMAN OPERATING IN JAPANESE WATERS "JUST BEFORE WE MADE OUR ESCAPE." THIS MAN HAS SEEN PERHAPS AS MANY JAP-HELD PORTS AS ANY ONE NOW FREE WHILE "CARRYING SUPPLIES TO JAPANESE GARRISONS BETWEEN DECEMBER, 1942 TO AUGUST 1943." THE PORTS INCLUDES SURABAYA AND BATAVIA, JAVA; BALIK PAPEN AND TARAKAN, BORNEO; KENDARI AND MACASSA, CELEBES; AND PORTS IN AMBON, TIMOR AND DUTCH NEW GUINEA INCLUDING HOLLANDIA. NOV OCT 151944

"THEY TREATED ALL WHITE MEN BAD--INCLUDING US AND THE GERMANS, NEVER TRUSTING US AND WE ON OUR PART HAVING ALWAYS TRUE DISLIKE FOR THEM," HE SAID.

THE ASSISTANT ENGINEER ADDED THAT BOTH THE SHIPS ON WHICH HE SERVED WERE BOMBED AND ATTACKED BY AMERICAN SUBMARINES "BUT WE ESCAPED WITH GREAT MIRACULOUSNESS."

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, PHILIPPINES, WEDNESDAY, NOV.15-(AP)-GEN.TOKOYUKI YAMASHITA URGED HIS VETERANS OF THE FIRST AND 26TH JAPANESE DIVISIONS TO DESPERATE EFFORTS TODAY TO WREST THE INITIATIVE FROM AMERICAN LIBERATION FORCES BATTLING FORWARD SLOWLY BUT SURELY IN THE ORMOC CORRIDOR OF LEYTE ISLAND.

PITTED AGAINST THE NIPPONESE WERE ELEMENTS OF THE AMERICAN 24TH INFANTRY DIVISION AND FIRST (DISMOUNTED) CAVALRY DIVISION. THE BATTLE WAS A GRIM ONE. MUCH WAS AT STAKE FOR YAMASHITA WAS ENTRUSTED WITH THE TASK OF OPPOSING GEN.DOUGLAS MACARTHUR IN THE FIRST PHASE OF THE PHILIPPINE CAMPAIGN.

JAPAN'S HERO OF THE MALAYAN CAMPAIGN AND SINGAPORE HAS COMMITTED ELEMENTS OF FIVE DIVISIONS TO THE TASK OF GEINING THE OFFENSIVE. THEIR TOTAL NUMBERS, HOWEVER, ARE LESS THAN THE FOUR AMERICAN DIVISIONS HEMMING THEM IN WITHIN THE NARROW CONFINES OF THE CORRIDOR.

IN A BRIEF REPORT ON THE OVERALL SITUATION, MACARTHUR TOLD HOW HIS TROOPS, BY THEIR CONSTANT OFFENSIVE PUNCHES, HAD SHOVED THE ENEMY OFF BALANCE AND HELD HIM THERE.

AS YAMASHITA SOUGHT TO MUSTER HIS FORCES IN FORWARD AREAS FOR STRONG COUNTERTHRUSTS, THE YANKS STRUCK TELLING BLOWS BEFORE HE COULD GET READY. THEY DROVE INTO HIS ASSEMBLY AREAS AND FORCED HIM TO SACRIFICE SMALL UNITS AT A NUMBER OF POINTS INSTEAD OF PUSHING THEM FORWARD INA MASSIVE DRIVE.

ENEMY SUPPLY LINES LEADING FROM ORMOC, PORT OF REINFORCEMENT ON LEYTE'S WEST COAST, ARE BEING SHELLED ALMOST CONSTANTLY BY AMERICAN "LONG TOMS." THE HEAVY PROJECTILES RAKING THE ORMOC AREA HAVE MADE IT COSTLY FOR THE JAPANESE TO MOVE MEN AND SUPPLIES.

THE RELENTLESSDRIVE OF MACARTHUR'S GROUND FORCES HAS COMPRESSED THE ENEMY WITHIN A SMALL AREA DEFENDED BY WHAT MACARTHUR CALLS THE YAMASHITA LINE.

THE LINE IS A VAGUE SERIES OF HILLS AND VALLEYS, SOME HELD BY JAPANESE, OTHERS BY AMERICANS. IN PLACES THE YANKS ARE BEHIND THE ENEMY, IN OTHERS THE JAPANESE ARE BEHIND THE AMERICANS.

INDICATIVE OF THE BITTER FIGHTING THAT HAS RAGED FOR DAYS ALONG THE ROAD LEADING SOUTH INTO ORMOC WAS A REPORT FROM AP WAR CORRESPONDENT FRED HAMPSON OF HEAVY ENEMY CASUALTIES NEAR LIMON. DOUGHBOYS COUNTED MORE THAN 600 JAPANESE BODIES ON THE SOUTHERN SLOPE OF BREAKNECK RIDGE--ONLY PART OF ONE DAY'S TOLL. IT WAS NOT CLEAR WHETHER THE ENEMY FORCE AT LIMON HAD BEEN KNOCKED OUT BY THESE LOSSES.

THE MAIN BODY OF JAPANESE WAS CONCENTRATED IN THE ORMOC VALLEY, ABOUT THREE MILES OVER HILLY COUNTRY BELOW LIMON.

FRENCH ARMY SPRINGS NEW DRIVE

NOV NOV 16 1944

Yankees Sever Road Behind Trapped Japs

Goes Into Action At Belfort

Advances Four to Five Miles on 25 Mile Front First Day.

METZ BESIEGED FROM 3 SIDES

Doughboys By-pass Bloody Fort Driant — British Drive Five Miles Through Bogland.

By Howard Cowan

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 16 (AP)—The Allies' November offensive against fortress Germany mounted toward all-out proportions today under the impetus of a new assault by the French First Army on the approaches to Belfort Gap at the southeastern end of the 400-mile western front.

This assault, which began yesterday on a 25-mile front and gained four to five miles in its first day, came as Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army closed its steel grip on Metz to within little more than a mile of the great fortress city and the British Second Army forced its way five miles through the boglands of eastern Holland to within 37 miles of the Nazis' key industrial center of Duisburg.

Whole Front Alive

As a result, the whole front from Holland to Switzerland was alive except for the segment around Aachen held by the U. S. First Army.

The American Seventh Army, which is teamed with the French First Army in the Sixth Army group at the southeastern end of the front, had already swung into the attack.

Gen. Jean de Lattre de Tassigny's French troops yesterday smashed forward on both sides of the river Doubs and a front dispatch said they captured several hundred prisoners as well as 10 small towns, including the highway village of Arcy, 11 miles southwest of Belfort.

Metz Besieged Three Sides

Metz was besieged from three sides and Patton's doughboys had passed powerful Fort Driant and direct thrust toward the city's suburbs from the west.

Forts Neutralized

Both Fort Driant and Fort Jean D'Arc—two of the nine major bastions ringing Metz—were neutralized by Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's 95 Division, which captured two smaller forts, Hubert and Jussy, as it smashed toward the outskirts of the city from the west. Fort Illange, 14 miles north of Metz and just south of Thionville, also was stormed and its Nazi garrinson killed or captured.

Driant's guns, which barked spasmodically yesterday when the Yanks began pushing past it on the north, were silent today, suggesting that the Germans had abandoned the mighty mile-and-a-half-long structure on the west bank of the Moselle river as they previously had evacuated Forts L'Yser and L'Aisne after only small arms resistance.

Due south of Metz the American Fifth Division inched forward to within little more than a mile of the city while beating off some of the most determined counterattacks the Nazis have raised since Patton's forces opened their winter assault eight days ago.

Peltre Cleared of Enemy

Peltre, two and a half miles southeast of Metz, was cleared of the enemy, and German counterattacks were beaten off along nearby Pouilly Ridge, from which American guns command the enemy's main escape route from Metz eastward to the Saar frontier.

The Germans, employing their first substantial force of armor since the American attack began, also struck back vigorously against Patton's 80th Infantry Division south of Remilly forest, southeast of Metz, but the Yanks stopped them cold and pushed within four miles of the city of Falkenberg (Faulquemont), which is only 10 miles from the German border.

(Possibly preparing the German people for the imminent loss of Metz, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, leading Nazi military commentator, observed that the famous fortress city "represents only an outer position, for holding of which one does not wage decisive battle but engages only a smaller amount of forces—just enough to force the enemy to strong wear and tear of strength.")

Bad Weather For British

Bitter weather and thick minefields supplied most of the opposition as Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British Second Army fought through the first full day of its new offensive southeast of Eindhoven in Holland. A staff officer reported, "We are pushing on fast and for the present, at least, there is nothing much in sight to stop us."

The British quickly merged three of their four bridgeheads into one—approximately three miles wide—the the junction of the Noord and Wessen Canals, 18 miles southeast of Venlo, and expanded a fourth over the Wessen only eight miles from the Dutch city of Roermond. One British column was at the edge of Grathem, five miles due west of Roermond, and the bogland village of Leveroy, seven miles northwest of Roermond, was seized after a light skirmish.

Attack Goes Through Night

The British attack, which opened late Tuesday behind a 400-piece artillery barrage, continued through the night, with flame-throwers taking a prominent part. The nature of the territory made it essentially an infantry job, with tanks giving only stationary support. Snow and sleet virtually precluded air support.

The German city of Duisburg, toward which the attack appeared tentatively aimed, is a great center of Hitler war industries situated on the east bank of the Rhine. It is connected with Berlin by one of the arrow-straight super-highways with which the Nazis interlaced Germany in the years before the war.

A British officer said it was possible that the Germans had pulled back to the Maas (Meuse) river, which forms the Dutch-German borded, or even had withdrawn acros sthe stream.

(The Berlin radio speculated that Montgomery's attack was a "prelude to the expected large-scale attack of the whole left wing" of the Allied armies.)

Suggests a Pull-out

The enemy's yielding of the powerful Metz forts almost without a fight was regarded as strongly suggestive of a pull-out that might well carry all the way back to the Rhine. To some observers it indicated that the German commanders feared their manpower reserves might soon be needed more urgently elsewhere.

There still was no definite word, however, of a German withdrawal from Metz.

(The Berlin radio announced civilians were being evacuated from the city. One enemy broadcast suggested Metz might be turned into "another Aachen" for the Americans—meaning it might be defended from house to house until it virtually was destroyed.)

The 90th division, fighting at the northern end of Patton's front, expanded the Thionville-Koenigsmacher bridgehead across the Moselle to a width of 14 miles and added another mile in depth despite exceptionally heavy German counterattacks.

Counter Thrust Stopped Cold

One of the enemy's counter thrusts was stopped cold. Another gained some ground, but the Yanks immediately took it back. The 90th then lashed out on its own and pushed east another mile to the vicinity of Haute-Sierck, five miles east of Koenigsmacher.

The Ninth Air Force sent a squadron of Thunderbolts on a bombing and strafing operation over this sector of the battle zone for the first time in four days.

At the right wing of Patton's offensive the 26th Division captured Marsal and Hazaoucourt, both five miles southwest of Dieuze after clearing the ridge in the Foret de Bride et de Koecking.

Three miles northeast of Dieuze elements of the Fourth Armored

Division which already had punched through the forest smashed eastward another mile and cleared the little town of Guebling. At latest reports these units were attacking Bourgaltroff, four miles northeast of Dieuze in the face of heavy artillery fire.

Drive Into Morhange

Five miles northwest of the town the 35th Division drove into the town of Morhange, 23 miles southeast of Metz, and tonight had it about two-hirds mopped up. The Germans used tanks in counter-attacks—sometimes as many as ten in one place—but there were no reports of how many, if any, the Americans knocked out.

A little farther north, in the vicinity of Landroff, the Sixth Armored Division also beat off a counterattack without giving ground.

To the south of Patton's big push, the American Seventh Army jabbed deeper into the snow-drifted Vosges foothills, with enemy resistance stiffest in the northern sector east of the Forest De Parroy and slacking off further south.

Lt. Gen. Alexander Patch's troops gained three miles east of Migneville, and to the south the villages of Vionville, Ireux, Lanay and Granges Sur Vologne fell to doughboys closing in on Schlucht Pass through Vosges. The Paris radio reported Allied troops were less than a mile from Bonhomme Pass and about two miles from St. Die and the St. Marie Pass.

Field dispatchers said eight inches of fresh snow blanketed the Vosges foothills tonight. The entire western front was wrapped in real winter weather, and no planes left British bases today.

AMERICANS 2 MILES FROM CITY OF METZ

British Cross Two Canals in 4000-yard Gain in Eastern Holland—Patton's Men Widen Moselle Bridgehead.

London, Nov. 15 (A. P.).—American Third Army infantry, battling through snow and sleet, captured three more forts guarding Metz today, by-passed two others and reached points less than two miles from the citadel on both south and west.

To the north the British offensive launched last night from a jumping off point at the junction of the Noord and Wessem canals drove forward nearly three miles. Lieut.-Gen. Sir Miles Dempsey's troops were thirty-seven miles from the Ruhr city of Duisburg, and a spokesman said: "We are pushing on fast and, for the present at least, there is nothing much in sight to stop us."

South of Metz American Seventh Army troops pushed doggedly through the deepening snowfields of the northern Vosges foothills.

Operations along the entire front were hampered by the weather, and there were no reports of air support in any sector.

Forts Hubert and Jussy, west of Metz, fell to the Ninety-fifth Infantry Division which reached a point two miles from the city after a rush of a mile and a half.

Nazi Refused to Give Up.

Fort Illange, just south of Thionville fell to Americans who stormed the bastion after the German commander had refused to surrender. Previously Fort Thionville, just north of the city, and Fort Koenigsmacher, across the Moselle to the northeast had been captured.

In sweeping up Forts Hubert and Jussy the Ninety-fifth Infantry Division by-passed Fort Driant and its twin Fort Jeanne d'Arc in their head-on thrust toward Metz from the west, a dispatch from Supreme Headquarters said. A German broadcast earlier had said the Americans had opened assaults on Driant, which the enemy successfully defended against a thrust two months ago, and Jeanne d'Arc.

Immediately south of Metz, American troops which captured Forts l'Aisne and l'Yser, were driving toward Magny, less than a mile from the city, after capturing Pouilly and the ridge of the same name. East of this point, other Americans seized Peltre, two and one-half miles southeast of Metz. German resistance in this area was reported stiffening.

Two German counter-attacks were repulsed by the Americans southeast of Metz—one in the Peltre-Pouilly sector and another in the vicinity of Arriance, where units of the Sixth Armored Division are spearheading attacks beyond the Nied River.

Despite signs, the Germans do not plan a suicide stand in Metz—resistance has been spotty along the entire front and the elaborate forts captureed from the Germans have been stripped of their big guns—the Berlin radio announced that the civilian population of Metz had been ordered evacuated.

[BBC, heard by NBC today, quoted the German DNB overseas service today as saying that all civilians have already left Metz. A significant remark was made by a German military spokesman in Berlin today who declared that Metz was not a fortress at all, but simply an arsenal, the broadcast added.]

North of Metz the Koenigsmacher-Thionville bridgehead over the Moselle River was lengthened to fourteen miles by Third Army troops and a front dispatch said there were signs of a general German withdrawal to the southeast in that area.

In the wheeling movement southeast of Metz the Fourth Armored Division passed Guebling, twenty-seven miles from the city, and the Twenty-sixth pressed closer to Dieuze.

A German counter-attack was broken up by the troops driving on Metz from the south and another enemy counter-thrust was repulsed in the Sixth Armored Division zone around Arriance, fifteen miles southeast of Metz and fourteen miles from the German border.

British Strike Swiftly.

The British mounted their drive yesterday from Nederweert, eighteen miles southwest of Venlo and some thirty-eight miles northwest of Aachen. The apparent purpose of this offensive was to flatten the German bulge west of the Maas (Meuse) River and straighten the Allied front between the Dutch city of Nijmegen and Aachen, where American First Army troops have penetrated the Siegfried Line and established themselves firmly on German soil.

The British quickly established three bridgeheads over the Wessem and Noorder canals and occupied Meijel, six miles northeast of Nederweert, and Eind, a mile and a half southeast of Nederweert. The Germans had abandoned Meijel, but left it heavily mined and booby-trapped.

Immediately south of Metz, the Americans who breached the ring of forts—finding them surprisingly unmanned and stripped of their big guns—ran up against a hastily emplaced line of German 88s on the Pouilly Ridge less than two miles below the city.

A front line dispatch said that the Tenth Infantry Regiment under command of Col. Robert P. Bell of Montclair, N. J., took Pouilly itself.

Gain in Vosges Also.

On the right flank of the Third Army's huge attack, American infantry and armor advancing north of Chateau-Salins reached the area of Destrich and Baronweiler.

Fresh gains were scored also by Allied troops of the Sixth Army group in the Vosges Mountains and foothills north of the Swiss border. Northeast of Baccarat they advanced approximately two miles against light resistance.

East of Bruyeres the town of Granges-sur-Vologne and several nearby villages were captured as the enemy was forced back more than a mile.

Still farther south, despite snow and mud and extensive German minefields, limited advances were scored against stiff opposition in the flooded valley of the Doubs River.

The attack toward Metz from the west—the first concentrated one in that sector since the present offensive began—was launched by the 95th Infantry Division, which swept two miles past Chatel St. Germain to Rozerieulles, three miles from Metz. Only the guns of Fort Driant and Fort Marival fired at these attackers.

Supreme headquarters did not confirm Paris and Algiers broadcasts reporting the capture of Thionville, 16 miles north of Metz. For several weeks American troops have held the part of Thionville on the west bank of the Moselle river, with the Germans clinging to the eastern half of the city.

Battle Death Rate Half Of Last War

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Paris, Nov. 15 (AP)—The rate of death from combat wounds in this war has been reduced to little more than half what it was in World War I, Maj. Gen. Albert W. Kenner, chief SHAEF medical officer, said today.

He said this was accomplished though 55 to 60 per cent. of the injuries in this war were due to high-explosive artillery and mortar fire. In the first World War 60 per cent. of the casualties were caused by small-arms fire.

The mortality rate from battle wounds is running under four per cent. of the total hurt. In the last war it was from seven to eight per cent. Even among cases which would have been considered hopeless in the last war, many now are being saved through use of adequate blood plasma and because of specialized surgery, the speed of the jeep and the skytrain transport plane in moving the wounded back, and the benefits of sulfa drugs and penicillin.

In the last war 60 per cent. of the battle casualties developed infection. In this war the rate is less than ten per cent.

Kenner said the venereal disease rate has about doubled since the troops moved into France, but that the increase was lower than had been anticipated.

WAC Saves Crew's Lives

An Eighth Air Force Station, England, Nov. 15 (AP)—A WAC corporal was credited officially today with saving the lives of the crew of a Liberator bomber which crashed and burned on a test flight during which she was aboard as an observer.

The story was disclosed with the announcement that Corporal Grace Sharkey, of Philadelphia, Pa., has been recommended for the Soldier's Medal and with the debut of a new Liberator which the grateful crew of the wrecked plane have named "Lady Grace."

Matter-Of-Fact Account

Corporal Sharkey's account of the crackup and her part in rescuing the crew is very matter of fact.

"The ship crashed and was burning fiercely," she recalls. "Smoke filled the interior and everyone seemed too stunned to move. For a minute I thought we were trapped. The ship was a mess, and the only way out seemed to be through the nose.

"I kicked out the plexiglass and crawled through the opening. Some of the other crew members were stirring by then and I helped them out. The navigator was right behind me and the pilot and I helped the radio operator last man in the plane, out just in time."

Seconds after the pretty brunette and the airmen had cleared the plane a series of explosions blew it to bits.

"She was brave, acted quickly and time was the difference between life and death," was the comment of the pilot, Lieut. Tommie E. Leftwich, Pine Bluff, Ark.

Corporal Sharkey came to this field six months ago to teach instrument flying. She was making the flight for first-hand observation of actual flight conditions.

Her husband, Charles J. Sharkey, is an air-force mechanic stationed at Sioux City, Iowa. She has a brother in the China-Burma-India theater and a sister in the WAVES.

3 Flyers Keep Pledge and Die With Comrade

Stick With Doomed Plane When They Are Unable to Save Injured Friend

AN AMERICAN FLYING FORTRESS BASE IN BRITAIN, Nov. 15 (AP).—Three enlisted gunners who stuck with a doomed Flying Fortress in an attempt to rescue a fourth died with him when the bomber crashed and exploded recently behind the Allied lines in France.

Other crewmen told the story today.

They could have taken to their parachutes along with six other members of the crew, but long ago they had told the ball-turret gunner, Sergeant Edwin T. Kreisel jr., of Wilmington, Del., "Don't worry if anything ever happens; we'll either get you out of that ball or we'll still be with you when she hits."

Kreisel was injured by flak and the ball turret was so badly damaged he could not be rescued.

The men who died with him were Sergeant John J. Burgard, of Long Beach, Calif., tail gunner; Sergeant Irving E. Stewart, of Moran, Ga., waist gunner, and Sergeant Elbert D. Scott, of Aspermont, Tex., radio gunner. They were buried side by side in a Canadian Army cemetery.

"The friendship among those four guys was stronger than the fear of death," said Sergeant Grady H. Cooper, of Chattanooga, Tenn., top turret gunner, who broke his ankle when he landed by parachute.

"I'd often heard them promise to stay with Fritz if he was ever trapped in the ball. Perhaps they thought they could ride out a crash and have a chance, and perhaps they didn't."

The pilot was Captain Frank P. Ball, son of Colonel C. W. Ball.

French Gain Toward Belfort

With the Sixth Army Group in France, Nov. 15 (AP)—The First French Army of Gen. Jean de Lattre de Tassigny launched an attack today on a 25-mile front covering both banks of the Doubs river on the approaches to the Belfort Gap and scored advances of four to five miles.

Moroccan, Algerian and Senegalese troops, reinforced by the FFI, smashed forward through the snow and seized ten villages as well as taking several hundred prisoners.

A heavy artillery barrage opened the assault, which reached all its local objectives, including the village of Arcy, 11 miles southwest of Belfort and five west of Montbeliard.

At places the infantry broke through the enemy's forward defenses for as much as five miles.

Villages were taken on both sides of the Doubs. Arcy, on the main highway from Besancon to Belfort, was the principal prize. But strung out in a southeasterly line behind it General de Lattire's troops took Gemonval, Marvelise, Onans Bretigny, Montenois and Lougres, all north of the river, and Ecot, Vermondans and Ecurcey, all south of the river in the area of Pont-de-Roide.

Plane With 1,000 Holes Crash Lands; All Safe

A Bomber Base in England, Nov. 15 (AP)—Nine Eighth Air Force flyers in a Fortress riddled with more than 1,000 holes from German flak, cannon and rifles, crash-landed their bomber in Belgium recently and came out of it with only minor injuries.

The plane tore through trees and barbed wire, caromed off a hangar roof and hit a brick building after a raid on Munster, Germany. The men luckily picked an empty building to hit, Sergt. Paul Kneeland, of Worcester, Mass., said.

"The others were all filled with very sensitive shells," he said they learned later.

Only one crewman, Sergt. Donald Dewy, of Adrian, Mich., a waist gunner, was wounded by flak.

French Occupy Andorra In Pyrenees

Paris, Nov. 15 (AP)—French gendarmes have occupied the autonomous state of Andorra in the Pyrenees, the Foreign Office announced today. A spokesman said the action had no connection with orders for the arrest of the Count of Paris, pretender to the French throne, reported on French soil in near-by Perpignan.

However, the Count may have entered France from Spain by way of Andorra and a hunt for him and his associates logically might extend to the tiny state.

The Foreign Office gave no precise explanation of the occupation, which took place yesterday. Recent border clashes between French troops and Spanish Republican guerrillas have raised the possibility of future trouble in the area.

"Preventive Measure"

A spokesman said Gen. Charles de Gaulle made the decision as ex officio coprince of Andorra and that the action was "a preventive measure" to insure security and maintain order throughout the winter months.

Andorra embraces 191 square miles at the French-Spanish frontier on the south slopes of the mountains. Rich iron mines and valuable forests lie in its cold limits. Most of the few thousand inhabitants are shepherds. Maximum length of the country is 17 miles and its maximum width is 18.

Historical Precedents

The spokesman said "about 100" gendarmes, carrying only normal police equipment, entered Andorra under orders of the prefect of Perpignan.

He said there was no menace to security from Andorra at present, but he added that roads into the valley from the French side always are blocked by snow from the end of November through the winter, and thus it was considered advisable to have the gendarmes in the valley now as a protection against any future possibilities.

The spokesman cited historical precedents for the act during the Franco-Prussian war in 1870, the World War in 1914 and the Spanish Civil War in 1936, and at the outset of the present war in 1939.

Joint Suzerainty

The independence of Andorra is traditionally ascribed to Charlemagne. Since 1278 it has been under the joint suzerainty of the French state, which inherited the rights of the Counts of Foix, and the Spanish bishops of Urgel. The judiciary is appointed in equal numbers by the bishops and the French Government.

The official title of the state is Les Vallees et Suzerainetes.

It is governed by a council of 24 members, elected for four years by the heads of families in each of its six parishes. Catalan is the language spoken. Both French and Spanish currency are used.

DeGaulle Plans Moscow Visit

PARIS, Nov. 15. (AP)—French officials speculated tonight on the possibility that President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and President Chiang Kai-Shek might attend a major United Nations conference in Moscow soon, following announcement today that Gen. Charles de Gaulle would leave shortly for the Soviet capital.

De Gaulle will be accompanied on the trip by his foreign ministers, George Bidault. He accepted promptly the invitation from Premier Stalin, and French officialdom coupled this with a report here several days ago that Stalin had invited President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill to come to Moscow.

Such a major conference, it was pointed out, would require French representation, in view of the wide range of problems in which France is vitally interested.

Foremost among such problems is the settlement to be imposed on Germany. France also claims an interest in the solution to the Balkans questions; establishment of a postwar Poland with altered frontiers; the future of Spain, and formation of an "entente" among western nations such as England, France Holland, Belgium and Norway, all of which are likely to be on the agenda of any major conference of the heads of the great powers.

Premier Stalin's invitation to De Gaulle marked another milestone in the return of France to the family of great powers. The French here look upon the invitation as a concrete result of De Gaulle's recent talks with Prime Minister Churchill.

DE GAULLE GOING TO MOSCOW SOON

Paris, Nov. 15 (A. P.).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle will leave for Moscow soon on the invitation of Premier Stalin, and French officials speculated tonight that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill and possibly President Chiang Kai-shek might attend and form a great United Nations conference.

The cabinet announced that Gen. de Gaulle and Foreign Minister Georges Bidault would leave on an unspecified but imminent date.

Doctor Conducts Own Prisoner Exchange

Paris, Nov. 15 (AP)—The "unofficial" exchange of 1,000 French and German prisoners via Switzerland through efforts of a French doctor was reported today by the newspaper Liberation Soir in a dispatch from the frontier town of Evian.

The doctor, named Picaud, a medical commandant in the Haute Savoie, arranged the exchange through personal contacts in Switzerland and the international Red Cross in Geneva. The French Government as yet has taken no cognizance of the week-old incident, the newspaper said.

France To Confiscate Renault Plant Assets

Paris, Nov. 15 (AP)—The Government decided today to confiscate assets of the big Renault plant which worked for the Germans, it was announced after a Cabinet meeting.

The Renault works turned out tanks, trucks and other equipment between repairs from Allied bombings. The company pleaded it worked under duress. Previously, the Renault works had been "requisitioned" and a special administrator was installed to resume production.

Black Market in Paris Gets Corner on Houses

PARIS, Nov. 15, (AP)—Black market operators have cornered what remains of the rapidly dwindling housing space in Paris, the newspaper Franctireur charged today, while the newspaper Liberation reported that a million French citizens are without shelter.

Franctireur emphasized the difficulty of trying to find an apartment in Paris with a cartoon depicting an harassed husband, his wife and two children shrinking away from a frowning landlady.

"Nothing doing," the husband means. "She will rent only to a bachelor who will pay 60,000 francs and marry her daughter."

Would Close Paris Night Clubs

Paris, Nov. 15 (AP)—The Paris press urged the Government today to close the city's night clubs for the duration of the war.

Marseille Pouring Tons Of Supplies Into France

Port Is Now One of Allies' Big Three, Despite Damage

MARSEILLE, Nov. 15 (AP).—One of the major victories of the war has been won at this port where, despite destruction by the Germans, thousands of tons of supplies are now pouring through to the western front.

In a little more than ten weeks after the capture of this port with its twenty-two and one-half miles of quays, huge convoys of ships were moving in and out of the repaired berths, carrying men and large quantities of supplies. As many as 100 ships have been in the harbor at one time.

Marseille is definitely one of the big three of the Allied supply circle, along with Cherbourg and Antwerp. It already tops Naples, whose peak was 16,000 tons of supplies daily, according to Colonel Hunter Clarkson, of Santa Fe, N. M., port commander.

Bitter Fighting In Leyte

Battle in Philippines Rages With Renewed Desperation.

ENEMY COUNTER BLOW REPULSED

American Divisions Closing in Gradually—First Cavalry Seizes New Hill Positions.

By Murlin Spencer

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Thursday, Nov. 16 (AP)—Two units of the American 24th Division "practically severed the Ormoc Road" behind a trapped Japanese regiment as the battle for Leyte Island flamed with bitter fighting today.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced that the infantrymen in a double envelopment move thrust behind the Japanese near Limon, American-held village four miles south of Carigara Bay.

Bloodily Repulse Counterattack

The main body of the 24th, meanwhile engaged units of the Japanese First Division in headlong combat on the road near Limon, which stands at the gateway to Ormoc corridor.

Some 30 miles southward, the U. S. Seventh Division "bloodily" repulsed a Japanese counterattack at Balogo, 10 miles south of Ormoc on the coastal road.

This means the Seventh has advanced four miles northward in its drive to apply the southern lever of the American squeeze against Ormoc. Japan's last port on the island. These Yank forces smashed a Japanese landing attempt Tuesday at Damulaan, 14 miles south of Ormoc.

The third arm of the American pincers, pushing westward through the mountains, closed tighter as elements of the First Cavalry Division seized new hill positions and overran several enemy strong points.

Forward elements of the 24th Division's two outflanking units were reported close to the vital Ormoc road late yesterday. One unit swung around to the west, then turned southeast toward the road. Another force moved in from the east and pushed west.

This difficult maneuver cut off Japanese forces estimated at a regiment's strength—possibly 2,000 men.

The Nipponese were fighting bitterly, however, and showed no signs of withdrawing.

The units on the 24th pursuing along the road were reported to have made slight advances over great piles of Japanese dead.

Japs Lose 50 Per Cent

The Japanese counterthrust at Balogo was on a comparatively small scale, but the Nipponese losses in the action were estimated at 50 percent of the force employed.

Dismounted cavalrymen, driving westward from Jaro, overran numerous scattered Japanese ridge positions to seize Mt. Mamban, a 3,830-foot height, and hills known as numbers 4047 and 4018.

The cavalrymen are closing in on the road some distance below the trap made by the 24th Division.

Associated Press War Correspondent Fred Hampson, with the 24th, reported many more Japanese dead were found, in addition to great masses of bodies littering ridges and valleys after fierce battling early this week.

Planes Attack At Ormoc

American fighter planes again blasted Japanese barges and shore targets at Ormoc. Single enemy planes staged "several ineffective raids" on American ground installations, the communique reported, and five were shot down.

The liberation front was moving forward in all sectors, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Wednesday communique disclosed. From the north, east and south the Yanks converged on Ormoc, where the enemy probably will make his final stand, with the sea at his back.

A double flanking operation to the north menaced the Japanese hold on bloody ridges dominating the retreat road to Ormoc. Units of the 24th Infantry Division stole southwestward through the mountains in a wheeling move that threatened the western flank of the enemy's positions along the Ormoc road south of Limon, scene of bitter fighting.

Meanwhile dismounted troopers of the First Cavalry Division pressed in from mountain positions on the Japanese eastern flank. They posed a threat to the vital communications line about three airline miles south of Limon.

Probe Forest Fastnesses

In the central sector, doughboys of the 96th Division probed forest fastnesses 14 miles eastward of Ormoc. They were in the vicinity of Alto Peak, a 1,333-foot height of Leyte's rugged backbone. From Alto Peak the terrain slopes eastward toward the coast.

Developing the southern arm of the triple threat to Ormoc, 7th Infantry Division units advanced to Damulaan, on the coast 14 miles below Ormoc. They broke up a Nipponese attempt to land reinforcements at Damulaan from a handful of barges.

Ineffective harassing raids by the enemy airforce contrasted with devastating strikes by American land and carrier based planes against Japanese airdromes, shipping and defense installations throughout the Philippines.

(Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced at Pearl Harbor late Tuesday that Pacific fleet carrier aircraft swept over the Manila area Sunday in a destructive blow to the enemy's shipping, installations and air power. Fourteen Japanese vessels, including three warships, were sunk or damaged, a floating drydock hit by torpedoes and 28 or 30 planes destroyed. One American ship was damaged.)

Yanks Hem In Jap Spearhead

MacArthur Developing Pincers on Enemy Vanguard Above Ormoc on Leyte.

Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 15 (A. P.).—American fighting men today were on three sides of the Jap spearhead thrusting north on Leyte Island from the port of Ormoc, and threatened to cut the point from the shaft.

In a strategic maneuver, infantrymen of the Twenty-fourth Division swung wide to the west of the Jap front line regiment near Limon, while other units of the Twenty-fourth maintained pressure along the line from the north. First Cavalry (dismounted) units closed in from captured Hill 1525 and Mount Catabaran to the east in a nutcracker-like move.

In his communique today Gen. Douglas MacArthur spoke of the movement as a "wide envelopment" and declared it is "threatening the Yamashita line below Limon." He said American artillery was giving the infantrymen highly effective close support and destroying numerous Japanese gun positions.

At the same time, American long-range guns were raking the Jap supply line twisting up through the mountains from Ormoc, making reinforcement of Nipponese troops at Limon costly and uncertain.

Elements of the Ninety-sixth Infantry Division gained a mountain crest looking down toward Ormoc, fourteen miles to the west, in the vicinity of Alto Peak.

The American Seventh Division at Damulaan on the west Leyte Coast, near the mouth of Ormoc Bay, repulsed a small enemy force attempting to land from barges. This was the first news of the Seventh in more than a week.

Gen. MacArthur declared that along the Ormoc corridor American troops, constantly attacking, have kept the Japs off balance, and prevented Gen. Tokoyuki Yamashita from gathering enough force in his forward areas for a strong counter-attack.

[Radio Tokyo, heard by NBC, said this morning that American troops were reinforced by two divisions on Leyte Island yesterday.]

Elements of five Jap divisions are hemmed in by the Americans, who hold high ground on three sides of Limon and along the east side of Narrow Valley leading south to Ormoc. On the west side of the valley are more high mountains and an abrupt slope to the sea.

Principal fighting is near Limon, to which the Japs have been forced to withdraw by the American Twenty-fourth Division pushing south along the Ormoc road from Carigara Bay on Leyte's north coast.

The Japs are holding up the American advance there by a stand along the "Yamashita Line," actually a vague series of positions in the mountains near where the road makes a sharp horseshoe bend. It is this line the Americans are now threatening to cut off by moving in behind it from both east and west.

Meanwhile, American bombers poured bombloads on Philippines airdromes and sunk one and probably two Jap freighters, a supplemental communique said today.

A coastal vessel was sunk in the Banda Sea near Timor, a 4,000-ton freighter off Mindanao, southern Philippines, took three direct hits and was left in flames.

Alicante airdrome on Negros Island in the central Philippines was hit with thirty-six tons. Opposition was described as negligible.

Filipinos Aid PT Men Behind Jap Lines

By Spencer Davis

Behind the Japanese Lines on Leyte, Nov. 15 (AP)—Filipino guerrillas, the native version of WACs and plain citizens of Leyte, have guarded several patrol torpedo-boat crews—and this correspondent—in the heart of the Japanese-held section of Leyte for 72 hours.

Trapped on the island reefs after a running fight with Japanese destroyers, the crews came ashore in the center of territory where between 30,000 and 40,000 Japanese reinforcements have been landed in the last fortnight. We came ashore while Japanese bombers circled overhead by day and destroyers hunted us by night.

But despite the reinforcements and despite the lurking ships and planes, this territory seems absolutely in the control of the guerrillas. Voluntary guards are everywhere, and the Americans are being sheltered and entertained in the well-stocked, hospitable homes of the Leyte Filipinos.

Hear Yank Guns

From these houses—nipa huts, each with its attendant litter of grunting pigs and many with poultry, milk from herds of Brahma cattle and drinks made from fermented coconut milk—we can hear the distant thunder of the Long Toms signaling the American advance over the ridges.

Even when the men start on short walks, some ragged Filipino guard with a rifle slung over his shoulder always appears before the visitor has taken many steps.

Filipino girls, who call themselves WACs after the American fashion, are equally omnipresent. They busy themselves serving delicacies to the men—shredded coconut and brown sugar, chicken fried in coconut oil and barbecued goat—and in return the Americans are lavish with their stocks of girls, cartons of cigarettes and boxes of K rations. As a result, many of the men already are without cigarettes and may be hungry before we return to our base.

Saves American Whisky

One enthusiastic Filipino has even produced a bottle of American whisky he had buried, he said, for the day the Americans should come. Today he said: "Thank God you are here. We have waited so long."

He said he paid 500 pesos (Japanese) for the bottle. That sum is equal to the monthly salary of a Cebu official under the Japanese Government.

One of the PT-boat captains, Ensign Harrell Dumas, of Genoa, Texas, has even received a fan letter here behind the enemy lines.

Sincere Invitation

The letter was from the young lady mayor of a village, who wrote: "My Dear Ensign:

"My uncle has arrived with prominent landowners just purposely to meet you and all the boys. They simply climbed the steep hills and crossing (sic) muddy raging streams just to see you and company. In case you are not able to sail tonight and it will not inconvenience you very much, he wants you to spend the whole of tomorrow here with us.

"We shall be preparing some drinks for all of you. Canadian Club wines are sincerely ready for the toast."

Contrast To Battle

All this is in sharp contrast to the battle from which the crews just came. Dumas and Ensign Lou Thomas, of New Orleans, former Tulane football player, had their boats on patrol the night of November 12 when they were surprised by three enemy destroyers. The first inkling of the destroyers' presence was when their brilliant searchlights flashed squarely on the torpedo boats.

Seconds later, five-inch shells bracketed the little craft. The PTs countered with smoke screens and attempted to maneuver within torpedo range, but the enemy guns kept them at a distance. The Japanese commander, using the PT radio frequency, called them by their code names with a taunt:

"Manhattans! Manhattans! We are closing you! This is the end!"

"Catch Us First"

One PT skipper replied shortly: "You'll have to catch us first."

Then the boats opened their triple-motors for a run to the south, weaving to escape the gunfire, and at last ducked into this inlet and ran aground.

Rather than risk having his craft fall into enemy hands, Thomas ordered his crew to abandon ship, then destroyed it with explosives. The sight of the explosion and the PT boat on the reef apparently satisfied the Japanese, for the destroyers retired. Dumas and his men then joined Thomas' party on the beach.

Search For Crewmen

Eight patrol boats that night failed to locate the stranded crews, so on the third night another rescue mission set out under command of Lieut. Col. Carl Gleason, Chelmsford, Mass.

Investigating a light on shore, the boat on which I was riding crunched to a stop on a hidden reef. The skipper, Lieut. (j.g.) Kenneth B. Sharpe, Pasadena, Cal., tried every trick in the book, but the ebbing tide was against him. Jettisoning depth charges and torpedoes did no good. Neither did two other boats trying to assist him.

Finally, when unidentified ships were reported approaching, Sharpe and Chief Boatswain's Mate Paul Wilson, Decatur, Ill., took axes to the secret equipment while Executive Officer Peter C. Young, Kearney, N. J., grabbed the documents and we ferried our way by life raft to another PT, commanded by Lieut. (jg) Howard Terry, Cameron, Texas.

Group Goes Ashore

It was only an hour before dawn and the immobilized boats were in no position to move through the shallow waters. A Filipino paddled out in a small boat and offered to take us to cover on shore.

We came ashore.

During the day, we met Thomas and Dumas, with their crews.

Guests Of Filipinos

Then the Filipinos took us to their hearts, and we have been living as guests in the heart of the enemy country ever since.

Enemy airplanes have been overhead frequently, but none has attacked the helpless boats. So presently, when tide conditions are right, the remaining boats—Mr. Completely, Carolina Chile and Sharpe's disabled craft, which must be towed—will attempt to slip around the enemy destroyers in the dark to get home again.

(Editor's Note—The flotilla left on schedule and succeeded in reaching an American base without further attacks, although one Japanese plane threatened it in the midst of the trip.)

Capt. Dent Busy While Away

A Leyte Air Base, Nov. 15 (AP)—While he was away, Captain Dent was a little busy.

Captain Dent—Elliott Dent, Jr., whose parents live in Birmingham, Ala.—went away several days ago to lead a flight of Lightning fighters over a Japanese convoy just steaming into Ormoc Bay. Fourteen enemy fighters were hovering over the Japanese convoy of transports and destroyers.

Fired On By Destroyer

Dent's fighters went in. During the ensuing dog fight, Dent became isolated and found himself battling four Japanese Zeros, which kept forcing him down toward the water. However, in ten minutes of maneuvering and firing, he shot down three of the enemy planes and was chasing the fourth all over the bay, but the last Zero ducked over a destroyer which opened up on Dent as he followed across its deck at low level.

One motor caught fire. He managed to climb to 17,500 feet, then bailed out—a neat trick from a Lightning with its lethal tail assembly directly behind the pilot's seat.

Head Mistaken For Coconuts

As he was floating down, Dent said, the Japanese fighter made one strafing pass at him, but missed. "As soon as I hit the water," he continued, "a destroyer came looking for me. I guess they got about 200 feet away, then they stopped. I could see all the nips on the deck. I guess the only thing that saved me was that there were some coconuts floating near me, and they couldn't tell my head from the coconuts.

"It wasn't long after that destroyer left that another Jap plane flew low over me, but did not strafe me. Then another destroyer eased up within 2,000 feet and took a look, but didn't come after me."

40 Miles Through Jap Lines

Dent finally reached the shore and began a 40-mile hike over enemy-occupied Ormoc peninsula, traveling along hidden trails directly through the Japanese lines to American troops.

Back at this base, the captain learned first that guerrilla officers had confirmed his three air victories, thus bringing his score to six and making him an ace, and, second, that orders had arrived for his return to the States after 21 months of overseas duty.

MONEY GIVES A HEADACHE

Leyte, P. I., Nov. 15 (A. P.).—The emergency money the Philippine Commonwealth Government authorized while in exile is giving it one of its biggest headaches. The questions the Government wants answered before adopting a redemption policy are:

How much of this currency, known as "Mountain Money," has been printed by Filipino guerrillas and their civilian leaders? Does this amount exceed that which was authorized by the emergency provincial boards?

Army civil affairs officers, in co-operation with President Sergio Osmena, are trying to find the answers by using the Leyte currency setup as a guinea pig. What they uncover likely will determine the actual exchange value of the emergency notes throughout the Philippines. President Osmena explained that no serial order was kept by the guerrillas in printing the emergency notes from crude carvings on any sort of paper they could scrape together.

U. S. PLANES HIT 14 JAP SHIPS IN MANILA BAY

3 Enemy Warcraft Sunk or Damaged and Floating Dock Destroyed.

AMERICAN VESSEL CRIPPLED

Attacking Force Tears Up Piers in Harbor and at Cavite and Strafes Airfields.

Pearl Harbor, Nov. 15 (A. P.).—Another American carrier plane raid on Japanese shipping and facilities in Manila Bay left fourteen ships—including three warships—sunk or damaged, a floating dock destroyed and at least twenty-eight imperial planes wiped out. The Sunday assault was announced last night by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz. One ship of the American carrier task force was damaged during a Japanese aerial attack.

[Japanese broadcasters said earlier that 800 attacking planes hit the Manila area, and claimed that one American battleship was sunk by suicide pilots east of Luzon Island.]

Admiral Nimitz said that two destroyers in Manila Bay exploded under the vicious American attack. While these were not listed as sunk in the communique, they could be termed probables. A third warship, a light cruiser, was left badly damaged. An estimated eleven cargo ships and oilers either were sunk or left aflame, and a floating dock was torpedoed.

caught on the ground. Eighteen or twenty interceptors were shot down over Luzon, and ten others were destroyed as they attacked the carrier force commanded by Rear Admiral Frederick C. Sherman.

In fresh assaults on Saturday on the Palau Islands, Marine Corps Corsairs sank a small enemy vessel offshore. Hellcats and Liberators bombed Koror, Malakal and Arakabesan islets. A power station on Koror was hit, but the results were not observed.

Iwo Jima, in the Bonin group, only 750 miles south of Tokyo, was bombed by a single Liberator on Saturday, and on Monday planes from Fleet Airwing One bombed various of the Bonins, scoring near misses on an escort vessel and a medium cargo ship. The enemy had planes in the air over the islands, but they did not attack.

MARYLANDERS IN CITED UNIT

Nine From Free State In 7th AAF Maintenance Group

A Seventh AAF Base in the Gilberts (Delayed—AP)—Nine Maryland men are among the maintenance force members of a Seventh AAF medium bomber group cited for outstanding performance of duty by Col. Murray A. Bywater, of Salt Lake City, commanding officer.

The ground crewmen are veterans of four major Seventh AAF blows against the Japs, having participated in the Gilberts, Marshalls, Carolinas and Marianas campaigns.

'Infinite Praise'

"I have infinite praise for, and pride in, those of our men who make up our ground crews for maintaining our airplanes," Colonel Bywater said. "We owe them much more credit than they usually get, and in many cases we owe them our lives. They kept our Seventh AAF B-25 Mitchell bombers flying over thousands of miles of the vast Pacific Ocean, and only those who have flown over the Pacific realize how vast it really is.

"These ground crews have done their jobs well," he added, "and have won the respect of all of us who have had the opportunity of working with them. . . .

The Maryland men named in the commendation included: Pfc. James Lambrow, of 6612 Graceland avenue, Baltimore; Technical Sergeant Charles J. Wenck, of 3142 Aker street, Balitmore; Staff Sergeant Albert J. Hoeck, of 2208 Pelham avenue, Baltimore; Master Sergeant Arvine A. Green, of Route 2, Boonsboro; Pfc. Vance E. Robinson, of Cumberland; Sergt. Burton A. Johnson, of 107 County road, Kensington; Staff Sergeant Lewis H. Adams, of Oldtown; Corporal Edward J. Tokyo Reports Bombing of Iwo

(By the Associated Press)

Iwo island, 750 miles south of Tokyo, was raided Monday by about 10 American planes "consisting of B-29's and B-24's," Tokyo radio reported yesterday.

The broadcast, beamed to Japanese areas, claimed one of the Superforts was damaged and fled "as smoke streamed out." The Federal Communications Commission recorded the broadcast.

(Adm. Chester W. Nimitz at Parl Harbor announced Tuesday that naval aircraft Monday bombed islands in the Bonin group, more than 100 miles nearer Japan than the Volcano archipelago, where Iwo is located. He did not mention the type of planes involved.)

Tokyo radio also reported American raids on objectives from Papan Island, in the Marianas, to Makassar, Celebes, Tuesday. Mas kassar was hit by more than 30 B-24 Liberators, and Babo in Dutch Guinea was bombed by 60 Liberators, the unconfirmed reports said.

Jap Says Supply Task Will Force U. S. To Quit

San Francisco, Nov. 15 (AP)—Admiral Nobumasa Suetsugu, former commander in chief of the Japanese fleet, was quoted by Radio Tokyo today as predicting supply problems would force America to give up the Philippines campaign "within the near future."

The admiral, now a Cabinet adviser, was said by Tokyo to have made the prediction in an article in the newspaper Yomiuri Hochi. The broadcast was recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

Beamed To North America

In a Japanese language broadcast beamed to North America, Tokyo quoted the admiral as writing, "Although the war situation in the Pacific is still extremely grave, it is taking a decided turn. We are faced with a difficult supply problem to replenish the forces at isolated islands.

"But in direct contrast to this situation, the Philippines are large, well-protected islands where supplies can be replenished easily. The enemy's supply route will be stretched and his war strength will dissipate in time.

"The enemy's problems will increase with each advance. It is clear the time will come when the enemy will give up saying, 'I cannot continue under these conditions.'"

Prisoners Taken

Altogether 570 German and Hungarian prisoners were taken during the day, Moscow reported.

The Germans themselves announced withdrawal from Jaszbereny before its occupation was listed in the Soviet night communique broadcast from Moscow and recorded by the Soviet monitor here.

The general nature of the German withdrawal was hinted at in a Berlin broadcast by the military commentator Ernst von Hammer, who said, "East of Budapest German troops, behind a curtain of steel from the fire of hundreds of our guns, have disengaged themselves toward prepared positions to economize their forces."

The commentator referred to Gyomro, only 10 miles southeast of Budapest on the Szolnok-Budapest railway, as "the western pivot of our defense system," and acknowledged that Soviet shock troops already were beating against it. This was supported by the Soviet announcement of the capture of Mende, only two miles from Gyomro.

The German announcer said the garrison at Jaszbereny had been surrounded Tuesday and had to force its way back to a new line in a series of fierce counterattacks, adding that "this resulted in the necessity to abandon the blazing ruins of the town under protection of a rainy night."

Falls in Combat

The Russian communique, however, said Jaszbereny fell in combat, rather than by evacuation, and Moscow dispatches said the skies were clear today, permitting the Red air force to renew its strong attacks on the receding Hungarian front.

By W. W. Hercher

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 16 (AP)—The Red Army, increasing the pace of its assaults aimed toward Budapest, seized the fortress city of Jaszbereny and more than 50 other Hungarian communities yesterday as the Germans fell back in hard-fighting retreats along a 100-mile front stretching from southeast of the capital to the area of Miskolc.

Combination Maneuver

Jaszbereny, a strategic railway center 35 miles east of Budapest, fell to a combination by-passing maneuver and direct frontal assault, Moscow announced this morning.

"Having concentrated in this area large forces of of infantry and tanks, the Germans offered stiff resistance," said the Moscow war bulletin. "The enemy repeatedly tried to throw back our attacking units. However, the Hitlerites' counter-attacks had no success."

The Russians began to outflank the city on the northeast, and then, when the Germans extended themselves to meet this threat, the attackers speared straight into the town and took it in fierce street fighting.

Besides this biggest prize of the day, the Russians recorded other gains right along the line from the railway town of Mende, only 12 miles southeast of Budapest, up to Korom and a group of other communities nestling 10 miles below the North Hungarian center of Miskolc.

With his forces northeast and southeast of Budapest now joined up firmly and advancing generally, Soviet Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky appeared almost ready to make his supreme bid for the capital that is the center of Hungarian national life.

The Russians, methodically shaping their attack and giving notice in effect that Budapest's defense was in its eleventh hour, mentioned only one other front in their communique.

This confirmed Tuesday's announcements by the Bulgarians and Yugoslav partisans that troops of those armies, with Russian aid, had captured Skoplje, big south Yugoslav communications center.

On the rest of the eastern front, comparative quiet prevailed although Berlin reported there was some Russian tank movement south of Ungvar, capital of the Carpatho-Ukraine.

GERMANS QUIT HUNGARIAN CITY

Lose Road Center East of Budapest as Reds Gain.

London, Nov. 15 (A. P.).—German troops have evacuated the important communications center of Jaczbereny, thirty-five miles due east of Budapest, the Berlin radio said today.

The reported loss of the bitterly contested city of 30,000 came after the Red Army wheeled upon the Hungarian capital from several directions and liquidated a German bridgehead east of the Danube and south of Budapest. Moscow said thirty towns had been overrun.

Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's troops, holding fast to their positions within easy medium artillery range of Budapest on the south, speared north and northwest from Monor, and captured Uri and Peteri in gains of three to five miles.

Seizure of Solt and Duna Egyhaza, forty-five and forty-two miles south of Budapest, erased the enemy bridgehead on the east bank of the Danube. The Berlin radio said the Russians hurled three infantry divisions against the Nazis, who withdrew to newly prepared positions on the west bank.

A Moscow dispatch said 1,200 prisoners were taken in the bridgehead battle, and hundreds more of the enemy drowned in an attempt to flee across the river. Approximately 50,000 Germans and Hungarians have been captured since Marshal Malinovsky began his drive on Budapest from southern Hungary last month, it was estimated.

Hungary Main Scene of Action.

Hungary seemed likely to remain the main theater of action on the eastern front, the Moscow dispatch added, for there was little hint of any attempt in the near future to break the stalemate in Poland or East Prussia.

The Russian war bulletin announced the capture of Nagykata, railway town twenty-seven miles east of Budapest and ten miles south of the rail junction of Jaszbereny. Moscow dispatches said yesterday hand-to-hand fighting was taking place in Jaszbereny.

Heves, seventeen miles north east of Jaszbereny, fell to the Russians, and the entire operation had the effect of straightening a curving line stretching eighty miles northeast from the vicinity of Budapest to positions south of the big railway junction of Miskolc.

The Soviet communique said the Red Army has taken 3,600 prisoners in Hungary between November 10 and 13, bringing the total since November 8 to 7,700.

A broadcast communique from Marshal Tito announced that his Yugoslav Partisans had captured Skoplje, important rail junction in southern Yugoslavia and key to the Vardar Valley route through the Balkans. The announcement said the Germans were pursued out of the town, and that 1,700 were killed and 995 captured.

RED SPEAKER ASSAILS JAPS

Says Expansion Policy Led Nation Into War

Moscow, Nov. 15 (AP)—Col. Ivan Tolchenov, Soviet military authority, declared today that Japan had "risked fighting two great powers, the United States and Britain, as a consequence of her long-time policy of expansion," and said that the war in the Pacific was developing unfavorably for Tokyo.

Before a public-lecture audience which included Japanese correspondents and Red army men, Colonel Tolchenov recalled Japanese attacks on the Soviet Union.

Cites 1939 Border Fight

After mentioning the war with the United States and Britain, the Soviet officer continued:

"Japan has also attacked and raided the Soviet Union several times. We may recall the Mongolian border action by the Japanese in 1939, when they were strongly rebuffed. The Soviet Union's peaceful policy has induced Japan to keep the peace with the U. S. S. R."

[Moscow and Tokyo are bound by a non-aggression pact.]

"The outbreak of the German war changed conditions for Japan," said Tolchenov. "The perfidious invasion of the U. S. S. R. by German troops was a favorable phenomenon for the Japanese. Britain, meanwhile, was tied down in the European theater and compelled to keep her main forces there. . . .

Unfavorable For Japs

"Important events are ripening under unfavorable circumstances for Japan. Since the American landing in the Philippines, the battles are becoming stiffer."

Japanese successes in the beginning were due to Japan's closeness to the scene of operations, and the employment of numerically superior forces and the striking "without even a declaration of war," Colonel Tolchenov said.

Now, however, "the balance of power has shifted in favor of the Allies," he said, adding:

"American industry turns out 9,000 planes monthly, while Japanese plants hardly produce more than 1,400 to 1,500 planes in the same period. Even given equal losses, the Allied air forces will continue to grow and exceed the Japanese. At present the United States fleet is two or three times stronger than the Japanese fleet."

Japan Criticized By Another Russian

By Daniel De Luce

Moscow, Nov. 15 (AP)—Col. Ivan Tolchenov, Soviet military authority, said today that the war in the Pacific was developing unfavorably for Japan and recalled to his lecture audience that the Japanese had "attacked and raided the Soviet Union several times."

His listeners included Japanese correspondents and Red army men. (His address came nine days after Premier Marshal Stalin had declared Japan an "aggressive nation." Russia and Japan are at peace under a non-aggression pact.)

1939 Action Recalled

"Japan risked fighting two great powers, the United States and Great Britain, as a consequence of her long-time policy of expansion," Colonel Tolchenov said. "Japan has also attacked and raided the Soviet Union several times. We may recall the Mongolian border action of the Japanese in 1939, when they were strongly rebuffed."

The veteran Red army officer said the Pacific war was passing the first stage of Japan's well-prepared offensive and now was entering the second stage of the Allied counteroffensive. He declared that Japanese sea and air forces were inferior.

Big Events "Ripening"

"The Japanese fleet has not suffered blows sufficient to paralyze its activity, but its losses will greatly affect its possibilities of resistance," he added. "Important events are ripening under unfavorable circumstances for Japan. Since the American landing in the Philippines, the battles are becoming stiffer."

Tolchenov said the Japanese originally conquered the Philippines with an army of 150,000 against American forces numbering barely 40,000.

"The balance of power has shifted in favor of the Allies," he said. "American industry turns out 9,000 planes a month, while Japanese plants hardly produce more than 1,400 or 1,500 in the same period. Even given equal losses, the Allied air forces will continue to grow and exceed the Japanese. At present the United States Fleet is two or three times stronger than the Japanese fleet."

British Warships To Pacific

He noted also the transfer of British warships to the Pacific.

"It is difficult to predict the outcome of the Philippines operations, but the Allies prepared them well and there is reason to believe they will achieve success," he told the rapt audience. "The Soviet Union, which occupied the main German forces on the Eastern front, gave the Allies enough time for preparation for the Pacific."

Russ Demand Seen Met

London, Nov. 15 (AP)—Russia apparently has obtained Allied acquiescence to her demand for return of Soviet citizens rounded up in liberated Europe after forced service in the Germany army or Nazi labor battalions.

Ten thousand Soviet war prisoners and civilians already have arrived at Murmansk from England. A Foreign Office spokesmen said thousands of others would be returned as transportation facilities became available.

The question of what to do with these Russians — especially those captured with German troops—was at one point the subject of a dispute between the Soviet and Britain.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden was understood to have protested that some of the Russian troops, fighting alongside the Germans, had offered some of the stiffest resistance the Allies had encountered.

Russ Paper Comments On Saed Resignation

Moscow, Nov. 15 (AP)—Konstantin Hoffman, political commentator for Red Star, Soviet military organ, asserted today that the recent resignation of Premier Mohammed Saed and his Iranian Cabinet demonstrated that "no government conducting a policy hostile to the U. S. S. R. can ever retain power in Iran."

The Saed Government was criticized by the Russians for refusing to grant oil concessions to the Soviet Union.

Catholic University At Lublin Reopens

Moscow, Nov. 15 (A. P.).—The official Soviet news agency Tass reported today that the Catholic University at Lublin, closed for five years during the German occupation of Poland, had held its first classes after a formal reopening ceremony.

German Army To Be Taught Nazi Doctrine

Indicates Step in Making Wehrmacht Postwar Guerrilla Force.

LONDON, Nov. 15 (AP)—A significant new step in the Nazi-mored in some quarters to have superseded the mysteriously-secluded and silent Adolf Hitler as number one in the Reich.

Close students of Germany here interpreted today's decree as the most important in a Nazi campaign begun some months ago to adapt the German Army to the Nazi pattern of fanatic resistance which would continue, as Hitler put it, "past 12 o'clock"—in the hills and underground. Such resistance would be designed, as Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels said at the founding of the Volkssturm people's army to "make enemy occupation of Germany a veritable hell."

Began Last Spring

This pattern began last Spring when the Nazis created a national Socialist Officers' leadership group attaching political commissars to all Army units, with the purpose of indoctrinating the Army to desperate resistance.

It was followed by replacement of the Army salute with the Nazi "Heil," wholesale shelving of the Army flag, with its conspicuous swastika, for the Nazi banner, and the distribution of promotions and decorations most liberally to the SS and other proved Nazi officers.

And now, according to a western front report from Associated Press Correspondent Franklin Banker, an order has been issued to the German army directing all soldiers to shoot anyone—officer or even close friend—who tries to surrender. The Russians, reporting capture of similar orders on the East Prussian front, said those were signed by Himmler.

Whole Build-up

The whole build-up, said the German expert quoted by the press association, was designed to create a fanatical political army which, unlike the old non-political Wehrmacht, would not give in when militarily defeated.

The army political decree as broadcast by the Transocean Agency wa s called "valid from Oct. 1" and purportedly was signed by Adolf Hitler.

But the Fuehrer himself still remained personally invisible and inaudible as the great "where's Hitler?" mystery spun along in this and other European capitals.

The London Press was filled again with rumors about the fuehrer's possible fate. The bulk of the latest crop was attributed to the Swiss press.

The London Daily Star reported he was suffering from "cerebral thrombosis—a blood clot on the brain."

"A good many stories from neutral countries that Hitler is suffering from comparatively minor maladies are Goebbels-inspired camouflage to hide the grim truth," said the star. "There is no permanent cure for a blood clot on the brain according to London specialists. Its effect is to deprive that part of the brain surrounding the clot. This part of the brain dies."

British Subs Sink 24 More Jap Ships

Altogether 69 Enemy Vessels Destroyed In Five Days—158 Nip Ships Hit Since First of Year.

LONDON, Nov. 15 (AP)—British submarines in Far Eastern waters have sunk another 24 Japanese ships, bringing to 69 the total announced destroyed in five days, the Admiralty said tonight.

Sink 45 Ships

A communique Nov. 11 announced the sinking of 45 ships.

The latest toll included 23 supply ships and an anti-submarine vessel, the latter intercepted in the East Java sea south of Celebes and sunk by torpedo.

Surfaced submarines also shelled the harbor on the island of Cap Nicobar, an admiralty communique said, damaging installations and sinking craft along the jetty.

Five submarines were singled out for mention in the newest attacks which mark a rapid intensification of the Royal Navy's campaign against Japan.

Since First of Year

Since the beginning of the year it was declared British ships have sunk 158 Japanese vessels, including one Japanese cruiser of the Kuma class, and craft ranging from large supply ships to anti-submarine boats.

It was believed that a 7,000 ton aircraft carrier sank after being torpedoed and at least one other cruiser was damaged by a torpedo.

Bombardment of shore installations and ports as the submarines run close to strike at the supply ships hugging th ecoast has been a frequent feature of the forays. The submarines also have surfaced often to shell enemy ships.

10,000 LIBERATED REDS REPATRIATED

Moscow, Nov. 15 (A. P.).—A Tass News Agency dispatch from Murmansk said today that 10,000 former Russian war prisoners and civilians had arrived in that northern port on two transports from England. The group included children whose parents had been executed by the Germans and women forced into slave labor in enemy factories, Tass said. Presumably they were freed by the Allied armies in the invasion of western Europe.

Nazis Tighten Control Over Reich Army

New York, Nov. 15—"Hitler is alive, but is in Japan, and made the trip in a submarine," according to one of the theories circulating among doughboys of the American First Army in Germany, Blue Network Correspondent Gordon Fraser said today in a broadcast from the front.

London, Nov. 15 (AP)—The Nazi party, using the name of long-silent Adolf Hitler, clamped a tighter hold on the retreating German army today.

A new decree ordered all German officers and noncommissioned officers who were members of the Nazi party to "educate their men in the Nazi sense," both on duty and off duty. Previously, men were required to leave the party during their periods in the armed service.

Prominent In London Papers

The decree was broadcast by the Transocean Propaganda Service.

The London dailies all gave prominent space today to the various Hitler reports.

The London Times declared there no longer seemed any doubt that Heinrich Himmler was the acting leader of Germany, adding that no one had appeared to challenge extension of his powers.

Didn't Sign New Decree

Curiously, the name of Himmler was conspicuously absent from the new decree that "all soldiers are now permitted to take over a function in the (Nazi) party or its branches."

In addition to Hitler it was signed by Hermann Goering—once No. 2 Nazi but himself so long silent that he, too, is now subject to "ill, mad or dead" rumors. Other signatories were Field Marshal General Wilhelm Keitel and Chief of Chancellory Martin Bormann.

The Star reported that Hitler was suffering from "cerebral thrombosis—a blood clot on the brain."

"A good many stories from neutral countries that Hitler is suffering from comparatively minor maladies are Goebbels-inspired camouflage to hide the grim truth," said the Star. "There is no permanent cure for a blood clot on the brain, according to London specialists. Its effect is to deprive that part of the brain surrounding the clot. This part of the brain dies."

Himmler Heads All Reich Defense Forces, Report

Zurich, Switzerland, Nov. 15 (AP)—The newspaper La Suisse quoted "a well-informed source" today as saying Heinrich Himmler had been appointed commander in chief of the defensive forces of Germany during Hitler's illness.

Himmler already was chief of the Volkssturm, or People's Home Guard, and virtually all the German armed forces are now on the defensive. It was not clear whether the informant meant to convey that the Gestapo chief headed all the armed forces.

Spain to Be Barred From Peace Meeting

Statement of British Official Indicates Development of Stern United Nations Policy Toward Neutrals Indifferent To Allied Cause.

By Alex H. Singleton

LONDON, Nov. 15 (AP)—Development of a stern United Nations policy toward neutrals who were indifferent to the Allied cause emerged today with the disclosure that Spain—long pro-Axis—would be barred from the peace table.

Before Commons

Richard Law, under-secretary of state for foreign affairs, in language uunusually plain for dealing with a diplomatic situation of the future, laid down before Commons this stand of Britain.

"So far as the governments are concerned, they see no reason why any country which has not made a positive contribution to the United Nations' war effort should be represented at the peace conference or at any discussions on the peace settlements."

His statement generally was regarded in diplomatic quarters here as reflecting the views of the United States and Soviet Russia but there remained some uncertainty over interpretation of a "positive contribtuion."

It seemed clear, however, that the policy would affect Argentina and Eire as well as Spain. tI left at least four other countries—Sweden, Switzerland, Portugal and Turkey—up in the air.

Turkey Part Way

Turkey went part of the way toward restoring herself in Allied good graces by belatedly breaking diplomatic and economic relations with Germany—but only after Prime Minister Churchill declared on May 24 that the Turks could have obtained a stronger voice by a more active role.

Portugal, Britain's oldest ally; and Sweden, geographically vulnerable to German assault—like Turkey—traded with the Axis until the tide of war turned to Allied favor.

Switzerland—long aloof from European wars—appeared in a somewhat better position for claiming a peace table seat, partly because of her established position of neutrality, partly because of her service as an international go-between.

The attitude of Britain was reflected today in the London press over the failure of Eire to give a clear-cut reply on the question of whether she would provide sanctuary for war criminals.

The express said editorially that there was nothing in Eire's answer to prevent a headline of the future from reading "Hitler and Himmler Fly to Dublin," the telegraph called it "A Matserpiece of Evasion.

Law's statement came in response to a demand by Tom Driberg for assurance that neither Generalissimo Francisco Franco nor any representative of his regime would be invited to the peace discussions.

Long, Hard Fight Is Seen Ahead By Churchill

London, Nov. 15 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill, home from a tour of French battlefronts, told the House of Commons today that extremely heavy fighting "will certainly last for a good long time."

His statement was in reply to James Duncan, Conservative, who asked that men over 40 in "static" military stations be released from the army.

"I need hardly remind you that the static stations are necessary for the prosecution of the war," Churchill replied. "Officers and men over 40 of low medical category who are employed there release officers and men for more active duty.

Shortage Of Manpower

"In view of the present shortage of manpower I regret that the present arrangement for indefinite release from the forces cannot be altered."

Insistence by Duncan that the matter be reviewed in the light of new facts brought this statement from Churchill:

"The new fact that stares one in the face is that extremely heavy fighting is continuing week by week and will certainly last for a good long time."

Rule Expected On Volunteers

London, Nov. 15 (AP)—Sweden was reported here today ready to make a decision soon on permitting the formation of a Swedish volunteer corps to fight the Germans in Norway.

A movement inside Sweden to persuade the Government to sanction the formation of a volunteer corps gained impetus with the liberation of the first Norwegian territory. A London source said the volunteer plan was discussed by members of the Swedish and Norwegian governments recently at Stockholm.

Leaders of the movement were reported to be Gunnar Andersson, vice-president of the Swedish Trades Union Congress, and George Branting, noted Swedish attorney.

Volunteers In Finland

A Norwegian Government source here commented that Sweden had permitted volunteers to fight in Finland and added, "There is no reason why Swedish volunteers should not be allowed to fight in Norway. The Norwegian Government should have no objection."

There appeared no immediate prospect of Sweden declaring war on Germany, despite strained relations.

The Yorkshire Post commented that Sweden, with one of the best winter armies in Europe, "could carry a large, useful and chivalrous share of the sacrifices yet to be made, at a time when Nazi brutality may be expected, even among the German people, to reach its height."

R.A.F. Hammers Berlin With 2-Ton Blockbusters

Night Raid Follows Daylight Attack on Ruhr Target

LONDON, Nov. 16 (Thursday) (AP).—A fleet of Royal Air Force Mosquito bombers hit Berlin with 4,000-pound blockbusters last night, the Air Ministry announced early today.

The night raid followed a daylight attack by R. A. F. heavy bombers on a synthetic oil plant at Dortmund in the Ruhr.

American bombers remained aground yesterday in Britain, but unescorted forces of Liberators and Fortresses from Italy bombed targets in the region of Linz and Innsbruck, Austria.

The Admiralty disclosed that Wildcats off a British Navy carrier swooped into Trondheim Fjord in Norway Tuesday, sank one trawler, set another afire and bombed shore installations.

RAF TRIED TO SINK THE TIRPITZ IN '42

Results Of Intricate Mission To Norway Never Learned

London, Nov. 15 (AP)—The RAF divulged a two-and-half-year-old secret tonight, announcing that it first tried to sink the Tirpitz on the night of April 27, 1942, in a daring, intricate operation that almost succeeded.

But the RAF then did not have 12,000-pound bombs, the missiles with which an RAF force last Sunday morning turned over the Tirpitz and sank her in Tromose Fjord, and the force was unable to determine how badly the German battleship was damaged in that first attack.

The Tirpitz then nestled under a towering cliff in Foetten Fjord, an inlet of Trondheim Fjord.

Ack-Ack Batteries

On the cliffs and all around the inlet there were powerful anti-aircraft batteries. Near by was a fighter airfield, and materials for a dense smoke screen surrounded the Tirpitz.

The Tirpitz herself had anti-aircraft guns and lying two miles north of her in Lo Fjord were the heavy cruiser Prince Eugen and the pocket battleship von Scherr with their anti-aircraft guns.

A Norwegian air expert studied the weather and gave the word for a fleet of Lancasters and Halifaxes to take off. His predictions were perfect and the fleet went through clouds over the North Sea and found clear sky over the target.

Mines Also Used

The bombers attacked her not only with the armor-piercing bombs then available, but with mines and depth charges, which were dropped on the cliff and rolled down between the shore and the ship in an attempt to damage her below the waistline.

One force went in high to bomb both the batteries and the Tirpitz and was followed by a Halifax force going in below the cliffs.

Black smoke came up through the white smoke screen, but definite results were not learned.

Rocket Raid On U. S. Unlikely

London, Nov. 15 (AP)—The Germans apparently have become convinced that time remaining in this war is too short to permit development of a rocket of sufficient size and power to reach America, a usually well-informed source said last night.

Experiments looking toward this objective were abandoned after many months, he said, and the V-2 rockets currently in use were substituted for the 20-tonners the Germans had hoped to perfect. The material and time wasted on the huge rockets seriously delayed production of the smaller weapons, he said.

The Germans made a heavy attack on southern England and London during the night with their first vengeance weapon, the flying bomb, and a number of deaths resulted.

Lend-Lease Change Urged

London, Nov. 15 (AP)—A warning against letting American lend-lease—the lifeline that helped save Britain in 1941—strangle this country's bid for post-war markets was voiced today by the Daily Mail, one of London's largest newspapers.

The Mail urged the Government to speed discussions with the United States looking toward a revision of the 1941 White Paper under which Britain pledged she would not employ in the manufacture of exports any lend-lease materials whose use was restricted in the United States.

Hugh Dalton, president of the Board of Trade, told the House of Commons yesterday that these discussions now are under way. Deploring delay in the talks, the Mail suggested that "now that the Presidential election is over they should be expedited if British trade is not to recede to the vanishing point."

"It would indeed be ironical," the Mail said, "if the lifeline thrown us in 1941 served only to strangle us in 1944 and 1945."

Noel Coward Recalls No Brooklyn Troops

London, Nov. 15 (AP)—The United States Army newspaper Stars and Stripes in a dispatch from its Paris office quoted Noel Coward as stating that he did not recall mentioning any Brooklyn troops in his book, "Middle East Diary."

Coward, who had been accused of slurring Brooklyn's fighting men with a reference to a slightly wounded Brooklyn boy "in tears amid the alien corn," told the Stars and Stripes reporter: "I have no copy of the diary here but I do not recall any group which could be described as Brooklyn. Maybe on one of my visits to hospitals I met some boys from Brooklyn and I said they were homesick. But in hospitals most boys of all armies long to be in their own home."

Eden Calls For Realism In World Affairs

Declares Peace Depends Mainly On Collaboration Of Big Powers.

LEAMINGTON, Eng., Nov. 15 (AP)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden calling for realism in international relations, declared today that maintenance of the peace after victory rested mainly on the collaboration of the big powers.

He reflected the view expressed a week ago by Premier-Marshal Stalin that peace could not be achieved without harmony among the United States, Britain and Russia. But Eden added France to the list. He said that such a move by the leaders could not be termed "dictation" of the big powers.

For Understanding

Eden bid, in a speech to his constituents, for the understanding of other nations with these words: "There is nothing I would welcome more than the collaboration and help of all peace-loving states large and small. But we must be realistic, and the truth is that unless these great powers can work together the foundations of peace are not there."

Eden said France, Russia, the United States and Britain must work together, understand one another and resolve their problems if a long period of peace was to follow the war.

Like Stalin he pointed to the Dumbarton Oaks conference as a means of dealing with economic and social questions on an international basis.

Find Means

"We have to find ways and means of easing the economic stresses and strains, for it is by accentuating and using them that the powers of evil in the dictatorship countries have been able to bring about this war," Eden said.

"Supposing that before the war we four had been in close harmony and agreement. The Germans could never have been able to launch their offensive against the world and if we are together afterwards they will never be able to start this business again."

Powers' Dictation Aim Disclaimed

Leamington, Eng., Nov. 15 (AP)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told constituents in an address today that post-war collaboration between the United States, Russia, France and Britain could not be termed "a great power dictation" to the rest of the world.

He said these countries must work together, understand one another and resolve their problems if a long period of peace was to grow out of the war.

"It must, if all civilization is not to be destroyed," he asserted. "There is nothing I would welcome more than the collaboration and help of all peace-loving states, large or small.

"But we must be realistic, and the truth is that unless these great powers can work together the foundations of peace are not there."

British Drive Beyond River West Of Forli

Seize Foothold on Highway Nine, Leading To Bologna.

ROME, Nov. 15. (AP)—The British Eighth Army, advancing from small bridgeheads established across the Montone river west of Forli, drove forward to a general line two miles north of a loop of the river and made good progress elsewhere along the eastern sector of the Italian front, the Allied command announced today.

After crossing the Marecchia, Eighth Army units seized a foothold on broad Highway Nine, leading to Bologna, at a point two miles northwest of Forli, capturing Monte Poggiolo and the village of Villagrappa south of the road.

Resistance Slackens

Resistance generally seemed to slacken in the hills below Highway Nine. Allied forces were in contact with the Germans about 1,000 yards northwest of San Varano, which is on the southern outskirts of Forli. An advance of 2,000 yards was made in this area. An enemy rearguard was liquidated and 20 prisoners were captured.

In the hills west of Castrocaro, southwest of Forli, Polish troops occupied Monte Ceretto and captured more high ground still farther west.

Northwest of Forli opposition stiffened as British troops pushed on beyond San Tome. The Germans brought new self-propelled guns and tanks into this area and they were believed to be digging in not far beyond the Montone, probably along the canalized river Cosina, which crosses Highway Nine and joins the Montone farther north.

Little Activity

There was little activity south of Ravenna on the Adriatic coast, but patrols continued to prod German positions in the pine woods north of the Ghiaia canal. The Germans were shelling the costal highway heavily.

On the Fifth Army front there was little activity but Indian troops took Monte San Bartolo from the enemy. This height affords observation of the main avenue of approach to Modigliana about two miles to the northeast. This sector, the extreme right flank of the Fifth Army front, is 15 miles southwest of Forli.

Rain again spread over the entire front, with snow in the higher ground. More rain was predicted.

8th Army Crosses Montone River

Rome, Nov. 15 (AP)—Eighth Army forces have crossed the Montone river more than two miles northwest of Forli on the highway to Bologna, Allied headquarters announced today.

In the Apennine foothills to the south the Germans made a slight withdrawal. It was believed they would attempt to hold positions along the canalized River Cosina, which the highway crosses just west of the Montone.

The crossing of the Montone represented a widening advance by the Eighth Army up the Po Valley toward Faenza, next major city on the highway.

Troop Trials Increase

Meanwhile, Allied headquarters announced that a captured German order disclosed that court-martial cases had increased from 25 to 150 in one month in the enemy's 362nd Infantry Division operating in Italy.

The order, signed by a Major General Greiner, directed officers to impress on the troops that "capital punishment is passed on desertion, looting, cowardice and self-mutilation."

Innsbruck Bombed

In the air war, American Liberators flying unescorted bombed objectives around Linz and Innsbruck, in former Austria. Heavy clouds forced bombardiers to use instruments. Moderate flak was encountered, but no interceptor was sighted.

Linz is on the Danube, 98 miles west of Vienna. Shipbuilding, machinery and chemical plants there nurture the German war machine. Innsbruck, capital of Tyrol, is 60 miles southwest of Munich and a rail center leading to the Brenner Pass route to Italy.

Nazi Courts Martial Busier

Cases in a Division in Italy Rise From 25 to 150 in Month

ROME, Nov. 15 (AP).—Allied headquarters announced today that a captured German order disclosed that courts-martial cases had increased from 25 to 150 in one month in the enemy's 362d Infantry Division operating in Italy.

The order, signed by Major General Greiner, directed officers to impress on the troops that "capital punishment is passed on desertion, looting, cowardice and self-multilation."

Turk Shipping Curbed

Istanbul, Nov. 14 (AP—Delayed). Without explanation the Government today ordered Turkish Black Sea shipping confined to ports from sunset to sunrise. A similar order imposed last spring was lifted during the summer.

Allied Armies Form Juncture Near Kalemyo

Chinese in North Burma Prepare for Assault On Bhamo.

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 15 (AP)—Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's command announced today that a juncture had been made in northwestern Burma between troops of the Fifth Indian Division, advancing eastward toward Kalemyo from the Tiddim area, and East African forces who fought their way down from the north. The two now combining their strength in a two-way assault on Kalemyo.

The main body of the Fifth Indian Division continued its drive on Kalemyo and cleared resistance east of the blockades on the Tiddim-Kalemyo road at a point eight miles short of the Japanese-held town, the Allied daily communique said.

African Forces

The main east African forces, driving down the Kabaw and Kale valleys, ran into strong resistance six miles north of Kalemyo.

In North Burma Chinese troops two miles northeast of Bhamo were held to only slight advances as they prepared for an all-out assault on the town. Other Chinese units to the east pushed southward and occupied a village four miles east of Bhamo.

The British 36th Division made slight gains against strong enemy natural defenses in the Myitkyina-Mandalay railway corridor to the west, comprising the right wing of the Allied southward offensive to clear a land route to China. Chinese troops in the center of the drive continued patrol action in the Shwegu area on the south bank of the Irrawaddy river.

Subs Turned Into Freighters

While serving with the Japs he was in Kobe, Japan; Shanghai, China, and finally in Singapore, where he saw three Italian submarines which brought Axis cargo from Bortleaux.

"Their heavy torpedoes and torpedo tubes were removed," he declared, "and the submarines were filled with tons of tin, machine-gun models, special bombs and new brands of small German tanks and new radar and important passengers, including three German engineers and a Jap colonel who had been all over the German war theater in Europe."

The submarines were reloaded with rubber, but they never got a chance to leave Jap ports "and I believe they were scuttled when Italy became a cobelligerent with you Allies."

Two Warships Scuttled

Among ships scuttled in Japan were two small warships, the Lepanto and the Carlotte, and the 20,000-ton liner Conte Verde and, "I hope, the three submarines."

Commenting on Jap propaganda, he said: "Jap treatment of natives improved during our stay in China and the Indies. I must say that in captured Chinese ports some of the Chinese are taking to the Jap propaganda. To help, in the summer of 1943 the Japs were giving back factories to Chinese to operate and naturally some of the moneyed Chinese were making money."

He saw white prisoners in Singapore. "They were working parties and those I saw looked quite fit and did not appear mistreated."

Jap Language Spread

Singapore Rebuilt, Nazi Subs In Jap Ports, Italian Says

By Eugene Burns

Colombo, Ceylon, Nov. 10 (AP—Delayed)—An Italian officer who worked for the Japanese navy told today how Singapore was rebuilt and how Italian submarines hauled special German military equipment and German engineers to Japan.

In short—he relayed the last informed word out of Japanese-occupied territory. His recital contained:

A warning that some natives are believing Jap propaganda; a conviction that the Japs "are operating, as you say, with shoe strings," and that German submarines are

There are unexplainable paradoxes. "Even until September 1, 1943, I saw American movies showing in Singapore theaters. Also many English plates and street signs were not removed. But one thing I noticed—they were spreading very much the teaching of the Japanese language."

Jap cocksureness of winning the war was diminishing by the summer of 1943, "and after drinking saki (a warm rice wine) Jap officers expressed worries about American production and the absence of food in their homeland."

Chinese Face Gravest Crisis In Seven Years

Japs Threaten to Invade Hinterland Province Of Kweichow.

CHUNGKING, Nov. 15, (AP)—The Japanese offensive in South China, now threatening to include invasion of the hinterland province of Kweichow, confronted the Chinese tonight with the gravest military crisis in more than seven years of war.

Cabinet Spokesman P. H. Chang admitted the seriousness of Chinese reverses, but declared 'we shall fight on as determinedly as ever."

The Chinese high command said the Japanese, continuing their advance with reinforcements, now were only six miles from Ishan, station on the Kwangsi-Kweichow provincial railway 43 miles west of Liuchow.

This left the Japanese some 80 miles from the border of Kweichow province, which lies east of Yunnan and south of Szechwan, the provinces in which Kunming and Chungking itself are situated.

Kwangsi-Kweichow Railway

The Kwangsi-Kweichow railway runs northwest from Liuchow towards Kweiyang, strategic point on the supply route from Kunming to Chungking.

The Japanese also were striking toward Lccheng, 40 miles northwest of Liuchow, evidently to guard the flank of their operations on the railway. The Chinese communique said they still were short of their objective, but did not say exactly where they were.

The Irrawaddy front battle converged from the east and south of Hsincheng, which is on a highway to Ishan, and many quarters in Chungking express belief that the Japanese had decided to invade Kweichow before completion of their avowed program to link their forces in China and Indo-China.

Some observers here attributed Chinese reverses not only to poor equipment of the Chinese armies but to the fact that the Japanese have massed the greatest aggregation of strength they ever has employed in China with the open aim of knocking this country clear out of the war.

JAPS NEARING KEY IN CHINESE DRIVE

Chungking, Nov. 15 (A. P.).—Japanese troops drove within six miles of Ishan, important station on the Kwangsi-Kweichow railway, forty-three miles west of fallen Liuchow, in an advance which might develop into an invasion of the hinterland province of Kweichow, the Chinese High Command announced tonight. Reinforced after a temporary halt, the enemy resumed the advance yesterday, and was converging from the east and south on Hsincheng, on the motor road to Ishan.

Because of the directing of the drive, the belief grew here that the enemy planned to invade Kweichow and give such an operation priority over the plan to link with forces from French Indo-China for the establishment of an unbroken Trans-continental line. Another Japanese column striking toward Locheng, forty miles northwest of Liuchow, apparently in an effort to guard the right flank of the advance along the Kwangsi-Kweichow railway, was still halted southeast of its objective, the Chinese said.

Liang Han-chao, Minister of Information, said today that the final answer to the question of whether there was any prospect of agreement in negotiations between the Chungking Government and the Chinese communists "can only come from Yenan," capital of communist China. He told foreign correspondents that the recent return to Chungking of the communist delegate, Gen. Chou En-lai, one of the communists' "Big Three" was a clear indication that negotiations were continuing.

K. C. Wu, Foreign Office spokesman, commented that Premier Joseph V. Stalin's recent reference to Japan as an aggressive nation "can be taken as an indication that Russia will have closer co-operation with China."

U. S. ACTION PUTS CHILE IN PLIGHT

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 15 (A. P.).—The newspaper La Hora, which frequently expresses the viewpoint of the Government, said today that Chile was threatened with a serious problem as a result of cancellation of copper contracts by the United States Commercial Company—formerly the Metals Reserve Agency—effective next January 31.

The newspaper declared that Chile had increased production of copper and other minerals greatly to meet American war requirements "and it would be unjust to accept this sudden suspension of purchases without allowing time for adaptation of Chilean industry to changed conditions."

The Chilean mining industry employs 30,000 men and its taxes supply about one-third of the national Government.

The Government has made no statement on the subject, but several cabinet meetings have been held, and Marcial Mora, Ambassador in Washington, has been instructed to negotiate with the United States Government for an extension of the contracts until January, 1946.

Three French-owned copper mining companies in northern Chile announced last night that they would cease operations on January 15. The three firms employ 3,000.

Spanish Exiles Plan Meeting in Mexico

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 15 (AP)—A session of the Spanish Republican Cortes in exile was called tonight by Diego Martinez Barrio, last president of the parliamentary body, for January 10 in Mexico City.

The session, for the purpose of organizing an absentee Republican government, was convoked at a secret meeting of members of the permanent commission of the Cortes.

Barrio, just before the meeting, said: "The time still is a bit far off before the dictatorship falls but Franco is condemned and eventually he must go."

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 15 (AP)—A commission from the Armour Institute of Chicago began preliminary work today on an industrial survey of Mexico that will continue throughout 1945. The commission, headed by Dr. Francis Goodwin, was contracted for by the Bank of Mexico in connection with the nation's industrialization program.

RAF Plane Completes 1st Pacific-Line Flight

Montreal, Nov. 15 (AP)—The first round-trip flight of the new Pacific air service of the Royal Air Force Transport Command was completed today. The Liberator "Commando" arrived here from Australia after a journey of 23,500 miles, completed in four days 16 hours and 10 minutes of flying time.

The outward flight from Canada took 56 hours and 57 minutes, airborne time, and the homeward flight was completed in 55 hours and 13 minutes.

The Commando carried 20 passengers and a maximum load of urgent war freight and mail when it arrived here.

Flying Boat Base Set In Middle Of Desert

New York, Nov. 15 (AP)—Flying boats in the middle of the desert are no mirage in Australia.

Incongruous as it may seem, Catalinas land and take off in the very heart of the desert scrub country of Victoria, southernmost state "Down Under." It was Lake Boga, a saucer-shaped body of water, about two miles in diameter, that offered a perfect oasis for the flying boats when the Australian seaboard was threatened by the advancing Japanese.

According to an article in the November issue of Plane Talk, the base was built in 1942 at a cost of more than $1,000,000. It has slipways, hangars, work shops, power houses and fuel stores.

Pope Decries Nazi Brutality

(By the Associated Press)

Pope Pius XII denounced the Nazis for their brutal subjugation of Warsaw in a statement issued yesterday, the British radio reported in a broadcast recorded last night by NBC.

The Pope was quoted as stating "whoever feels the smallest spark of humanity and justice cannot help but be astounded and appalled" by the Germans' conduct in the Polish capital. He added that Warsaw's citizens had suffered "indescribable physical and moral hardships' 'and that women and children in the city were in need of immediate help.

RELIEF SHIP IN JAPAN

The arrival of a relief ship for Allied prisoners of war was reported by the Japanese last night, the Associated Press disclosed. Radio Tokyo, in a broadcast recorded here by the Federal Communications Commission, said that the Japanese vessel, Hakusan Maru, which loaded some 2,000 tons of supplies for Allied prisoners at Nakhodka, Siberia, had arrived in Kobe.

Sadao Iguchi, spokesman for the Japanese Board of Information, was quoted as saying that the relief goods would be delivered to the "American internees in Japan, China and the southern regions as soon as possible."

NAZI RISE LAID TO PEACE PACT

Senate Group Says Versailles Treaty Left Industry Intact

NOV 16 1944

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—A Senate subcommittee studying safeguards against future German aggression criticized the Versailles treaty today for leaving "intact the industrial strength which was the root of (German) military power."

The Military Affairs subcommittee on War Mobilization, headed by Senator Kilgore (D., W. Va.), made the assertion in Part II of its study on cartels and national security. Part I, released Monday, had recommended destruction of Germany's industrial strength and the breaking up of "the monopolies and cartels which are the artery of supply in the Nazi system."

Evaded Disarmament

The whole trend of economic developments following the first World War aided the Germans in evading the disarmament provisions of the Versailles treaty, the 90-page brochure asserted, adding: "Numerous instances have been documented in the hearings before the committee which leave no doubt that violation of the treaty began almost as soon as the war had ended."

Cartel Groups Make Bargains

The Senate group also said, "the emergence of consolidated and powerful monopolistic interests in American, French and British industry made it possible for Germany's cartel groups to strike a series of bargains and cartel agreements which resulted in virtual elimination of competition in vast segments of world industry, while at the same time fortifying the spheres of influence which the German groups had regained."

Many of those cartel arrangements have been spread on the record by the Senate Patent Committee, the Truman War Investigating Committee and the Kilgore group. High lights of those investigations over the past three years were summarized in the current report, which Herbert Schimmel, chief investigator, said merely was intended to document the committee's recommendations of Monday.

Senators Cool Toward Sharing Treaty Power

Some Favorable to Changing Constitution So House Can Also Approve Treaties Disapprove Action Now—Difficulties Of Obtaining Amendment.

By Ernest B. Vaccaro

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP)—A revived proposal to permit ratification of treaties by a majority vote of House and Senate ran into opposition today in the Senate foreign relations committee.

Oppose Action Now

Even some members favorable to setting aside the constitutional requirement that a two-thirds majority of the Senate approve treaties opposed action at this time.

They took the view that it would be more difficult to get the Senate to vote two to one to change the rules than it would be to get the same majority to ratify a treaty.

The issue was revived by an appeal from Chairman Bloom (D-NY) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee for Republican support for his proposed constitutional amendment to permit ratification by a majority vote of each House.

Bloom argued that exclusive of the House from treaty consideration "leaves the direct representatives of the people without anything to say."

"Academic Discussion"

Senator George (D-Ga), ranking member of the Senate Committee told reporters he regarded the matter "as an academic discussion."

"Any international peace organiaztion or treaty that does not have the support of at least two-thirds of the American people and of the Senators representing them wouldn't have much hope for success," George asserted.

"There isn't the slightest justification for a change in the fundamental constitutional system at a time when we are trying to work out far-reaching international agreements."

This is the view previously expressed by the committee chairman, Senator Connally (D-Tex) who is expected back in Washington next week.

The Senate judiciary committee has kept pigeonholed for months four proposals by Senator Gillette (D-Iowa) calling for constitutional amendments to set aside the two-thirds Senate majority requirement. One would premit a simple majority of the Senate to ratify. Another would allow ratification by a majority of both Houses.

Obstacles Listed

The obstacles, as Connally and other members of the committee see them, are:

1. Adoption of a constitutional amendment requires approval by a two-thirds majority of both Houses and approval by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states. They estimate it would require a minimum of two years to put one through.

2. Action approving an international peace organization with force to resist aggression should be sought as soon as its nature has been determined fully.

3. Prolonged debate over a proposal to set aside a constitutional prerogative of the Senate might arouse bitterness that would threaten peace proposals themselves.

"I fear it would be much more difficult to get the Senate to change the rules by a two-thirds vote than it would be to get it to ratify a treaty it has before it for examination," George said.

IRISH NOTE GIVES REFUGEE POSITION

Text Of Refusal To Bar Axis Figures Made Public

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—The Irish legation tonight made public the memorandum in which Eire rejected an American request for a promise that Axis war refugees would not be given sanctuary in Ireland.

The memorandum originally was delivered to American Minister David Gray at Dublin early last month. The State Department let it be known yesterday that it felt Eire did not go far enough in giving assurances against harboring German war criminals or other enemy people who might be able to flee from the Reich.

Continue Pressure

The United States and other Allied governments are continuing to urge Ireland and other neutrals to make their assurances more exact and definite.

The Irish memorandum said:

"1. The Irish Government notes that the right to grant asylum is not in question and they feel that the United States Government will understand that the Irish Government can give no assurance which would preclude them from exercising that right should justice, charity or honor or the interest of the nation so require.

Points To Lack Of Code

"2. The Irish Government wishes, moreover, to point to the absence of a comprehensive international code applicable to the subject matter of the request of the United States Government and to the lack of a generally recognized court of procedure for judicial determination of individual cases.

"3. On the other hand, since the present war began it has been the uniform practice of the Irish Government to deny admission to all aliens whose presence would be at variance with the policy of neutrality or detrimental to the interests of the Irish people, or inconsistent with the desire of the Irish people to avoid injury to the interests of friendly states, and when such aliens land they are deported to their country of origin as soon as possible. It is not intended to alter this practice."

Netherlanders Will Fight To Liberate Their Indies

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—Plans to raise a Netherland army to aid in the liberation of the Netherlands Indies were disclosed today by Netherland officials here.

Maj. Gen. N. L. W. van Straten, Chief of Staff to the Commander in Chief of the Netherlands Indies Army, conferred with Netherland officials en route to London, where the recruiting plan is being formulated.

General van Straten will begin recruiting in the Netherlands and troops will join existing forces now operating in the Southwest Pacific under Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

For nearly a year General van Straten's men conducted guerrilla warfare against the Japanese on Timor. Earlier he had defended Dili against overwhelming Japanese forces until half of his small band of several hundred men had lost their lives.

Adm. Ingram Takes Over As Head of Atlantic Fleet

Transfer From Ingersoll Takes Place in Washington

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP).—Admiral Jonas H. Ingram, formerly commander of the 4th Fleet, today took over as commander in chief, Atlantic Fleet, succeeding Admiral Royal E. Ingersoll. Admiral Ingersoll departed to assume his new assignment as commander, Western Sea Frontier, in which he will have the status of a deputy commander in chief, United States Fleet, and deputy chief of naval operations.

The ceremonies took place on board the Atlantic Fleet commander's flagship at the Washington Navy Yard. In separate ceremonies—because Admiral Ingram's plane was late—the admirals read their respective orders and the flag of the former commander in chief was hauled down and Admiral Ingram's flag was hoisted to the mainmast.

Visitors witnessing the ceremonies, held on the quarter deck with the ship's company and staff at attention, included Vice-Admiral Richard S. Edwards, deputy chief of naval operations; Vice-Admiral Patrick N. L. Bellinger, commander, Air Force, Atlantic Fleet, and Rear Admiral F. L. Reichmuth, commandant, Washington Navy Yard.

LST, Veteran Of Three Campaigns, Comes Home

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—The LST 208, veteran of three major amphibious assaults in as many seas, has come home the first tank-landing ship to return from the European war, the navy announced today.

Since her launching in June, 1943, at Seneca, Ill., the 310-foot invasion carrier has cruised 35,000 miles.

Her first assignment was with the amphibious forces in North Africa for the jump into Sicily. In August, 1943, the 208 went to the Indian Ocean to land tanks on Arakan in support of British troops.

That action over, she returned to England. She hit the Normandy beaches on V-day and subsequently shuttled huge amounts of supplies across the Channel.

Lieut. Audrye Strickland, of Atlanta, is captain of the vessel.

Wilhelmina Thanks Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP).—Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands expressed gratitude to President Roosevelt today for his "active help in order that relief be brought with the least possible delay" to her country. A message from the Queen, released by the State Department, said: "The suffering in that part of the country which is not yet liberated is daily growing more and more terrible as winter sets in."

EXPORT SUBSIDIES RESTORED BY U. S.

Program Revived To Help Wheat And Cotton

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—The Government today reestablished pre-war export subsidy programs designed to give American cotton and wheat competitive equality in world markets.

The War Food Administration announced that the Government will offer to pay 4 cents a pound, gross weight, on export sales of cotton, and from 6 to 34 cents a bushel on wheat.

Sold Abroad At Lower Price

Congress recently authorized the sale of American farm products abroad at prices below those prevailing in domestic markets as one means of assuring this country a share in foreign markets and of preventing the accumulation of price-depressing farm surpluses.

Government war food programs have supported prices of many American farm products above world levels. Hence, such subsidies will be used to bring prices of affected commodities into line with competing commodities produced in other agricultural countries.

The cotton export program will not affect lend-lease shipments of Great Britain until the war is over, or relief shipments of wheat to war-liberated areas during their period of rehabilitation.

Wheat Subsidies

The wheat subsidies include:

For export by water from Atlantic or Gulf ports, 34 cents; for exports by water from Pacific Coast ports, 29 cents; and for export by rail 6 cents.

The WFA said that because of shortages of shipping space, export sales of wheat and wheat flour under this program, until further notice, may be made only to Western hemisphere destinations except where prior Government approval is obtained.

Federal-Private Export Plans Developing

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—Joint Government-private financing for the greatest peacetime export program in the country's history is expected to be recommended to Congress by President Roosevelt early next year.

Some of Roosevelt's economic advisers believe that in the early post-war years in Europe it should be possible to approach the present annual export volume. This—almost entirely lend-lease—is some $15,000,000,000.

How much credit will be required—public and private—remains to be determined. But France alone plans to procure about $2,000,000,000 worth of goods in this country during the next 12 months and hopes to get most of them on credit.

Government Steps

Two main ideas are developing as far as the Government's program is concerned. First is to expand the authority of the Export-Import Bank several times over and remove present restrictions which prevent it from making loans in the European area. The bank's present lending authority is $700,000,000.

Second is to set up a new agency to handle this post-war business and let the Export-Import Bank continue to specialize in Latin-American financing.

In either case it is contemplated that Government loans would be made only when private capital was not interested and only for clearly useful productive enterprises.

Johnson Act Change Urged

All of the Administration experts agree that the Johnson Act prohibiting loans to nations which defaulted on their World War I debts must be either repealed or superseded.

Financing needs of the post-war period are being thoroughly explored now because, the President's advisors say, in carrying out his promise to put American industry at a 60,000,000-job level he will have to look for a maximum volume of export as well as internal trade.

One transition device which was worked out in the case of Russia and applies to the western European countries as well is to provide for post-war delivery, on a cash (or credit) basis, of useful civilian goods initially ordered under lend-lease.

Those who expect the high volume of exports look to two sources—the destruction wrought by the fighting in Europe and the desire of non-industrial nations such as China to develop modern industries.

The British have an enormous amount of reconstruction to do as a result of the bombings. Some of their experts say that beyond repairing war damage they must completely modernize some of their major industries, particularly textiles.

The French found their need for repairing war damage was not as great as they had feared except in transportation equipment.

French Market

They want 700 locomotives, much rolling stock, trucks, some industrial supplies and lots of raw materials for farm and factory production. But eventually they all will have to replace millions of units of machine tools, automobiles and other items.

Russia has virtually an entire nation to rebuild and is already looking to this country for precision instruments and equipment and the services of production experts.

NAVY CASUALTIES

Washington, Nov. 15 (A. P.).—The Navy Department announced today the names of 248 casualties in the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, which makes a total of 72,916 casualties reported by the Navy since Pearl Harbor. Of this total, 28,821 are reported dead, 30,301 wounded, 9,308 missing and 4,486 prisoners of war. Included in the list of today are the following, with their next of kin:

Stainback, Biddle Discuss Hawaii Needs

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—Gov. Ingram M. Stainback of Hawaii said today he had conferred with Attorney General Francis Biddle concerning forthcoming judicial appointments and technical judicial problems in the Territory.

The Governor declined, however, to comment further on his conversation with Biddle.

Meanwhile he is continuing conferences with Federal officials to obtain more shipping space for Hawaii-bound civilian cargo and is awaiting the outcome of negotiations of public health and army officials on a new site in Honolulu for the quarantine station.

Senators Think Byrnes Would Replace Hull

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—Senators talked behind the backs of their hands today about a possibility that James F. Byrnes might become Secretary of State.

Several factors fitting together like a jigsaw puzzle were responsible for their conjectures that the War Mobilization director might move into the State Department.

Apparently Secretary Hull, vitally interested in finishing preparations for peace, wants to keep the job. And evidently he can so far as President Roosevelt is concerned.

Decision Up To Doctors

But Hull's doctors may have different ideas. The 73-year-old Tennessean has been ill for weeks. At the moment, his physicians just don't know whether he will be able to return to his office.

In the event he can't, some legislators see Byrnes as a logical successor. This, they say, is why:

Perhaps no man in the Administration would have as much influence as Byrnes in getting through the Senate the treaties or international compacts designed to perpetuate the forthcoming peace.

Retains GOP Friendships

A former Senator from South Carolina, Byrnes has retained the respect of a large number of his former colleagues, Republicans among them. And it will take both Republicans and Democrats to supply the two-thirds vote needed for treaty ratification.

Byrnes and Hull, the latter a former Senator too, are described by associates as "great friends." Accordingly, they say, Hull might not be as reluctant to step aside in favor of Byrnes as he would be to make way for someone else.

While the "Assistant President" had said he wanted to return to South Carolina and hang up his lawyer's shingle again, Roosevelt announced yesterday that "Jimmie" has agreed to stay on as War Mobilization boss until the European war ends.

Convention Grievance Erased

Some Senators viewed this as significant, possibly of two things:

That any grievance Byrnes may have as a result of the Democratic national convention has been erased. Byrnes was gunning for the Vice-Presidential nomination, but failed to get the nod from the White House.

Byrnes is represented as definitely averse to taking another war job. But aides say he, like Hull, is deeply interested in lasting peace and in seeing to it that Roosevelt succeeds where Wilson failed. Thus the State Department portfolio might lure him.

Silent On Other Appointments

Roosevelt had nothing to say about other appointments at his news conference yesterday.

He wasn't ready to talk about action on resignations of three public members of the War Labor Board, a successor to Clarence E. Gauss as Ambassador to China, or acceptance of the resignation of Interior Secretary Ickes—described by a reporter as "the man Dewey planned to kick out."

Humanitarian Award Is Conferred On Hull

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—Secretary of State Hull was chosen today to receive the humantarian award, conferred annually by the Variety Clubs of America. It is given to the citizen whose "humanitarian efforts have contributed the most to the welfare of mankind."

R. J. O'Donnell, national chief barker of the charitable organization, said the award—a silver plaque plus an honorarium of $1,000—will be presented Friday, November 24.

President Roosevelt visited Secretary Hull at the Navy Hospital in near-by Bethesda, Md., this afternoon.

B-29 Strikers Resume Work on W.L.B. Order

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP)—Union officials bowed to a War Labor Board demand today and agreed to call off strikes holding up production of B-29 Superfortress engines in five New Jersey plants.

Like "Dutch Uncle"

Talking like a "Dutch uncle" to the officers and attorney for the Wright Aircraft Supervision Association, an independent union, Chairman William H. Davis of the WLB said the strike must be called off or the government would use "every power" to stop it. He also said work must be resumed before the WLB would consider the foremen's complaints.

The officers, headed by Union President David G. Neweomb, announced after a conference that they were calling a meeting at Paterson tonight to direct that the strikers resume work "at once."

The strike, begun Monday, involved only part of the 2,900 supervisory employes. Their walkout, however, resulted in idleness for more than 32,000 employes of five Wright Aeronautical Corporation plants in the Patterson area.

Start "At Once"

Attorney John F. Butler, speaking for the union, said a return to work "at once" meant starting with the midnight shift, but Industrial Relations Manager Ivan L. Willis said it probably would be impossible to get the Superfort motors back in production.

Without referring to the need for engines for the world's largest bombers, in use over Japan and on long range raids of Pacific outposts, Davis said the strike had cost the foremen the sympathy of the public at a time when the board, alone among government agencies, was "trying to help the foremen."

Following an unauthorized strike which ended October 4 at the board's request, a panel has been studying the union's grievances and has reported findings to the board for its consideration.

Hope To Gain

Davis said, "we know too much about the subject" to challenge the patriotism of the worker, but we asked "what can you hope to gain by a strike?"

He also told the union officials they could expect a general policy on foremen's unions to be formu-ng assurances against harboring German war criminals or other enemy people who might be able o flee from the Reich.

Urge Ireland

The United States and other Allied governments are continuing to urge Ireland and other neutrals to make their assurances more exact and definite.

The Irish memorandum said:

1. "The Irish government note that the right to grant asylum is not in question and they feel that the United States government will understand that the Irish government can give no assurance which would preclude them from exercising that right should justice, charity or honor or the interest of the nation so require.

2. The Irish government wish,

TO ACT IN 3 WEEKS ON PEARL HARBOR

Washington, Nov. 15 (A. P.).—Highly-placed congressional sources expect a decision within three weeks on whether courts-martial or exoneration will result from an Army-Navy board investigation of the Pearl Harbor attack.

On December 7 the statute of limitations governing prosecutions resulting from negligence in the historic case will expire unless Congress extends it as it has done twice before.

Legislation extending the statutory period is awaiting congressional action but it may not be called up.

"There will be no need for a further extension," said a usually well-informed source who withheld use of his name. "The report of the Army-Navy board that made an investigation of circumstances surrounding the Jap attack has been completed, and action based on its recommendations will be taken before December 7.

"However," he added, "it is safe to say that the report recommends that Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel or Lieut.-Gen. Walter C. Short, or both of them, either be held for court-martial trial or be exonerated."

If exoneration is recommended, he said, there would be no need for further secrecy.

"In justice to the two men who were in command at the time of the Jap attack and who now are in retirement under a cloud of suspicion, the recommendation should be made public."

SENATE TO WEIGH PACT ON SEAWAY

Hearing Nov. 21 on Whether Treaty or Agreement Covers St. Lawrence Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP)—Consideration of the St. Lawrence Seaway proposal must await determination whether it requires a treaty between the United States and Canada.

Senator John H. Overton of Louisiana, chairman of the Commerce subcommittee studying the matter, expressed belief today that the two countries could not jointly carry out the proposed $421,000,000 deep waterway and hydroelectric development except by Senate-ratified treaty.

However, Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, majority leader, told a press conference that the St. Lawrence proposal could be offered as an amendment to either the Flood Control Bill, which will come up Monday, or the Rivers and Harbors measure.

"It is in order on either bill," he said after an informal caucus with other Democratic Senators. "It would perhaps be more appropriate as an amendment to the Rivers and Harbors measure."

Senator George D. Aiken of Vermont and other backers of the waterway have called a treaty unnecessary. Senator Aiken is author of a bill to approve the 1941 Executive seaway agreement between the United States and Canada by a simple majority vote of the Senate and House.

Mr. Overton said that the five-member subcommittee voted unanimously to hold hearings, starting Nov. 21, exclusively on the treaty question. Attorneys for and against the seaway and a spokesman for the State epartment will be heard.

Should the subcommittee decide that the seaway was a treaty question, the Aiken bill would go to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Mr. Overton explained.

However, Mr. Aiken, commenting on the action of the commerce group, said that he would go ahead with plans to offer the seaway bill from the Senate floor as an amendment to the pending $1,000,000,000 rivers and harbors authorization measure. This would get the proposal to the floor promptly.

Such a step would "imperil" passage of either measure, Senator Overton told reporters, because it would produce a long debate.

The seaway project calls for deepening the St. Lawrence River and constructing new locks to accommodate ocean-going vessels between Great Lakes ports and the Atlantic. It also embraces extensive hydro-electric power facilities which would be operated, on the American side, by New York.

Tentative estimates have placed the United States share of the cost at about $277,000,000, and Canada's at about $144,000,000.

18 Companies Called Trust in Stainless Steel

U. S. Also Indicts 6 Officials for Restraint of Trade on War-Time Contracts

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP).—Attorney General Francis Biddle announced that eighteen steel corporations and six of their officers were indicted in Trenton, N. J., today on charges of conspiring to fix prices on stainless steel.

Mr. Biddle said the grand jury indictment charged "that beginning in 1934 and continuously until the present, the defendants and co-conspirators have engaged in an unlawful conspiracy arbitrarily to fix and maintain uniform and non-competitive prices, terms and conditions for the sale of stainless steel finished products sold in the United States."

Conviction would involve a maximum penalty of $5,000 fine and one year imprisonment in each of two anti-trust charges, Mr. Biddle said.

Named as defendants were:

Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corporation, Brackenbridge, Pa., and Russell M. Allen, Pittsburgh, vice-president.

Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, Pittsburgh, and Paul F. Voigt jr., Pittsburgh, manager Stainless Steel Division.

Carpenter Steel Company, Reading, Pa., and J. Heber Parker, Reading, president.

Crucible Steel Company of America, New York, and R. E. Christie, New York, vice-president.

Republic Steel Corporation, Cleveland, and Martin H. Schmid, Cleveland, manager of sales, alloy sales division.

Eastern Stainless Steel Corporation, Baltimore, and T. F. McLaughlin, Baltimore, president.

Co-Conspirators Included

Rustless Iron and Steel Corporation, Baltimore; the American Rolling Mills Company, Middletown, Ohio; Bethlehem Steel Company, Bethlehem, Pa.; Sharon Steel Corporation, Sharon, Pa.; Firth Sterling Steel Company, McKeesport, Pa.; Jessop Steel Company, Washington, Pa.; Latrobe Electric Steel Company, Latrobe, Pa.; The Midvale Company, Philadelphia; Pittsburgh Steel Company, Pittsburgh; Superior Steel Corporation, Carnegie, Pa.; The Timken Roller Bearing Company, Canton, Ohio, and Universal-Cyclops Steel Corporation, Bridgeville, Pa.

The announcement said the Chemical Foundation, Inc., the Nirosta Corporation, both of New York, and certain predecessor companies of the defendants, were named as co-conspirators.

The Justice Department said the Chemical Foundation was organized about 1919 to hold and license patents acquired from the Alien Property Custodian and that it owned and licensed patents relating to chrome nickel stainless steel.

Nirosta Corporation, also referred to by the Department as Krupp Nirosta, was described as having been formed about 1928 by Friedrich Krupp, of Essen, Germany; the Ludlum Steel Company, Crucible Steel and others "to exploit Krupp patents issued after the first world war and relating mainly to heat treatment of chrome nickel stainless steel."

The indictment, the announcement stated, made these allegations:

That 1942 gross sales of stainless steel finished products in the United States were about $135,000,000 and that the defendant companies produced and sold more than 90 per cent of that amount.

Lists Meeting Places

That meetings for the purpose of carrying out the alleged violations were held from time to time in the Duquesne Club, Pittsburgh,; the Biltmore Hotel, New York; White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and at Hershey, Pa.

That it was in 1934 that the defendants and co-conspirators decided to make use of chemical foundation patents and to agree upon prices.

"Meanwhile," the Attorney General said, "defendants Carpenter, Crucible, Republic, Bethlehem, Firth Sterling and Jessop were also licensees of Krupp Nirosta under certain patents relating mainly to heat treatment processes and other improvements on chrome-nickel steels, while Carnegie-Illinois had use of the same patents by virtue of a license to its parent company United States Steel. These license agreements contain a clause forbidding sale at prices below those fixed by Krupp Nirosta.

Mr. Biddle contended that the alleged price fixing agreements frustrated competitive bidding in government contracts.

War Expenses $7,447,000,000

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—War expenditures totaled $7,447,000,000 in October, an increase of 4.8 per cent. over September. This brought the total outlay for war from July 1, 1940, to $229,600,000,000, the War Production Board reported.

Plasma Sale Rumors Labeled "Vicious Lies"

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—Red Cross Chairman Basil O'Connor tonight described as "vicious lies" rumors that blood plasma collected by the Red Cross is being sold to soldiers and sailors.

O'Connor said in a statement that the rumors "apparently are circulated by persons who wish to deprive our fighting men of life-saving plasma." He suggested that such persons should be reported to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Job-Qutting Stalls Output, Kaiser Says

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—Henry J. Kaiser said today war workers are leaving their jobs at such a rapid pace they threatened to stall production of battle equipment.

The industrialist, after a conference with President Roosevelt, told reporters that "all manufacturers of critical war items are handicapped by a continuing departure from war work."

He said he emphasized to Mr. Roosevelt the "absolute need" for an appeal to workers to stay on their jobs.

Huge Drop Cited

Kaiser said the number of workers in his shipyard at Richmond, Cal., had dropped from 93,000 to 67,000 in 90 days.

Saying he discussed with Mr. Roosevelt the President's post-war goal of 60,000,000 jobs, Kaiser added: "It is gratifying to see that definite action is being taken to encourage private enterprise with means and incentive for providing these jobs."

Nelson Rockefeller Departs

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP).—Nelson A. Rockefeller, Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs, left here this morning for an inspection tour of health and sanitation programs in Venezuela, Dominican Republic, Haiti and Cuba.

Roosevelt Speeches in Record

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP).—Nearly fourteen pages of today's Congressional Record are devoted to addresses delivered by President Roosevelt during the recent election campaign. Placed in the record by Senator Alben W. Barkley, Democrat, of Kentucky, the Senate majority leader, they include most of Mr. Roosevelt's formal and informal speeches during the fourth-term drive. Omitted was Mr. Roosevelt's speech before the teamsters' union in Washington, Sept. 23, billed at the time as the formal campaign opener. Senator Barkley's secretary said today, however, that this was considered a pre-campaign speech.

Dies Group to Expire With Present House

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP)—House Republicans decided today not to seek continuance of the Dies committee by the next Congress.

Their decision, and the known apathy of Democratic leaders towards the committee headed by Rep. Martin Dies (D-Tex), made it improbable that the group would operate after next January 3, when its current tenure expires.

Rep. Thomas (R-NJ) announced the Republicans' stand after a conference with other party members. Thomas is ranking minority member of the committee.

The question of continuance of the committee, Thomas said, "must rest with the majority party in the House."

With "the right kind of membership," he added, the committee, which has been in existence more than six years, "could continue to do a splendid service to the country."

To Move To Elect House Members For 4 Years

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—Representative Lea (D., Cal.) said today he would introduce tomorrow a resolution to amend the Constitution to provide four-year terms for House members now elected for two-year terms.

The proposed amendment provides a plan by which approximately half the House membership would be elected alternatively every two years.

Under it, each State would be divided into Congressional districts numbered consecutively on the basis of the quota of Representatives in the State.

Members in even-numbered districts selected at the first general election after the amendment became effective would serve two years. Thereafter all terms would be for four years with Representatives from odd-numbered districts and even-numbered districts selected in alternate elections.

Children's Clothing Shortages 'Shocking'

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—The War Production Board was asked today to relieve what Representative Philbin (D., Mass.) called "shocking shortages of children's clothing in many communities."

Philbin said he asked the WPB to increase the retail supply of basic materials and clothes, including underwear, shoes, stockings and rubbers.

"Grownups can endure lack of clothing to some extent," he said in a statement, "but going without proper clothing has serious effects on the health of growing children.

"In the light of all of the clothing and other materials we are sending to civilians overseas under lend-lease and UNRRA, it is paradoxical for us not to provide adequately for our own children."

242 Democrats in House

Election Reports Show 189 Seats Held by Republicans

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP).—Congressional election reports still filtering into the office of the House Clerk today give Democrats 242 and Republicans 189 seats in the new House.

The Progressive and American-Labor parties won one House seat each, and two other seats, one each in Missouri and California, were listed as doubtful. The present House membership is 216 Democrats, 212 Republicans and four minor party members with three vacancies.

With Senate races in Missouri and Pennsylvania unsettled, the line-up for the new Senate is: Democrats, 56; Republicans, 37; Progressives, 1.

"Lame ducks"—those defeated or who did not seek re-election but who remain in office until Jan. 3—number seventy-six in the House and nine in the Senate.

SECURITY TAX FIGHT OPPOSED

Barkley Says Compromise Is Sought With Board

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—Senate Majority Leader Barkley (Ky.) said today that a compromise is being sought to avoid a fight over a proposal to freeze social security pay-roll taxes.

He said "conversations are going on with the Social Security Board" looking to an agreement, but that "nothing has been finally settled."

Unless legislation as passed between now and December 31, the present pay-roll tax of one per cent. each on employers and employes will rise two per cent. each on January 1.

Seeks Different Rate

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) has offered legislation to freeze the tax at present levels. However, since all tax legislation must originate in the House, he cannot get a vote on it unless the House sends over a tax measure to which it can be offered as an amendment.

Asserting the Social Security Board is opposed to a freeze, Barkley said there was prospect of "working out a little different rate, so we won't have to take up this question every year."

The tax has been frozen at the one per cent. level for three years.

May Pass Flood Bill

In a press conference after he and other Congressional leaders had discussed the legislative program at the White House, Barkley said time would not allow consideration of "basically controversial legislation" between now and pre-Christmas adjournment.

He thought there would be time to pass the flood control and rivers and harbors bills, already approved by the House, and legislation extending the President's war powers over priorities and rationing, which expire December 31.

Silver Measure Likely

"There will be another bill extending for another year the authority of the Government to purchase of silver for war purposes," Barkley said, "if it is reported out by the Banking Committee."

He predicted the Senate would vote speedy approval of a bill reviving Federal crop insurance for cotton and wheat provided the House passes such a measure next week.

"Both parties indorsed it in their platforms," he said.

Barkley Seeks Compromise On Payroll Taxes

Says "Controversial Legislation" Will Not Be Discussed Before Adjournment.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—(AP)—Senator Majority Leader Barkley (Ky.) said today that a compromise is being sought to avoid a fight over a proposal to freeze social security payroll taxes.

He told reporters that "conversations are going on with the social security board" looking to an agreement, but that "nothing has been finally settled."

Unless legislation is passed between now and December 31, the present payroll tax of one per cent each on employers and employes will go to two per cent each on January 1.

Offers Legislation

Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) has offered legislation to freeze the tax at present levels. However, since all tax legislation must originate in the House, he cannot get a vote on it unless the House sends over a tax measure to which it can be offered as an amendment.

Withholding Tax Changes Start Jan. 1

Entire Assessment to Be Taken From Wages Under $5,000.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP)—Some 30,000,000 wage and salary earners were reminded by the Internal Revenue Bureau today that the rate of withholdings from their pay will change January 1.

Under the tax simplification law passed last Spring, the withholding rates were adjusted to collect the entire tax of persons with wages and salaries under $5,000.

Under the old law withholdings were calculated to take only the approximate tax, leaving a year end adjustment to be made.

A table showing simple weekly withholdings to become effective when the new rates apply Jan. 1 follows:

Wage	Withholding Single	Married Couple	Married Couple and Two Children
$ 11	$ .20	0	0
15	1.00	.10	.10
20	2.00	.30	.30
25	3.10	1.10	.40
30	4.10	2.20	.50
35	5.10	3.20	.70
40	6.20	4.20	.80
45	7.20	5.30	1.40
50	8.20	6.30	2.50
55	9.30	7.30	3.50
60	10.60	8.50	4.60
70	12.80	10.70	6.70
80	15.10	12.90	8.80
90	17.30	15.20	11.00
100	19.90	17.80	13.50

In most cases the new withholding will take slightly more from the pay envelope and salary checks than does the present levy. However, it is difficult to compare the old and new tables, because the old method collected the same amount on salaries within $5 brackets, whereas the new system collects on specific dollar levels up to $60 weekly.

Mrs. Roosevelt Often Unaware of Social Plans F. D. R. Makes

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP)—The First Lady doesn't always know what the President has planned for that little household at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt unwittingly revealed today.

Mrs. Roosevelt told her news conference today that she "doubted" there would be any social functions in connection with the President's fourth inauguration, January 20. She said she had not been told of any.

The President told his news conference yesterday that there would be a luncheon after the inaugural ceremonies. He even said they would serve consomme and chicken.

WLB Rules Veterans Entitled to Promotions

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15. (AP)—War veterans returning to their old civilian jobs are entitled to promotions accruing automatically during their absence, the War Labor Board ruled today.

Interpreting the Selective Service Act of 1940, which requires employers to take back employes returning from the armed forces, the board said the veteran must be rehired at the "level to which he would have been entitled if there had been no break in his service with the company."

The interpretation by its General Counsel Jesse Freidin, was given to R. W. Finlay, director of the Labor Negotiating Service, Division of Safeway Stores, Inc., San Francisco.

"The Selective Training and Service Act of 1940 guarantees reemployment to a veteran in a position of like seniority, status, and pay," Freidin said. x x x "The returned veteran is therefore entitled to any length-of-service increase which the job would have carried during his absence in the armed service."

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—Choosing to risk surpluses rather than shortages, Marvin Jones, War Food Administrator, asked today that farmers maintain their 1945 production as near this year's record level as possible.

"We cannot risk the possibility of shortages," he said in announcing the commodity goals.

The plans are based on assumed continuance of the war in Europe until next summer or fall, with consequent heavy military and lend-lease demand, and the continuance of an above-average civilian demand at home.

Call For 364,000,000 Acres

In case of an early end to the war in Europe and reduced military demands, Jones said he would suggest modifications in goals before planting time next spring.

The new goals were announced amid speculation in farm circles of possible crop surpluses after the war and consequent farm-price difficulties. They call for about 364,000,000 acres in various crops, compared with 360,000,000 planted this year.

They recommend also a two per cent. increase in the 1945 spring pig crop, a three per cent. increase in the fall pig crop, a two per cent. increase in milk production and a three per cent. increase in slaughter of cattle and calves for beef, but a 16 per cent. decrease in egg production.

Very little change was recommended for the major grain crops and none for cotton. A slight increase in tobacco was suggested.

To encourage continued heavy production, the Government will provide farm price supports or guarantees at about the same general level as this year. Such support will be contingent, however, upon Congressional approval of an Administration request for a $2,000,000,000 increase in the funds of the WFA's banking agency, the Commodity Credit Corporation.

J. B. Hutson, chief of the WAF's office of production, told farm leaders at a conference that the goals should provide about as much food and fiber as was produced this year if acre yields equal the above-average yields of the last three years. He said production would be ten per cent. less if yields come out about average.

Want To Restore Reserves

The WFA is assuming, he said, that military and lend-lease demands will be between 60 and 65 per cent. of requirements this year. Any reduction in such requirements could be used, he said, to help meet now-restricted civilian demands and to rebuild food reserves for the future.

The Government is particularly anxious, Hutson said, to restore pre-war reserves of corn and other feed grains for use in event of a future drought or other emergency.

Truck Drivers Will Return To Work-Gen. Cole

Labor Arbitrator Says Drivers Show Improved Attitude.

BOSTON, Nov. 15 (AP)—With tons of perishable foodstuffs unmoved in Boston Terminals tonight, Brig. Gen. Charles H. Cole, chairman of the State Board of Arbitration, said he believed striking truck drivers "will be back to work tomorrow."

Chairman Cole, at the end of a long day of conferences in connection with the three-day intra union-row tie-up, involving hundreds of trucks, told the Associated Press:

"When I say that I expect the men will be back to work tomorrow, I have nothing more to go on than my past experiences in labor conciliation and my impression that the striking drivers are showing an improved attitude."

Fruit Terminal

Operators of the fruit terminal at South Terminal said that $160,000 worth of perishable freight remained unmoved at that point and Cole added: "I understand the situation is about the same at North Terminal and in the market district."

Herbert Alpert, counsel for the South Terminal, said that "some of the unloaded freight cars contained food for the Army and hospitals."

For the first time in the tie-up, state officials were able to confer with representatives of the strikers, suspended by union officials, who termed them "wildcat rebels."

Cole conferred with a group composed of 14 members of the union who were today named in front-page advertisements in Boston newspapers as having been suspended "for the best interests of Local 25" of the Teamsters', Chauffeurs', Warehousemen's and Helpers Union (AFL).

A Conference

"These 14 men asked me if I could recommend to Governor Saltonstall that they be allowed a conference with him," Cole said.

The chairman of arbitration declared that he then asked union officials to attend the conference between the governor and strikers but said that the union officials refused to confer until tomorrow. The suspended drivers then refused to return at that time, according to Cole, and left his office.

Varying reports have placed the number of strikers involved in the walkout as less than a hundred and as many as 3,500 but Chairman Cole said that the strikers declared:

"We believe we have between 500 and 600 drivers 'out on holiday' but some of these may not be working because of unauthorized intimidation."

Conversion Pleas 'Delay War End'

Pittsburgh, Nov. 15 (AP)—H. G. Batcheller, operations vice chairman of the War Production Board, declared in an address today that "demands for reconversion are definitely delaying the end of the war."

Batcheller, who is also president of the Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corporation, spoke extemporaneously before a meeting of the Industrial Hygiene Foundation of Mellon Institute. His theme was "Victory First, Then Reconversion."

War Needs First

The speaker said reconversion is definitely a problem that must be faced and planned for, but that there are no really essential civilian items in demand that should be given priority over war production. He added:

"We have never lost a war by having too much."

Batcheller listed several war production items which he described as behind.

He selected cotton duck for his first example, claiming production has dropped from 50 million yards per month in 1942 to 30 million in 1944. The need is 100 million yards per month and because of the deficit, he said, "a specific number—and it is large—of our soldiers will be without shelter this year."

Short Of Big Trucks

Heavy-heavy trucks, Batcheller said, are being produced at 6,000 per month and the need is 8,000 per month. There is also a deficit in the output of dry-cell batteries, he said.

Batcheller said he would rather have the returning veterans be jobless for three months after the war than "have them lie dead in slit trenches on the other side for lack of sufficient guns, ammunition, medical supplies, etc."

He declared that industry, both management and labor, must be made to realize the war program is lagging and that the demands are not "fanciful figures" but actual figures received from the battlefronts.

First Wartime Tire Announced By Company

Akron, Ohio, Nov. 15 (AP)—The B. F. Goodrich Company announced today a newly designed passenger car tire which it said is the first marketed by a major rubber company since the start of the war.

The tire, with a button-bar tread, is designed for road and off-road service with maximum traction on slippery, rutted and muddy roads.

Detroit Woman Gets Four Years as Nazi Spy

Mrs. von Moltke Furnished Addresses to Ring

DETROIT, Nov. 15 (AP).—United States District Judge Edward J. Moinet sentenced Mrs. Marianna von Moltke, wife of a former Wayne University professor who said her descent from Italian nobility entitled her to be called countess, to four years imprisonment under the espionage act today.

The indictment charged Mrs. von Moltke with furnishing a Nazi spy ring with foreign and domestic mailing addresses. She pleaded guilty to a part in the conspiracy, which had previously sent seven other persons from Detroit to prison. The court refused to permit her to change her plea today.

The woman came to the United States from Germany with her husband in 1926. The husband, Heinrich, was dismissed from the Wayne University faculty following her arrest in August, 1943. Two sons are in Germany and a third lives in Detroit.

2-Year Quinine Supply Reported

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 15 (AP)—The United States now is said to have a two-year supply of quinine for use in combating malaria as a result of research in South America by a University of Michigan botanist and one from the United States Department of Agriculture.

Dr. William C. Steere, assistant professor of botany, has just returned from Colombia, Ecuador and Peru, where he and Dr. F. R. Fosberg, Government botanist, were sent by the Board of Economic Warfare in October, 1942, to discover and exploit original stocks of the chinchona tree, the bark of which produces quinine and other anti-malarials.

Trees Found, Bark Shipped

To replace supplies of the drug, cut off from the Dutch East Indies, their task was to search for the chinchona trees in the uncleared mountain forest regions and have the bark dried and shipped to this country for production. Through the State Department, the United States was permitted by the South American countries to exploit the forests provided they would be replaced by domestic plantations.

Dr. Steere said the research task is finished and now the need is to keep the supplies coming.

Hannegan Reported Slated for Cabinet

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 15 (AP)—The Post-Dispatch said today it has learned Robert E. Hannegan, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, soon will be appointed postmaster general to succeed Frank C. Walker.

Hannegan, a St. Louisan, will retain his committee chairmanship, the story said, and added: "It is known Walker has been anxious for some time to surrender his cabinet duties and only awaited the end of the election campaign to tender his resignation."

REASSURANCE ON FILARIASIS

Navy Doctor Says Its Effects Will Not Be Serious

St. Louis, Nov. 15 (AP)—"We have one of the best football teams on the West Coast—and 60 per cent. of the players have filariasis, Commander L. T. Coggeshall of the Navy Medical Corps, stationed at the marine barracks, Klamath Falls, Ore., said today.

He made that statement to point up a reassuring picture concerning the mosquito-borne tropical disease which he said has infected "large numbers" of our fighters in certain Pacific areas and has aroused great concern among such men that they might develop the fearful complication of elephantiasis or become sexually sterile.

[Filariasis—called "Mumu" by tropical natives—is the result of a wormlike organism that the biting mosquito causes to invade the lymph system of the body sometimes producing small swellings.

[Many natives of Pacific areas, especially Samoa, exposed to constant reinfection for many years, develop the gross swellings characteristic of elephantiasis.]

It Will Disappear

Referring to studies of marines returned to Klamath Falls from Pacific areas because of filariasis or malaria, or both, Commander Coggeshall declared at the 28th annual meeting of the Southern Medical Association:

"There is every indication their infection probably will disappear spontaneously without permanent incapacities or leading to the greatly feared complications of elephantiasis."

He said, too, there was little chance of the malady spreading to civilians because the infected men have so few organisms of filariasis in their systems that opportunities would be slight for infecting mosquitoes capable of transmitting the disease.

Asserting that to spare them reinfection the men are removed quickly from tropical areas of exposure, he said only five per cent. of the men he has seen show objective signs of the disease, such as swellings, and that adult organisms of filariasis in the systems of all the men are disintegrating spontaneously.

"Only one man in 800 requires hospitalization and the average hospital stay is only five days, with a treatment of rest and heat applications," he said.

Rear Admiral Luther Sheldon, Jr., emphasized that Klamath Falls was not a hospital but a regular barracks where the men returned because of filariasis and malaria were on "duty status and carry on training necessary to fit them for further active duty."

And 'Imported' Ills Urged

St. Louis, Nov. 15 (AP)—A Southern scientist cautioned his colleagues today against forgetting dangerous diseases in our country while considering the possibilities of tropical maladies being brought back by our fighting men.

"Impressive as diseases are which constitute serious problems affecting our fighting strength in tropical war zones," said Dr. Ernest C. Faust, of Tulane University, "they are on the whole less serious hazards to us than diseases existing in our own communities.

Similar Diseases Already Here

"We ought not to prepare exclusively for invasion by exotic diseases when we have many similar diseases in our own country and abundant opportunities for their epidemic development," he told the Southern Medical Association's 48th annual meeting.

He referred particularly to ratborne typhus fever—a form that is transmitted to man by rat fleas, as opposed to the louse-borne type and he added that there also was the possibility of human outbreaks of bubonic plague, now known to exist among cotton rats and other wild rodents. He said Rocky Mountain spotted fever was on the increase in the South and that amebic dysentery constitutes "widespread infection throughout the entire United States."

Rat Eradication Called Weak

Thanks to "our own ineffectual, half-hearted efforts to eradicate our domestic rats," he said, ratborne typhus has "gradually increased until today south of the northern border of Tennessee, it is a serious disease hazard all the way from the Atlantic Coast to southwestern Texas."

He said organisms of rodent plague, spread gradually eastward as far as the Great Plains after their original rat hosts were driven from San Francisco by the 1906 earthquake and fire, now infected prairie rodents from North Dakota to Oklahoma.

"Only a few years will probably be required," he said, "for the plague in wild rodents to travel eastward and southeastward to centers of human population with their domestic rats. Then, outbreaks of human plague may be expected."

Big Three In Aviation Talks Consider Compromise Move

Chicago, Nov. 15 (AP)—The "Big Three" of the international civil aviation conference continued tonight their search for agreement on the amount of power to be vested in a world air agency after ordering the progress made thus far put down on paper for further study.

Consultations among the top members of the Canadian, British and United States delegations began Sunday.

Goal Is Compromise

The goal is compromise of the remaining differences in the three proposals:

Should there be some formula for dividing traffic or limiting the frequency of flights?

How should the airlines be protected against rate wars and all given an equal opportunity to make fair chances?

On the basis of those answers, what powers should be given to an international aviation authority?

Adolf A. Berle, Jr., chairman of the United States delegation, said in response to a question about the position of the smaller countries in the private talks that "their views are thoroughly respected and very widely consulted."

Must Go To 51 Others

This was taken to mean the consultants have obtained the views of the nations interested in each of the three plans and are keeping these views in mind when arguing for their respective propositions. That is a necessary attitude, because whatever joint proposal on which the "big three" unite must be submitted to 51 other delegations for consideration, possible amendment, and final vote. Each nation has an equal vote at the conference.

C. D. Howe, Canadian delegation chairman, told a luncheon meeting of the Chicago Canadian club he believed "there is good prospect of agreement on a well-defined plan for international aviation."

The status tonight was that many of the ideas which the conferees are trying to merge were being put into the technical language of a conference document. The mere formal stating of the expected compromise is regarded as a difficult job likely to require 24 hours.

Oppose Federal-Aid Plan

Oklahoma City, Okla., Nov. 15 (AP)—The National Association of State Aviation Officials today urged defeat of a provision for construction of flight strips under the pending Federal-aid highway bill.

The organization, closing a meeting held in connection with the national aviation clinic, attacked the provision as duplicating the functions of an "existing and adequate Federal aviation agency."

The officials also recommended that all aircraft fuel tax revenue be devoted exclusively to aviation purposes and indorsed the principle of independent aviation committees in both State and Federal legislative bodies.

Seven regional directors were named to the association's board. They include William L. Anderson, Pennsylvania, Northeast district, and Allen Perkinson, Virginia, Southeast.

Air Parley Writing Draft

Chicago, Nov. 15 (AP)—Trilateral conversations aimed at agreement for a world air authority were reported today to have reached the point where a path through the difficulties had been sighted on a general course, but leaving a delicate drafting job yet to be done.

Chairmen of the Canadian, British and United States delegations to the International Civil Aviation Conference who had been in almost continuous session since Sunday afternoon, recessed last night to give the draftsmen an opportunity to write a document designed to state in acceptable language the broad principles toward which the conferees are reaching.

Conversations Continue

The conversations were by no means ended, however, and it appeared that they might extend through tomorrow, since the drafting job may take all of today.

A spokesman for the conference reported last night that material progress has been made. It was after that that the drafting effort was begun.

Mexico and Panama joined today in submitting a substitute for the United States proposal for a provisional agreement to cover the interim between the conference and ratification of a permanent pact.

This followed the outline and used much of the language of the United States document, with one major difference—it reverses the American principle of putting colonies and possessions within the cabotage (internal traffic) right by stating that "for the purpose of this agreement the limits of each State shall not include its colonies, possessions, protectorates or mandates."

Strong Opposition Expected

Such a proposal is certain to encounter widespread opposition, with the United States and Great Britain likely to take the lead.

A minor change was the Mexico-Panama suggestion that the consultation prior to cancellation of an agreement for operating rights should be not more than two months, whereas the United States proposal was that it be not less than two months.

The substitute proposal also carries a clause for reciprocity in the grant of rights of commercial entry and transit.

The United States, which had maintained a firm position in the face of continuing concessions by the Canadian delegation, is believed to be yielding somewhat from its flatly stated objective—that any regulatory power given an international body under the proposed convention be confined to technical matters.

Urges Quick Conversion By Petroleum Industry

Chicago, Nov. 15 (AP)—The petroleum industry must convert to peacetime methods as rapidly as possible because "wartime operations are punishing to the industry's program" for efficient crude production, J. K Roberts, of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana), said today.

Addressing a joint meeting of the Chicago Association of Commerce and the Chicago section of the American Chemical Society, Roberts urged a quick conversion of facilities now manufacturing 100-octane gasoline when peace returns.

He posed the question, "what becomes of 100-octane number gasoline?" after V-day, and answered, "superficially, the answer is simple—it simply will not be made beyond the comparatively small quantities required for post-war operations."

PACIFIC ACES' UNIT HOME

Navy Air Group 31, With Score of 148 Planes, Gets Leave

ALAMEDA, Calif., Nov. 15 (AP)—Swashbuckling Navy Air Group 31, whose pilots in nine months blasted 148 Japanese planes from the sky and sent 48,000 tons of enemy shipping to the bottom, has returned to the United States on leave, fresh from the Philippines Sea battle.

Fighting 31 boasts three aces who together shot down forty-three enemy planes. They are Lieut. Arthur R. Hawkins of Lufkin, Tex., and Lieut. John J. Wirth of Gary, Ind., who bagged fourteen each, and Lieut. Cornelius N. Nooy of Long Island, N. Y., who got fifteen kills.

Lieut. Edward E. Wood of Santa Monica, Calif., a torpedo pilot, sank an 8,000-ton cargo ship off Truk and a Japanese destroyer and scored two direct hits on a Ryujo class carrier in the Philippines Sea battle.

The group's fighters—the Meat-Axe Squadron—downed 147 enemy planes, sank 17,000 tons of shipping and accounted for seventeen small craft.

The Twelfth Naval District, in announcing the group's return, said it was one of the leading aerial strikers in the pre-invasion blows in the Philippines and the Marianas.

Electronic Brain Records Causes of Plane Crashes

Radio Transcript Survives Even if All Aboard Are Killed

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Nov. 15 (AP)—An electronic brain which enables ground engineers to learn the cause of airplane crashes has been produced by flight research engineers of the Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corporation.

If there is an accident which is fatal to the pilot or crew of a plane equipped with this device, ground engineers can determine immediately what made the craft crash, the company said today.

The electronic brain, technically known as a flight recorder, provides a continuous record, by radio to a receiver on the ground, of the stresses, pressures, temperatures and other conditions to which an airplane is subjected during a test flight.

The company said as many as eighty indications a second may thus be sent, received and recorded.

Sharing Of Costs To Help British Recover Proposed

Los Angeles, Nov. 15 (AP)—An Anglo-American "sharing of war costs" was suggested by a State Department official today as one means, although an unlikely one, of facilitating Britain's post-war financial restoration.

Charles P. Taft, the department's wartime economic director, told a Chamber of Commerce meeting that whatever the method, it is "very much in the interest of the United States" to help finance England's recovery.

Cites Britain's Difficulties

He painted a picture of a British economy starved by a lack of dollars with which to buy American goods, confronted with a need to increase exports several times and under a heavy debt to the dominations and other states in the so-called "sterling area." That debt, he said, amounts to nearly $12,000,000,000.

"What can England do," Taft asked, "in the period while they are getting on to a balanced basis?"

"They have to find some way to even things up during that period by either a sale of assets, or a loan, or an outright sharing of war costs that put them in this state.

"With the end of the war a sharing of that kind is not likely, but it is certainly very much in the interest of the United States to help finance their operations in the period of restoration. In a sense, this is financing a competitor, but it is also financing our best customer, and financing the nation whose strength means much to our security."

Taft said the French would be able to buy from this country only the necessities of life unless American businessmen can find ways to help the French "make and sell us things we want and are willing to pay for."

Loans For China Suggested

Asserting that China has a great industrial opportunity, he advocated long-term loans with low interest rates. He could not agree with those persons who think foreign trade will take up this country's industrial slack caused by reconversion and added that such trade "certainly is not going to start off at three times pre-war levels.

"But it is essential to our prosperity," he declared.

DE MILLE MAY REFUSE TO PAY

Gives No Indication Of Meeting Union Assessment

Los Angeles, Nov. 15 (Special). Whether Cecil B. De Mille and 100 additional members of the AFL, radio artists, will pay a special $1 assessment before the deadline of December 1 remained in doubt here today, but neither De Mille nor the union had any statement as to what will happen if the assessment is not paid.

The entire matter grew out of assessments levied during the recent national election.

It is asserted that De Mille and numerous other artists refused or failed to pay the $1 assessment placed on the union's 2,300 members by their directors. The money was to have been used to oppose Proposition No. 12, the so-called right-to-work amendment.

Many Companies Contracted

To keep in good standing with the unions is one of the requirements of those who appear on radio programs broadcast by companies under contract with the union. Many companies are tied up in such contracts. At first the directors required the assessment to be paid by November 1. When many had not paid on that date the deadline was extended until December 1.

De Mille and others objected to the compulsory feature of the ruling. However, a Superior Court ruling here held that compulsory assessments to oppose No. 12 amendment were within union rights.

Proposition Defeated

The proposition, which would have forbidden compulsory unionization in California was defeated.

Mervin Houser, one of De Mille's aides, said today De Mille had no statement to make at this time. Whether he will pay or decide to take the case into court remains to be seen. Some of his friends seem to think De Mille or others may decide to carry the entire matter to the higher courts.

Union representatives said they will have nothing to say until later.

THE FIGHTING AROUND METZ, A CITY OF 64,000 WHICH NEVER HAS BEEN TAKEN BY STORM IN MODERN TIMES, APPEARED TO BE RUSHING TOWARD A SWIFT AND TOTALLY UNANTICIPATED CLIMAX. A FRONT DISPATCH SAID THE FALL OF THE CITY APPEARED TO BE BUT A MATTER OF DAYS, IF NOT HOURS. THE AMERICANS HAVE NARROWED THE ESCAPE GAP TO THE EAST OF METZ TO SOME EIGHT MILES.

HAVING FOUGHT ITS WAY INSIDE THE OUTER FORTRESS SYSTEM BELOW METZ, THE U.S.FIFTH INFANTRY DIVISION STILL HAS TO HURDLE POUILLY RIDGE--A TASK SAID TO BE PROVING TOUGHER THAN THE TAKING OF EITHER FORT L'AISNE OR FORT L'YSER, BOTH OF WHICH WERE FOUND TO BE WITHOUT BIG GUNS.

THE RIDGE, ABOUT 8,000 YARDS LONG AND SOME 620 FEET HIGH, HAS FORTS STILL IN ENEMY HANDS AT ONE END AND WOODS AT THE OTHER. GERMAN GUNS COVER ITS SLOPES BOTH WAYS. HEAVY FIRE FROM ENEMY 88-MILLIMETER BATTERIES WAS HARRASSING LT.GEN.GEORGE S.PATTON'S MEN EARLY TODAY.

THE GERMANS MADE LITTLE EFFORT TO DEFEND FORT L'AISNE OR FORT L'YSER. IN A FRONT DISPATCH ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR CORRESPONDENT KENNETH L.DIXON SAID:

NOV 16 1944

"THE GERMANS OBVIOUSLY USED THESE FORTS OF THE OUTER RING ONLY AS BARRACKS AND EVEN AS BARNS DURING THE SIEGE OF METZ AND DID THEIR FIGHTING FROM FOXHOLES AND SLIT TRENCHES AND MODERN TEMPORARY EMPLACEMENTS. THEIR OPINION OF THE USEFULNESS OF THE OLD TYPE OF FORTRESS IS INDICATED BY THE FACT THAT THEY ALREADY ARE HAVING CIVILIANS DIG FOXHOLES INSIDE METZ XXX."

BESIDES CAPTURING FORT L'YSER YESTERDAY, THE FIFTH DIVISION OVERRAN THE TOWNS OF POUILLY, CUVRY, ORNY, PONTOY AND COIN-LES-CUVRY, AND COMPLETED THE JOB OF CLEANING OUT THE HOPITAL WOODS. ALL ARE CLOSE TOGETHER SOUTH AND SOUTHEAST OF THE CITY.

FRONT DISPATCHES LATE LAST NIGHT SAID ADVANCE ELEMENTS WERE INSIDE AUGNY, TWO MILES SOUTH AND SLIGHTLY WEST OF METZ.

THE ATTACK TOWARD METZ FROM THE WEST--THE FIRST CONCENTRATED EFFORT AGAINST THE ENEMY IN THAT SECTOR SINCE THE PRESENT OFFENSIVE BEGAN--WAS LAUNCHED BY THE 95TH INFANTRY DIVISION, WHICH SWEPT PAST CHATEL ST.GERMAIN IN A TWO-MILE PUSH WHICH CARRIED TO ROZERIEULLES, THREE MILES FROM THE CITY. ONLY THE GUNS OF FORT DRIANT AND FORT MARIVAL FIRED AT THESE ATTACKERS.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS DID NOT CONFIRM PARIS AND ALGIERS BROADCASTS REPORTING THE CAPTURE OF THIONVILLE, THE HEAVILY FORTIFIED STEEL CENTER 16 MILES NORTH OF METZ. FOR SEVERAL WEEKS AMERICAN TROOPS HAVE HELD THE PART OF THIONVILLE ON THE WEST BANK OF THE MOSELLE RIVER, WITH THE GERMANS CLINGING TO THE EASTERN HALF OF THE CITY.

ABOVE THIONVILLE, AT THE NORTHERN EXTREMITY OF THE THIRD ARMY FRONT, THE 90TH INFANTRY DIVISION EXPANDED ITS KOENIGSMACHER BRIDGEHEAD OVER THE MOSELLE TO INGLANGE, 3 1/2 MILES SOUTHEAST OF KOENIGSMACHER, AND LINKED UP WITH A SMALLER NEW BRIDGEHEAD TO THE NORTH.

THE KOENIGSMACHER BRIDGEHEAD STILL HAD NOT BEEN JOINED WITH THE ONE AT UCKANGE, THREE MILES SOUTH OF THIONVILLE.

NOV 16 1944

TWENTY-FOUR MILES SOUTHEAST OF METZ THE FIRST WORLD WAR BATTLEFIELD OF MORHANGE WAS THE SCENE OF A DETERMINED AMERICAN ENCIRCLING MOVEMENT, THE GERMANS SAID. PATTON'S FORCES ARE 1 1/2 MILES AWAY FROM THE TOWN ON THE WEST AND ARE CLOSING IN FROM POSITIONS LESS THAN THREE MILES FROM THE SOUTHEAST.

IN SOUTHEASTERN HOLLAND LIEUTENANT-GENERAL SIR MILES C.DEMPSEY'S TOMMIES STRUCK OUT FROM NEDERWEERT, 18 MILES SOUTHWEST OF THE DUTCH BORDER CITY OF VENLO AND SOME 38 MILES NORTHWEST OF AACHEN, YESTERDAY AFTERNOON BEHIND A 400-GUN ARTILLERY BARRAGE.

THE BRITISH QUICKLY ESTABLISHED BRIDGEHEADS OVER TWO CANALS IN THE AREA IN THE EARLY HOURS OF THE DRIVE, WHICH WAS OFFICIALLY REPORTED "GOING WELL AFTER INITIAL SUCCESSES."

SEVEN MILES NORTHEAST OF NEDERWEERT, BRITISH PATROLS ENTERED MEIJEL AND FOUND THAT THE GERMANS, WHO HAD EMPLOYED SOME 50 TANKS TO CAPTURE THE TOWN A FEW WEEKS AGO, HAD FLED, A VILLAGE 1 1/2 MILES SOUTHEAST OF NEDERWEERT, ALSO WAS SEIZED.

LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, NOV. 15-(AP)-LEYTE'S EX-GOVERNOR IS NOT ONLY OUT OF A JOB. HE IS ALSO IN JAIL. HE ALSO WOULD LIKE TO STAY THERE.

AND, IF HE WRITES A NICE LETTER, THE PRESENT GOVERNOR MAY LET HIM.

THE EX-GOVERNOR IS SALAZAR, WHO DID HIS GOVERNING UNDER THE JAPANESE. WHEN THE AMERICANS CAME BACK, HE WAS ONE OF 158 SUSPECTED OR KNOWN COLLABORATIONISTS PROMPTLY TOSSED INTO THE LOCAL LOCK-UP, WITHOUT BENEFIT OF ELABORATE TRIAL.

NOW, WITH MOST OF LEYTE SAFELY IN AMERICAN HANDS, A BOARD OF INQUIRY HAS DECIDED THAT IT IS TIME TO CONSIDER THE JUSTICE OR INJUSTICE OF THE INCARCERATIONS.

MAJ. GEN. BASILIO J. VALLEZ, CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD NAMED BY PHILIPPINES PRESIDENT SERGIO OSMENA, HAS PROMISED THAT EACH OF THE SUSPECTS SHALL HAVE A FAIR HEARING AND THOSE AGAINST WHOM NO SPECIFIC CHARGES ARE LODGED WILL BE RELEASED---ON PAROLE, REQUIRED TO STAY IN THE TOWN OF LEYTE, BUT RELEASED NONE THE LESS.

THE ENTIRE PLAN HAS BEEN OPPOSED BY THE CURRENT LEYTE GOVERNOR, ONE KANGLEON, WHO WANTS TO KEEP THE ENTIRE 158 FIRMLY IN JAIL UNTIL HIS GUERRILLA FIGHTERS CAN SPARE THE TIME TO COME TO TOWN AND FILE CHARGES AGAINST THEM. KANGLEON INDICATED THAT THEY MIGHT BE AT THE END OF THE WAR, BUT THOUGHT THAT WOULD BE TIME ENOUGH.

GENERAL VALLEZ, HOWEVER, BELIEVES THAT MANY OF THE JAILINGS WERE HURRIED DECISIONS BY AMERICAN OFFICERS WHO ACTED IN SOME CASES ON MORE VERBAL ACCUSATIONS WITHOUT INVESTIGATIONS. SOME IN JAIL, HE THINKS, MAY BE MERELY VICTIMS OF PERSONAL GRUDGES BY THEIR NEIGHBORS. TO SUPPORT HIS VIEW, HE HAS CITED THE CASE OF A JAPANESE-BORN FATHER AND THREE SONS AMONG THE 158 IN JAIL. THEY WERE JAILED DESPITE THE FACT THAT TWO OF THE SONS HAD FOUGHT FOR THE AMERICANS AND FILIPINOS ON BATAAN AND THE FATHER HAD BEEN GIVING THE AMERICAN ARMY INFORMATION ON JAPANESE TROOP MOVEMENTS IN THE CURRENT CAMPAIGN.

SOME OF THE 158 DOUBTLESS WILL BE FREE SOON, BUT NOT EX-GOVERNOR SALAZAR. HE IS REPORTED READY TO SAY, "GENTLEMEN, PLEASE LEAVE ME IN JAIL." HE IS SAID TO CONSIDER IT MORE HEALTHFUL THAN BEING OUT AMONG HIS NEIGHBORS.

AND THE CURRENT GOVERNMENT HAS INDICATED IT AGREES WITH HIM, MAY EVEN PERMIT HIM TO STAY IN--IF HE ASKS IN WRITING.

THE NEW WARNING WAS MADE IN A STATEMENT BY ACTING SECRETARY OF STATE STETTINIUS "IN CONNECTION WITH RECENT RADIO REPORTS OF THE CAPTURE OF GENERAL VIEST, GENERAL GOLIAN AND OTHER CZECHOSLOVAK OFFICERS AND SOLDIERS IN SLOVAKIA."

THE STATE DEPARTMENT CALLED ATTENTION TO THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT'S DECLARATION OF SEPT.7, 1944 THAT "ALL GERMANS WHO TAKE PART IN OR ARE IN ANY WAY RESPONSIBLE FOR VIOLATIONS" OF RULES OF WAR "DO SO AT THEIR PERIL AND WILL BE HELD ANSWERABLE FOR THEIR CRIMES."

THE UNITED STATES, IN ITS EARLIER DECLARATION, RECOGNIZED THE CZECHOSLOVAK PROCLAMATION THAT MILITARY FORCES FIGHTING THE GERMANS IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA WERE MEMBERS OF THE REGULAR CZECHOSLOVAK ARMY, AND RULED THAT GERMAN REPRISALS AGAINST SUCH SOLDIERS VIOLATED THE RULES OF WAR.

WASHINGTON,NOV.15-(AP)-ACTING SECRETARY OF STATE EDWARD R. STETTINIUS, JR. SAID TODAY HE HAD RECEIVED A COPY OF ARGENTINA'S DECLARATION REFUSING SAFE HAVEN FOR AXIS WAR REFUGEES AND POINTED OUT THAT THE STATEMENT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

STETTINIUS ADDED THAT THE ARGENTINE DOCUMENT ORIGINALLY SENT TO THE BRITISH FOREIGN OFFICE HAD BEEN EXAMINED BY THE STATE DEPARTMENT BUT HE DECLINED TO MAKE ANY COMMENT OTHER THAN TO SAY THE ARGENTINE DECLARATION WAS SELF EXPLANATORY.

THE ACTING SECRETARY AT THE SAME TIME CHARACTERIZED AS NOT ENTIREY SATISFACTORY SIMILAR ASSURANCES RECEIVED RECENTLY FROM THE PORTEGUESE GOVERNMENT. HOWEVER, HE SAID, THE MATTER IS STILL OPEN AND UNDER DISCUSSION.

STETTINIUS SAID THE STATE DEPARTMENT HAD RECEIVED NOTHING ON REPORTS THAT ARGENTINA IS PLANNING TO HOLD ELECTIONS. THIS SUBJECT WAS BROUGHT UP BY CORRESPONDENTS IN REFERRING TO A BUENOS AIRES REPORT THAT THE ARGENTINE GOVERNMENT HAD CREATED A COMMISSION TO DRAFT A STATUTE PERMITTING REESTABLISHMENT OF POLITICAL PARTIES.

THIS MOVE BY THE FARRELL REGIME WAS INTERPRETED IN THE REPORT AS A "STEP TOWARD FULFILMENT" OF THE GOVERNMENT'S PROMISE TO CALL ELECTIONS.

QUESTIONED ABOUT ASSERTIONS IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS IN LONDON YESTERDAY THAT THE UNITED STATES WAS BLOCKING BRITAIN FROM LATIN AMERICA TRADE MARKETS, STETTINIUS SAID THAT WHILE HE HAD NO COMMENT HE FELT QUITE SURE THE ALLEGATIONS WERE GROSSLY EXAGGERATED.

SIX ALLIED ARMIES GAIN IN ALL-OUT DRIVE TO SMASH NAZIS ON 300-MILE WEST FRONT

BIG BATTLE RAGES

Combined Armies Launch Mighty Winter Assault Against Germans.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Nov. 16.—(AP) Two more American armies, smashing forward under one of the greatest aerial and artillery bombardments of the war, joined the four Allied armies already on the attack today as the long Western front flamed into a general Winter offensive aimed at the heart of Germany.

NOV 17 1944

The long-hidden U. S. Ninth army, which slipped quietly into the line north of Aachen weeks ago, and the veteran American First army launched simultaneous assaults at midday inside the Reich through the gaping hole already torn in Hitler's Siegfried line.

Both American armies registered sizeable gains in the opening hours of their offensive, overrunning numerous small towns and villages.

Ninth Enters Battle

The Ninth, taking its place between the British Second and American First armies, lashed out north of Aachen on a nine-mile arc between Gellenkirchen and Eschweiler and swept ahead 2,000 yards to within four miles of the Roer river.

Resistance was heaviest in the area of Setrick, about four miles east of Ubach

Associated Press Correspondent Wes Gallagher, at the front, said many objectives were taken ahead of schedule. The little towns of Euchen, five miles northeast of Aachen, and Immendorf, Beggendorf and Floverich, all from two to three miles east of Geilenkirchen, were captured in the first few hours. Shocked German prisoners were taken by the score as the Americans broke through the crust of enemy defenses.

At the hour of assault the Eighth Air force sent more than 1,200 heavy bombers under 450 fighter escort hammering across the skies and loosening a storm of anti-personnel bombs on Duren and Eschweiler, between Aachen and the Rhine in a tactical assault comparable to that which touched off the St. Lo break-through in France.

Hodges' Forces Drive Ahead

The U. S. First army under Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges leaped from muddy foxholes at 11:00 a.m. and launched the assault on an undisclosed sector of the front under the drumming thunder of bombs and heavy artillery raining on enemy positions ahead.

On the left flank, the mysterious U. S. Ninth, struck at 12:45 p.m., plowing into Germany from eastern Holland at another undisclosed sector behind a big aerial bombardment after an 800-mile leap-frogging trek across the paths of other Allied armies that befuddled the Germans.

From the front dispatches filed through strict censorship restrictions emerged one fact — for the first time the United States now has four great armies hammering against Germany.

These concerted blows were dealt even as the U. S. Third closed a nutcracker on Metz in the second week of its offensive, the British Second drove to within a mile of the Maas river facing Germany some 30 miles north of Aachen in the second day of its attack, and the U. S. Seventh and French First armies struck deeper into the German Vosges mountain lines guarding the southern Rhineland.

A front dispatch said the First army chose the first break in the weather to attack, and Hodges was pictured as confident of success despite the mire and muddy roads.

For days convoys had splashed up the roads with food and supplies, guns had been switched to new positions, and tanks plowed up through deep mud, ready to support the infantry.

The U. S. Ninth under Lt. Gen. William H. "Texas Bill" Simpson slammed against Hitler's homeland defenses after springing literally from nowhere into the fight for the West Wall.

Great Strategic Move

Last heard from more than two months ago when it seized the Breton port of Brest, this army had moved silently through France, Belgium and Holland in what a front dispatch declared was one of the best strategy stories of the war.

While its sector or the force employed was not indicated, the fact that it began with an air bombardment and got continued bombing support suggested the blow was a heavy one.

The Eighth Air force disclosed that most of its bombs were fragmentation, designed to wipe out troops without cratering the ground to hamper the oncoming tanks and infantry. The bombs plummeted on field batteries and anti-aircraft guns.

Despite a series of counter-attacks, the U. S. Third army of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., smashed three miles south to within one and a half miles north of Metz and narrowed the lane of retreat from the Lorraine bastion to seven miles.

In the thrust, elements of the 95th division overran Feve and Quaraille and captured Woippy, a mile and a half north of Metz. Other forces were the same distance away at two points on the south as the big guns of the fortress still blazed defiance.

Strong forces of German infantry, sallying from positions just west of Metz, recaptured Fort Hubert, but the Americans hung on to advanced positions planted [illegible] miles west of the c[illegible]

(A Berlin military commentator, apparently preparing the home front for the news of Metz's fall, said the main German defenses lay to the east and Metz "is by no means a key German position.")

Attack and counterattack blended into one single swirl of conflict to the south, where the Fifth infantry seized Augny, two miles southwest of Metz and cut in behind Fort Verdun, another of those big subterranean fortresses standing sentinel before the city.

Yanks Driven From Peltrie

A counterattack pushed the Americans from Peltrie, two and a half miles southeast of Metz.

Meanwhile the First big armored clash since the Third army's onslaught began broke 30 miles southeast of Metz around Bourgaltroff, 20 miles south of the Saar frontier.

On a battlefield far too muddy for tanks, elements of the Fourth armored division slugged back German panzers wading out from their bulge positions near the reversed Maginot line. At least two enemy tanks were knocked out, but some of the heaviest artillery fire yet seen on this front held the Fourth's gains to about a mile.

Every road and rail line still open out of Metz was within easy artillery range, but clouds dropping to tree-top level prevented aerial observation of any possible withdrawal.

The Germans themselves said all civilians had been evacuated from Metz, and the weaker than expected defense indicated the Germans may have pulled out all but rearguards to save manpower for the battle at the German border and the Rhine.

North of Metz, the bridgeheads in the Koenigsmacher-Uckange areas across the Moselle river were extended steadily, reaching the area of Ewendorff—six miles east of the river and four miles south of the German border—after a mile advance astride old Maginot Line positions.

Twenty-three miles southeast of Metz, the Americans seized the World War I battlefield of Morhange and pushed a mile and a half east to Racrange, but three miles north in the Lansdorf area the Germans threw in one of the stiffest counterblows yet.

The German road center of Dieuze, 32 miles southeast of Metz, was hard pressed as American cleared more Germans from a wooded ridge overlooking the town as other forces broke into Marshal, five miles west.

600 Prisoners Taken

Yesterday's battling through the mud yielded 600 prisoners, bringing the Third army's total since the offensive opened Nov. 8 to 7,146.

The British drive in Eastern Holland, which opened with a five mile gain yesterday, was rolling toward the Maas and the German border at a clip that suggested the enemy was pulling back for a stand on the east bank of the stream, a British headquarters spokesman said.

A front dispatch said British Tommies had swept to within a mile of the Maas before the strategic Dutch town of Roermond, gateway to the enemy's industrial Ruhr valley and but three and a half miles from the German border.

Attacking along a 10-mile front with little more than token resistance before Roermond, the Second army took Heythuijzen, Grathem, Baexem, Donk and Meijel. It was from Meijel that the Germans launched an abortive counterdrive several weeks ago.

Then the British pressed on and captured Horn, a mile and a half west of Roermond and the Rhine, and Haelen, two and a half miles northwest.

Lieutenant General Miles C. Dempsey's 2d Army thus was in positions about thirty-five miles west of the German Rhineland cities of Duesseldorf and Duisburg. A front dispatch said the British were in control of all approaches to Roermond.

Colonial troops of the French 1st Army, at the southern end of the front, fighting across both sides of the flooded Doubs River, plowed through deep snow to a point eleven miles south of Belfort, at the approaches of a pass that opens out into the southern Rhineland.

Moroccans, Algerians and Senegalese, attacking along a twenty-five-mile front with the aid of an artillery barrage, overran Marvelise, Montenois, Lougres, Ecot, Ecurcey, Gemonval, Onans, Bretigy and Vermondans, all thirteen to seventeen miles south or southwest of Belfort.

Reinforced by men of the French Forces of the Interior, this corps, under command of General Marie-Emile Bethouart, who led French troops in Norway in the first year of the war, were nearing Montbeliard, nine miles south of Belfort.

The American 7th Army, to the north, made new gains despite firmer German resistance in an area thirty miles southeast of Nancy. The Americans captured Ste. Pole, four miles northeast of Baccarat, after a hard fight, but Germans dug into high ground ahead held up further advances.

Great Offensive Is Believed On—Huge Air Barrage Paves Way East of Aachen—British and French Advance.

London, Nov. 16 (A. P.).—The American First and Ninth Armies, paced by a 1,700-plane bombardment of German defenses northeast of Aachen, launched a massive offensive into the Rhineland today.

Lieut.-Gen. Courtney H. Hodges's First Army sprang forward at 11 o'clock as 1,200 heavy bombers crashed their bombs on the Duren-Eschweiler arc from four to six miles ahead of the infantry lines east and southeast of Aachen.

An hour and forty-five minutes later the American Ninth Army, whose whereabouts had been a secret for two months, plunged into a new assault on the German homeland defenses near the Dutch frontier, and the entire 400-mile Allied front from the marshy lowlands of Holland to the Alps of Switzerland was in motion.

This may be Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's all-out winter offensive. At least six great armies are on the march.

Lieut.Gen. William (Texas Bill) Simpson's Ninth Army popped up at the German front door after being transferred 800 miles across France, Belgium and Holland into Germany and moved across the lines of communication of several other armies. Apparently it was attacking north of the American First Army's Aachen sector.

For days the First Army had been preparing for this move. Convoys rolled over muddy roads to the front with food and ammunition and other battle supplies. Guns were drawn up in new positions in the snow-covered fields and tanks plowed in, getting ready to support the infantry. Supply was the big problem—and once he got his supplies, Gen. Hodges was ready for the attack. The break in the weather turned his legions loose.

Planes Batter Nazi Positions.

After a week of waiting for clear weather, the Flying Fortresses and Liberators, with nearly 500 fighters, attacked the Germans with 4,800 tons of bombs ahead of the First Army in a tactical assault similar to that which preceded the St. Lo breakthrough in Normandy last July 25 and the offensive by Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army in the Metz sector eight days ago.

Fragmentation bombs fell on a fifteen-mile stretch of the Cologne highway between Eschweiler and Duren ahead of the First Army veterans of the St. Lo breakthrough. Anti-aircraft positions, gun batteries and other German defenses were showered.

The Americans have been holding positions in Stolberg about four miles southwest of Eschweiler and in Hurtgen Forest about six miles southwest of Duren.

Front line dispatches said Gen. Hodges had been withholding his attack for a week in order to have good bombing weather to accompany his artillery barrage and infantry assault. Rain, sleet, and snow made the ground mushy.

Other Armies Forge Ahead.

Gen. Eisenhower's other armies which had joined the assault one by one, forged ahead on the flaming front. The British Second Army drove to within a mile of the Maas in Holland and captured Horn, only two miles from the German bastion of Roermond, thirty-four miles west of Dusseldorf on the Rhine.

The First French Army, which joined the array of offensives only yesterday, pushed forward on a 25-mile front on both sides of the Doubs River to a point eleven miles southwest of Belfort in the gap just north of Switzerland.

Gen. Patton's Third Army tightened its grip on Metz from the north and also captured Morhange.

The Third closed to within a mile and a half of Metz on the south, north and west, edging in yard by yard through the suburbs and by-passing dangerous forts. The Americans were attacking the last fortifications south of the city.

Lieut. Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey's British forces, riding in thick-skinned converted armored vehicles, reached the town of Haelen only a mile from the Maas in a three-mile advance, and seized Roggel, little over a mile from the Zig Canal north of Roermond.

The British were hardly able to keep pace with the retreating Nazis and pushed into Nunhem and Neer, both north of Roermond and about a mile from the Maas.

Yanks Close to Metz

A sudden break north of Metz, old Roman fortress which never has been taken by storm in modern times, brought American Third Army troops in their eight-day old offensive to within a mile and a half of the northern outskirts of the city, although the Americans to the southeast and west gave ground slightly, losing one fort and a village.

North of Metz near the Luxembourg border, the Americans astride the Maginot Line pushed forward another mile near Ewendorf, only four miles from the German frontier.

Below Metz the Seventh Army took Ste. Pole, forty-two miles from Strasbourg, the closest the Allies have yet come to that key crossing of the Rhine.

While United States Third Army tanks and infantry hammered at the southern outskirts of Metz around Magny, units on the west side of the Moselle punched down from the north and seized Woippy, a village between two of the great forts that guard the city.

In southeastern Holland Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's northern armies got within three miles of the Maas river in the Roermond area in two-day gains of seven or eight miles.

French Take 10 Villages

The French First Army, opening up a heavy new attack under a strong artillery barrage yesterday at dawn, smashed forward four or five miles on the approaches to the Belfort Gap gateway into southwestern Germany. Advancing on a 25-mile front on both sides of the Doubs river, the French occupied at least ten villages. One of them was Arcey, 11 miles southwest of the village of Belfort.

A field dispatch said heavy German attacks prevented further American advances toward Metz from the south and west. Although the Fifth Division held tight about a mile and a half south of the city, the Germans recaptured Peltre, two and a half miles southeast.

Fort Hubert Also Lost

Woippy, a mile and a half northwest of Metz, was occupied by the 95th Division's 379th Regiment after breaking through for three miles. However, the 379th lost Fort Hubert, west of Metz, to an enemy flank attack.

Attacks were made by the Nazis in the Enschweiler-Landorf area on the right flank of the Third Army front in Lorraine, but they were repulsed by the Americans, who pressed their lines forward.

Gains In Dieuze Area

Northwest of Dieuze, troops of the 35th Division stormed into Morhange and Baronweiler and cleared Gueblin. West of Dieuze units of the 26th Division captured Marsal and were clearing the last Germans out of the wooded ridge overlooking Dieuze itself.

British Gain In Holland

There was no report of important changes in the Koenigsmacher-Uckange bridgehead north of Metz. In the vicinity of Thionville a small number of fighter-bombers went after gun positions and transportation of the retreating Germans. South of Thionville the towns of Feves and Kuaraille were captured in the thrust to Woippy.

30. 24 — 20421

In southeastern Holland, the British advancing rapidly on a ten-mile front reached positions only a mile from the Maas river at Wessem, and a spokesman at Field Marshal Montgomery's headquarters said "there are many signs of a regular enemy withdrawal."

Ned Nordness, Associated Press correspondent at the front, reported that the British now control all the approaches to Roermond as the "Maas bulge" disintegrates with signs that the Nazis will offer little opposition short of the river itself.

Three Towns Taken

The towns of Heythuijzen, Grathem and Baexem fell as the British drove directly toward Roermond. All lie within a five-mile radius of the Dutch city, located on the east bank of the Maas, with the German border only two miles beyond.

"The battle is going well," declared a 21st Army Group spokesman. "We can say the troops are doing an excellent job."

In the third assault of the November offensive toward the Rhine, Moroccan, Algerian and Senegalese troops of the French army, reinforced by FFI units, struck forward through heavy snow, nearing Montbeliard, south of Belfort.

Bethouarts Leads French

The French forces were under the command of Gen. Marie Emil Bethouarts, a veteran soldier, who led French troops in Norway in the first year of the war. His attack front extended northwest from a point three miles from the Swiss border.

Resistance from the Germans in the Seventh Army sector was heavier, but the village of Ste. Pole, northeast of Baccarat, was captured and the Americans made small gains against Germans dug in on commanding heights. The Seventh also maintained its pressure southeast of Bruyeres and the Germans were withdrawing slowly.

Frost, snow and mud hampered the ground operations on all sectors. Bad weather also held down air operations.

Great Aerial Drive.

In all, more than 3,000 heavy bombers sparked the great new offensive with thousands of American and British planes hitting the west wall in close support of the ground troops.

Lancasters of the Royal Air Force, 1,150 strong, attacked the heavily fortified towns of Duren, Julich and Heinsberg, flying in tight formations and concentrating their mighty bomb loads. About 250 Mustangs and Spitfires escorted the R. A. F. bombers.

Railway yards at Munich were Amer_ d .e_F HRDLL L LI left battered and burning by 600 heavy bombers of the Fifteenth United States Air Force escorted from Italy by 800 fighters.

German pilots failed to come up and offer battle though the weather was suitable. Fighters went down to the deck and strafed enemy troops and ground installations near Duren and Frankfurt, but still the Nazi planes kept their wheels on the ground.

Nearly 5,000 tons of fragment bombs were laid across ammunition and gasoline supply dumps, troop areas, bunkers, barracks and everything in sight north of Eschweiler and west of Duren.

It was the big parade five miles above Europe," said Col. Joseph A. Muller of Winnetka, Ill., who led the Americans. "As we made the horseshoe turn and started back we saw wing after wing of heavies coming as far as the eye could see."

What Lies Ahead On West Front

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Paris, Nov. 16 (AP)—Here are the distances in front of the Allied six-army offensive:

British Army, 37 miles from the Ruhr at Duisberg.

American Ninth Army, 31 miles from Dusseldorf.

American First Army, 28 miles from Cologne.

American Third Army, 13½ miles from German border near Saarbrucken.

French First Army, 40 miles from the Rhine beyond Belfort Gap.

U. S. First Army Beats Germans To The Draw

By DON WHITEHEAD

With the United States First Army in Germany, Nov. 16 (AP)—Behind one of the great aerial bombardments of the war and a thunderous artillery barrage, Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' First Army plowed deeper into Germany today.

Tonight a staff officer declared, "This was a day when everything clicked. The attack is going well."

Hodges beat the Germans to the punch and apparently caught them as they were trying to build up forces for an assault against the First Army.

"It was a race to see which would hit first," an officer said. "They were building up to take a sock at us, and we beat them to the punch."

Big Guns Pound Germans

Hundreds of big guns pounded at the Germans, in addition to the blows of scores of tank destroyers used for indirect fire.

Hodges waited for five days for a break in the weather so that he could get support from the United States Air Force and the RAF, and that break came today as heavy clouds broke.

Against patches of blue sky we could see the mighty armada of Fortresses and Lancasters roaring over.

At first there was only a grumble of many engines above the clouds. Then the clouds broke and the Fortresses were soaring in plain sight.

1,200 U. S. Heavies

It is known that 1,200 Fortresses and Liberators and 1,150 RAF bombers were in the attack in addition to medium and fighter-bombers.

"This is the largest heavy bomber strike in support of ground troops in the war," an air officer said.

The bomb line was so well marked that there were no shorts as in the St. Lo bombardment, where American bombs fell inside the American lines, killed and wounded hundreds of troops and mortally wounded Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair.

When the heavy bombers droned overhead, German civilians in the towns at the front ran from their homes to seek safety in caves and shelters. Some women sobbed in fright, and when artillery roared near by they seemed to think it was the noise of bombs falling around them.

Jumped Off At 12.45 P. M.

At 12.45 P. M. the Americans rose from their muddy, cold foxholes and went into the attack which Hodges had been preparing since the fall of Aachen October 21.

We stood at the edge of Mausbach, seven miles east of Aachen, to watch the attack get under way.

Below the clouds Lightnings dived on enemy positions with machine guns chattering. Down the road on which we stood a mortar squad was chucking shells at the enemy.

A few hundred yards across the valley guns began to roar. Flames lanced from the muzzles and brown smoke curled over the fields beyond a cluster of tanks rolled forward with guns flaming. At the end of a ridge shells exploded and sent columns of dirt and smoke pluming against the sky.

"A Helluva Sight"

"That's a helluva sight, isn't it," said Capt. William MacPherson, of Hobart, Ind., as we looked on this miniature battlefield spread before us.

Tanks rolling across the field startled a herd of black and white cattle which fled in confusion.

Lieut. Col. Wallace Nichols, of Albany, N. Y., came up to the group watching the battle picture and said, "You had better get the hell out of here now because the Germans probably will lay in a barrage here soon."

We took his advice and a little later the Germans opened up on the area with artillery.

At one regimental command post in the woods, a little group of officers bent over maps on a table, studying the terrain, while one of them was working to get communications reestablished with advance units whose lines temporarily were out of commission from shelling.

Everything Confused

The colonel looked up and smiled, "The situation is normal now. Everything is confused."

Ahead in the woods, three units were slowly working their way forward with the enemy shelling the area—but they were making steady progress. These troops were commanded by Capt. Stanley Winters, of Topeka, Kan.; Capt. Victory Y. Briggs, of New York city, and Capt. Frank Kolb, of Paducah, Ky.

"We are moving all right," the colonel said, "but we always expect reports faster than we can get them from forward troops."

9th Army GI's Keep Promise, Break Through

NOV 17 1944

By W. GALLAGHER

With the United States Ninth Army in Germany, Nov. 16 (AP)—Tired of long weeks of stationary warfare, begrimed GI's in frozen foxholes and mud-caked tanks carried out their promise to make the United States Ninth Army's initial attack against Hitler's West Wall a success today by breaking through the crust of defenses to take many initial objectives after the assault started.

I watched at least three German towns reel under the tank, infantry, air and artillery attack and fall into American hands—disgorging shell-shocked prisoners by the score. Several others were taken in the initial advance starting at 12.45 P. M. today.

General Talks To Men

The commanding general in this sector, worried by the constant rain, cold and snow which was threatening to bog down the attack, went into the field yesterday and talked to GI tank drivers, infantrymen and artillerymen and asked them if they thought they could carry out the attack. To a man they replied "yes" and said they could move their tanks through the vast plain of mud and took him on a trip to prove it.

From the top of a slag heap several hundred feet high I could see the GI's carrying out their promise. The tanks sometimes slowed down to two and three miles an hour but they kept going with foot troops trudging beside them.

Big Guns Sweep Enemy

Big guns systematically swept position after position along the front line 4,000 yards away.

"We have been asking to do this for the last few days we have been on top of this heap of dirt," declared Corporal Clarence Hirsch, of Dubuque, Iowa. "I bet those Krauts wish they never had been born."

"This is the best show since St. Lo," said Corporal Joe W. Kopiste, of Lake, Mich., another observer. "They must have brought guns up from the CBI theater for this show. It looks like we've got everything."

Barrage Covers Tank Advance

Under cover of the barrage, scores of tanks started their motors and pulled out from under the trees and camouflage nets at our feet and rolled ponderously through the mud toward the front line.

Private John M. Flood, of Woodland, Mich., and Private Donald A. Broen, Fort Wayne, Ind., crawled out sleepily from a blanket-covered foxhole.

The tanks and tank destroyers followed by supply trains, crawled through the breaches in the Siegfried Line past ripped-up pillboxes toward Immendorf and Floverich. Up to H-hour not a single German shell had replied to the mighty barrage.

But, suddenly, black and orange flashes appeared over the advancing tanks.

German Guns Open Up

"Boy, look at the pasting those guys are getting," commented Sergt. Harold Rau, of Mount Pleasant, Mich., who was one of the crew in the observation post. The towns just spewed smoke and debris high in the air.

Then there was a deeper roar and hundreds of heavy bombers five and six miles high spread vapor trails across the sky in the direction of targets far behind the German lines. Pathfinder planes rained down marked bombs, leaving long, wiggly cotton threads in the sky which marked the path of hundreds of tons of explosives. In the next hour, flight after flight came over and patches of blue sky were crossed and crisscrossed with markers until it looked like a giant chessboard for crazy players.

Forty minutes before jump-off time, Lieut. Lowell Carpenter, of Ulysses, Pa., who was directing the artillery fire, said, "Hold your hat, here we go."

He hardly had the words out of his mouth when houses, gullies and slag heaps erupted smoke and flame as every gun that could fire hurled shells into German positions.

U. S. 9th Army Sped 800 Miles To Fool Nazis

After Capture of Brest It Leapfrogged Other Armies to Pop Up in Germany

WITH THE AMERICAN 9TH ARMY, Germany, Nov. 16 (AP).—The announcement today that the American 9th Army is in action was made after a two-month silence concerning its movements. The 9th was last heard from two months ago when the strategic Atlantic port of Brest, France, was taken by it.

Commanded by Lieutenant General William H. Simpson, who is known familiarly as "Texas Bill," the 9th is one of four American armies now operating against Germany from the west. The others are the 1st, commanded by Lieutenant General Courtney H. Hodges; the 3d, commanded by Lieutenant General George S. Patton jr., now on the offensive at Metz, and the 7th, commanded by Lieutenant General Alexander M. Patch, in the Belfort Region.

Since Brest fell General Simpson, a Texan with a cowboy walk and sharp features, has moved the 9th Army across three countries, France, Belgium and Holland, to its position inside Germany.

The 9th Army leapfrogged almost 800 miles across the paths of other armies to deceive the Germans. The move constituted one of the best strategy stories of the war.

Before the Brest operation the 9th Army was first mentioned at Beaugency, France, where it accepted the surrender of nearly 20,000 German prisoners. On Oct. 31 Allied supreme headquarters announced that the 9th had captured more than 50,000 of the enemy in its short series of operations. The only division yet identified as a component of the 9th is the 83d, commanded by Major General Robert C. Macon.

General Simpson has been with his troops constantly since they first took the field. He visited by jeep and plane virtually every unit of his command and inspected each sector of the front.

In temperament Simpson is probably closer to Lieutenant General Omar N. Bradley, field commander of American forces in this theater of the war, than any other American general at the front. He seldom raises his voice, even when he is angry. He has less hair even than General Dwight D. Eisenhower. One of his staff said: "He looks like a Texas cowboy who got into the Army and never got out."

Simpson is gregarious and is noted as one of the best story tellers in the Army.

NINTH HAS BEEN ARMY OF MYSTERY

With the United States Ninth Army, Germany, Nov. 16 (A. P.).—The United States Ninth Army, which attacked German homeland defenses near the Dutch border today, is commanded by Lieut.-Gen. William H. Simpson, who is known familiarly as "Texas Bill."

The announcement that the Ninth had sprung virtually into the West Wall was made after a two-month silence concerning its movements. The Ninth was last heard from two months ago when the great Atlantic port of Brest was toppled.

The Ninth Army was first mentioned at Beaugency in France, where it accepted the surrender of nearly 20,000 prisoners. On October 31, Supreme Headquarters announced that the Ninth had captured more than 50,000

Nazis in its short span of operations. The only division yet identified as a component of the Ninth is the Eighty-third Infantry, commanded by Major-Gen. Robert C. Macon.

Gen. Simpson has been with his troops constantly since they first took the field. By jeep and plane, he visited virtually every unit of his command and personally inspected each sector of the front.

In temperament, Gen. Simpson is probably closer to Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Field Commander of United States Forces, than to any other general at the front. He seldom raises his voice, even when he is angry. He has less hair even than Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. One of his staff said, "He looks like a Texas cowboy who got into the Army and never got out."

Gen. Simpson is a close student of military tactics. He is gregarious and is noted as one of the best story tellers in the Army.

Tankmen 'Stick Necks Out' To Test Foe's Line In France

By Robert C. Wilson

With American Seventh Army Troops in France, Nov. 15 (AP—Delayed)—Hammering at the final hill and town defenses before the German border is a bunch of reconnaissance men whose job it is to stick their necks out.

In particular, they are the men of a tank company assigned to explore roads in support of infantry.

They have been at it for 135 continuous days, all the way from the Normandy beachheads.

Raced Into Belgium

"Our tanks made 180 miles in 72 hours to join up with British units in Tournai and to be the first American tanks in Belgium," Lieut. Eugene K. Snyder, of Detroit, the company commander, said.

These boys also spearheaded the troops who took Rosoy, France, and were the first to cross the Seine below Paris.

This, according to Lieut. Ralph Leighton, of Minneapolis, is how they stick their necks out.

Advance Slowly

"We move down the road in a slow advance and keep moving until we observe enemy positions or are fired on. Then we deploy the tanks and stay in concealed positions until we determine the enemy's fire power.

"Then three tanks advance on the position, with two behind to give covering fire. In case of house defense, we knock it down with shells. On a ground position, we use 30-caliber machine guns most often."

When they find their necks too far out they radio back for artillery to provide a knockout.

Artillery, Tanks' Value In Saving Men Is Proved

By Lewis Hawkins

Pouilly, France, Nov. 15 (AP—Delayed)—The Second Battalion of the United States Tenth Infantry Regiment, commanded by Major Harris Walker, of Bowling Green, Ky., stormed the town of Pouilly, two and a half miles south of Metz, yesterday and mopped up most of it, taking more than 100 prisoners in a few hours.

But morning found the Germans dug in strongly a few hundred yards west of the town, in a combined orchard and vineyard on the ridge leading westward toward the Seille river. From these good positions the Nazis loosed sporadic fire from their rifles, a couple of machine guns and several 20-millimeter guns.

Two Costly Moves Considered

With Metz beckoning down the road, Walker could have sent his men driving northward toward Magny, only a mile from the fortress city, leaving the Germans on his flank and risking a counterblow from the rear.

Or he might have sent superior forces piling headlong into the enemy positions to clear it out at bayonet point.

Either course, however, probably would have cost many lives, so Walker sat tight and called for artillery and mortar support. After 30 minutes of shelling, a German ran out waving a Red Cross flag, and when fire was halted a dozen or more badly shaken enemy soldiers crawled from their foxholes and came toward the village as Pfc. Fred Jacobson, of Woodmere, L. I., shouted instructions in German.

Walker then ordered three tanks to nose out the German positions in a little lane 150 yards from the west end of the vineyard, while Lieut. Nathan Sarpan, of Trenton, N. J., and Lieut. Ray Crumrine, of Barrington, Ill., formed G company for an assault.

For 20 minutes the tanks—one commanded by Sergt. Leonard Gullicksrud, of Bemidji, Minn.—raked the woods with machine-gun fire and three-inch shells. Before the tank guns stopped smoking our infantry pushed down the lane and into the vineyard, firing their rifles from the hip.

Not more than a dozen shots were fired by the Germans as the doughboys overran them, although they were in well-prepared positions. Tagging along behind the infantrymen I could hear a ragged chorus of "Kamerad" over the crackle of the Garands.

No Yanks Killed, Wounded

In all, about 60 prisoners were rounded up before the company pushed on toward the Seille river line without an American killed or wounded.

The whole operation was an example of the effective use of firepower and modern equipment to save the lives of our troops.

Yank Wins DSC For 2 Bazooka Shots

With the 30th Infantry Division on the Western Front, Nov. 16 (AP)—Pfc. Peter Preslipsky, a coal miner from West Leechburg, Pa., who knocked out two Nazi tanks with two shots from a bazooka in a crucial battle in France, has received the Distinguished Service Cross.

Preslipsky's fire doomed a column of Mark IV's when the Germans tried to separate the First and Third armies in the Mortain sector.

"I was scared stiff, but something had to be done quick," Preslipsky said. "The Panzers came roaring down the road, shooting up the place. I ran alongside them and fired from a hedgerow. Not a man of the crews escaped."

The two burning Mark IVs blocked the road. Other Nazi tanks piling up behind them became easy targets for rocket-firing Typhoon planes and Thunderbolts.

GI Declines General's Offer To Trade Boots

Advanced Command Post, Supreme Headquarters, Nov. 16 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower came near swapping his sheepskin-lined overshoes for a GI's pair of beat-up arctics today, but the soldier finally turned down the deal.

Squishing through knee-deep mud near the front lines, Eisenhower paused to talk to Staff Sergeant Darrell Van Ness, of California, a Stars and Stripes writer reported.

The Wish

"Sure wish I had a pair of overshoes like yours," Van Ness said.

Eisenhower hopped on one leg in the mud while he tugged at a frozen zipper.

"No, General," Van Ness said finally, "I guess you'll need those flight boots more than I will. The deal's off."

The Compromise

The four-star commander compromised. He offered the soldier 500 francs—on the line—for his first dead Jerry.

Eisenhower inspected American installations Wednesday afternoon with army and corps commanders.

NAZIS USING NEW SECRET WEAPON

With the United States Seventh Army in France, Nov. 16 (A. P.).—Lieut.Col. Charles Hodges of Maplewood, N. J., commander of a reconnaissance squadron whose men are mostly from New Jersey, asserts this is the truth.

Colonel, Still in Air, Reports "Smoothest Landing Ever"

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS IN GERMANY, Nov. 8 (Delayed) (AP).—"Stars and Stripes" reports the following from its agent with the Air Corps:

A colonel flying a transport plane got the clear signal to land, and as the plane skimmed in he looked back and remarked proud-[illegible] landing I ever made!"

"But, sir," protested a sergeant standing behind him. "You're still fifteen feet in the air."

GERMANS KILL 135 IN BLAST

Story Of How Dutch Were Lured To Death Is Told

Heusden, the Netherlands, Nov. 16 (AP)—How the Germans deliberately blasted to death 135 women and children they had lured into the basement of the town hall "for safety" was described today by the burgomaster of this medieval Dutch town of 2,000 people.

The Mayor—weary from attempts to restore some semblance of order in the stricken community—said the Germans dynamited the town hall and two beautiful old Catholic and Protestant churches before withdrawing under the pressure of British advances.

Terrible, Terrible

"It was terrible, terrible," he said. "The Germans pretended to be helping our people find shelter from British artillery and then they themselves set off dynamite which killed 135 of the 200 people in the basement of the town hall."

He gave this account of the tragedy, which was first announced a week ago by the official Netherlands agency:

"Between 2 and 3 o'clock November 5, the 200 villagers were huddled in the basement when suddenly there was a terrific explosion.

Structures Mined

"The building shuddered and caved in, leaving a pile of dusty rubble. Only 65 of those who took shelter, on the Germans' advice escaped death. Simultaneously the two ancient churches of Heusden were blasted into a great pile of shattered brick.

"The Germans had placed dynamite under the structures, using a plunger to blow up the three buildings at the same time, after setting a time fuse to allow them to escape the blast."

Spain Recognizes De Gaulle Regime

Paris, Nov. 16 (AP)—The Spanish diplomatic delegation announced today that the Madrid Government had recognized the de Gaulle regime as the provisional govern[illegible] ment of the French republic.

The Spanish envoy, Jose Antonio de Sangroniz, delivered a note of recognition to French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault, and in an interview expressed Spain's desire to maintain the "traditional good relations" between the two nations.

New Cabinet Post For France

New York, Nov. 16—Gen. Charles de Gaulle today announced the appointment of Raoul Dautry as Minister of Reconstruction and Town Planning, a new French Cabinet post, a French press agency broadcast said tonight. Dautry was active in the resistance movement, according to the broadcast, reported by the FCC.

Brooklyn Dispute 'Silly': Coward

Paris, Nov. 16 (AP)—Noel Coward said today a controversy in Brooklyn over the alleged slur about Brooklyn troops in his "Middle East Diary" "is silly and idiotic" and probably would result only in increasing sales.

The British actor, author, songsmith, playwright, lecturer, director and what have you, commented:

"I have seen hundreds of boys of all nationalities who are longing to return home, but I am not going to engage in any controversy with the Brooklyn Council" (sic).

Passage Protested

(Brooklyn representatives in the New York City Council and the United States Congress protested this passage in Coward's "Middle East Diary." "Talked to some tough men from Texas and Arizona. They were magnificent specimens and in great heart, but I was less impressed by some of the mournful Brooklyn boys lying there in tears amid the alien corn with nothing worse than a bullet wound in the leg or a fractured arm.")

Coward was in Paris for a three-day stand before touring the fronts in Belgium and Luxembourg. He said he had seen thousands of American troops on his travels and was very impressed by them.

FRENCH RACING GETS SETBACK

Looting Of Sires And Mares By Germans Reported

By MAX HILL

New York, Nov. 16 (AP)—German occupation of France and the Allied campaign of liberation have set French horse racing—both on the flat and through the field—back several years.

The Germans looted many of the better breeding establishments of their leading sires and mares, and it may be necessary to import stock from England to get the breeding industry back on its feet, French racing lovers told me recently in Paris.

Among the missing are such sires as Pharis, Admiral Drake, Monarch, Victrix, Astrophel, Bois Rousell, Brantome and Le Ksar.

Germans' Check Refused

After carting Pharis off to Germany, the Germans sent a check for 600,000 francs to Marcel Boussac, Pharis' owner, but he returned it with a note he wouldn't sell for 15,000,000 francs—about a half million dollars at pre-war rates. He didn't get his stallion back.

The German occupation confused French racing, but the battles in Normandy, center of the breeding industry, made it even worse.

At present three tracks are operating in the Paris area, two flat—Le Tremblay and Maison Lafitte—and one steeplechase, Auteuil. In pre-war days the betting total for even the best days seldom exceeded 11,000,000 francs. But now, with inflation and uncertainty over the eventual value of the franc, the tracks consider it a poor day when they do not average 23,000,000 francs.

Women Smartly Dressed

Attendance is large and the fans for the most part well dressed, the women appearing in gaudy, elaborately decorated hats, smart frocks and mink coats by the dozen. It is difficult to believe, after seeing them, that wealthy Parisians have suffered much hardship from the war.

Two of the better tracks, Saint Cloud and Longchamps, are not operating, although Longchamps ran during the German occupation, with the center field filled with ack-ack guns.

No racing papers are published, and programs at the tracks do not list past performances. Betting is on a "blind" system.

RUSSIAN FORCES CRACK NAZI LINES EAST OF BUDAPEST

HERCHER

Soviet Army Drives to Within in Five Miles of Miskolc.

FALL OF CAPITAL NEAR Germans Hurl in Tanks, Infantry in Effort to Stop Red Attack.

NOV 17 1944

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 17.—(AP) Russian tanks and shock troops cracked the main German defense line 10 miles east of Budapest yesterday in a bitterly-contested three-mile advance, and far to the northeast struck to within five miles of Miskolc, Hungary's fifth city now exposed to Red army artillery fire.

Battling along roads leading around Budapest to Austria and Czechoslovakia, the Russians also crossed the Budapest-Miskolc railway at Vamosgyork, 36 miles northeast of the Hungarian capital, Moscow announced last night.

Supply Lines Cut

This stroke cut the rail supply of German and Hungarian troops clinging to the central section of the trunk line, and threatened their entrapment. The capture of Vamosgyork, where several trains and ammunition stores were declared seized, represented a 12-mile advance north of the fallen enemy stronghold of Jaszbereny, taken Wednesday.

In the frontal assault on Budapest's outer defenses Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukraine army troops captured by storm the rail station of Gyormo, 10 mile seast-southeast of the capital, and nearly a mile northwest of Gyormo village, described by Berlin as the southeastern anchor of the Axis defense arc around Budapest. Gyormo village itself was under assault in battles of "unabated violence," Berlin said.

The Germans were hurling in a considerable number of tanks and self-propelled guns and infantrymen in unsuccessful counterattacks against the converging Russians, a Moscow midnight bulletin said. Five hundred Germans and Hungarians were taken during the day, and one Soviet unit alone killed more than 600 Germans, it said.

Sixteen miles northeast of Budapest other powerful Soviet tank and infantry forces swept through Dany in a headlong race along a road that by-passes Budapest on the north and leads to Vienna, Austrian capital.

Reds Seize Dany

By seizing Dany these units were less than 11 miles southeast of Godollo, strategic road and rail junction governing the routes to Vienna and into central Slovakia, and were by-passsing Hatvan, another strategic town 12 miles to the northeast.

The Soviet bulletin disclosed that Russian troops, expanding their trans-Tisza river front northeast of Budapest to a length of 125 miles, had crossed the upper section of the Tisza at two new points, outflanking the famous wine center of Tokaj and racing in from the east toward imperilled Miskolc.

In the surge which swept across the Budapest-Miskolc railway the Russians seized the six-way road and rail town of Jaszarokszallas, 12 miles south of captured Vamosgyork, and were threatening the rail junction of Hatvan, 10 miles west of Vamosgyork.

Hatvan is the terminal of a line which leaves the Budapest-Miskolc railway and runs through the mountains into central Slovakia, 35 miles beyond. The fall of Pusztamonostor rail station put one Soviet column only eight miles southeast of Hatvan.

In cutting the Miskolc railway at Vamosgyork the Russians drove in behind Axis troops strung out 22 miles to the northeast as far as Fuzesabony, and Berlin said the latter village was being besieged. The Germans apparently now had no alternative except to fall back into the Matra mountains and fight a slow retreat into Slovakia.

Miskolc in northeastern Hungary had been flanked on two sides by the upper wing of Malinovsky's conquerors. Pushing along the Budapest railway south of Miskolc the Russians took Malyi, five miles from Miskolc. Other villages seized in this area included Onod, seven miles southeast of the big objective, and Kisgyor, six miles southwest of Miskolc.

Russians Crack Line East Of Budapest

London, Nov. 16 (AP) — The Berlin radio announced today the loss of the Hungarian town of Jaszarokszallas, 38 miles northeast of Budapest. It is ten miles north of Jaszbereny, whose loss the Germans reported yesterday.

Moscow, Nov. 16 (AP)—The Red army has cracked the German flank east of Budapest and is hurling its armored might through a breach within 12 miles of the Hungarian capital, front dispatches said today. A decisive battle for control of the invasion routes to Austria appeared imminent.

A sustained pounding by wave after wave of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's assault forces forced the enemy into a damaging withdrawal from more than 50 towns and villages, including the large railway junction of Jaszbereny, target of a four-day attack.

Retreat Area 100 Miles Wide

The German withdrawal extended along a 100-mile front from Mende, 12 miles southeast of Budapest, to Korom and other towns ten miles below the north Hungarian rail junction of Miskolc.

The tired and mauled German Panzer units fell back toward the southern base of the Matra Mountains and westward to the perimeter defenses of Budapest.

One Soviet column, following the Jaszbereny-Budapest railway, passed well beyond Mende, 12 miles from the capital, and drew the siege line tighter against the virtually doomed city.

Other Forces Drive North

Other Russian formations of tanks, cavalry and infantry, supported by swarms of attack planes, drove straight north in a continuation of the challenge for mastery of the highway and railway communications leading to Vienna.

The key communication points of Godollo, 15 miles northeast of Budapest, and Hatvan, 30 miles northeast, appeared to be the prize objectives of the northward push. Red army columns were about a dozen miles from each.

Godollo On Railroad

Godollo is on one of the major rail lines running through Budapest to Bratislava and Vienna, while Hatvan is at the entrance of a foothill pass through which another rail line runs into central Slovakia.

The Russian war bulletin said Jaszbereny fell after the Russians began to outflank the city on the northeast and the Germans extended themselves to meet the threat. Red army columns then drove straight into the city and captured it in fierce street fighting.

Soviet Air Force Hunts Nazi Fleet

London, Friday, Nov. 17 (AP)—The Red air force has begun to track down the German fleet hiding in the Baltic, the Moscow radio said early today.

Torpedo planes of the Red Banner Baltic Fleet opened the attack by striking at the big Nazi port of Danzig, a midnight Soviet war bulletin reported. A 6,000-ton German transport was sunk.

Since the RAF sinking of the Tirpitz off northern Norway, the only surface warships left to the Germans are believed trapped in the Baltic—most of them outside the ordinary operating range of the RAF but within striking distance of the Red air force.

'Keitel Target Of Assassin'

New York, Nov. 16—An attempt was made to assassinate Field Marshal General Wilhelm Keitel during his recent visit to the Hungarian front, the Moscow radio said in a broadcast reported today by the Federal Communications Commission.

The broadcast quoted a report from Geneva that rumors in Switzerland say Keitel was wounded and returned to Berlin without visiting Budapest as planned.

365 Big Estates Divided Up by Lublin Poles

340 Others Partly Split Up; Death or Prison Decreed for Praising Fascism

MOSCOW, Nov. 16 (AP).—The Polish Committee of National Liberation has divided 365 Polish estates and partly split up 340 others under "agrarian reform orders," dispatches from Lublin said today.

The Polish Press news service said seventeen of the estates were in Warsaw Province, 138 in Lublin, fifty-seven in Rzeszow, thirteen in Kielce and 140 in Bialystok. Divisions are continuing.

The Soviet-sponsored committee, now controlling 23,000 square miles of territory and 7,000,000 inhabitants, also published new army regulations providing death or imprisonment for any one publicly attacking the state system of new Poland or praising fascism. Imprisonment was provided for persons publicly inciting to national, race or religious hatred.

Liberated areas of Poland are largely agricultural, while the Germans occupy most of the industrial sections.

[Reports in London said the fabulous estates of Count Potocki had been confiscated. A spokesman for the exiled government could not confirm the report, but said "it is quite likely," adding: "If the Lublin committee has not seized the estates, the Polish government will when the war is over, for our post-war plans envisage the breaking up of all large estates. No person will be permitted to own more than 125 acres." Potocki is living in London. His estates, probably the largest in Poland, lie in territory captured by the Russians. His private museum was a showplace.]

Moscow Press Hails Anniversary

Moscow, Nov. 16 (AP)—The Soviet press hailed today's 11th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America as the most important date "in the history of relations between the two greatest democratic countries in the world."

Izvestia declared the effectiveness of the cooperation between the two nations is "brightly expressed" in the struggle of their freedom-loving peoples with the enemy.

Thousands of Tons of Fragmentation Bombs Dropped in Aachen Area.

LONDON, Nov. 16—(AP) Three thousand heavy bombers and almost as many fighters and mediums launched a massive new aerial assault on western Germany today with 2,500 Lancasters, Fortresses and Liberators touching off a gigantic Winter offensive by the American First and Ninth armies.

Five bombers and five fighters were missing from 1,200 Eighth airforce bombers and 450 fighters that poured into the Aachen area for an hour, unloosing 5,000 tons of fragmentation bombs between Duren and Aschweiler on the road to the Reich.

NOV 17 1944

Support U. S. Troops

It was the first time since D-Day RAF Heavyweights had struck in direct support of advancing American troops.

The Lancasters concentrated their approximately 5,000 tons of TNT on buildings in the vicinity of Duren, Julich and Heinsberg that had become storage depots for German ammunition and gasoline.

About 250 Mustangs and Spitfires escorted the British heavy bombers in their assault on enemy installations and troops east of the Holland panhandle.

Nearly 5,000 tons of fragment bombs were laid across ammunition and gasoline supply dumps, troop areas, bunkers, barracks and everything in sight north of Eschweiler and west of Duren. Coming in at 20,000 feet, some groups were able to bomb visually. Others used instruments.

Small Town Aflame

"There seemed to be flashes of exploding bombs everywhere," said Sgt. Vere D. Clair of Lancaster, Calif., making his 78th consecutive mission. "Our bombs splattered the entire area." The ball turret man said he could see a small town on fire.

Wearing his day-old maple leaves and a smile as broad as a tree, Maj. Douglas L. Winter, Toledo, Ohio, led a combat wing that switched from instruments to visual bombing and watched the bombs "drop on the aiming point."

The Eighth Air force bombers poured into the battle area for more than an hour after the attack started at 11:15 a.m.

Mustang pilots destroyed 20 locomotives and 92 freight cars while strafing railway lines near Frankfurt and Giessen. The low-flying fighters were led in over the fields and fences by Capt. Henry S. Ville of Paradise, Calif., and Capt. Dale E. Shafer of Dayton, Ohio.

The RAF announced that its big fleet was controlled throughout the day by Master Bombers, who claimed that all attacks were highly concentrated.

This was the first time that the term "Master Bomber" had been used officially, although it was no innovation. The Master Bombers control every stage of the attack, identifying the targets and directing the subsequent attacks. They are not necessarily connected with the pathfinder force which marks the way.

An armada of 1,200 Flying Fortresses and Liberators from England started a raging inferno 15 miles long between Duren and Eschweiler, east and north of Aachen, pouring 36,000 fragmentation bombs into German positions in front of American armies hammering on the front door to Berlin. The heavy bombers were escorted by 450 Mustangs and Thunderbolts.

Rip Siegfried Line

Ninth Air Force medium bombers also ripped into Siegfried line installations along the Western front, and RAF Typhoons raked roads and railway lines in Holland with cannon and machinegun fire.

Railway yards at Munich were left battered and burning by 600 Fifteenth Air Force heavy bombers escorted from Italy by 300 fighters.

3,000 Big Bombers Blast Path For Advancing American Troops

EVNSON

German air force pilots failed to come up and battle even though the weather was suitable for dog-fighting. Flak too, usually extremely heavy on good flying days, was described as meager by Eighth Air Force crews, out for their first raid since Armistice Day.

Fighters went down to the deck and strafed enemy troops and ground installations near Duren and Frankfurt, but still the Nazi planes kept their wheels on the ground.

"It was the big parade five miles above Europe," said Col. Joseph A. Muller, Winnetka, Ill., who led the show. "As we made the horse shoe turn and started back we saw wing after wing of Heavies coming as far as the eye could see."

BELGIAN PATRIOTS TOLD TO DISBAND

KASTCHKE

Premier, In Broadcast, Threatens Prosecution

London, Nov. 16 (AP)—In the midst of a Government crisis, Belgium's Premier, Hubert Pierlot, in a nation-wide broadcast over the Brussells radio, tonight called upon members of the country's resistance movements to disband and join the regular army and surrender their arms by next Saturday "or be prosecuted with the full vigor of the law."

The Prime Minister's broadcast came at the close of the turbulent day in which hundreds of uniformed and civilian members of the resistance forces gathered near the Houses of Parliament to demonstrate against the Government's decision to dissolve the "white army."

Allied Troop Aid Offered

The Brussels radio said tonight that Maj. Gen. W. E. J. Erskine, head of the Allied Supreme Command's military mission in Belgium, had informed "the Belgian Government that Allied troops are at its disposal to maintain peace and order in Belgium."

The situation was the most serious since the country's liberation. The crisis involved the resignation of two Communist ministers, Albert Marteaux and R. Dispy, and the Resistance minister, F. Demany. Marteaux was Minister of Health and the other two ministers without portfolio.

The resignations took place during a four-hour Cabinet meeting at which it was decided not only to carry out the underground dissolution but to prohibit a mass rally prepared by resistance groups in the capital tonight at which Demany was to have spoken.

The resistance marchers carried banners declaring "destroy the fifth column" and "safeguard the democratic forces of the country." Their leaders have argued that disbanding of the "white army" is unwise now when "it is obvious that very large numbers of traitors and collaborators are still abroad."

Other Policies Involved

There have been differences also over the Government's policy on finances, food rationing and transport.

Standing firm on the Government's decision, Pierlot called the Maquis into the army "individually or collectively."

The Government, he said, "has given tangible proof of how services of the resistance are being appreciated . . . and now desires to reconstitute a national army to augment the effectiveness of our forces in the fighting line." He said Britain had promised arms and help in training this new force and concluded:

"Convinced that it is the supreme interpreter of the nation's will, the Government has given an order. This order will be obeyed."

Mihailovic Flees Minus Trousers

NOV 17 1944

London, Nov. 16 (AP)—Gen. Draja Mihailovic, Chetnik leader who once was King Peter's War Minister, fled in his underwear recently to escape capture by Marshal Tito's National Army of Liberation at Valjevo, a member of the Yugoslav Government in exile said today.

"Mihailovic apparently was so surprised when Tito's forces entered Valjevo that he didn't have time to put on his trousers," said Dr. Stroyan Gavrilovic, Yugoslav Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. "He dived out of a window in his underwear and fled into the night. In his rooms Patriot fighters found all his papers and personal belongings, and his trousers were hanging on a chair."

His Wife Safe In Belgrade

Gavrilovic also reported that Mihailovic's wife, whom the Polish Government in exile reported had died in a concentration camp in Poland, was in Belgrade, where he said she had been "quite nicely looked after by the Germans."

Gavrilovic said Mihailovic's Chetnik forces had been completely routed and broken by Tito's forces.

"Mihailovic," he asserted, "is a general without an army. He is all alone, hiding and prolonging his fate. We believe he made an attempt to leave the country and seek safety in Italy. It appears, however, that the Germans, getting all they could out of him, have now abandoned him and will let him get out the best way he can."

Norwegians Returned Aboard British Cruiser

London, Nov. 16 (AP)—A British cruiser carried 250 men of the Norwegian army back to fight for their homeland after Crown Prince Olaf had come aboard and read them a message from King Haakon, it was announced tonight.

He warned the first contingent of his people to be sent back to Norwegian soil they would see burned villages, tortured men and women and "the wretched evidence of German occupation."

The arrival of Norwegian troops in Norway was announced earlier this week.

U. S. Cities Facing Nazi Robot Bombs?

London, Friday, Nov. 17 (AP)—The London Daily Mail's correspondent, Walter Farr, reported from Stockholm today that the Germans had concentrated along the Norwegian coast surface and underwater vessels to launch flying bombs "against such targets as New York, Philadelphia or towns farther inland in America."

Farr, attributing his information to "high neutral sources," said these ships were under command of "Germany's crack submarine commander who directed U-boat attacks from the Brest and Lorient bases."

Farr said both the U-boats and surface vessels would fire robots from their decks and that the U-boats would operate "a considerable distance off shore." The surface ships, he said, had been fitted to fire "a large quantity of flying bombs."

Concentration ports, he said, were Narvik, Trondheim and Bergen.

British Boy, 8, Devises Scheme to Fight Robots

Idea Is So Good It Is Labeled a Military Secret

LONDON, Nov. 16 (AP).—Eight-year-old Roy Law, who doesn't go to school yet, lived through several robot attacks in London before his evacuation.

He got an idea how to beat the buzz bomb and wrote to the War Office.

They replied, "You are to be congratulated on the ingenuity displayed, which, in a boy of your age, is quite remarkable."

The idea is so good that it's a military secret now.

Roy's mother says that she finds her son's mathematical ability "almost frightening."

British Subs Sink 24 More Japanese Ships

London, Nov. 16 (AP)—British submarines were creditetd officially today with sinking 24 more Japanese ships in Far Eastern waters, bringing to 158 the total number of Japanese vessels reported destroyed by the Royal Navy since the beginning of the year.

The latest sinkings, announced in an Admiralty communique, included 23 supply ships of varying size and an anti-submarine vessel, which was intercepted in the East Java Sea south of Celebes.

Five submarines were singled out for mention by the Admiralty, which had announced the sinking of 45 Japanese ships only five days ago.

So Sorry About Tirpitz, German Tells Japanese

London, Nov. 16 (AP)—The German naval commentator Admiral Alfred Sallwaechter, discussing that "painful event—the putting out of action of the Tirpitz by British bombers," broadcast these condolences to Tokyo:

"The German navy is sorry for the sake of Japan that British battleships have now been liberated for employment in the Asiatic theater."

Mussolini Conference With Cabinet Reported

London, Nov. 16 (AP)—The German news agencies, which are silent these days on the movements and whereabouts of Hitler, found space today to report that Mussolini met with his Cabinet and discussed the "military and political situation."

An agreement was reached on methods of strengthening the value of Italin currency and counteracting inflation, said the Nazi Transocean overseas news agency.

Spanish Maquis Lost 1,500 In Border Raids

(Mr. Foltz has just arrived in London after four years as chief of the Associated Press bureau in Madrid.)

By Charles S. Foltz

London, Nov. 16 (AP)—The battle of the Pyrenees is ended now. Some 1,500 Spanish Republicans were reported killed in battle or executed while Franco is believed to have lost at least 300 soldiers.

Bands of Spanish Republicans, crossing the French frontier without orders, had little chance against Franco's trained armies and their civilian support.

Both sides learned much. The Republican exiles learned that Franco's Spain was not ripe for internal revolt. Franco's followers learned the exiles were not as wild as had been thought.

Found They Were Wrong

Hundreds of Spanish Maquisards, who raided cross the frontier believed they were providing the spark which would ignite internal revolt.

They found they were wrong. Even before Franco moved nearly 100,000 troops to the frontier, the frontier populations of both Navarra and Catalonia generally opposed the "liberating" raiders.

Unfortunately for the Republican cause, the raiding units lacked coordination and supply. Despite this they held the horseshoe-shaped Aran Valley, in the Pyrenees east of Andorra, for nearly a fortnight before they withdrew before a powerful Spanish army offensive and pressure from General de Gaulle's Government in Paris.

Valley Unchanged

When Franco's troops entered the valley as the Republicans withdrew, they found to their surprise that the valley had been left almost as the Republicans found it.

Pictures of Franco and Primo de Riviera, the late dictator's son and founder of the Falange, still hung on the walls of official buildings. None of the priests in the valley's dozen towns and villages had been executed or detained.

Neither side was disposed to give quarter, although Franco's troops left the way open for many Republicans to escape back across the frontier into France.

FFI Police Zone

At de Gaulle's order, and with the approval of most Spanish Republican exiled leaders, the Maquisards were ordered to withdraw eight miles back from the Spanish frontier. French Forces of the Interior police the forbidden zone.

Infiltration of some Spanish Republican exiles into their homeland continues. Some go because they want to live anonymously at home, others to try to organize an underground.

I have traveled widely in Spain and have yet to find any confirmation of reports of strikes and riots within the country.

Trend Toward Freedom

In Spain I heard a Spaniard of Republican sympathies say that from the standpoint of internal prestige Franco would have done good business had he paid a million dollars for the raids across his frontier.

Most Spaniards, including most Republicans resident there, honestly fear that any swing of the Spanish political pendulum brought about by violence would bring them Communism, anarchism or chaos, all of which they hate almost as much as Fascism.

It is possible that the conservative Republican exiles may woo or be wooed by the Franco regime, which already has promised a trend toward more freedom.

BRITISH RELAXING MANPOWER CONTROLS

LONDON, Nov. 16—(AP) Britain's conscription age maximum limit will be lowered and numerous manpower controls will be relaxed in the interval between the defeat of Germany and the end of the war with Japan, minister of labor Ernest Bevin announced today.

Making public a plan for reallocating manpower to industry, Bevin said that the conscription age for men for the war against Japan would be from 18 to 27 as soon as the war in Europe ended. The present draft age maximum is 35.

Women will not be conscripted for the armed forces, but will be permitted to volunteer, Bevin said.

Under the government plan, as soon as the war in Europe ends and no matter what kind of production they are engaged on, these people may leave industry: Married or single women with household responsibilities; women wishing to join their husbands on release from the forces; other women over 60; men over 65.

Controls To Be Relaxed

Several controls will be relaxed, Bevin announced, including the use of power to move labor to particular work as the Government sees fit, and the power to keep a worker on any specific job despite either his desire to leave or the employer's desire to discharge him.

The controls will mainly continue to affect men between the ages of 18 and 50 and women between the ages of 18 and 40, he said.

Foe Says Metz Isn't Vital

London, Nov. 16 (AP)—A German radio commentator, Martin Hallensleben, predicted today that this winter would bring a "showdown" in the European war.

He also began preparing the home front for the fall of Metz.

"The Metz area is by no [illegible] a key German position of [illegible] man west defenses, even if through here would have consequences," he said.

CHURCHILL CITES NEED TO RESTORE EXPORT BUSINESS

NOV 17 1944

LONDON, Nov. 16—(AP) Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today that once Germany is beaten "we must make exertions to restore our export trade," but that first on the production priority list would be the filling of essential civilian needs in clothing furniture and housewares.

In his first public discussion of the growing question of postwar economic competition among the Allies, the British leader endorsed the suggestion of one member that "undue restriction" on export industries ought to be removed, but he accompanied this with the statement that "until Japan has been defeated the war must have first call on our efforts."

"After the defeat of Germany it will be possible and necessary to turn over an increasing part of our resources to civilian production," said Churchill. "Then we must make exertions to restore our export trade and re-equip our industry."

The housing shortage in ravaged sections of Britain would have to be tackled "as if it were a wartime measure," he said, and the present system of allocating manpower to the armed forces and industry would be maintained.

"Nevertheless it is intended to mitigate as far as possible the rigidity of the existing controls over labor.

"Many of the wartime controls over raw materials, industrial capacity, agriculture, food, transport and so forth will likely be as necessary in this period (the campaign against Japan) as they are today.

"In these fields also relaxation will be possible and will be made whenever circumstances permit and in an orderly manner.

"Any other course would result in violent disturbances which might lead to inflation, would be harmful to the economic life of the country and would make it impossible to insure that the nation's resources were devoted to its essential needs and were fairly distributed in a period during which demands will still be without economic relation to supplies."

Home Secretary Morrison said in a reply to a question that exit permits for business trips to Belgium were not being granted because the country still was a military zone.

"Nevertheless it is intended to mitigate as far as possible the rigidity of the existing controls over labor," Churchill said.

"Many of the wartime controls over raw materials, industrial capacity, agriculture, food, transport and so forth will likely be as necessary in this period (the war against Japan) as they are today.

"In these fields also relaxations will be possible and will be made whenever circumstances permit and in an orderly manner.

To Guard Against Inflation

"Any other course would result in violent disturbances which might lead to inflation, would be harmful to the economic life of the country and would make it impossible to insure that the nation's resources were devoted to its essential needs and were fairly distributed in a period during which demands will still be without economic relation to supplies."

Churchill said a Government White Paper on manpower allocations would be published today.

Churchill Sees Export Spur After V-E Day

London, Nov. 16 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill, in his first public discussion in Commons of post-war economic competition among the Allies, said today that after the defeat of Germany "we must make exertions to restore our export trade."

He told Commons that until Japan was defeated the war must have first call on all the nation's efforts, but added:

"After the defeat of Germany it will be possible and necessary to turn over an increasing part of our resources to civilian production. Then we must make exertions to restore our export trade and re-equip our industry."

Manpower System

He declared the housing shortage in bombed sections of Britain must be solved as a wartime measure, but that the existing system of allocating manpower to the armed forces and industry will be maintained.

sibility of bringing about a peace of understanding" will depend in large measure upon the efforts of governments and peoples to "work together for the common purpose of raising the standard of living."

The future of UNRRA, he said, will show whether this can be done.

Here in a neffort to get UNRRA on a going basis in liberated Europe, the former New York Governor said: "I've had some tough jobs in the past, but this is the hardest job I've ever had—in private or public life—but the most worthwhile one."

Major Problems Of UNRRA

He reported that the international relief agency's major problems centered around shipping, supplies and inland transport. He acknowledged there would be considerable shortages in fats, meats, textiles, trucks and agriculture machinery.

Lehman said UNRRA would take up with the Russian Government the question of obtaining Soviet assistance in movement of supplies to Poland.

In response to questions, he said the organization was empowered to deal with the military control of a liberated country—in Poland's case, the Red army—or the "effective administrative control" within an area.

Six Nations Ask Relief

Lehman told the press conference that requests for relief aid had been received from Greece, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Poland and China.

He said, in response to a question, that no requests for UNRRA supplies had been received as yet from France, Belgium or Holland.

British To Get Ice-Cream

Murder Trial Of U. S. Soldier Opens In Britain

Feltham, England, Nov. 16 (AP)—Service men and women crowded a courtroom here today to catch a glimpse of Private Karl Gustav Hulten, 22, a parachute trooper of Cambridge, Mass., and Elizabeth Marina Jones, 18-year-old dancer, charged with the murder of a taxicab driver.

Hulten was the first American soldier to be charged with murder in a British civil court in this war. The case was remanded until November 27. No testimony was taken.

Hulten and the girl were accused of slaying George Heath, 35, the taxi driver whose body was found in a ditch at Knowle Green in October, a bullet in his back.

Princess Martha May Leave Soon For Britain

Stockholm, Nov. 16 (AP)—The newspaper Aftonbladet said today that Norway's Crown Princess Martha was expected to leave the United States shortly and spend Christmas in England with King Haakon and Crown Prince Olaf. Later the Crown Princess may have a trip to Sweden and visit her parents, Prince Carl and Princess Ingeborg. (She has been living at Bethesda, Md.

(A spokesman for the Crown Princess said at Bethesda today that she plans to remain in the United States through Christmas and has no definite plans for leaving, but added: "I hope we all will be able to go back to Norway soon after Christmas." The Crown Princess is visiting in New York, he reported.)

Three German Ships Reported Blown Up

Stockholm, Nov. 16 (AP)—Three German ships under construction at a Copenhagen shipyard have been blown up by Danish patriots, the Free Danish Press Service said today.

The agency also said a von Kuckwitz, in charge of German ship production in Denmark, has been court-martialed because the shipbuilding program is ten months behind schedule.

German Minister Leaves Sweden

New York, Nov. 16 (AP)—The German news agency DNB sent as a "flash" in its overseas service today an announcement that Dr. Hans Thomsen, German Minister in Stockholm, "is in Berlin to submit his report."

This emphasized recent tension between the German and Swedish governments and recalled that Germany recently summoned to Berlin her envoys to neutral Portugal and Spain and announced they would not return to the Iberian Peninsula.

Thomsen, former counselor of the German Embassy in Washington, in 1941 delivered the German declaration of war to the State Department.

Swedes Order Nazis Out

New York, Nov. 16—Sweden has ordered German agents to leave the country immediately, BBC said today in a broadcast recorded by NBC.

SAYS NERVES KEPT HITLER OFF RADIO

Berne, Nov. 16 (A. P.).—An informant close to German circles here said today that Hitler's advisers had dissuaded him from personally making a speech on the anniversary of the Nazi party because of fears of a nervous breakdown. This report said that Hitler had suffered three severe nervous attacks recently.

Reports reaching Switzerland asserted that Reichs Marshal Hermann Goering, whom Hitler once designated to be his successor, had again been confined to his estate, Karinhall. Goering's picture appeared in German illustrated publications three weeks ago for the first time since the purported attempt to assassinate Hitler on July 20.

Nazi Propaganda Now 2-Phased

Bern, Switzerland, Nov. 16 (AP)—German leaders appear to be running a two-phased propaganda campaign in which the Germans at home are told they must continue to fight while a "Christmas peace drive" is directed toward the outside world.

The German legation bulletin issued in Bern today carried an article headed "Can Europe Live Deprived of Its German Heart?" The Swiss newspaper La Suisse in Geneva quoted Italian Fascist diplomats just returned from Germany as reporting that Reich leaders were deep in a campaign for peace by Christmas.

Peace Negotiation Talk

This later report for outside consumption said Adolf Hitler was remaining in the background to permit the way to be cleared for negotiations centering in Lisbon, while Heinrich Himmler whipped the Germans into a solid front at home.

Meanwhile, Germans at home, according to Swiss correspondents in Berlin, are being told that new weapons will be produced in such number in underground factories during the winter that they will alter the military situation next spring.

"Simple Police Measure"

Madrid, Nov. 16 (AP)—A Spanish Government spokesman said today the occupation of Andorra by French gendarmes was "a simple police measure, with absolutely no political significance."

Germans Halt Retreat Along Montone River

Rome, Nov. 16 (AP)—Eighth Army forces at the eastern end of the Italian battleline reached the Montone river on a wide front north of Forli and drove to points less than five miles from the important highway town of Faenza, the Allied command announced today.

Patrols pursued the Germans across the Montone in the vicinity of San Martino di Villafrance, four miles northwest of Forli, and returned with reports of encountering the enemy "in strength," indicating the Germans were building a new defense line on the west bank of the Montone in this area. The Allies previously had crossed the Montone to the south.

Enemy Rear Guard Cleared Out

The British troops were within five miles of Faenza in the region of San Martino di Villafranca and also southward. Where they captured the town of Petrignone, lying below highway 9 leading from Forli to Bologna. They made other important gains in this region near the important hill feature Monte Poggiolo.

There was considerable clearing out of strong enemy rear guards below highway 9 near the village of Villagrappa, after which the Allied troops pushed 1,000 yards northwestward to the road along the west bank of the Bolzanino river.

Farther westward Polish troops improved their positions north of the Florence-Forli road and won complete control of the important road.

Snow Blankets Mountain

There were few developments on the Fifth Army sector, where activity was limited to patrol action, and there was little change in the Allied positions along the Adriatic coast in the drive on Ravenna.

On the central sector of the Fifth Army front some enemy troops were seen wearing winter white camouflage uniforms. Snows now blanket much of the mountainous area.

American fighter bombers gave close support to Allied ground operations in the Forli area and scored several hits on a German headquarters building south of Faenza.

British Push Ahead In Italy

Rome, Nov. 16 (AP)—A small Commando landing was made Tuesday on the Nazi-held island of Melos, 70 miles north of Crete, an Allied naval announcement said today. Casualties were inflicted and prisoners were taken, after which the raiders withdrew.

Rome, Nov. 16 (AP)—British Eighth Army forces have captured Petrignone, a village approximately two miles west of the Montone river, below the Rimini-Bologna highway and six miles southeast of Faenza, Allied headquarters announced today.

The Eighth Army has pushed to the Montone on a wide front west of Forli and north of the strategic route on the southern border of the Po Valley, the headquarters' announcement said.

The Florence-Forli road is entirely in Allied hands and Polish troops have improved their positions farther west, a communique said.

Positions Unchanged

Forward positions remained unchanged on the Fifth Army sector, but patrols were active along the entire front, the communique added.

Adverse weather caused cancellation of most air activity yesterday. Air fighter bombers hit a few targets in the Italian battle area, while a small number of heavy bombers attacked objectives in southern Austria and Yugoslavia. The MAAF flew about 350 sorties, from which six planes were missing.

Snow was blanketing the mountainous central sector of the Fifth Army front and some enemy troops were observed wearing white uniforms as camouflage.

Raid 'Finishes' Albanian Palace

Rome, Nov. 16 (AP)—A Beaufighter squadron of the Balkan air force dropped 32 rocket bombs on the Nazi-occupied palace of former King Zog of Albania near Tirana yesterday. It was the second bombing in ten days.

Mediterranean Allied air force headquarters said yesterday's raid "finished the job."

GEN. ROATTA IS ARRESTED

Former Italian Chief Of Staff Accused Of Fascist Crimes

Rome, Nov. 16 (AP)—Gen. Mario Roatta, former chief of staff of the Italian army, was arrested today on a warrant issued by the high commissioner for punishment of Fascist crimes and charged with helping maintain the Fascist regime.

The arrest took place in the office of the commissioner, Mario Berlinguer, where the general had been invited. After preliminary questioning he was taken to Regina Coeli prison to await trial.

Conduct In War Basis Of Charges

Berlinguer said the charges concerned Roatta's conduct during the war. Roatta was Mussolini's chief of staff from March, 1941, to January, 1942, and again in 1943.

He was chief of staff under Premier Pietro Badoglio after the armistice until he was removed upon the insistence of Yugoslavs who charged he was guilty of atrocities in their country and demanded his trial as a war criminal. The Nazis have accused him of treachery at the time of the Italian surrender.

Captain Voll Bags 21st Plane, Leads In Italy

Allied Mediterranean Air Force Headquarters, Rome, Nov. 16 (AP)—Capt. John J. Voll, Goshen, Ohio, destroyed four enemy aircraft on a mission over northern Italy today and, with 21 planes to his credit, became the leading fighter pilot ace of the Mediterranean theater.

Voll was alone over northern Italy at the time, returning early from escorting heavy bombers in a raid on southern Germany because of radio trouble.

He was jumped by 12 German planes. In the fight that followed the Miami (Ohio) University graduate wiped out a Junkers 88 twin-engined bomber, two Focke-Wulf 190's and a Messerschmitt 109.

In addition two others probably were destroyed and another pair damaged.

JAPANESE FORCES APPROACH ISHAN

NOV 17 1944

CHUNGKING, Nov. 16.—(AP) The Chinese High command announced tonight that Japanese driving through Kwangsi province in a resurgent westward offensive had advanced to within four and a half miles of the walled city of Ishan from the northeast and that Chinese units were engaging the invaders in heavy battle.

(The Tokyo radio declared that Ishan and its airport had been captured and told its listeners that "the fighting spirit of the expeditionary forces is increasingly high.")

Ishan lies about 43 miles northwest of Liuchow in the Lung river valley, site of a big air base recently destroyed and abandoned by American air forces when its capture by the Japanese became imminent. Every mile of the enemy's westward advance poses an increasing threat to American air bases forming a protective arc before Chungking.

The Japanese already had thrust westward well over 250 miles since they began their drive from the Canton area last June.

Tonight's Chinese high command announcement said a reinforced Japanese column pushing from the south on the left flank of the enemy's advance up the Kwangsi-Kweichow railway was within 18 miles of Hsincheng, which is 40 miles west-southwest of Liuchow.

Japanese who struck out northwest from Kweilin Nov. 11 were reported to have advanced about 28 miles before they were met and engaged by Chinese troops on Tuesday at a point about 12 miles from Lungsheng.

Fighters of the U. S. 14th Air force struck repeatedly at the advancing Japanese columns and fired bridges in their paths. Wednesday night a force of B-24 Liberators scored direct hits on the Kowloon docks at Hong Kong.

BRITISH FORCES CAPTURE KALEMYO

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 16—(AP) British East Africans, advancing six miles in a day down the Kabaw valley of Burma, captured Kalemyo and joined Indian troops who fought over the Chin hills from Tiddim, Allied headquarters announced today.

The Indian troops, who were reported eight miles from Kalemyo only yesterday, and the Africans thus combined for a possible assault on Kalewa, 140 miles up the Chindwin river from Mandalay and 16 miles east of Kalemyo.

In North Burma, Chinese troops, slashing forward three miles yesterday, reached within a mile of Bhamo, and cut all the main routes of escape out of that Irrawaddy river supply point and potential link between the Ledo and Burma roads.

Chinese forces which crossed the Irrawaddy advanced from the Shwegu area and cut the main road running south out of Bhamo.

Other Chinese forces encircling Bhamo from the other side, cut the Burma road spur running southeast from Bhamo to Namhkam, this left only trails out of Bhamo. Namhkam is another potential link between the Ledo and Burma roads.

British forces made slight advances down the Mandalay railway corridor toward Indaw, Naba and Katha at the bend of the Irrawaddy about 60 miles west of Bhamo.

Japs Approach Railway Town Of Ishan

Chungking, Nov. 16 (AP)—Japanese forces in Kwangsi have advanced to within four and a half miles of the Kwangsi-Kweichow railway town of Ishan, which blocks the way toward an invasion of the hinterland province of Kweichow, and fighting is raging in the area, the Chinese high command announced tonight.

(The Tokyo radio declared that the walled city of Ishan and its airport were captured.)

Push From Northeast

One column of invaders made the deepest penetration from the northeast, 43 miles west of fallen Lichow. Another struck directly from the east.

The Japanese made new gains in the push from the south toward Hsincheng, on the left flank of the advance along the railway. Reinforced column thrust northward to a point 18 miles from Hsincheng, 40 miles west-southwest of Liuchow.

Jap Advance Of 250 Miles

In this area the Japanese had covered well over 250 miles in the westward slash from the Canton area into Kwangsi province.

The Chinese indicated the enemy, with the city of Kweilin firmly in his hands, now was attempting to secure his right flank of communications with Liuchow, 95 miles to the southwest. The Japanese based in Kweilin struck out November 11 toward Lungsheng, 40 miles to the northwest, the high command said, and were met and engaged Tuesday about 12 miles from Lungsheng.

JAPS POUR TROOPS INTO SOUTH CHINA

CHUNGKING, Nov. 16.—(AP) Japan is pouring a formidable army into south China, well trained and equipped, with the intention of fighting out the war on the Asiatic mainland rather than on her home soil, Maj. Gen. A. C. Wedemeyer, newly-appointed commander of U. S. forces in the China theater, told the Associated Press in an interview today.

He predicted, nevertheless, that the Japanese would be defeated within about a year from the time the struggle in Europe ends.

"But everyone thought the war in Europe would be over this year," he added, "and it may run into early next Summer."

Wedemeyer, who reached Chungking two weeks ago to succeed Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell after the latter's recall to the U. S., refused on military grounds to assess the present strength of Japanese forces in South China, but said they represented a very formidable array and were being steadily reinforced.

"The Japanese army is fairly well intact and well trained and equipped," he pointed out. Defeats suffered by Japan's navy and air forces are compelling her to shift from her original oceanic strategy to dependence upon this army, he said.

Asked how the Allies could best help China extricate herself from the gravest military situation in her long history, Wedemeyer replied: "The best way is to bring all her available resources to bear on one object—and that's killing Japanese."

The United States will continue to support China in the air while bringing in all possible supplies and training Chinese troops to participate in final, decisive battles, he said. He declined to speculate on the probable direction of future Japanese drives in China.

Wedemeyer, who also is chief of staff to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, said it was difficult to determine how much help Chinese troops would be in the concluding phases of the war unless government compromised with the Chinese Communists.

"It is a basic premise that unity in war is essential to fight effectively," he said.

Asiatic Mainland Showdown Seen As Jap Plan

London, Nov. 16 (AP)—The Berlin radio announced today a break in diplomatic relations between Bulgaria and Japan. It said the Japanese Minister in Sofia left his staff for Istanbul.

Chungking, Nov. 16 (AP)—Japan plans to fight the final, decisive battles of the war on the Asiatic mainland and is steadily reinforcing her substantial strength in South China, Maj. Gen. A. C. Wedemeyer said in an interview today.

He succeeded Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell October 31 as commander of United States forces in the China theater and as chief of staff to President Chiang Kai-shek. He declined to discuss the removal of General Stilwell.

Wedemeyer said he believed the war against Japan would last about a year after Germany was beaten, "but everyone thought the war in Europe would be over this year—and it may run into early next summer."

Continental Strategy

He said Japanese strategy, originally based on employment of naval and air forces, had proved ineffective. The Japanese now have gone from an oceanic to a continental strategy, he said, adding: "The Japanese army is fairly well intact and well trained and equipped.

He declined to estimate Japanese strength in South China except to say it represented a very formidable array, steadily being strengthened.

He avoided, on military grounds, any forecast of the direction of Japanese drives, but said that in executing her continental strategy Japan obviously would want to have her rear protected and "you can draw your own conclusions."

One Object: To Kill Japs

"The best way the Allies can help China is to bring all available resources to bear on the one object—and that's killing Japanese," he said.

The general said the United States would continue to support China in the air, bring in whatever supplies possible, maintain efforts in the Pacific to subjugate the Japanese and organize and train Chinese troops to increase their efficiency.

Questioned whether China could contribute effectively to the war against Japan without a compromise between the Government and the Chinese Communists, Wedemeyer said:

"The degree of effectiveness without the help of the Communists is difficult to determine. But it is a basic premise that unity in war is essential to fighting effectively."

Nelson And Production Experts Reach China

Chungking, Nov. 16 (AP)—Donald M. Nelson, accompanied by a party of American production experts, reached Chungking by air today to help China make the greatest possible use of her own resources in the war against Japan.

The mission, which included five steel men and an alcohol expert was welcomed at Chungking airport by Foreign Minister T. V. Soong, and by Wong Wen-hao, Minister Economic Affairs and head China's newly created war production board.

Members Of Party

In the party were Edwin A. Locke, who accompanied Nelson on his first mission here several months ago; Carl Bell, United Engineering and Foundry Company, Newcastle, Pa.; Henrik Ovesen, Lukens Steel Company, Coatesville, Pa.; Herbert W. Carr, Whiting Willauer, Alex Taub and Howard Coonley.

Nelson said he had no idea how long he would remain in China. Wong assured the Americans they would be given the closest cooperation by the Chinese war production board.

Nelson And Production Aides Reach Chungking

Chungking, Nov. 16 (AP)—Donald M. Nelson and a small group of American experts arrived in Chungking today to help China, now facing her gravest military trial, to expand her war production and make the maximum use of her own resources against Japan.

Nelson and his aides will cooperate with the newly created Chinese war-production board, which was formally inaugurated today under Wong Wen-hao, Minister of Economic Affairs and chairman of the National Resources Commission.

Flyer Fights 18 Japs To Save Task Force

By Morrie Landsberg

Aboard Carrier Flagship off Formosa, Oct. 10 (AP—Delayed)—Lieut. (j.g.) Robert Warren Blakeslee didn't hesitate. He wheeled his Hellcat fighter around and raced for 18 [illegible] Japanese bombers coming i[illegible] the task force.

Somewhere in low-hanging clouds the lone American plane slashed at the enemy formation. Against such odds he had little chance, but even after his Hellcat was hit, Blakeslee fought to keep the Japs from hitting our ships.

Fought To Save Thousands

He got two bombers before he radioed: "I'm going in."

That was the last heard from him. Nobody can say how much the fleet owes to the 25-year-old pilot from Kalamazoo, Mich., who risked his life for the safety of thousands of others on the ships.

Before they took off on a two-plane patrol, Blakeslee told Ensign Robert S. Griffin, 23, of Bailey, N. C., dive-bomber pilot, "I'll attack if there are two or three Jap planes, but I won't if we run into a large group."

Near End Of Mission

They were flying the last leg of their mission when Blakeslee spotted the Japanese planes hugging the base of clouds five miles to their rear.

He saw them before Griffin or Aviation Radioman (third-class) Norman Hess, 21, of Ilion, N. Y., riding as Griffin's rear-seat man.

"He made a quick turn to intercept the Japs," Griffin said. "He gave it the gun and went up behind the clouds, where the Japs had withdrawn. Visibility was not too good, however, and they may not have seen him."

30.24 — 20427

Hess heard Blakeslee call out on his radio: "Splash one Betty." His next word was: "I'm hit—there are holes in my wing."

Hess doesn't think the fighter pilot himself was hurt because shortly afterward he came back with: "Splash two Bettys."

Griffin, flying at 1,000 feet, lost sight of Blakeslee. He heard him say his oil was down to zero and "I'm going in." The dive bomber occupants did not see him land or crash.

Shared A Kill

Blakeslee, who attended Western State Teachers' College, had three and one half Japanese planes to his credit, counting today's pair.

He shared a kill at Iwo Jima in the Bonin Islands August 4 and shot down one in a recent strike at Manila. He had also flown in raids on Guam, Palau, Okinawa and Formosa.

The entire carrier group searched a night for Blakeslee in the hope that he had been able to get out of his plane in time. Special lookouts scanned the waters for any trace of light or a life raft.

Why Search Failed

Radioman Hess thought he knew why the search failed.

"If he is the kind of a guy who will jump 20 Japs, I think he would let the task group pass him at night rather than give away its position," Hess said. "He was a real fighter."

HEAVY RAIN SLOWS YANKS ON LEYTE

SPENCER

U. S. Forces Make Small Gains in Bid to Close Trap on Japs.

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Friday, Nov. 17—(AP) Sheets of tropical rain were more effective today than Japan's veteran First division troops in delaying the imminent closure of an American trap around remnants of an enemy regiment at the northern end of Ormoc corridor on Leyte island.

American infantrymen of the 24th division and dismounted First division cavalrymen slipped through the downpour to minor gains in their nearly completed outflanking maneuver around the Japanese salient south of Limon, four miles below Carigara bay, Gen Douglas MacArthur said today in a communique.

Yanks Control Ormoc Road

Two units of the 24th were so close to closing the gap that their small arms fire dominated the vital Ormoc road, which the Americans are attempting to sever behind the Japanese.

The two American forces are expected to complete the maneuver momentarily, unless the weather enables the Japanese to pull out of the trap.

Meanwhile, American long-range artillery ceaselessly pounded the Japanese in Ormoc corridor, which runs between Pinamopoan and Ormoc. Enemy casualties, already high, were mounting steadily.

Thunderbolt fighters of the Fifth air force sank 30 Japanese barges in sweeps over the enemy barge area between Ormoc and Ipil, a coastal village a few miles southward. The barges, lying with their ramps touching shore, apparently were unloaded. But one of those sunk contained 20 Japanese, all of whom were killed.

Other Yank infantrymen are consolidating their positions in the central mountain ranges, east of Ormoc corridor, from Mt. Minoro to Mt. Mamban. The two peaks are about eight airline miles apart.

Combat and reconnaissance patrols are "combing the intricate network of trails in the mountains to clear out scattered enemy parties."

Heavy tropical rains, however, are restricting operations.

Fighters Blast Ormoc Area

American fighters bombed and strafed the Ormoc area, sinking over 30 barges in the harbor. A Japanese motor pool at Valencia, near the center of the Pinamopoan Ormoc road, was destroyed, with the loss to the enemy of many "dozens of vehicles."

Enemy air activity was negligible, the communique added.

While the battle for Leyte moved toward its climax a small force of Americans seized the Mapia islands, enemy lookout post off the northwestern New Guinea coast. The new invasion, a protective operation to remove Japanese spotters, was about 900 miles southeast of Leyte.

The Mapia landings were made Wednesday, covered by naval and air bombardment. Only light resistance was met. A headquarters spokesman said the objective was to protect the important Allied airbase on Biak island, immediately south in the Schouten group.

A field dispatch from James Hutcheson, AP correspondent with the dismounted First Cavalry division, reported the indications of lessening enemy resistance on Leyte. He said the Japanese were abandoning strong positions in rear areas instead of fighting to the death.

Foe Abandoning Strong Posts On Leyte

NOV 17 1944

With First Cavalry Division, Nov. 15 (AP—Delayed)—Advance elements of this dismounted cavalry division have reached heights overlooking the vital Ormoc highway only a mile to half a mile away, while in rear areas Japanese are abandoning strong positions—instead of fighting to the death, a long and standard Japanese practice. HUTCHESON

Enemy resistance continued to be light and scattered in the mountain sector where troops of Brig. Gen. William Chase's First Brigade have advanced in the face of a staggering supply problem.

Pillboxes Wiped Out

Elements of the Seventh Regiment reported cleaning out 12 pillboxes in an expanded Japanese pocket in the Minoro-Culasian area several miles behind the front lines.

Officers reported the pillboxes were in strong positions, but that the Japanese abandoned their usual tactics of defending them until wiped out. They did not offer stiff resistance. When casualties were inflicted upon the Japanese in their pillboxes the survivors would withdraw. The Americans were thus able to advance 1,200 yards.

Yanks Tighten Vise

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 16 (AP)—An American vise closed tighter on General Yamashita's encircled Japanese on Leyte today, pressing to within ten miles of Ormoc on the south, 14 on the east and about the same distance on the north.

Advances by four American divisions were small, but they came all around the Japanese perimeter defending Ormoc, their last base on the island.

Road Virtually Cut

In the north, the American 24th Division applied double pressure. On the road from Pinamapoan, the main body of the division lunged against enemy positions near Limon, gateway to the Ormoc corridor. West of the road, another unit swung around through the hills, virtually cut the road behind an estimated 2,000 Japanese frontline troops. MCDANIEL

To the east and north, the First Cavalry Division overran several enemy strong points and seized hilltops as it moved westward. No road served this division; and its forward elements probed the roughest terrain to find the stubborn Japanese defense positions. Mount Mamban, a 3,830-foot peak, and Hills 4047 and 4018 fell.

Advance To Balogo

To the south, the veteran Seventh Division, seldom mentioned in recent communiques, was disclosed to have advanced four miles to the west coast town of Balogo, only ten miles from Ormoc.

The daily communique announced the division had repelled a Japanese counterattack at Balogo, killing or wounding approximately half the attackers.

The Seventh stands closer to Ormoc itself than either of the other American units. It was last previously reported at Damulaan, 14 miles south of Ormoc, when it broke up a small Japanese landing attempt there Tuesday night.

Near Alto Peak

Roughly, midway between the Seventh and the 24th Divisions, a third infantry unit, the 96th Division, also advanced against Ormoc from the east. The 96th was near Alto peak on Leyte's backbone and approximately 14 miles from Ormoc. Its route now is more or less downhill to the town.

Yanks Invade Mapia Isles In Pacific

Leyte, Philippines, Nov. 16 (AP)—A small force of American troops invaded the Mapia Islands, less than 150 miles north of western New Guinea, yesterday in a purely protective move to knock out Japanese coast watchers and warning stations. SPENCER

The Yanks went ashore in the face of light resistance and under cover of naval bombardment after two days of heavy preliminary bombings left enemy installations in flames.

A headquarters spokesman said the primary reason for the offensive far behind Gen. Douglas MacArthur's line in the Philippines was to protect the important United States airbase on Biak Island in the Schouten group.

145 Miles From Biak

Japanese watchers on Mapia, 145 miles northwest of Biak, were able to warn other Nipponese islands when the American bombers were going out on strikes.

Fragmentary information on the Mapia invasion did not disclose the size of the landing force nor of the supporting naval units.

The Mapia islands will now be converted into a protective outpost and warning station to guard United States installations on Biak.

St. David Islands

The Mapias, also known as the St. David Islands, are a cluster of small islands that have seldom figured in the southwest Pacific war news except for periodic bombardments.

They are 400 miles south of American air and sea bases in southern Palau, 400 miles east of United States air bases at Morotai, and 900 miles southeast of Leyte.

Heavy aerial bombardment preceded the naval shelling that paved the way for landing forces.

Sidelight Action

The action was a sidelight to MacArthur's primary campaign. It was announced in a supplemental communique which also told of continued bombing raids on Japanese airdromes, installations and small shipping in the central and southern Philippines and by-passed strongholds in islands to the south and east.

An enemy gunboat and two fuel barges were sunk by air patrols over the central Philippines.

Navy Ace Bags 34th Plane

Aboard United States Carrier Flagship Off Luzon, P. I., Nov. 14 (AP—Delayed) (via Navy Radio), Commander David McCampbell, of Los Angeles, the navy's top-ranking ace in the Pacific, has 34 kills to his credit as a result of two hard fights in three days.

He bagged a Japanese Oscar during an American carrier raid over Manila Bay today and two days ago sent another Oscar crashing during a fight over Ormoc, off Leyte's west coast.

The commander said the two Japanese pilots gave him "the best fights I've ever had."

Nimitz Issues Revised Figures, Clearing Doubt As To Craft First Announced As Damaged

General Wedemeyer says Japanese trained troops pour into China to center war there.....Page 6

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 16 (AP)—Three warships were added to Japan's sunken fleet today when Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, announcing revised figures, reported Third Fleet carrier planes sank a cruiser, four destroyers and 11 cargo vessels and oil tankers during their November 12 raid on Manila.

The admiral in a communique announced this revised list:

One light cruiser sunk (it previously was reported badly damaged).

Four destroyers sunk (two had been reported "exploded").

Eleven cargo vessels and oilers sunk (this same number was reported sunk or set ablaze).

The Pacific commander also reported that a navy search Liberator probably scored a bomb hit on a small Japanese cargo vessel near Iwo Jima and a marine Mitchell bomber possibly hit a medium-sized cargo ship at Haha Jima.

Storage Areas Bombed

Other Liberators bombed airplane storage areas and other installations on Iwo, in the Volcano group, about 750 miles south of Tokyo. They also scored a near miss on a medium cargo vessel.

Haha Island is in the Bonin group, some 650 miles southeast of Tokyo.

Other raids by land-based planes centered on the northern Palau Islands, where several barges and other small craft were sunk and ground installations heavily attacked.

Grew Warns of Peac

Ex-Envoy Says Japanese Militarism Is Cancer To Be Cut Out

PEARL HARBOR, Nov. 16 (AP).—The United States may expect compomise peace offers from Japan as soon as her leaders are convinced their outlook is hopeless, but "if the bait is accepted we may be certain our sons and grandsons will be fighting this war over again," Joseph C. Grew, former Ambassador to Japan, told a press conference here today.

"Japanese militarism is a cancer," the State Department representative warned. "We can't temporize with cancer. We must cut out the cells or it will grow again.

"Japan's one alternative is unconditional surrender. That alternative is open now and permamently."

3 Jap Warships Added To List Sunk At Manila

JAPS ATTACK MEN IN WATER

Survivors Of Sea Battle Report Grenades Thrown At Them

Samar, Philippines, Nov. 15 (AP — Delayed) — Survivors of American destroyers lost October 25 in the battle of the Philippines sea told today how sailors aboard a fleeing Japanese cruiser threw hand grenades at men struggling in the sea.

An LCI (landing craft infantry) rescued the survivors from Samar Gulf, where they had been under fire of Filipinos after days in the water.

They are Gunner's Mate (third class) Orin Vadanais, Wisconsin Rapids, Wis.; Seaman (first class) Raymond Bruner, Bremerton, Wash.; Fire Controlman (third class) William Shaw, New York, and Gunner's Mate (third class) Francis Stetler, Roscoe, California.

Four Clutch Souvenirs

The four men, clutching native souvenirs, swore they had never seen any ship as beautiful as the squat little LCI which mace to the island to get them.

Vadnais and Shaw worked together during the shelling of their ship and clung to each other for four days and nights in the water until washed ashore.

Steller and Bruner, from another destroyer, were the only two survivors among 70 men who clustered around a raft bearing 16 wounded sailors.

Grenades Fall Short

Brunder said despite their fatigue and injuries, a mad sensation swept them when Japanese aboard a cruiser fleeing American naval planes leaned from the side of the vessel's bridge and hurled two grenades at them. The grenades fell short.

Vadnais and Shaw said they took to the water after Japanese heavy guns pounded their destroyer for hours, smashing its guns and starting fires which swept the warship.

On orders to abandon ship, they snapped on life belts and went over side.

Separated From Others

"We lost contact with the others in our group during the nights," Vandais said. "Then we clung to each other for fear of becoming separated. While one of us tried to sleep, the other watched for rescue ships."

After the fourth night they drifted ashore and native fishermen picked them up.

Bruner and Stetler said their destroyer fought at least 15 enemy warcraft, from battleshipus to destroyers, until she was disabled in a torpedo run on a cruiser.

Enemy six-inch guns slashed the destroyer's engine room and froze the rudder in a 30-degree turn. The vessel continued to circle in the middle of heavy Japanese fire, helpless under the pounding.

Few Left Alive

"Two hours after the attack started few of us were left alive. The remaining able-bodied men and those among the wounded who could move took to the life rafts," Stetler said.

"The last we saw of our skipper he was standing on the bridge smoking a cigarette."

The men around the life raft which carried the 16 wounded attempted to head away from the battle-churned area. It was then that the hand grenades came from the fleeing Japanese cruiser.

Injured Men Die On Raft

Water and provisions aboard the raft were saved for the injured men. But all 16 died during the long days and nights at sea.

On the fifth day ten of the now remaining 14 men struck out for the island beach, Stetler said, but by daylight the following day only he and Bruner were still afloat. Natives came out and picked them up.

"We were more dead than alive," Stetler said. "We were parched for water and ached in every joint."

Leyte Wounded Flown Away Quickly

Somewhere in the Palau Islands, Nov. 5 (AP—Delayed)—Six army transport planes arrived today with American wounded from the Philippines, men who had been disabled less than 24 hours previously on Leyte, 600 miles west of here.

Crews of the planes were weary after the gruelling round trip made under hazardous conditions. The threat of Japanese air attacks on Leyte Island made a quick turnaround necessary, so the planes remained less than an hour for refueling and loading the patients. They made the return flight in four hours.

A Sub That Carries A Kangaroo

Canberra, Australia, Nov. 16 (AP). Somewhere on the prowl for Japanese shipping in the Pacific is a half-breed submarine with a kangaroo mounted on its bow.

The submarine is the Growler, which tangled with a Japanese cruiser at close range and was rammed by the cruiser. Although seriously wounded, the submarine escaped to an Australian port.

In disclosing the story today, Acting Prime Minister Francis E. Ford said Rear Admiral Arthur Schuyler Carpender, Southwest Pacific navy commander, first thought the submarine would have to undertake a dangerous voyage to the United States for repairs.

Repaired At Brisbane

But a Brisbane shipbuilding firm undertook the job and fitted a new bow on the Growler, with a kangaroo attached for good measure and as a symbol of Australian engineering skill.

The date of the attack on the Growler in the Pacific was not disclosed, but during the fight the submarine's captain was killed by machine-gun fire from the cruiser.

Among the exploits of the Growler was the torpedoing of three Japanese destroyers in Alaskan waters.

Australia Defense Corps Disbanded

Canberra, Australia, Nov. 16 (AP). Ninety-five per cent. of the Australian Volunteer Defense Corps will be placed on a reserve basis, Acting Prime Minister Francis E. Forde told the House of Representatives today.

Allied victories, he said, have removed a Japanese threat to Australila.

Japs Draft Filipinos

San Francisco, Nov. 16 (AP)—The Japanese Domei Agency, in a broadcast from Tokyo today, said Filipino puppet officials in Manila have issued a decree for mass compulsory conscription of Philippine labor to work on air fields, ports, roads, bridges, public works and "other military installations."

Domei said the decree, issued by the puppet minister of home affairs, means that all able-bodied Filipinos, 18 to 50, not now working on things essential to Japan's war effort, will be conscripted into labor gangs. Conscripts will come from the ranks of professional workers as well as skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled laborers.

Diamond Lack Worries Japs

San Francisco, Nov. 16 (AP)—Scarcity of diamonds and platinum in Japan is worrying the Mikado's Government, Tokyo radio intimated today.

Domestic broadcasts said the Nipponese Government was cracking down on platinum hoarders and would continue to buy all the diamonds it could get.

A month ago all Japanese having platinum were ordered to sell it to the Government for the war effort. Today's broadcast said the amount collected fell far short of "the prodigiously increased demand." Prefectural governors were directed to "maintain strict supervision over the people who hid platinum purposely."

Government purchases of diamonds were continued for a month, because "the quantity consumed by the aircraft and radio-wave weapon fields is tremendous."

REDS SET STAGE FOR MEETING OF

ALLIED LEADERS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 — (AP) Russia appeared today to be setting a friendly stage for the forthcoming meeting of Marshal Stalin with President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

At the same time, new Moscow statements on the hitherto hush-hush subject of Japan may indicate a psychological preparation for Russian participation in the second stage of the war—in the Pacific.

Latest Russian assurances that the Soviets aim to consolidate the Washington-London-Moscow front after the defeat of Germany came in the official Soviet embassy bulletin.

An article by Red army Col. A. Galin included among six cardinal points of Soviet foreign policy: non-intervention in internal affairs of other nations, denunciation of imperialist expansion and aggression, and furtherance of alliances with peace loving states. Galin said that anti-Bolshevik fears are now frayed and talk of a Communist peril is no more than one of Goebbels' propaganda tricks.

Russia believes, he declared, in the co-existence of two systems—presumably Communists and Capitalists.

The expected meeting of the big three leaders was not mentioned, but Churchill said recently that the time has come for such a conference. It is anticipated before Christmas.

Stalin's speech last week exceeded previous Kremlin pronouncements in praise of the western Allied war effort and branded Japan as an aggressor nation for the first time since Russia entered the war.

Moscow dispatches today reported a speech by Col. Ivan Tolchenoff, Soviet military authority, who declared that the Pacific war is going against Japan.

Tolchenoff significantly recalled Japanese clashes with the Soviet Union along the Mongolian border in 1939. The report attracted especial attention among diplomats here who have been in Russia and remember the trouble which Moscow has taken previously to avoid speaking of Japan in any way that could be called antagonistic.

Some recently returned officials have pointed out that only a short time ago, Moscow appeared painfully upset whenever Russia's possible entry into the Pacific battle was mentioned in the United States or Britain. Now pointed references about Japan are coming from the Soviet capital.

Reds 'Won't Interfere With Other Nations'

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—An official Russian statement said today the Soviet Union has no intention of intervening in domestic affairs of other states. It listed as a cardinal point of Moscow's policy the "co-existence of two systems," presumably Communism and capitalism.

The statement appeared in an article by Col. A. Galin in the Soviet embassy information bulletin.

Asserting that the bloc of freedom-loving states is growing stronger and stronger, the statement described references to "the Communist peril" as a "trump card of Goebbels' propaganda."

"Against Imperialism"

Reiterating Moscow pronouncements on the peaceful post-war objectives of the Soviet Union, the article spoke of the "uncompromising hostility of the Soviet Government toward imperialist expansion and aggression."

Galin listed what he termed six fundamental principles of Russian foreign policy and added that Moscow has a "business-like policy" of recognizing other states, regardless of their domestic regimes.

Six Principles

The principles:

1. Peaceful relations with all states, irrespective of their political systems.
2. Economic and political cooperation with all states on the basis of sovereign equality and independence of the contracting parties and the coexistence of two systems.
3. Alliances with any State with the purpose of protecting both partners from acts of aggression.
4. Categorical renunciation of imperialist expansion at the cost of other nations.
5. Non-intervention in the internal affairs of other states.
6. Strengthening of the coalition of freedom-loving nations in the fight against Fascist aggressors.

Nevertheless, Galin wrote, Russia means to remain firm on the question of disputed land in eastern Poland now occupied by the Red army.

Calls Japan Enemy Of Russia

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—Dr. H. H. Kung, Chinese Finance Minister, said today it would be to "Russia's interest" to enter the war against Japan.

"Certainly Japan is an enemy of Russia," he said after a White House conference with President Roosevelt.

Kung said his discussions with Roosevelt turned around the

Mr. Roosevelt question "what can we do to hasten the time of a Japanese defeat?" and declared:

"The way to do that is to supply China with more arms."

DENIES DISCUSSING LOAN TO BRITAIN

Washington, Nov. 16 (A. P.).—Secretary Morgenthau said today that no cash loan is even being discussed in current lend-lease conversations with Britain.

He made the statement to a news conference when questioned about publiished reports that a $5,000,000,000 loan to Britain is under consideration.

British delegates are here, the Treasury head said, to discuss the second phase of lend-lease which will begin with Germany's defeat—the phase covering the war against Japan alone.

When asked whether he plans to resign as Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Morgenthau replied today that was like asking a man whether he has stopped beating his wife.

Match Folders For Filipinos

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—Two million match folders with the legend "I shall return—Douglas MacArthur," to be dropped from planes in the Philippines, were shipped to MacArthur before the reconquest began.

The Office of War Information, which on behalf of the army prepared and shipped the messages of encouragement, acknowledged the matches did not reach his headquarters until August, a year after the general asked for them.

Part of the delay, it was ascertained, resulted from indecision whether to use the text MacArthur proposed or—since a command change could have occurred before the invasion started—to use the words, "We are on the way back—your friends the Americans." MacArthur's wording was finally cleared by the War Department and adopted.

More time was consumed, it was stated, in waterproofing the matches so that they would not become useless when dropped in the moist jungle.

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, in a broadcast Sunday, will tell the folk at home of the urgent need for more artillery and artillery ammunition. He will speak on the Army Hour program, beginning over the NBC network at 3.30 P. M.

Plane Hit, Crew Carried On

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP).—The gallantry of a Liberator's crew—one now dead and three prisoners of war—in riding their hard-hit heavy bomber through furious opposition over Austria last May 24 has earned them the Silver Star award, the War Department announced today. The Journal group honor for the men who kept formation and dropped their bombs on the target despite gunfire which smashed the hydraulic system and badly crippled their ship. Staff Sergeant Harold E. Brown, of Terry Place, Canandaigua, N. Y., was killed manning his gun.

2 Escort Craft Quell Convoy Fire At Sea

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—A successful battle at sea against flames which followed collision of a freighter and a tanker carrying 100 octane gasoline, was reported today by the navy.

Two small destroyer escorts, the USS Ahrens and the USS Holton, were credited with "skillful seamanship and courageous action" in quelling the fire aboard the SS Howard L. Gibson and the British tanker, the George W. McNight.

Submarine Tang Given Presidential Citation

Washington, Nov. 16. (AP)—Award of a Presidental unit citation to the submarine Tang was announced today by the navy.

It is in recognition of the rescue of 22 naval aviators from treacherous reefs within close range of enemy shore batteries and the sinking of thousands of tons of enemy shipping during three patrols in Japanese-controlled waters.

U. S. Casualties In West Europe Over 200,000

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—American ground force casualties in Western Europe now exceed 200,000.

The War Department said today the 200,349 total includes 35,884 killed, 145,788 wounded and 18,677 missing to November 1. It does not cover the air force but embraces the Seventh Army which landed in

30.24 — 20429

Southern France as well as the armies in the north.

The total is an increase of 25,569 over a compilation last month covering the period to October 3. The number of dead advanced 6,042, wounded 15,561 and missing 3,966.

New over-all casualty figures for all theaters of operation were not released.

Australians to Mop Up

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP).—Australian forces have been assigned to mop up an estimated 250,000 Japanese on islands bypassed in the drive to the Philippines, Sir Frederic Eggleston, Australian Minister to the United States, said today.

Ball Urges Quick Peace Conference

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—Senator Ball (R., Minn.) urged today that the forthcoming Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin meeting be followed promptly by a definite United Nations conference to perfect a world peace organization.

"The sooner the machinery is set up and brought before the new Senate the better," Ball observed in an interview, adding:

"Right now the chances of getting a world security organization approved are better than at any time since November 11, 1918.

"Expressed Clearly In Election"

"The desires of the people for such an organization were expressed very clearly in the election. And the election will have a tremendous effect on Congress."

The Senator broke in the recent campaign from his party's nominee, Thomas E. Dewey, saying he liked President Roosevelt's stand on world collaboration better.

Ball also proposed that the full-scale conference be held in the United States, as the site farthest removed from the fighting fronts.

No Time Set Yet

The "Big Three" are expected to meet before the end of this year. But no time has been fixed for the contemplated meeting of all United Nations representatives. The State Department has said it hopes the conference can be held during the fore part of next year.

Another leading Republican advocate of international cooperation, Senator Burton, of Ohio, agreed that the conference should be held as early as possible, but added:

"Advance steps must be taken to see that there is substantial agreement among the big nations, and then between the big nations and the little ones, before the conference is held.

Would Avoid Breakdown

"It would be very unfortunate if the conference broke down in disagreement.

"While I feel that whatever time is necessary must be taken to work out major differences in advance, the matter should not be allowed to drag. It certainly need not wait for the end of the European war."

Hawaiian Governor Honored at Capital

Washington, Nov. 16 (A. P.).—Gov. Ingram M. Stainback of Hawaii and Mrs. Stainback were officially welcomed to the capital last night by top-ranking Army, Navy and Federal officials and members of Congress.

The reception in honor of the Hawaiian visitors was given at the Hotel Statler by Delegate Joseph R. Farrington of Hawaii and Mrs. Farrington.

AIR FORCE MEN TO HAVE GRIPE HOUR

Washington, Nov. 16 (A. P.).—Enlisted men and officers at all Army Air Force stations are going to have wider opportunity to get gripes off their chests.

Personal problems and suggestions for improvements will be welcomed at a personal conference hour to be held at least once a month, Major-Gen. Junius W. Jones, air inspector, has announced.

"Inquiry will be made to make sure that no punitive action was taken against any one who makes a complaint," Gen. Jones promised.

Overseas Yule Cards Must Be Mailed Now

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP).—Christmas cards to soldiers overseas should be sent at once to get there in time, the Army warned today.

They must be in sealed envelopes.

FOOD FOR PRISONERS OF WAR REACH JAPAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—(AP) The American Red Cross said today relief supplies intended for prisoners of war held by the Japanese had reached Kobe, Japan.

The supplies, sent last year to Vladivostok, were moved by the Soviet government to Nakhodka, 100 miles away, and picked up there by a Japanese ship.

Basil O'Connor, Red Cross chairman, said the cargo was valued at $1,500,000. It included 300,000 food packages, weighing 11 pounds each; 2,661 cases of drugs and medical supplies, 19,500 sets of clothing, 4,200 pairs of army shoes, 7,080 overcoats, 125 cases of shoe repair materials, 21,000 sets of toilet articles, 1,000,000 cigarets, and 299 cases of Y.M.C.A. books and religious supplies.

The bishops, meeting at Catholic University, also adopted a resolution expressing concern "for the fate of religion among their fellow-Christians in Poland, the Baltic states and neighboring Catholic lands."

To the people of those lands, the bishops extended "deep sympathy with the prayerful hope that the strong, victorious nations in charity and justice will give them succor in their sufferings and the full enjoyment of their indisputable rights" both civil and religious.

Flyers' Altitude Masks Seen As Robots To Aid The Sick In Breathing

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—Robot rubber masks that will do the work of breathing for a sick person will become available after the war as a result of the new pressure masks now going into use for American fighter pilots at extremely high altitudes.

The new mask for the air forces was announced last September. Today its expected medical uses were described to the National Academy of Sciences by Commander J. Murray Steele, Medical Corps, United States Navy.

Doesn't Have To Breathe

The mask is heavy rubber, formed to fit snugly over the bridge of the nose, cheeks and chin. Pure oxygen—or any other form of air—can be forced into this mask at pressures higher than the atmosphere, and it will not leak.

The pressurized air will, however, force itself into the lungs of the robot mask wearer. He doesn't have to breathe in at all; the robot does that for him.

He does have to breathe out, forcing the air out, with the present-type military mask. But Commander Steele said it is now possible to alter the pressure during breathing, to make a regular cycle of fluctuating pressure inside the mask to fit the natural human breathing cycle.

Adjustable To Patient

Thus at one moment the mask can force air into the lungs, and at the next so reduce its pressure that the exhalation is completely without effort.

Or the doctor can adjust the mask to any degree of effort or lack of effort at any stage of breath-taking. For example, Commander Steele said, some kinds of heart patients might be helped by a mask, which makes every stage of their breathing effortless.

Persons suffering from gassed lungs might be better off with a robot which put the air into their lungs without any effort on their part, but required them to force it out.

In high altitude flying the new mask is needed to keep enough oxygen in the aviator's blood. Even pure oxygen doesn't do this when the outside air pressure becomes extremely low.

Prelates Oppose Military Bills

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—Archbishops and bishops of the Catholic Church in the United States today voiced opposition to "immediate passage" of legislation to require compulsory military training of youths.

Holding their annual general meeting here, the clerics adopted a resolution which specifically mentioned the Wadsworth-Gurney and the May bills now before Congress.

The Reasons

Such legislation, the bishops' resolution said, should not be enacted just now because:

"This problem should not be settled until after the end of the war and we know what the international situation shall be.

"Those now serving in the army and navy should be given an opportunity to express their views on this measure before it is enacted.

"Military requirements until the end of the war can be met by the extension of the Selective Service Act."

Adopt Resolution

New Army And Navy Rank Pondered In Congress

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—Legislation to add a fifth star to the shoulder clusters of a group of four-star generals and admirals marched toward the top of Congress' list today.

It was shoved ahead after Speaker Rayburn and Chairman May (D., Ky.), of the House Military Committee, disclosed that President Roosevelt would like to see it enacted.

Four Are Listed

The legislation is in a position to be called up in the House at any time. Differences of opinion over how many generals and admirals should be given the "super" ranking could delay consideration.

Current plans provide for the designation of two generals and two admirals as "general of the army" and "admiral of the fleet," respectively.

These designations presumably would be bestowed on Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commanding Allied action in Europe, and on Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of naval operations, and Admiral William D. Leahy, the President's chief of staff.

A move now afoot would permit the designation of four generals and four admirals for the high honor, adding Gens. Douglas MacArthur and H. H. Arnold and Admirals Chester W. Nimitz and William F. Halsey.

Pershing Honored

Currently a four-star admiral is as high as naval rankings go, while only one general, John J. Pershing, holds the coveted rank of "the general of the armies of the United States," bestowed upon him by special act of Congress after the last war.

The legislation's position ranks with measures extending the Second War Powers Act, reviving the crop insurance program and blueprinting a post-war road construction and river and harbor improvement program.

The crop insurance bill is slated for House consideration ea[illegible] week. The Senate hopes to get under way promptly with the rivers and harbors bill and flood-control legislation.

Vote Probe Meets

There was no legislative business on today's House program, but the Special Campaign Expenditures committee met to decide whether to investigate the allegedly political use of the Congressional free-mail privilege.

In the Senate, Majority Leader Barkley (D., Ky.) disclosed that efforts are under way to avoid a fight over a proposal by Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) to freeze social-security pay-roll taxes at present levels. The next step may be to offer a compromise on a new rate, and a revised formula for creation of a reserve.

Unless legislation is passed between now and December 31, the present pay-roll tax of one per cent. each on employers and employes will go to two per cent. on each.

of War Mobilization and some new ones, was created by Congress last September. Byrnes has been filling it under an interim appointment.

Senator George (D-Ga) moved that the Senate waive the customary committee consideration of the nomination and act at once. There was unanimous agreement.

At the Capitol, Speaker Rayburn expressed doubt that Congress will halt the increase scheduled Jan. 1 in Social Security payroll taxes. They are due to go up from one to two percent on both employes and employers. Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) has proposed that the tax be continued at one percent. The legislative requirement that tax bills must originate in the House will bar Vandenberg from offering formal legislation, however, unless the House sends to the Senate some tax measure to which he could attach his proposal as an amendment. Administration fiscal leaders want the tax to go up.

A study of use of congressional free mailing privileges during political campaigns was ordered by the House Campaign Expenditures committee. Chairman Anderson (D-NM) said the committee had received complaints that millions of pieces of campaign literature were mailed free in the recent campaign. He said hearings would be held next month on plugging "loopholes" in the election laws.

Byrnes Named War Mobilizer, Director of Reconversion

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—(AP) James F. Byrnes' former Senate colleagues, Republicans and Democrats alike, paid tributes to him today as they unanimously approved his nomination as director of War Mobilization and Reconversion.

Minority Leader White of Maine praised Byrnes for "outstanding abilities, amazing industry and high character." Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky said he wanted to express his own "and the country's appreciation" that Byrnes had consented to stay on for a while in his assistant president's post.

Byrnes, former South Carolina Senator who stepped down from the Supreme court to take the job of War Mobilization director, had planned to retire to private life this week. He is 65.

But he came back from a recent visit to the European battlefront convinced that there is a lot of hard going still ahead in the war. The White House announced that President Roosevelt had prevailed upon him to continue on the job.

So today, Mr. Roosevelt sent to the Senate a formal nomination of Byrnes for a two-year term as director of War Mobilization and Reconversion. This office, embracing Byrnes' former duties as direc-

SHORTAGES SEEN PROLONGING WAR

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(AP) James F. Byrnes, director of War Mobilization and Reconversion, said today there is a shortage of war materiel and weapons which might "prolong the war" unless speedily overcome.

Byrnes sent a letter to five government agencies concerned with war production programs saying:

"While a shortage of materiel and weapons exists in relatively few programs, it is sufficient, if not speedily overcome, to prolong the war."

Byrnes' letter went to the War production board, the War and Navy departments, the War Manpower commission and the Maritime commission. In it he said he would hold up the resumption of civilian goods production unless the war program is stepped up.

reconversion director said he is "delaying for the time being a suspension of the spot authorization procedure for resuming civilian production" in the first two groups of the labor market area but warned if the stepped up production he requests does not result from his appeal to war workers "I shall not hesitate to take more drastic action."

"Much of the manpower trouble," he said, "is due to the mistaken belief on the part of some people that the war is about over. 200,000 additional able bodied men, willing to do hard work, could break the bottleneck in the critical programs and shorten the war."

GENERAL PRAISES MEDICAL PROGRESS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 — (AP) The United States would have lost this war swiftly, Brigadier General James S. Simmons said today, had it not been for the great medical progress since our Civil War.

A great part of the saving of manpower he attributed to the medical research of the present war, which is directed by the Office of the Surgeon General of the Army, in which he serves.

Until recently, he told the National Academy of Sciences, soldiers with syphilis required a minimum of six months treatment.

"Today, using penicillin, the treatment lasts only two weeks and the results appear to be good."

The military forces, he said, have sponsored 500 broad medical research projects, costing $17,000,000. Three examples of results are the Red Cross plasma, the development of penicillin and D. D. T., the insect powder.

"It is my belief," he declared, "that D. D. T. gives promise of being one of the greatest contributions ever made to world health."

This new, white, odorless insect powder has eliminated the threat of typhus, one of the worst killers of all wars, and, less well known, has rid entire Pacific combat islands of malaria-carrying mosquitoes, and promises to control malaria throughout the world.

General Simmons said research of this war has rendered relatively unimportant the gastro-intestinal diseases that formerly were the scourge of all armies, excepting only the dysenteries. And for the latter there are sanitary controls that work well.

Typhoid, paratyphoid and cholera have been practically eliminated by new vaccines.

The Army has on hand a vaccine for the bubonic plague, or black death, but to date has not had this disease to contend with.

The highest Army mortality from respiratory diseases, he said, is only one - five-hundredth that of 1918. Deaths from diphtheria, measles, mumps, scarlet fever and acute rheumatic fever are negligible.

PORTER EXPECTED TO BECOME NEW CHAIRMAN OF FCC

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(AP) Paul Porter, Democratic campaign publicity chief, was nominated today as a member of the Federal Communications commission, and is expected to become FCC chairman.

Leaving an hour-long White House conference with President Roosevelt, Porter was asked if he expected to be chairman in succession to James Lawrence Fly whose resignation was effective yesterday. He replied:

"Yes, that's right."

The appointment, made by the President shortly afterward, was for a commission membership, for a term extending seven years from July 1, 1942.

Routine procedure is for the President to designate a chairman from among members of the Commission.

In a move which left the way fully open for Porter to step up, the President had asked Commissioner Ewell K. Jett to serve as chairman until a regular commission head is named. Mr. Roosevelt's letter, dated Nov. 14 and made public today, said that "will necessarily be some weeks."

"I can well understand," the President wrote Jett, "that with your other extensive duties, you would not care to undertake the burdens of the chairman's office permanently."

Porter, 40-year-old newspaperman, lawyer, and radio executive, left a post as assistant to Fred M. Vinson, economic stabilization director, to take on the publicity job for the Democratic national committee early in 1944.

He had been in government service most of the time since the early days of the Roosevelt administration. An editorial on the cotton situation which he wrote for the La Grange, Ga., news attracted the attention of Henry A. Wallace, then secretary of agriculture.

He was special assistant in the Agricultural Adjustment administration until 1937 when he became Washington counsel for the Columbia Broadcasting system. He came back to the government in 1940 as assistant to Chester C. Davis in organization of the war food program. In 1942 he took over rent control under Leon Henderson in the Office of Price administration, then served briefly in 1943 as a deputy in the War Food administration, going from there to the economic stabilization post.

Jett, 50 years old and a World War I naval officer, has been in communications control work since 1929 when the Navy loaned him to the engineering department of the Federal Radio commission. Retiring from the Navy, he was appointed senior radio engineer, and climbed to chief engineer in 1938. He succeeded George Henry Payne on the Commission Feb. 15, 1944.

Mead Calls Manpower Situation Again Critical

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—Chairman Mead (D., N. Y.) of the War Investigating Committee, said today the manpower problem once again is "critical" and is being studied intently by investigators in the field.

"In certain war plants manpower is a No. 1 problem," Mead told the Senate. "In other places unemployment is already beginning to prove a serious difficulty."

(R.-Vt.) called for his party to assume a large share of responsibility "in the formulation of our international policy."

Senator Connally told his colleagues that he had read Gov. Dewey's campaign speeches and statements and that those on an international peace program "attracted my admiration," as did the declaration of policy in the Republican platform. While neither Gov. Dewey's speeches nor the platform declaration went as far as he would have liked, Senator Connally said, both evidenced sympathetic desire to establish an organization to promote international peace.

Republican Leadership.

Senator Austin, an advocate of an international organization empowered to use force to prevent aggression, said that he intended to file in the Congressional Record speeches and articles outlining his views. It is important, he said, that public opinion be kept informed.

"I want the record of the Republican party kept straight and the cause of security supported," Senator Austin said. "I want the Republican party to take a strong, constructive position and not merely follow.

"I do not propose the waiving of our right to criticize. Nevertheless, these times offer a chance for the minority to do more than follow."

Dies Committee Lacks Friends, Faces Death

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—For more than six years a Congressional institution that few members ever opposed, the Dies Committee is headed for extinction—for lack of influential Capitol Hill friends.

Created by the House in May 1938, to investigate un-American activities and headed since then by Representative Martin Dies, Texas Democrat, the committee is slated to die January 3.

Five times the House overwhelmingly has voted it new leases on life. It has given it more than $650,000 to finance investigations that have produced 17 printed volumes of testimony and 20 volumes of reports.

Dies Won't Be Back

But no one has volunteered to request a sixth continuance, and the odds are that the close of 1944 will see the end of the committee.

Dies himself will not be back for the new Congress, having decided not to seek reelection, giving reasons of health. The CIO Political Action Committee, current object of committee investigation, had until then planned a campaign to prevent his return.

Three other members were defeated in this year's primary or general elections—Representatives Starnes, of Alabama, and Costello, of California, Democrats, and Busbey, of Illinois, Republican.

Four Reelected

Two Democrats—Eberharter, of Pennsylvania, and Courtney, of Tennessee—and two Republicans—Thomas, of New Jersey, and Mundt, of South Dakota—were reelected.

Following a conference with Republican leader Joe W. Martin, Jr., Thomas announced that he would not sponsor a resolution to continue the committee. That, he said, was a responsibility of the majority, or Democratic, party.

Martin himself was non-committal, but close associates said the House GOP bloc would take a hands-off attitude toward the committee's future.

Rayburn Silent

Speaker Sam Rayburn, known to be opposed generally to special investigating committees, declined to comment, but other Democrats "in the know" said the majority party would not sponsor a continuance.

Dies led the fight for past continuances and is expected to request the House informally to preserve the committee's records and voluminous files, perhaps under the jurisdiction of one of the regular standing committees.

During the last two years, committee attaches said, these records and files, filling more than 200 filing-cabinet drawers, have been used by 7,511 agents of Federal agencies and are almost constantly being studied and referred to by agents of half a dozen Government bodies.

Aids Sedition Trial

Many exhibits being used by the Government in the current mass sedition trial here were furnished by the committee, through its main office on Capitol Hill and branch offices in Chicago, New York and Los Angeles.

Connally Hails Dewey's Stand

Washington, Nov. 16 (A. P.).—Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee congratulated Gov. Dewey's forward attitude on foreign policy today. His commendation of the Republican party's 1944 presidential candidate came after Senator Austin

3 MEMBERS AGREE TO REMAIN ON WLB

Bow to Roosevelt's Request, Consent to Stay Until Nazis Surrender.

NOV 17 1944

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP) Three War Labor board members today bowed to a request from President Roosevelt and agreed to withhold their resignations until Germany falls.

Chairman William H. Davis, George W. Taylor and Frank P. Graham, three of the four public members of the WLB, had asked to be relieved in order to return to private life.

The White House announced today, however, that at President Roosevelt's request they had consented to remain "until the elimination of Germany from the war or, at least, until such time as they could leave without seriously affecting the work of the organization."

Similarly, the President persuaded War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, who had intended to retire this week, to stay on until the European phase of the war is ended.

It is known that some of the President's advisers take the view that any changes in wage controls or other labor policy should await the defeat of Germany. On the other hand, there had been speculation that the President might make the resignations of Davis, Taylor and Graham an occasion for altering the War Labor board's form.

As presently constituted, the WLB is a tripartite agency composed of four representatives from labor, four from industry and four from the public. The four public members usually have found themselves casting the deciding votes with labor and industry members ranged on opposite sides.

As a consequence, there have been suggestions that a new agency be established composed only of public representatives.

No issues of policy were involved in any of the three resignations presented to Mr. Roosevelt. Chairman Davis offered his last Aug. 29, his 65th birthday. He explained that he had always planned to "slow down" on reaching that age and said a return to his patent law practice in New York would be recreation compared to the tempestuous time he has had as head of WLB. He asked to be relieved about Jan. 1.

Vice Chairman Taylor asked to be allowed to retire Dec. 1. He said he wanted to return to his economics chair at the University of Pennsylvania to get started on what he regarded as a vital educational program in the postwar period.

Dr. Graham, on leave as president of the University of North Carolina, has been under pressure from its trustees to return. He asked that his resignation be effective at conclusion of the WLB's current crucial deliberations.

The board is engaged in preparing a report for the President on the status of wage earners under increased wartime living costs. It decided against making any recommendations to the President but its report is expected to carry heavy weight in the President's decision on whether the "Little Steel" formula should be relaxed. This formula, first adopted by the WLB and then established by executive order of the President, limits general wage increases to 15 per cent above the level of January, 1941.

Solid-South Vote Unneeded

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—The

30. 24— 20431

Democrats have now won a Presidential election, regardless of the South, for the fifth time since the Civil War

The three other times they won the Presidency in that 80-year period the "Solid South" was needed to put their candidate over—in Grover Cleveland's elections in 1884 and 1892 and Woodrow Wilson's second election in 1916.

In every campaign it has been a bulwark on which the Democrats counted.

Politicians Avoid Comment

But an analysis today showed that President Roosevelt would have won all his four terms without counting the South's 11-State electoral vote. The same held true of Wilson in his 1912 election.

Except for scattered comments that Southern voters also might be unaware of the historical record, politicians preferred to let the situation speak for itself.

It is obvious, however, that the Democratic party, while not needing the South's vote in the Electoral College to win with Roosevelt four times and Wilson once, could not have maintained its majorities in Congress without that big bloc of votes below the Mason-Dixon line.

Makeup Of Congress

The Presidential vote usually determines the makeup of Congress. Thus if the South's 127 electoral votes had gone this time to Gov. Thomas F. Dewey instead of the President the Republicans might have come close to controlling the next House.

Coincident with an Associated Press survey showing Roosevelt again swept the nation's big cities in the recent election and carried every State, except Ohio and Wisconsin, in which they are located, a separate study disclosed that he had outdistanced his Republican opponents:

In eight of the ten big electoral vote States outside of the South this year and in 1940; in all ten in 1936 and nine of the ten in 1932, carrying his native State of New York each time.

This Election's Margin

Roosevelt's electoral vote of 432 in this election was 39 more than a majority of 266 needed to win after deducting the South's 127 votes.

He won with 449 in 1940. He still would have won by 59 votes if the South's then aggregate of 124 was ignored.

In 1936 he received the record total of 523 to Alf M. Landon's 8. This meant he could have erased the Southern vote and still won by 133 more than a majority.

His excess over a majority was 82 in 1932, when he beat Herbert Hoover 472 to 59, regardless of the South.

Mrs. Fulmer Sworn In For 7 Weeks in House

Both Parties Applaud Widow of South Carolina Member

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP).—House members rose today to applaud their eighth woman colleague, Mrs. Hampton Pitts Fulmer, Democrat, of South Carolina, widow of the dean of the South Carolina delegation.

Wearing a simple, black dress, the white-haired Mrs. Fulmer took the oath from Speaker Sam Rayburn, Democrat, of Texas, for a seven weeks' term as Representative from her husband's district. She will be succeeded in the new Congress by Representative-elect John J. Riley, of Sumter.

Republicans and Democrats alike stood to applaud after Representative James P. Richards, Democrat, of South Carolina, made a brief speech presenting Mrs. Fulmer to the House. Women members went to the rostrum to welcome their new colleague.

Mrs. Fulmer took her seat as the second Democratic woman in the House by unanimous consent of her fellow members. Her election credential did not arrive in time for the ceremony, but Representative Richards asked and received special permission for her to be sworn in.

Her husband, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee and Representative from South Carolina for twenty-three years, died Oct. 19.

Brownell Asked to Stay

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP).—Herbert Brownell jr. has been asked by Governor Thomas E. Dewey to remain as chairman of the Republican National Committee, it was learned here today.

Mr. Brownell is vacationing in Tucson, Ariz., and will return east Dec. 15 when he will decide whether to remain as chairman.

National headquarters of the party said today that Godfrey Hammond had resigned as publicity director for the national committee and returned to his private job as president of the Popular Science Publishing Company. This leaves Leland Chesley, former St. Louis newspaper man and radio official, in charge of publicity. He has been in charge of the Washington headquarters publicity staff during the recent campaign.

RAILROAD PUBLICATION BACKS FRANCES PERKINS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(AP) The Railroad Brotherhoods' official publication "Labor" today editorially defended Secretary of Labor Perkins, saying she had tried to safeguard the interests of workers.

"It is pretty well agreed that President Roosevelt will not make any sweeping changes in his cabinet," said the editorial, captioned "Why Pick on Frances Perkins?"

Referring to reports that Secretary Perkins would be replaced, "Labor" said "big publishers and other reactionaries don't like her."

"Obviously they [illegible] that a woman should not occupy that position," the comment continued. "There is a good deal to that, but it isn't the reactionaries' real reason for criticizing the present Secretary of Labor.

Morgenthau Is House Hunting; Forgot 4th Term in the Lease

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP).—Henry Morgenthau jr., Secretary of the Treasury, is house hunting.

His present lease expires on Feb. 1. He has to move because the owner intends to move in. Mr. Morgenthau told his news conference today that when he signed the lease three years ago, he didn't know President Roosevelt would be here for a fourth term.

Aside from disclosing his house hunt, Mr. Morgenthau didn't say whether he expects to continue as Treasury secretary.

Asked whether he will submit his resignation, he said it was like asking "have you stopped beating your wife?" A reporter inquired whether all Cabinet officers don't submit their resignations at the end of each term, and he remarked, "that is what the newspapers tell me."

Mr. Morgenthau will complete eleven years tomorrow as head of the Treasury Department.

Thus he has been secretary longer than any one else except Albert Gallatin (1801-1813) and Andrew Mellon (1921-1932).

World Security Plan Lauded By U. S., British, Soviet Leaders

New York, Nov. 16 (AP)—Under Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., Soviet Ambassador Andrei A. Gromyko and the British Ambassador, the Earl of Halifax, tonight hailed the Dumbarton Oaks proposals for creation of an international security organization as a milestone in the preservation of peace.

They addressed a rally at Madison Square Garden celebrating the 27th anniversary of the founding of the Soviet Union and the 11th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between the United States and the Soviet Union. The rally was under the auspices of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship.

Roosevelt Sends Message

President Roosevelt said in a message that there was "no better tribute we can hold out to our allies than to continue working in ever growing accord to establish a peace that will endure."

"The Dumbarton Oaks conference was a step in this direction. Other steps will be taken," continued the message, which was made public by the national council. "In line with this objective such meetings as you are holding in Madison Square Garden and in other great centers throughout the United States are of tremendous assistance and value."

Stettinius declared "the world may rest assured that whatever steps are necessary to prevent Germany ever from waging war again will be taken."

Obligation Of Free Nations

"To put every ounce of determination and effort into the task of creating a peaceful and advancing community of free nations is an obligation which our two nations and all peace-loving nations cannot escape," Stettinius said.

"I have no doubt," he said, "that in the coming months, the Dumbarton Oaks proposals will be completed."

Gromyko said that unity and mutual trust among the great Allied nations corresponded to the interests of all freedom-loving countries.

Extent Of Coordination

"The freedom-loving peoples of the world," he said, "are placing great hopes in an international organizatioin, which would be an efficient and effective instrument for the preservation of peace and the suppression of aggression, in case it should develop.

"Its effectiveness and efficiency will be directly dependent on the extent of the coordination of actions among the most powerful peace-loving nations, who have at their disposal the necessary means for the prevention and suppression of aggression."

Halifax said he believed the close association of the United States, Soviet Russia and the British Commonwealth "rallying all the peace-loving forces among the nations, can secure our children and children's children against a repetition of the present tragedy."

Milestone On Road

"The recent talks at Dumbarton Oaks under the inspiring leadership of Mr. Stettinius," he said, "were a large milestone on this road. So was the speech which Marshal Stalin delivered on November 7, when in words that ran round the world he advocated so warmly the continued solidarity of our grand alliance."

Halifax said that Germany would seek to foster misunderstandings among the United Nations. Gromyko expressed a similar view, saying that Allied unity presupposed "constant alertness and struggle against propaganda sowing seeds of doubt in the ranks of the Allies."

Davies Also Voices Warning

Joseph E. Davies, former American Ambassador to Moscow who was honorary chairman of the rally, also voiced a warning against "assaults upon the unity of the three great Allies."

He said those who "heedlessly foster or create suspicious and hostilities between the people of these nations" would "sabotage the possibility of peace."

"Victory in the war," he said, "rested upon a tripod of common purpose, confidence in the good faith of professions of peoples and their governments and unity necessary for effective action. A peace structure can be erected only upon a similar foundation."

POWER OF PEACE ENVOY IS ARGUED

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(AP) Senators Joseph H. Ball (R-Minn.) and Claude Pepper (D-Fla.) tonight expressed belief it would be constitutional to give the American representative in a world council power to commit this nation to the use of force to repel aggression.

But their views were challenged by Senator Chapman Revercomb (R-W.Va.) and author John T. Flynn, who termed such a step unconstitutional and unwise.

The four speakers shared the "America's Town Meeting" program at Town Hall, which was broadcast over the Blue network (8:30-9:30 p. m. EWT).

Flynn said in his prepared address that the proposal meant Congress would be asked to abdicate its authority to declare war and was "the most unconstitutional proposal that has ever been asked of the American people." Revercomb declared "no dictatorship could be more absolute or more far-reaching."

NOV 17 1944

Ball said in his prepared address that "a simple solution to the fears over delegation of this authority to a non-elective official would be to provide by legislation for the election by the people of our representative, thereby making him directly responsible to the people."

Pepper said in his prepared address that the United Nations should have "complete jurisdiction to order the use of these peace forces" and said they must be subject to instant use in order to be effective.

"When we agree by two-thirds vote of the Senate to the instrument creating the international organization and providing for such peace forces, we, in the constitutional way, give our assent to the use of such forces," Pepper said.

CIGARET SHORTAGE TERMED MYSTERY

BOSTON, Nov. 16—(AP) Chester Bowles, OPA price administrator, said today that the current cigaret shortage was a mystery to Washington officials and that proposed rationing apparently was impossible.

"We haven't the money (in OPA funds) and we haven't the people to organize a cigarette rationing program," Bowles said in a press conference.

Here to address the third war conference of the New England council, Bowles said that coffee stocks were adequate, adding "I think you'll be able to get all the coffee you need."

The OPA chief saw little immediate likelihood of any increase in gasoline rationing allotments, because "right now motorists are getting up to one-half of one per cent of the quota available for them."

"If we increased allotments to any particular class of users, or in any particular section, we'd go over that quota and then you'd begin to get dry tanks."

Bowles said that the supply of gasoline was "likely" to be greater after the end of the war in Europe, but he added that military officials predicted a huge demand for gasoline in the Far East when the end of the European war brings an increased tempo to the Asiatic hostilities.

Although he said he believed rationing and price controls would be kept operative for some time after the end of the war, in some consumer goods, as a means of avoiding inflation, Bowles refused to guess how long it would last.

"I'm no crystal gazer," he said.

BOSTON TRUCKS IDLE AS STRIKERS SEEK ELECTION

BOSTON, Nov. 16—(AP) An intra-union dispute that has piled up thousands of tons of perishable foodstuffs in Boston area warehouses and terminals continued tonight after a meeting called by union officials apparently backfired.

With the cooperation of employers, all drivers—including those not involved in the walkout—were given time off to attend today's union meeting, but leaders of the stoppage said many did not return to work afterward.

The crowd of 5,000 union members that overflowed a municipal building auditorium was so hostile that local president John M. Sullivan and Patrick H. Jennings, union international representative, were forced to flee over a back fire escape, where a police car was waiting to speed them to safety.

Hundreds of truck drivers who [illegible] refused admittance to the

had been refused admittance to the meeting lined the street, jeering them by raising their arms in imitation of the Hitler salute.

Drivers walked out Monday in protest against a ruling by the executive board of Local 25, International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers (AFL) that there would be no election of officers this year.

At Washington, the War Labor Board ordered the drivers to return immediately to their jobs of transporting perishable foods, terming the strike a violation of labor's pledge to forego walkouts during the war.

Local President Sullivan made two attempts to address today's meeting, but was unable to make himself heard above boos, catcalls and cries of "Resign! Resign!"

Sullivan then declared the meeting adjourned.

Members of a committee of 14 were expelled from the union following last Sunday's meeting at which they demanded an immediate election of officers. Denied admittance to today's session during Sullivan's presence they entered the hall after he left and mounted the rostrum.

Speaking in turn, the committee members promised a prompt end to the walkout as soon as a Democratic election was assured.

"Within an hour of the opening of negotiations every truck in the city of Boston will be moving," Charles F. La Placa told the meeting.

He predicted that the union would get in touch with those who had staged the walkout before nightfall.

Joseph H. Rego of Cambridge, incapacitated World War II veteran, was assisted to the speakers' stand.

One of the 14 expelled following Sunday's meeting, Rego expressed his gratitude at the way "You boys have stood behind us" in "our effort to stamp out Hitlerism at home as well as overseas."

Patrick T. Porcaro of Malden, one of the 14 committeemen, told the press than no election of officers had been held since Sullivan was installed as president Dec. 7, 1941, although the union constitution provides for regular elections.

Harold Donaghue, union attorney, refused comment on the charges. Union officials could not be reached following the meeting, but Sullivan earlier had declared that the men would be given the alternative of returning to work or facing the loss of all seniority rights.

"I guess all of us will be suspended members," La Placa remarked.

USO Head Says First GI Cry Is Ever 'Girls'

Miami, Fla., Nov. 16 (AP)—"Girls," said Frank P. Brazzi, United Service Organization director, today, "is the GI cry everywhere."

"When asked what they prefer above all else in their USO shows," he continued, "the answer of servicemen is always 'girls.'

"Next in line of popularity is music. The boys seem to like semi-classical music best of all, with selections from 'Naughty Marietta' and 'Showboat' their favorite. Next comes comedy of the Bob Hope variety.

"Movies play a very important part in keeping up the morale of the fighting men. Each USO unit includes a truck carrying a projector and at least one of the latest Hollywood films."

Wants Labor at Peace Table

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 16 (AP).—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said here today that adequate labor representation at the peace conference was necessary to "develop plans to prevent recurrence of war and provide security for all classes."

Here to take part in the federation's convention starting Monday, and in preliminary meetings of affiliated groups, Mr. Green said two other points in labor's program were an immediate survey to ascertain ways of beginning civilian production as soon as possible and development of a systematic plan to dispose of surplus materials so that they can be absorbed without interfering with the nation's economy.

Truck Developed For China War

Detroit, Nov. 16 (AP)—Dodge division of Chrysler Corporation announced today that it has begun shipment of several thousand trucks of new design intended to haul munitions, supplies and personnel over the Burma and Ledo roads and other areas of the Chinese war theater.

The trucks, with a 170-inch wheelbase and built for a gross weight (loaded) of 20,000 pounds, are driven through the rear wheels only. A specially designed front axle permits a complete turn within 60 feet.

Supplied with each vehicle is a 300-page instruction book written in Chinese.

AVIATION PARLEY NEARS DECISION

CHICAGO, Nov. 16—The International Civil Aviation conference reached the threshold of decision tonight on postwar regulation of aircraft operating across national borders.

"Good progress" was reported by C. D. Howe, leader of the Canadian delegation, one of the members of the "Big Three" committee which has been trying since Sunday to distill the commercial aviation aspirations of the 54 countries represented at the conference.

The activity is almost literally a distillation process. Positions of the leading delegations—Canada, Great Britain and the United States—have been modified first by separate consultation with the other countries supporting each of them and then through their joint discussions. The final distillation is taking place in the effort to put into a formal document a description of the plan which represents conciliation of the three major proposals.

There was some reason to believe this document would be placed before the conference in open session some time Friday; certainly by Saturday, which is the day the technical group also hopes to present its final plan before a full committee.

Presumably this document will be acceptable to supporters if it is acceptable to the major conferees after its initial presentation. All countries will have a day or two to study the proposal before casting their votes.

Agreement on the compromise, which is concerned only with the establishment of a permanent world aviation authority, will leave little if any difficulty in concluding arrangements for regulations during the time required to ratify the proposed treaty.

The final rounds of the compromise discussions revolve more closely around the bald question of airline business than at any time earlier in the conference. The initial phases were more concerned with the underlying principles of international cooperation in regulation of commerce.

Adolf A. Berle, Jr., of the United States, Lord Swinton of the United Kingdom, Howe of Canada and their right-hand men are talking now about how many times a day or a week a nation can expect to fly over the routes it chooses; how to decide on a division of traffic, if there is to be one; how to put a floor under prices for the service to be sold.

Extent Of Air Control Argued At Conference

Chicago, Nov. 16 (AP)—The question facing the leaders at the International Civil Aviation Conference today in their attempt to cut through differences which block the path to agreement on a world air agency is simply:

How far should the world go now in attempting to apply economic controls to airline operations between countries?

Should there be an International Civil Aeronautics Board empowered to grant routes between nations, to supervise the rates and to say how often planes should fly? That is, in rough outline, what the British and Canadians came to ask.

What U. S. Wants

Or should the international body be restricted to the status of an advisory board without power relating to routes, rates and schedules? That is what the United States wanted.

The British Commonwealth of Nations is united in the view that now is the time to write the answers into a treaty.

The United States prefers to lay a foundation composed of study and experiment, with the feeling that the experience will be valuable in building a permanent structure for economic controls at some future time.

New Operating Standards

One item which has universal acclaim is the writing of a new set of standards for operating aircraft—the kind of maps and weather reports to be used, marking of the planes, size and marking of airports, communications systems, qualification of ground and air crews, method of searching for lost planes, customs controls and minimum quality of aircraft.

Another great issue is a method for resuming airline operations between nations as quickly as possible. The United States is eager to do that. Some other countries, among them Canada, are in no hurry to start flying.

"U. S. Has All The Planes"

Their view is that the United States has all of the planes, most of the other equipment and a large measure of the experience, so that an early start would be against their interest and in favor of America.

The technical convention is four fifths approved and the path has been marked for bringing it to completion next year.

On the basis of information available it appears that the conference plan will include:

Some measure of schedule limitations—the number of daily or weekly flights over various routes.

Would Avoid Rate Wars

A formula by which minimum fares may be established at a level designed to assure a reasonable payment for the service given. This would prevent rate wars and, it is hoped, minimize subsidies or sharing of the burden by government treasuries.

An organization to supervise those two propositions.

Routes will be left to determination by the people who want to fly them through direct negotiations.

The principle of the right of nations to connect themselves by air routes without encountering "closed" air spaces will be set out in diplomatic terms.

Traffic Rights Debated

United States delegates have paid close attention to protection of the nation's rights to traffic between the mainland, its territories and possessions. One official pointed this up today with the comment that it was inevitable that Hawaii should some day become a State.

The topic arose in the discussion of a proposal by Mexico and Panama that would exclude colonies, possessions, mandates and protectorates from the right of cabotage, which is a nation's right to its internal traffic. The proposal, which is the reverse of the United States' views, is unlikely to get much conference support.

Hay Says Labor Draft May Not Be Necessary

Chicago, Nov. 16 (AP)—The nation "probably will get through" the war without national service legislation despite a growing labor shortage, Charles M. Hay, executive director and deputy chairman of the War Manpower Commission, said today.

Discussing the labor situation together with war requirements at a press conference with J. A. Krug, War Production Board chairman, Hay said the Chicago area alone had "20,000 high priority jobs" to be filled, with an additional 20,000 openings necessary to the war effort.

The most critical shortages, Krug reported, are in the production of heavy artillery and shells, heavy duty ten-ton trucks and tires, and Superfortresses.

Murray Indicates P.A.C. Will Not Be Dissolved

Formal Action Set for Today When Hillman Reports

CHICAGO, Nov. 16 (AP).—It is "a reasonable assumption" that the Congress of Industrial Organization's Political Action Committee will be continued, Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, said today.

Speaking at a press conference after a meeting of the union's executive board, Mr. Murray declined to amplify his remark, except to say "nothing succeeds like success."

The status of the P. A. C. long reported likely to dissolve after the Nov. 7 election, will be formally decided tomorrow, a spokesman said. Sidney Hillman, president of the P. A. C. and of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, will make his report then.

Mr. Murray convened the board today to lay groundwork for the national C. I. O. convention starting Monday. All sessions of the board were closed.

Survivors Of Veterans Destitute, Is Charge

Indianapolis, Nov. 16 (AP) — Edward N. Scheiberling, national commander of the American Legion, said today in a statement to State commanders and adjutants conferring here that the Legion had completed a nation-wide survey showing thousands of widows and orphans of war veterans "are living on the verge of destitution in the midst of our war prosperity."

"In every State, in virtually every community of America," said Scheiberling, "this survey shows that widows and children of the men we hailed with bountiful promises in 1918 are dependent upon public or private charity for their food, clothes and shelter."

The Legion commander urged passage of legislation to provide a "bare minimum of subsistence." He said the House had passed such a measure three times, but that the Senate failed to act upon it twice. It now is in the Senate Finance Committee.

Morgenthau Plan Seen Scrapped.

Denver, Nov. 16 (A. P.).—Charles P. Taft, the State Department's wartime economic director, said today that "we have to find out how to live with the enemy after we defeat him." In a further indication that the so-called Morgenthau plan to reduce Germany to an agricultural nation has been rejected, Mr. Taft added: "We propose to see that he doesn't make war again, but we can't keep him in either an ordinary prison, or in an insane asylum indefinitely, or kill him off."

He spoke on economic problems of the peace before the Denver Council of Churches. Among these problems, he said, is finding a way to live with the enemy "in the years to come, restricting him in appropriate ways until he shows he can join human society again."

This will be a peace, Mr. Taft said, "of transportation and trade and finance and ships and land and oil. We shan't have security by way of spiritual foundations without jobs, as the candidates call them, or dignity of labor, as the church describes it."

He urged an understanding of the necessity for negotiation and compromise in settling international problems and indicated that some divergent views between the United States and Britain are being narrowed. Citing as an example differences of opinion on cartels, Mr. Taft said: "We may well hope for a united front against the bad practices of cartels."

Democrats have now won a Presidential election, regardless of the South, for the fifth time since the Civil War

The three other times they won the Presidency in that 80-year period the "Solid South" was needed to put their candidate over—in Grover Cleveland's elections in 1884 and 1892 and Woodrow Wilson's second election in 1916.

In every campaign it has been a bulwark on which the Democrats counted.

Politicians Avoid Comment

But an analysis today showed that President Roosevelt would have won all his four terms without counting the South's 11-State electoral vote. The same held true of Wilson in his 1912 election.

Except for scattered comments that Southern voters also might be unaware of the historical record, politicians preferred to let the situation speak for itself.

It is obvious, however, that the Democratic party, while not needing the South's vote in the Electoral College to win with Roosevelt four times and Wilson once, could not have maintained its majorities in Congress without that big bloc of votes below the Mason-Dixon line.

Makeup Of Congress

The Presidential vote usually determines the makeup of Congress. Thus if the South's 127 electoral votes had gone this time to Gov. Thomas F. Dewey instead of the President the Republicans might have come close to controlling the next House.

Coincident with an Associated Press survey showing Roosevelt again swept the nation's big cities in the recent election and carried every State, except Ohio and Wisconsin, in which they are located, a separate study disclosed that he had outdistanced his Republican opponents:

In eight of the ten big electoral vote States outside of the South this year and in 1940; in all ten in 1936 and nine of the ten in 1932, carrying his native State of New York each time.

This Election's Margin

Roosevelt's electoral vote of 432 in this election was 39 more than a majority of 266 needed to win after deducting the South's 127 votes.

He won with 449 in 1940. He still would have won by 59 votes if the South's then aggregate of 124 was ignored.

In 1936 he received the record total of 523 to Alf M. Landon's 8. This meant he could have erased the Southern vote and still won by 133 more than a majority.

His excess over a majority was 82 in 1932, when he beat Herbert Hoover 472 to 59, regardless of the South.

Mrs. Fulmer Sworn In For 7 Weeks in House

Both Parties Applaud Widow of South Carolina Member

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP).—House members rose today to applaud their eighth woman colleague, Mrs. Hampton Pitts Fulmer, Democrat, of South Carolina, widow of the dean of the South Carolina delegation.

Wearing a simple, black dress, the white-haired Mrs. Fulmer took the oath from Speaker Sam Rayburn, Democrat, of Texas, for a seven weeks' term as Representative from her husband's district. She will be succeeded in the new Congress by Representative-elect John J. Riley, of Sumter.

Republicans and Democrats alike stood to applaud after Representative James P. Richards, Democrat, of South Carolina, made a brief speech presenting Mrs. Fulmer to the House. Women members went to the rostrum to welcome their new colleague.

Mrs. Fulmer took her seat as the second Democratic woman in the House by unanimous consent of her fellow members. Her election credential did not arrive in time for the ceremony, but Representative Richards asked and received special permission for her to be sworn in.

Her husband, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee and Representative from South Carolina for twenty-three years, died Oct. 19.

Brownell Asked to Stay

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP).—Herbert Brownell jr. has been asked by Governor Thomas E. Dewey to remain as chairman of the Republican National Committee, it was learned here today.

Mr. Brownell is vacationing in Tucson, Ariz., and will return east Dec. 15 when he will decide whether to remain as chairman.

National headquarters of the party said today that Godfrey Hammond had resigned as publicity director for the national committee and returned to his private job as president of the Popular Science Publishing Company. This leaves Leland Chesley, former St. Louis newspaper man and radio official, in charge of publicity. He has been in charge of the Washington headquarters publicity staff during the recent campaign.

RAILROAD PUBLICATION BACKS FRANCES PERKINS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(AP) The Railroad Brotherhoods' official publication "Labor" today editorially defended Secretary of Labor Perkins, saying she had tried to safeguard the interests of workers.

"It is pretty well agreed that President Roosevelt will not make any sweeping changes in his cabinet," said the editorial, captioned "Why Pick on Frances Perkins?"

Referring to reports that Secretary Perkins would be replaced, "Labor" said "big publishers and other reactionaries don't like her."

"Generally they agree that a woman should not occupy that position," the comment continued. "There is a good deal to that, but it isn't the reactionaries' real reason for criticizing the present Secretary of Labor.

Morgenthau Is House Hunting; Forgot 4th Term in the Lease

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP).—Henry Morgenthau jr., Secretary of the Treasury, is house hunting.

His present lease expires on Feb. 1. He has to move because the owner intends to move in. Mr. Morgenthau told his news conference today that when he signed the lease three years ago, he didn't know President Roosevelt would be here for a fourth term.

Aside from disclosing his house hunt, Mr. Morgenthau didn't say whether he expects to continue as Treasury secretary.

Asked whether he will submit his resignation, he said it was like asking "have you stopped beating your wife?" A reporter inquired whether all Cabinet officers don't submit their resignations at the end of each term, and he remarked, "that is what the newspapers tell me."

Mr. Morgenthau will complete eleven years tomorrow as head of the Treasury Department.

Thus he has been secretary longer than any one else except Albert Gallatin (1801-1813) and Andrew Mellon (1921-1932).

World Security Plan Lauded By U.S., British, Soviet Leaders

New York, Nov. 16 (AP)—Under Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., Soviet Ambassador Andrei A. Gromyko and the British Ambassador, the Earl of Halifax, tonight hailed the Dumbarton Oaks proposals for creation of an international security organization as a milestone in the preservation of peace.

They addressed a rally at Madison Square Garden celebrating the 27th anniversary of the founding of the Soviet Union and the 11th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between the United States and the Soviet Union. The rally was under the auspices of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship.

Roosevelt Sends Message

President Roosevelt said in a message that there was "no better tribute we can hold out to our allies than to continue working in ever growing accord to establish a peace that will endure."

"The Dumbarton Oaks conference was a step in this direction. Other steps will be taken," continued the message, which was made public by the national council. "In line with this objective such meetings as you are holding in Madison Square Garden and in other great centers throughout the United States are of tremendous assistance and value."

Stettinius declared "the world may rest assured that whatever steps are necessary to prevent Germany ever from waging war again will be taken."

Obligation Of Free Nations

"To put every ounce of determination and effort into the task of creating a peaceful and advancing community of free nations is an obligation which our two nations and all peace-loving nations cannot escape," Stettinius said.

"I have no doubt," he said, "that in the coming months, the Dumbarton Oaks proposals will be completed."

Gromyko said that unity and mutual trust among the great Allied nations corresponded to the interests of all freedom-loving countries.

Extent Of Coordination

"The freedom-loving peoples of the world," he said, "are placing great hopes in an international organizatioin, which would be an efficient and effective instrument for the preservation of peace and the suppression of aggression, in case it should develop.

"Its effectiveness and efficiency will be directly dependent on the extent of the coordination of actions among the most powerful peace-loving nations, who have at their disposal the necessary means for the prevention and suppression of aggression."

Halifax said he believed the close association of the United States, Soviet Russia and the British Commonwealth "rallying all the peace-loving forces among the nations, can secure our children and children's children against a repetition of the present tragedy."

Milestone On Road

"The recent talks at Dumbarton Oaks under the inspiring leadership of Mr. Stettinius," he said, "were a large milestone on this road. So was the speech which Marshal Stalin delivered on November 7, when in words that ran round the world he advocated so warmly the continued solidarity of our grand alliance."

Halifax said that Germany would seek to foster misunderstandings among the United Nations. Gromyko expressed a similar view, saying that Allied unity presupposed "constant alertness and struggle against propaganda sowing seeds of doubt in the ranks of the Allies."

Davies Also Voices Warning

Joseph E. Davies, former American Ambassador to Moscow who was honorary chairman of the rally, also voiced a warning against "assaults upon the unity of the three great Allies."

He said those who "heedlessly foster or create suspicious and hostilities between the people of these nations" would "sabotage the possibility of peace."

"Victory in the war," he said, "rested upon a tripod of common purpose, confidence in the good faith of professions of peoples and their governments and unity necessary for effective action. A peace structure can be erected only upon a similar foundation."

POWER OF PEACE ENVOY IS ARGUED

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(AP) Senators Joseph H. Ball (R-Minn.) and Claude Pepper (D-Fla.) tonight expressed belief it would be constitutional to give the American representative in a world council power to commit this nation to the use of force to repel aggression.

But their views were challenged by Senator Chapman Revercomb (R-W.Va.) and author John T. Flynn, who termed such a step unconstitutional and unwise.

The four speakers shared the "America's Town Meeting" program at Town Hall, which was broadcast over the Blue network (8:30-9:30 p. m. EWT).

Flynn said in his prepared address that the proposal meant Congress would be asked to abdicate its authority to declare war and was "the most unconstitutional proposal that has ever been asked of the American people." Revercomb declared "no dictatorship could be more absolute or more far-reaching."

NOV 17 1944

Ball said in his prepared address that "a simple solution to the fears over delegation of this authority to a non-elective official would be to provide by legislation for the election by the people of our representative, thereby making him directly responsible to the people."

Pepper said in his prepared address that the United Nations should have "complete jurisdiction to order the use of these peace forces" and said they must be subject to instant use in order to be effective.

"When we agree by two-thirds vote of the Senate to the instrument creating the international organization and providing for such peace forces, we, in the constitutional way, give our assent to the use of such forces," Pepper said.

CIGARET SHORTAGE TERMED MYSTERY

BOSTON, Nov. 16—(AP) Chester Bowles, OPA price administrator, said today that the current cigaret shortage was a mystery to Washington officials and that proposed rationing apparently was impossible.

"We haven't the money (in OPA funds) and we haven't the people to organize a cigarette rationing program," Bowles said in a press conference.

Here to address the third war conference of the New England council, Bowles said that coffee stocks were adequate, adding "I think you'll be able to get all the coffee you need."

The OPA chief saw little immediate likelihood of any increase in gasoline rationing allotments, because "right now motorists are getting up to one-half of one per cent of the quota available for them."

"If we increased allotments to any particular class of users, or in any particular section, we'd go over that quota and then you'd begin to get dry tanks."

Bowles said that the supply of gasoline was "likely" to be greater after the end of the war in Europe, but he added that military officials predicted a huge demand for gasoline in the Far East when the end of the European war brings an increased tempo to the Asiatic hostilities.

Although he said he believed rationing and price controls would be kept operative for some time after the end of the war, in some consumer goods, as a means of avoiding inflation, Bowles refused to guess how long it would last.

"I'm no crystal gazer," he said.

BOSTON TRUCKS IDLE AS STRIKERS SEEK ELECTION

BOSTON, Nov. 16—(AP) An intra-union dispute that has piled up thousands of tons of perishable foodstuffs in Boston area warehouses and terminals continued tonight after a meeting called by union officials apparently backfired.

With the cooperation of employers, all drivers—including those not involved in the walkout—were given time off to attend today's union meeting, but leaders of the stoppage said many did not return to work afterward.

The crowd of 5,000 union members that overflowed a municipal building auditorium was so hostile that local president John M. Sullivan and Patrick H. Jennings, union international representative, were forced to flee over a back fire escape, where a police car was waiting to speed them to safety.

Hundreds of truck drivers who had been refused admittance to the meeting lined the street, jeering them by raising their arms in imitation of the Hitler salute.

Drivers walked out Monday in protest against a ruling by the executive board of Local 25, International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers (AFL) that there would be no election of officers this year.

At Washington, the War Labor Board ordered the drivers to return immediately to their jobs of transporting perishable foods, terming the strike a violation of labor's pledge to forego walkouts during the war.

Local President Sullivan made two attempts to address today's meeting, but was unable to make himself heard above boos, catcalls and cries of "Resign! Resign!"

Sullivan then declared the meeting adjourned.

Members of a committee of 14 were expelled from the union following last Sunday's meeting at which they demanded an immediate election of officers. Denied admittance to today's session during Sullivan's presence they entered the hall after he left and mounted the rostrum.

Speaking in turn, the committee members promised a prompt end to the walkout as soon as a Democratic election was assured.

"Within an hour of the opening of negotiations every truck in the city of Boston will be moving," Charles F. La Placa told the meeting.

He predicted that the union would get in touch with those who had staged the walkout before nightfall.

Joseph H. Rego of Cambridge, incapacitated World War II veteran, was assisted to the speakers' stand.

One of the 14 expelled following Sunday's meeting, Rego expressed his gratitude at the way "You boys have stood behind us" in "our effort to stamp out Hitlerism at home as well as overseas."

Patrick T. Porcaro of Malden, one of the 14 committeemen, told the press than no election of officers had been held since Sullivan was installed as president Dec. 7, 1941, although the union constitution provides for regular elections.

Harold Donaghue, union attorney, refused comment on the charges. Union officials could not be reached following the meeting, but Sullivan earlier had declared that the men would be given the alternative of returning to work or facing the loss of all seniority rights.

"I guess all of us will be suspended members," La Placa remarked.

USO Head Says First GI Cry Is Ever 'Girls'

Miami, Fla., Nov. 16 (AP)—"Girls," said Frank P. Brazzi, United Service Organization director, today, "is the GI cry everywhere."

"When asked what they prefer above all else in their USO shows," he continued, "the answer of servicemen is always 'girls.'

"Next in line of popularity is music. The boys seem to like semi-classical music best of all, with selections from 'Naughty Marietta' and 'Showboat' their favorite. Next comes comedy of the Bob Hope variety.

"Movies play a very important part in keeping up the morale of the fighting men. Each USO unit includes a truck carrying a projector and at least one of the latest Hollywood films."

Wants Labor at Peace Table

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 16 (AP).—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said here today that adequate labor representation at the peace conference was necessary to "develop plans to prevent recurrence of war and provide security for all classes."

Here to take part in the federation's convention starting Monday, and in preliminary meetings of affiliated groups, Mr. Green said two other points in labor's program were an immediate survey to ascertain ways of beginning civilian production as soon as possible and development of a systematic plan to dispose of surplus materials so that they can be absorbed without interfering with the nation's economy.

Truck Developed For China War

Detroit, Nov. 16 (AP)—Dodge division of Chrysler Corporation announced today that it has begun shipment of several thousand trucks of new design intended to haul munitions, supplies and personnel over the Burma and Ledo roads and other areas of the Chinese war theater.

The trucks, with a 170-inch wheelbase and built for a gross weight (loaded) of 20,000 pounds, are driven through the rear wheels only. A specially designed front axle permits a complete turn within 60 feet.

Supplied with each vehicle is a 300-page instruction book written in Chinese.

AVIATION PARLEY NEARS DECISION

Stilwell Takes 'Hat Off' to G.I.; Silent on China

General at Interview Says Men Accept Discipline Better, Understand Issues

CARMEL, Calif., Nov. 16 (AP).—General Joseph W. Stilwell, recently relieved of his duties in the China-Burma-India area, refused to discuss his removal today, but was unstinting in his praise of the American soldier in his first press interview since his return. "My hat's off to this generation; I'm for them," he told more than fifty newspaper men and photographers yesterday in an interview released by his aide for publication today.

"The Army must have done an excellent job of training," he said. "The soldiers are more amenable to discipline, and I think the war picture was better presented to them. There might have been a little better preparation in years previous to the war, but the stuff is good."

General Stilwell said the Japanese are good soldiers by virtue of military training from a tender age, "but I think the way we do it is a damned sight better."

The general refused to discuss China or his removal from that area, where he was chief of staff to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, other than to say: "The newsmen in China are doing a wonderful job and are giving people an accurate picture of what is going on."

To oblique questions leading to the situation in China, the general repeatedly answered: "I can't answer that. It will lead back to a discussion of the Chinese situation, and I just can't say anything."

For three hours, General Stilwell, known throughout the Army as "Vinegar Joe," talked informally with the reporters, posed with his wife for the cameras, and joined his guests in a buffet luncheon.

He doffed his ribbonless dress uniform and donned an old, black sweater, sun-tan slacks and his G.I. shoes for a run on the beach with Gerry, his giant Schnauser dog, while cameras clicked.

He explained his lack of ribbons: "I only have two ribbons that mean anything (the Distinguished Service Cross and Distinguished Service Medal) and I didn't preserve them. The ribbons should be left to the guys who take it day and night and get shot up."

Evidence of impatience at his enforced rest while waiting for reassignment came out in this remark: "This being at home waiting is very tough on Mrs. Stilwell, tougher even than when I was overseas." He refused to comment on where his next assignment might take him.

Asked how he rated about the house, the veteran leader of tough jungle warfare said: "Right after the dog. I have no illusions."

He declared he was "raising hell with those trees around here," pointing to trees and hedges about the quarter-acre estate.

However, Henry Spardel, the Stilwell gardener, declared: "He is a tough guy, climbs around on that hedge over there like a monkey. But he is not much help in the garden."

MINISTERS ASK F. D. R. APOLOGY

'Shocking Profanity' In Voting Booth Laid To President

Glendale, Cal., Nov. 16 (AP)—The Glendale Ministerial Association said today it had sent a letter to President Roosevelt asking him to apologize for what it termed his "shocking profanity," while using a voting machine in the booth on election day as reported by a news magazine.

The ministerial association made public a letter to the President, signed by Dr. James Whitcomb Borugher, Sr., president, which said in part:

"We . . . do hereby express to you our deep grief over your regrettable breach against God and the consciences and hopes of millions of people of this and other lands."

NOV 17 1944

Friends "Greatly Grieved"

"We earnestly pray that you may feel that contrition and seek that forgiveness which the holy God enjoins and publicly apologize to and reassure faithful constituents and friends the world over whom you have so greatly grieved."

In describing President Roosevelt's visit to the polls on election day, the News Magazine said in last week's issue:

"From the green-curtained voting booth came a clank of gears as the main control lever jerked irritably back and forth. Then a voice, familiar to all of the United States and to most of the world, spoke distinctly from behind the curtains: 'The goddamned thing won't work.'"

FIFTH NIGHT LEAD WESTERN FRONT

BY AUSTIN BEALMEAR

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, PARIS, FRIDAY, NOV 17-(AP)-GEN. DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER WELDED THE ALLIED ATTACK IN THE WEST INTO A GREAT ALL-OUT SIX-ARMY OFFENSIVE POINTED STRAIGHT AT BERLIN YESTERDAY BY HURLING TWO MORE AMERICAN ARMIES INTO THE LINE AND IN THE FIRST FEW HOURS THEY CAPTURED UP TO A DOZEN SMALL TOWNS IN AND BEYOND THE SIEGFRIED LINE.

TANKS JOINED IN THE DRIVES BY BOTH ARMIES ALMOST AT THE OUTSET.

THE FIRST ARMY, HITTING EAST OF AACHEN, AVERAGED UP TO TWO MILES AGAINST WHAT WAS OFFICIALLY CALLED MODERATE RESISTANCE.

BIG GUNS LAID DOWN A THUNDEROUS BARRAGE AHEAD OF THE ATTACK WHILE THE HEAVY BOMBERS SHOWERED THOUSANDS UPON THOUSANDS OF FRAGMENTATION BOMBS INTO THE ENEMY'S LINES.

NOV 17 1944

IN ADDITION THE DOUGHBOYS HAD THE SUPPORT OF HUNDREDS OF MEDIUM AND FIGHTERBOMBERS IN AN AERIAL DISPLAY WHICH RIVALED IF NOT SURPASSED THE AERIAL OPERATION WHICH HELPED FORCE THE NORMANDY BREAKTHROUGH AT ST.LO.

FRONT DISPATCHES POINTED OUT THAT PRECAUTIONS WERE TAKEN, HOWEVER, TO SEE THAT ALL THE BOMBS FELL ON THE ENEMY AND NONE LANDED AMONG THE AMERICAN TROOPS AS HAPPENED AT ST.LO, WHERE LT.GEN.LESLEY J.MCNAIR WAS ONE OF THE VICTIMS.

THE U.S.EIGHTH AIR FORCE SENT MORE THAN 1,200 FORTRESSES AND LIBERATORS UNDER AN ESCORT OF 450 FIGHTERS AGAINST THE GERMANS BETWEEN LANGERWEHRE AND ESCHWEILER.

THE AMERICAN HEAVIES WERE OVER THE TARGET AREA FOR A FULL HOUR AND AS THEY WERE LEAVING MORE THAN 1,150 BRITISH FOUR-ENGINED LANCASTERS ROARED OVER THE LINES AND DUMPED CONCENTRATIONS OF EXPLOSIVES ON DUREN, JULICH AND HERNSBERG.

AS THE NEW DRIVE STARTED -- BRINGING FOUR AMERICAN ARMIES INTO CONCERTED ACTION ON THE WESTERN FRONT FOR THE FIRST TIME IN THE WAR -- OTHER ALLIED TROOPS LASHED OUT ANEW ALL ALONG THE 300-MILE BATTLE ZONE.

DOUGHBOYS OF LT. GEN. GEORGE S. PATTON'S THIRD ARMY FOUGHT THEIR WAY INTO THE SUBURBS OF METZ AND A DISPATCH FROM ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT LEWIS HAWKINS SAID THE AMERICANS NOW WERE ONLY A MILE AND A HALF FROM THE GREAT FORTRESS CITY ON THE NORTH, WEST AND SOUTH. THE GERMANS WERE RESISTING STUBBORNLY AND MADE COUNTERATTACKS WHICH TEMPORARILY COST GROUND AT SOME POINTS.

THE THIRD ARMY ALSO MADE GAINS AT THE STRATEGICALLY IMPORTANT KOENIGSMACHER BRIDGEHEAD WHICH WAS EXTENDED TO WITHIN THREE AND A HALF MILES OF THE GERMAN BORDER.

THE ADVANCES THERE LEFT THE YANKS HOLDING AN ARC OVER THE MOSELLE RIVER EXTENDING SEVEN TO EIGHT MILES NORTH AND NORTHEAST OF KOENIGSMACHER AND FIVE TO SEVEN MILES SOUTH AND SOUTHEAST. THE TOWNS OF STUCKANGE, METZERVISSE, OBERNAUMEN, MONNEREN AND LACROIX FELL DURING THE DAY.

LT. GEN. SIR MILES C. DEMPSEY'S TROOPS ALSO ADVANCED DEEPER INTO THE GERMANS' MAAS BULGE, PROBING WITHIN A MILE OF THE RIVER IN THE VICINITY OF ROERMOND, SOME 30 MILES NORTH OF AACHEN.

AT THE SAME TIME THE U.S.SEVENTH ARMY PRESSED FARTHER INTO THE SNOW-COVERED VOSGES MOUNTAINS AND THE FRENCH FIRST ARMY AT THE SOUTHEASTERN END OF THE SPRAWLING ALLIED FRONT STABBED CLOSER THE BELFORT GAP LEADING TO THE SOUTHERN RHINELAND.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT ROBERT WILSON, WITH THE SIXTH ARMY GROUP, SAID THE FRENCH DROVE FORWARD THREE MORE MILES IN THEIR OFFENSIVE ON BOTH SIDES OF THE DOUBS RIVER AND REACHED WITHIN EIGHT MILES OF BELFORT. THEY TOOK SIX TOWNS -- GONVILLARS, SEMONDAMS, RAYNANS, ST.JULIEN LES MONTBELIARD, BOURGUIGNON AND LES BLAMONT.

(SNOW AND THE DIFFICULTIES OF THE TERRAIN LIMITED THE ADVANCE OF LT. GEN. ALEXANDER M. PATCH'S SEVENTH ARMY, BUT THE AMERICANS OCCUPIED ROUGIVILLE AND EXERTED SUCH PRESSURE THAT THE GERMANS BEGAN BURNING VILLAGES IN THEIR PATH.

(ST. DIE, A SIZEABLE TOWN 46 MILES NORTH OF BELFORT, WAS ONE OF THOSE IN WHICH FIRES WERE SEEN AND NUMEROUS EXPLOSIONS INDICATED THE ENEMY ALSO WAS BLOWING UP BRIDGES AND OTHER INSTALLATIONS.)

30. 24 — 2035

SOUTHEAST OF BACCARAT, HOWEVER, SOME GERMAN WITHDRAWALS UNDER COVER OF SMOKE SCREENS WERE NOTED. THE ENEMY APPEARED TO BE FALLING BACK TOWARD SCHLUCHT PASS, ONE OF THE MAIN PASSAGEWAYS THROUGH THE VOSGES.

AT LONG-BESIEGED DUNKERQUE ON THE FRENCH CHANNEL COAST, THE RUMBLE OF GERMAN DEMOLITIONS REACHED THE ALLIED LINES, POSSIBLY A SIGNAL THAT THE GARRISON WAS READY TO CALL IT QUITS RATHER THAN AWAIT PIECEMEAL ANNIHILATION BY ARTILLERY AND BOMBS.

IT ALSO WAS DISCLOSED THAT THE GERMANS HAD BLOWN TWO MORE SPANS OF THE MOERDIJK BRIDGE IN SOUTHWESTERN HOLLAND, INDICATING THAT THE GERMANS WERE TAKING NO CHANCES ON PURSUIT FROM THAT QUARTER.

WITH AMERICAN ARMORED FORCE EAST OF AACHEN, NOV. 16-(AP)-AMERICAN ARMOR, THE GREAT WEAPON THAT BROKE THE GERMAN DEFENSES IN BELGIUM AND WHICH FIRST BROKE INTO THE REICH PROPER IN FORCE, IS ROLLING AGAIN.

THROUGH THE MUD FROM WEEKS OF RAIN AND SNOW, TANKS OF THIS OUTFIT--A PROFANE AND SUPERB ONE THAT NEVER LOST SO MUCH AS A SINGLE PHASE IN ANY ENGAGEMENT TO THE GERMANS--LUNGED FORWARD AT 1 P.M. TO FORM THE STEEL FIST OF THE U.S. FIRST ARMY'S NEW ATTACK.

THEY GROUND OVER TERRAIN THAT HAD JUST BEEN LASHED AND BEATEN BY THE MASSIVE WEIGHT OF AMERICAN BOMBS AND ARTILLERY.

WITHIN TWO HOURS THE FIRST OBJECTIVES HAD BEEN REACHED AND THE SHERMAN TANKS STILL WERE LURCHING FORWARD THROUGH THE HALF FROZEN MIRE.

NOV 17 1944

LT. COL. WILLIAM B. LOVELADY OF SODDY, TENN., WHO WAS IN COMMAND WHEN THE FIRST AMERICAN FORCE OF ASSAULT PROPORTIONS BROKE THE GERMAN FRONTIER AND ENVELOPED ROETGEN, 10 MILES SOUTHEAST OF AACHEN, IS IN COMMAND OF THIS FORCE WITH WHICH I AM TRAVELING.

WHILE OVERHEAD AMERICAN HEAVY BOMBERS IN FLIGHTS TOO THICK TO COUNT WERE WHEELING BACK FROM THEIR BOMB RUNS IN THE COLD HAZE OVER THE GERMAN LINES JUST AHEAD OF US, HE DROVE UP HERE IN A PEEP THAT LOOKED LIKE A MOVING BALL OF MUD.

"DO WE GO NOW, COLONEL?" SOMEBODY ASKED.

"WE'RE ALL SET," HE SAID IN A SOFT VOICE. "TWO MINUTES NOW AND HERE WE GO."

FOR WHAT SEEMED HALF AN HOUR BUT WAS ACTUALLY 80 ODD SECONDS, THE GREAT CHORUS OF OUR ARTILLERY--240 MILLIMETERS, 155 MILLIMETERS, 105 MILLIMETERS AND MORTARS--DROPPED IN VOLUME.

THEN JUST OFF TO THE RIGHT OF A HILL ON WHICH I AM LYING AND JUST TO THE LEFT OF ME AS WELL, OUR TANKS WENT INTO ATTACK.

ON OUR RIGHT THEY PASSED A DESERTED AND RUINED VILLAGE. BACK OF US, GERMAN SHELLS ARE FALLING IN GERMAN VILLAGES AND SMALL GROUPS OF GERMAN CIVILIANS ARE IN STOLID AND ANGRY FLIGHT ALONG ROADS TO THE REAR.

THE SKY IS LIKE SOME SURREALIST PAINTING. ALTERNATELY IT HAS BEEN HAZY AND FEEBLY LIT BY PALE SUNLIGHT, NOW LACED BY TRAILING WHITE SMOKE THROWN STRAIGHT UP THOUSANDS OF FEET TO MARK OUR BOMB LINE, AND AGAIN BRIGHT LIKE A SINISTER CHRISTMAS TREE WITH OUR RED AND GREEN COLORED ACK-ACK THAT MARKED OUR FIRST FORWARD TROOP LINE TO PROTECT OUR MEN FROM POSSIBLE ERROR BY PILOTS.

THEN GREAT SLICES OF THE HORIZON ARE BLOTTED OUT BY DENSE BLACK SMOKE ROLLING UP FROM OUR BOMB HITS.

THE BOMBING ATTACK THAT PRECEDED THIS OFFENSIVE WAS AWESOME. FROM THE DIRECTION OF DUREN, 16 MILES EAST OF AACHEN, THERE WAS A CONTINUOUS ROLL LIKE SOME GIANT KETTLE DRUM AS THE BOMBS EXPLODED.

THE COLD VALLEYS AND WOODED HILLS OF ALL THIS REGION WERE CAUGHT IN THE ENDLESS CONCUSSION OF OUR BIG GUNS.

ADVANCED U.S. AIR BASE IN CHINA, NOV 16-(AP)-LT. CURTIS W. MAHANNAH, NORTH ENGLISH, IOWA, HAD JUST DOWNED TWO ZEROS AND DAMAGED A THIRD WHEN A JAPANESE PLANE GOT ON THE TAIL OF HIS MUSTANG AND SET IT AFIRE.

MAHANNAH SAW THE FLAMES STREAMING OVER ONE WING AND SMOKE POURING FROM A HOLE NEAR THE WING TANK. HE DUMPED HIS COCKPIT CANOPY AND CLIMBED ONTO THE OTHER WING TO MAKE A PARACHUTE JUMP. THEN HE SAW A ZERO RACING UP FOR ANOTHER PASS.

CONFRONTED WITH THE POSSIBILITY OF BEING STRAFED OR AT BEST LANDING IN ENEMY TERRITORY, THE IOWA CHANGED HIS MIND, GOT BACK IN THE COCKPIT AND DIVED. THE DIVE PUT THE FIRE OUT AND SHOOK OFF THE PURSUER AND MAHANNAH RETURNED TO BASE WITH A DAMAGED PLANE AND TOLD HIS STORY TODAY.

NOV 17 1944

OTHERS IN THE FIGHT CONFIRMED THE TALE. IT WAS MAHANNAH'S 18TH COMBAT MISSION SINCE HIS ARRIVAL IN CHINA IN SEPTEMBER. HE USED TO WORK FOR THE VEGA AIRCRAFT CORPORATION IN BURBANK, CALIF.

UNITS OF THE FIRST CAVALRY WERE WITHIN SIGHT OF THE VITAL ORMOC ROAD, DOWN WHICH THE NIPPONESE MUST RETREAT INTO ORMOC. THE TROOPERS WERE FROM HALF A MILE TO A MILE EAST OF THE ROAD AT A POINT ABOUT 14 MILES NORTH OF ORMOC. RESISTANCE WAS DESCRIBED AS LIGHT AND SCATTERED BUT THE SUPPLY PROBLEM WAS STAGGERING DUE TO THE ROUGH, SODDEN TERRAIN.

TO THE WEST OF THE CAVALRYMEN, DOUGHBOYS OF THE 24TH DIVISION HAD EXECUTED A SURPRISE WHEELING MOVE THAT VIRTUALLY HAD SEVERED THE ORMOC ROAD TO THE REAR OF THE JAPANESE POSITIONS. THE ENVELOPMENT WAS CARRIED OUT BRILLIANTLY BY A BATTALION COMMANDED BY LT.COL. ROBERT B.SPRAGINS.

THE INFANTRY CUT LOOSE FROM ITS SUPPLY LINE TO SWING WIDE THROUGH THE MOUNTAINS TO THE SOUTHWEST AND THEN CUT BACK TO WITHIN 1,000 YARDS OF THE HIGHWAY. FRED HAMPSON, AP CORRESPONDENT WITH THE 24TH DIVISION, SAID THE MANEUVER PUT THE DOUGHBOYS INTO THE ENEMY'S REAR AREAS. SO FAR WERE THEY FROM THEIR SUPPLY BASE, HE ADDED, THAT THE YANKS FOUGHT FOR FOUR DAYS ON A SINGLE MEAL.

OTHER LIBERATION FORCES CONVERGED ON ORMOC FROM THE EAST AND SOUTH. ELEMENTS OF THE 96TH INFANTRY DIVISION, ADVANCING ACROSS THE RUGGED CENTRAL PORTION OF THE ISLAND, WERE LESS THAN 14 MILES EAST OF THE PORT

CLOSEST TO ORMOC WERE ADVANCE FORCES OF THE SEVENTH DIVISION, WHICH HAD REPULSED A COUNTERATTACK AT COASTAL BALOGO, ONLY 10 MILES SOUTH OF ORMOC. THEY WERE WITHIN TWO MILES OF THE COASTAL PLAIN STRETCHING NORTHEASTWARD TO ORMOC.

WITH FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION, LEYTE, P.I., NOV 16 (AP)-SOPPING WET TROOPS, LOOKING DOWN ON THE VITAL ORMOC HIGHWAY, PROBED TODAY FOR JAPANESE EMPLACEMENTS, SOME OF WHICH ARE BEING ABANDONED AS THE JAPANESE GIVE UP THEIR LONG STANDARD PRACTICE OF FIGHTING TO THE DEATH.

SUDDENLY A BLAST OF MACHINE GUN FIRE FROM HIDDEN POSITIONS GREETS THE STALKING AMERICANS. THEY CALL BACK AND CALL FOR MORTAR FIRE OVER THEIR HEADS. THEN THEY CLIMB BACK TO TAKE THE BLASTED PILLBOXES AND BUNKERS.

THIS IS THE WAY THE "BATTLE OF THE BACKBONE" IN WESTERN LEYTE IS BEING FOUGHT. ITS A SLOW METHOD OF ADVANCE BUT IT HAS SAVED HUNDREDS OF AMERICAN LIVES.

UNITS OF DISMOUNTED CAVALRY REPORTED TODAY THEY CAN SEE ORMOC HIGHWAY A HALF MILE TO A MALE AWAY--GOAL OF A CROSS-MOUNTAIN DRIVE TO ANNIHILATE HEAVY JAPANESE REINFORCEMENTS.

REPORTS OF INCREASED CONTACTS WITH JAPANESE PATROLS CAME FROM ALL ALONG THE ADVANCED LINES. FORTY-FIVE ENEMY SOLDIERS WERE KILLED YESTERDAY.

MEANWHILE OUR LONG RANGE GUNS BLASTED ACROSS THE MOUNTAINS. A JAPANESE PRISONER REPORTED AN ARTILLERY SALVO SMASHED TWO JAPANESE COMPANIES ADVANCING ALONG THE HIGHWAY.

ON A MUDDY RIDGE WHERE POCKETED JAPANESE GROUPS ARE BEING STRANGLED IN AN ENVELOPING MOVEMENT NEAR MINORO, WE FOUND TROOPS IN THEIR SHIRTSLEEVES, SHIVERING IN THE RAIN.

"WE'VE BEEN LIKE THIS UP IN THESE HILLS FOR FOUR NIGHTS," SAID PFC ROBERT C.MYERS, 5725 CATUEPINE STREET, PHILADELPHIA. "WE HAVE BEEN WET AND GOING WITHOUT SLEEP MOST OF THE TIME."

THE UNSHAVEN MEN LOOKED AS MISERABLE AS THEY FELT, BUT THEY STILL CRACKED JOKES ABOUT FURLOUGHS AND THINGS IN GENERAL. WHEN TOLD THAT RELIEF WAS ON THE WAY THEY WHOOPED AND CHEERED. HOWEVER, SOGGY TROOPS HIGHER IN THE MOUNTAIN HAD NO SUCH LUCK.

DESCRIBING ACTION AGAINST HOGBACK RIDGE, LIEUT.ROBERT INTEMANN OF LIBERTY, N.Y., SAID:

NOV 17 1944

"WE TRIED THREE TIMES YESTERDAY TO TAKE THE HILL. THE JAPS HAD WELL-HIDDEN PILLBOXES OF LOGS AND DIRT WITH MACHINEGUNS SET FOR DEADLY CROSS FIRE. WE LOST SEVERAL MEN. A FRONTAL ADVANCE WOULD HAVE BEEN SUICIDE. WE RETIRED AND CALLED FOR MORTARS DURING THE NIGHT.

"IN THE MORNING WE CALLED FOR VOLUNTEERS TO TAKE THE HILL. ALL BUT TWO IN THE PLATOON STEPPED UP. WE MOVED UP THE HILL WITH GRENADES FLYING, BUT AFTER THE MORTARS HAD DESTROYED THEIR CONCEALMENT, THE JAPS RETIRED."

FIRST LEAD EASLEY (180)

BY ELMONT WAITE

WITH U.S. 96TH DIVISION, LEYTE ISLAND, FRIDAY, NOV 17-(AP)-BRIG.GEN.CLAUDIUS M.EASLEY, A TEXAN WHO TURNED PROFESSIONAL ARMY MAN, WAS WOUNDED RECENTLY ON ONE OF HIS NUMEROUS TRIPS TO THE FRONT, THE ARMY ANNOUNCED TODAY.

A JAPANESE SNIPER SHOT HIM AS HE WAS TRAMPING VIGOROUSLY THROUGH FRONT LINE POSITIONS. GEN.EASLEY, ASSISTANT COMMANDER OF THIS DIVISION WAS THE FIRST GENERAL OFFICER WOUNDED IN THE PHILIPPINE CAMPAIGN.

HIS SON, MAJ.CLAUDIUS M.EASLEY JR., IS WITH THE SIXTH ARMY ON LEYTE.

THE GENERAL WAS AN INDEFATIGEABLE HIKER AND WAS SPURRED CONSTANTLY BY EAGERNESS TO OBSERVE BATTLE CONDITIONS. ONCE HE RODE A WATER BUFFALO TO THE FRONT WHEN OTHER TRANSPORT FAILED.

GEN.EASLEY ONCE TOLD CORRESPONDENTS THAT THEY HAD BETTER WAIT FOR A JEEP TO VISIT THE FRONT, RATHER THAN ATTEMPTING TO ACCOMPANY HIM. HOURS LATER, NEWSMEN SAW HIS VIGOROUS STRIDE APPROACHING. HE HAD WALKED THE ENTIRE DISTANCE.

"SEE WHAT I MEAN?" HE ASKED.

(THE ARMY'S ANNOUNCEMENT DID NOT MENTION THE EXTENT OF THE WOUND OR WHAT PART OF THE FRONT THE GENERAL WAS VISITING WHEN HIT. AT LAST REPORTS ADVANCE ELEMENTS OF THE 96TH WERE PUNCHING WESTWARD ACROSS THE MOUNTAINS IN CENTRAL LEYTE.)

WITH THE 24TH DIVISION, LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, NOV 16 (AP)-ELEMENTS OF THE 24TH INFANTRY DIVISION PUT A THREE-WAY SQUEEZE ON REMNANTS OF A JAPANESE REGIMENT AROUND LIMON, WHERE THE YANKS ARE DRIVING A CORK INTO THE NORTHERN OPENING OF THE ORMOC CORRIDOR.

ONE OF THE ELEMENTS IS WRITING THE FINAL CHAPTER OF A WEEK OF HOMERIC FIGHTING.

SEVEN DAYS AGO THIS BATTALION, COMMANDED BY LT.COL.ROBERT B. SPRAGINS, SON OF MAJ.GEN.ROBERT L.SPRAGINS, CUT LOOSE FROM ITS SUPPLY LINE IN AN ENCIRCLING MOVEMENT. IT WAS A MANEUVER REMINISCENT OF GEN.JEB STUART'S CIVIL WAR RAIDS. IT CARRIED THE AMERICANS ACROSS THE MOUNTAINS AND INTO THE JAPANESE REAR AREAS.

THROUGHOUT THE FIGHTING ON BREAKNECK RIDGE THIS UNIT HARASSED THE ENEMY AND RAIDED HIS SUPPLY LINES. FOR THE PAST FOUR DAYS THE BATTALION HAS FOUGHT FURIOUSLY ON ONLY A SINGLE MEAL.

THE BATTALION CLOSED TO WITHIN 1,000 YARDS OF THE ORMOC ROAD SOUTH OF LIMON AND AMBUSHED 12 JAPANESE TRUCKS WHICH WERE BOUND FOR LIMON FROM THE ENEMY'S SUPPLY BASE AT ORMOC. THE YANKS CAPTURED FOUR OF THE TRUCKS AND DESTROYED EIGHT.

NOW IT IS FIGHTING TO CROSS THE ROAD AND JOIN ANOTHER UNIT WHICH IS BATTLING ITS WAY TOWARD THE ROAD FROM THE EAST. IT HAS TWO OBJECTIVES--TO CUT THE ROAD AND PARTAKE OF THE OTHER UNIT'S MORE PLENTIFUL LARDER.

NOV 17 1944

THE BATTALION ALSO HAS SOME WOUNDED TO BE EVACUATED.

AS FOR THE WHOLE 24TH DIVISION, THE COUNT OF ENEMY DEAD WHICH HAD FALLEN BEFORE THE DIVISION'S GUNS WAS 5,630, AS OF NIGHTFALL NOV.15.

GREW SAID HE HAD BEEN TRYING TO LEARN A LITTLE OF HOW THINGS ARE GOING IN THE PACIFIC AND HAD SEEN MUCH HERE, INCLUDING DOCKS, SUBMARINES, A CARRIER, A BATTLESHIP AND A NEW HOSPITAL WITH 5,000 BEDS WHERE THE WOUNDED ARE RECEIVING EXCELLENT CARE BY THE NEWEST

GREW REMARKED HE HAD BEEN TAKING LESSONS FROM THAT WELL KNOWN HORSESHOE PLAYER (NIMITZ) AND HAD DISCOVERED THERE IS PSYCHOLOGY TO THE GAME. HE REPORTED THAT NIMITZ NEVER RELAXES AT THE PITS BUT "REALLY PLAYS BRILLIANTLY WHEN THE GOING GETS TOUGH. THAT'S WHEN HE PITCHES RINGERS."

OBVIOUSLY, THE AMBASSADOR WAS LIKENING NIMITZ WAR STRATEGY TO THE GAME OF HORSESHOES.

U.S.PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS,PEARL HARBOR,NOV.16-(AP)-THE CARRIER SARATOGA, "QUEEN OF THE SEAS" TO THE UNITED STATES NAVY, IS 17 YEARS OLD TODAY.

ALTHOUGH SHE'S A SEVEN-STAR SHIP,DENOTING PARTICIPATION IN SEVEN OPERATIONS FOR WHICH THE NAVY HAS AUTHORIZED BRONZE BATTLE STARS ON SERVICE RIBBONS, "SARA" HAS NEVER BEEN TOUCHED BY AN ENEMY BOMB.

TWICE, HOWEVER, SHE WAS TORPEDOED, BUT RETURNED TO ACTION.

HERE IS THE SARATOGA'S PACIFIC WAR RECORD:

THE GUADALCANAL-TULAGI LANDINGS, AUG.7-9, 1942; CAPTURE AND DEFENSE OF GUADALCANAL, AUG.10, 1942, TO FEB.8, 1943; EASTERN SOLOMONS-STEWART ISLAND, AUGUST.23-25, 1942; TREASURY AND BOUGAINVILLE ISLANDS OPERATIONS OCT.27 TO DEC.15, 1943; GILBERT ISLANDS OPERATION IN NOVEMBER, 1943; OCCUPATION OF ENIWETOK ATOLL, FEB.17 TO MARCH 2, 1943; SABANG RAID, APRIL 4, AND SOERABAJA RAID MAY 5, 1944.

VICE ADM.MARC A.MITSCHER, WHO COMMANDED FIFTH AND THIRD FLEET CARRIER FORCES ON DEVASTATING STRIKES THROUGHOUT THE CENTRAL AND WESTERN PACIFIC, MADE THE FIRST LANDING ON THE SARATOGA'S FLIGHT DECK SHORTLY AFTER THE SHIP WAS COMMISSIONED IN 1927. LATER, HE WAS ONE OF HER NOW-FAMOUS EXECUTIVE OFFICERS.

MORE THAN 78,000 LANDINGS HAVE BEEN MADE ON SARA'S 909-FOOT FLIGHT DECK, THE LONGEST IN THE FLEET.

TWO OF THE SHIP'S COMPANY HAVE SERVED HER CONTINUOUSLY SINCE SHE WAS COMMISSIONED. THEY ARE LT. (JG) OSCAR JOHNSON, ENGINEERING OFFICER, NATIVE OF JAMESTOWN,N.Y., AND CHIEF ELECTRICIAN'S MATE FREDERICK L.BLANCHARD, OF LONG BEACH,CALIF.

AFTER THE HORNET WAS SUNK AND THE ENTERPRISE WAS DAMAGED, THE SARATOGA WAS THE ONLY CARRIER OPERATING IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC AT THE END OF 1942 AND EARLY IN 1943.

SOMEWHERE IN THE PHILIPPINES, (DELAYED)-(AP)-AMERICAN EVACUATION HOSPITAL NO.58 ISN'T MUCH TO LOOK AT--BUT INSIDE ITS BULLET AND SHRAPNEL-MARKED WALLS ARMY SURGEONS HAVE AVERAGED 100 OPERATIONS A DAY.

IN ONE 48-HOUR PERIOD, AS BATTLE CASUALTIES STREAMED IN FROM NEARBY FRONT LINES, THE DOCTORS PERFORMED 250 OPERATIONS. THEIR ONLY LETUP WAS A MOMENT FOR A SWALLOW OF COFFEE AND A BITE OF HARD-TACK.

NO.58'S DAYS ARE ABOUT OVER NOW--THE BATTLING IS MOVING AWAY. IT HAS BEEN GOING FULL BLAST SINCE A FEW HOURS AFTER THE YANKS HIT THE BEACHES OF THIS ISLAND.

FIVE OPERATING TABLES ARE CRAMMED INTO A SPACE ABOUT BIG ENOUGH FOR ONE. ASSISTANTS JOSTLE EACH OTHER IN THE CLOSE QUARTERS AS THEY AID THE SURGEONS. THE IMPROVISED LIGHTING SYSTEM GIVES NO MORE ILLUMINATION THAN ONE CAN FIND IN THE AVERAGE LIVING ROOM AT HOME. THERE IS NO PRIVACY. YOU CAN STAND IN THE DUSTY HAALLWAY AND SEE THE SURGEONS PERFORM DELICATE MAJOR OPERATIONS.

NEWLY ARRIVED WOUNDED FROM THE FRONT LAY ON LITTERS ON THE FLOOR. CHAPLAINS OF ALL FAITHS WALK AMONG THEM, PRAYING WITH SOME, CHEERING ALL. NOV 17 1944

IN THE DILAPIDATED PATIO OF THE STUCCO BUILDING IS A LIFE SAVER--THE REFRIGERATOR WITH ITS WHOLE, FRESH BLOOD, ITS PLASMA AND ITS SERUMS.

ON THE BACK PORCH IS AN IMPROVISED SCRUBBING STAND WHERE THE DOCTORS GET RADY FOR OPERATIONS--A STAND BUILT BY THE SURGEONS THEMSELVES.

AMONG THE DOCTORS WHO WORKED WITHOUT RELIEF ON THAT 250-OPERATION 48-HOUR STRETCH WERE:

MAJ. IRVING SHINER, NEW YORK CITY; MAJ.FREDERICK MALOOF, BOSTON; CAPT. JEROME COVEY, BRIDGEPORT, CONN.; MAJ. CHARLES APPLEBERRY, FLAT RIVER, MO.; LT. RAYMOND ANDERSON, NEHAWKA, NEB.; CAPT. MEANWHILE, STATE DEPARTMENT OFFICIALS DISCLOSED THAT A "SUPPLEMENTAL PROTOCOL" TO THE TREATY HAS BEEN DRAFTED TO CLARIFY ITS ADMINISTRATIVE FEATURES. EXACT TERMS OF THE CLARIFICATION CLAUSES WERE NOT MADE PUBLIC, HOWEVER, BECAUSE THEY WERE SENT TO THE SENATE FOR CONSIDERATION WITH THE ORIGINAL DOCUMENT. MOSCOW'S SUDDEN ANTI-JAPANESE CAMPAIGN IS GROWING SO POINTED THAT IT MAY HIDE DRAMATIC UNDERCOVER DEVELOPMENTS.

A SOVIET COLONEL GAVE IT SHARP EMPHASIS WEDNESDAY BY RAISING THE GHOST OF JAPAN'S MOST IMPORTANT PRE-PEARL HARBOR DEFEAT -- A SURE WAY OF INFURIATING JAPAN'S WARLORDS.

COL. IVAN TOLCHENEV, SOVIET ARMY VETERAN AND MILITARY AUTHORITY, TOLD A MOSCOW LECTURE AUDIENCE THAT "JAPAN HAS ALSO ATTACKED AND RAIDED THE SOVIET UNION SEVERAL TIMES. WE MAY RECALL THE MONGOLIAN BORDER ACTION BY THE JAPANESE IN 1939, WHEN THEY WERE STRONGLY REBUFFED

HE REFERRED TO THE POCKET-SIZED WAR AT NOMONHAN, ON THE MANCHURIA-OUTER MONGOLIA BORDER. I WAS AN ACCREDITED WAR CORRESPONDENT WITH JAPANESE FORCES WHEN TWO SMALL BUT FULLY EQUIPPED ARMIES FOUGHT ON THE DUSTY MONGOLIAN PRAIRIES FOR THREE MONTHS.

WHEN THE BATTLE ENDED, THE JAPANESE HAD LOST OVER 20,000 MEN, AND SOVIET ARMORED UNITS WERE IN POSITION TO DRIVE DEEP IN MANCHURIA.

THE SOVIET POWER DEMONSTRATED AT NOMONHAN INDUCED THE ARROGANT JAPANESE OVERLORDS TO MOLLIFY THE RUSSIANS, WHOM THEY FORMERLY TAUNTED, IN ORDER TO PROTECT THEIR NORTHERN FLANK FOR THE IMPERIAL STRIKES SOUTHWARD THEY WERE PLANNING.

PRECARIOUS PEACE BETWEEN THE TWO NATIONS WAS LEGALIZED BY A NEUTRALITY PACT WHICH, SIGNIFICANTLY, EXPIRES EARLY NEXT YEAR.

AS PART OF THE AGREEMENT, THE CONTROLLED PRESS AND PUBLIC OFFICIALS IN BOTH COUNTRIES CEASED THEIR ALMOST INCESSANT SNARLING AT EACH OTHER.

COL. TOLCHENEV POINTEDLY MENTIONED THE NOMONHAN AFFAIR, IN A SPEECH HEARD BY JAPANESE CORRESPONDENTS, NINE DAYS AFTER PREMIER MARS STALIN HAD BRANDED JAPAN AS AN "AGGRESSOR NATION." THE MOSCOW PRESS RECENTLY HAS DEVOTED CONSIDERABLE SPACE TO DETAIL JAPAN'S HOPELESSNESS IN THIS WAR.

THE COLONEL'S COMBINED TAUNT AND WARNING TO JAPANESE MILITARISTS, OBVIOUSLY MADE WITH GOVERNMENT APPROVAL, DID NOT FULLY INDICATE THE REASON.

NOV 17 1944

IT IS LIKELY, HOWEVER, THE JAPANESE ALREADY HAVE BEGUN OVERTURES FOR AN EXTENSION OF THE NEUTRALITY PACT. PERHAPS MOSCOW'S PUBLIC STATEMENTS ARE INTENDED AS THE ANSWER.

THEY MAY ALSO BE INTENDED TO WARN JAPAN AGAINST ANY THREATENING MOVES BY HER STILL FORMIDABLE FORCES IN MANCHURIA. FURTHER, THEY COULD BE PART OF A PROGRAM TO RE-KINDLE TRADITIONAL RUSSIAN ANTAGONISM TOWARD THE JAPANESE.

AT ANY RATE, THE MOSCOW UTTERANCES FOLLOW A PATTERN OF GROWING SEVERITY TOO PATENT TO BE MERELY COINCIDENTAL.

YANKS HURL NAZIS BACK ALONG WEST FRONT, TANKS ADVANCE TO WITHIN 2 MILES OF SAAR

NOV 18 1944

PATTON'S FORCES CLOSING ON METZ IN BITTER FIGHT

BEALNEAR

First Army Smashes Within Six Miles of Bomb-Ripped Duren.

REPULSE ENEMY ATTACK

11 German Tanks Knocked Out in Effort to Stop U. S. Offensive.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Nov. 17.—(AP) Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's six attacking Allied armies, swelled to a fighting force of 1,250,000 men with a similar number in reserve, ground ahead today on scattered sectors of the 400-mile Western front in their vast Winter push toward Berlin.

The U. S. Third army, loosing its armored might across the Moselle north of embattled Metz for the first time, sent tanks charging five miles east to little more than two miles from the edge of the Saar basin—important source of Germany's war might—as infantry swung north to within a mile of the junction of the German, Luxembourg and French borders.

Third army Doughboys tightened the screws on Metz, pushing to within a mile of the Fortress city at two places on the south and at another on the north, but prisoners said the garrison was preparing a stand to the death with Gestapo guns barring escape roads to the east.

Yanks Gain 3 Miles

The U. S. First army's infantry and tanks to the north churned another two miles into Germany, capturing several towns and rolling up within six miles of bomb-blackened Duren—a point which a front dispatch placed only 28 miles short of the Rhine and 14 miles inside the Reich.

The U. S. Ninth army, now disclosed to be part of Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's 12th army group, in its drive synchronized with the First's turned back a German counterattack northeast of Aachen, knocking out at least 11 of the 45 Tiger and Panther tanks used to lead it.

One thousand prisoners were taken in the first 24 hours of fighting but late reports said the Ninth was striking stiffer resistance, and enemy artillery fire was increasing.

The U. S. Seventh army hammered out gains all along its front on the Third army's southern flank from north of Luneville to south of Bruyers, overrunning at least eight towns.

The French First army, in rapid strides through cold, mountainous country at the southern end of the front, thrust three miles forward to within five miles of Belfort, gateway to the Rhine and Bavaria, and threatened to outflank the outpost town of Montbeliard on the north.

French Take Montbeliard

(Associated Press Correspondent Robert Wilson said in a dispatch from the front that Montbeliard had been captured by French armor and infantry.)

The British Second army in eastern Holland reached the Maas facing the German frontier—no more than five miles away at one point—and broke across the Zig canal, where the enemy had dug in for a stand north of the Maas stronghold of Roermond.

NOV 18 1944

Hundreds of fighterbombers flashed across the sullen skies, bombing Duren and Julich, vital communication centers for the Germans fighting with their backs to the Roer river on the First and Ninth army fronts. Pilots said both towns now resemble battered St. Lo in France.

Some of the fiercest fighting on the First army front raged in Stolberg, five miles east of Aachen, and two-thirds of the town now was in American hands.

It was disclosed that the First army massed 1,000 big guns for yesterday's attack firing 20 tons a minute for a full hour.

A front dispatch said that Lt Gen. George S. Patton's tanks pierced to Remeling, two miles from the Saar frontier, the closest that his armor yet had come to the Reich.

Infantry, fanning out from the same bridgehead around Koenigsmacher struck north of the tank columns and were nearing two towns within a mile and a half south of the German border where it turns and runs east and west.

One force in a three-mile drive neared Manderen, a mile and a half from this section of the border.

Another force three miles to the west poked forward a mile to Rustroff, the same distance from the border at the point where it joins Luxembourg and France.

Drive on Duren

The U. S. First army advanced to within six miles west of Duren, which would be approximately 14 miles inside the Reich east of Aachen.

(A Berlin radio commentator declared that the first on this second day of its attack had torn a breach in the German line in this area. Duren is 20 miles southwest of Cologne on the Rhine.)

Obeying orders to stand or die, the Germans fighting on the sodden Cologne plain at the gateway to the Ruhr valley threw Tiger tanks into the ranks of the charging U. S. Ninth army a few miles to the north but were beaten back with bloody losses.

These two armies were fighting side by side where the Germans have massed their greatest strength on the edge of the Cologne plain fearing a breakthrough to the Ruhr.

A front dispatch said the enemy hurled his flying bombs in increasing numbers at the American positions. Driving rains and clouds held back Allied air power.

On the Third army's southern flank, the U. S. Seventh army was closing in around flaming St. Die, enemy supply center for the Vosges, region. St. Die at the entrance of St. Marie pass, was set afire by the Germans. Thirty-five miles east of St. Die lie Baravia, and the Rhine.

The French First army on the southern end of the front fought to a point eight miles south of Belfort, another gateway to Bavaria, stretching their gains in two days of attacks to more than seven miles along a 25-mile front.

Yanks Take Gressenich

Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' First army tanks and infantry, unstoppable even in the deep mire and some of the worst weather ever seen in the west, stormed and seized the village of Gressenich, eight miles east of Aachen, in two hours and a half.

Bodies of the defenders strewed the streets and the rubble, a front dispatch said, after the big barrage had hurled exploding steel into German positions at the rate of 20 tons a minute for a full hour, pouring in everything from three-inchers to 240 millimeters.

The Germans had trenches connecting the houses and holes knocked in walls, but they pulled their artillery back on Duren, seven miles east, when the Doughboys threatened to surround it.

Rearguards who refused to surrender died in the collapsing buildings pounded by self-propelled 155's.

The Germans fought back with increasing artillery fire, but Associated Press Correspondent William Smith White said the Germans surprisingly had yet to loose a counterattack despite the menace posed by the First army advance.

Several German villages were overrun but the count of German prisoners was low, with only about 150 taken on one of the hottest sectors of the front.

The First was believed to be less than four miles from the flooded Roer river, greatest natural barrier between the Americans and the Rhine.

Nazi Attacks Repulsed

The Ninth army northeast of Aachen was believed to be only a little farther from the Roer after beating off the tank-led counterblow. They were driving toward Munich.

More tanks and convoys rumbled through the hole in the Siegfried Line—originally battered by the First army—to meet the German attack.

The Ninth, last of four American armies to take the offensive against Hitler's Reich, took the counterblow in stride and pressed on through the mine fields and booby traps, a front dispatch related.

Here again the Germans were obeying orders to fight to the last, and several hundred sullen, tough-fighting troops who filed back to the rear had fought to the last bullet [illegible] their positions until [illegible] were overrun.

Fighterbombers darted under the clouds, attacking exposed positions, while hundreds of guns roared along the nine-mile front.

The U. S. Third army battled into the suburbs of Metz, where the Germans were throwing up street barricades, but it remained to be seen whether Patton would try to storm the barricade or encircle it and smash on east for the Saar.

British Push Ahead

The British Second Army, drawing steadily nearer Germany north of where the United States First and Ninth are fighting at the edge of the Cologne plain, stretched their gains to as much as 12 miles in three days as the Germans retreated across the Maas.

The British were no more than a mile from Roermond, a main enemy stronghold, and were from eight to ten miles southwest of Venlo, another important center 14 miles north of Roermond.

The British crossed the Zig canal north of Roermond at a point where it joins the Deurne canal, and along which the Germans were digging in to protect their north flank west of the Maas.

Wessem Is Captured

The town of Wessem, on the Maas five miles southwest of Roermond, was seized, as well as Bruggem, three miles north of Roermond. Only rear guards were opposing the advance, which had cleared an area about ten miles square despite sleet, ice, mud and freezing weather.

A front dispatch said the Germans were putting up the strongest fight before Venlo, indicating they consider that a more important gateway to the Reich than Roermond.

In southwestern Holland, British patrols crossed the Maas at a point east of the destroyed Moerdijk bridge, touching off violent enemy artillery reaction.

[The German radio predicted the British would launch a "major attack" in Holland "in a few days."]

New York, Nov. 17 (AP)—The United States First Army has cleared the German city of Stolberg and advanced five miles beyond the town, the American Broadcasting Station in Europe said tonight.

FOE ADMITS BREAK IN AACHEN SECTOR

Ninth Takes Many Prisoners and Turns Back German Counter-blow—Patton's Forces Two Miles From Saar.

London, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—German lines sagged under twin offensives in the Rhineland today as the first United States Army drove forward two miles toward Duren and the Ninth Army bagged long lines of prisoners.

NOV 18 1944

Lieut.-Gen. Courtney H. Hodges's First Army infantry and armor slashed to a point six miles west of Duren, important industrial town twenty miles west of Cologne, despite sleet and rainstorms.

Germany's western lines rocked to the thunder of hundreds of guns in the Aachen sector, the smash of new armored columns from the Moselle bridgeheads, the weight of increasing attacks in Holland as the Allies made a supreme bid for victory.

Perhaps 2,000,000 men were arrayed in battle on both sides in the critical test of German staying power.

Lieut.-Gen. William H. Simpson's Ninth Army increased the pressure of the attack in its second day north of Aachen, front-line dispatches said, captured several more towns and turned back a Tiger tank counter-attack.

To the south Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton threw new armored forces into the Third Army's battle and bulged the Thionville bridgehead out five more miles to near Manderen, three miles southeast of the corner formed by the French, Luxembourg and German borders. Manderen is only a mile and a half south of the German boundary. Further south the Americans neared Remeling, only two miles from the Saar border.

A German military commentator late in the afternoon said a break had been made in the German lines near Stolberg, and a dispatch from the front said breaks appeared to have been made at seevral places. Stolberg lies six or seven miles east of Aachen, and about the same distance south of Eschweiler.

Long streams of battle-shattered German prisoners lined the roads back to American prison cages.

Flight after flight of Thunderbolt fighterbombers streaked under cloud layers over the front.

To the north the British crossed the Zig Canal, after clearing out a triangle formed by that channel and the Noord and Wessem canals, and virtually closed up to the Maas River bend on a seven-mile front at Roermond in Holland. Here, the German radio declared, a major attack is likely to be launched "in a few days time."

Further south Gen. Patton's thrust was made by armored forces which also poked to Rus troff, two miles from the point formed by the French, German and Luxembourg borders.

At Metz the Fifth Infantry Division won a few hundreds of yards and fought onto an airfield between Magny and Fort Queuleu, a mile south of the city. The Nineteenth Infantry Division surrounded Fort Gambetta and pushed out to a point less than one mile north of the city.

NOV 23 1944

Drawing their net tighter about Germans possibly preparing for a siege stand inside Metz, Third Army troops completely surrounded the Verdun fort group just southwest of the city and across the Moselle from the stronghold of Fort Driant. Infantry captured Lorry le Metz, a mile northwest of the city.

The twin offensive of the First and Ninth armies had deepened the five-to-ten-mile wedge in the Siegfried Line by at least one to two miles, with the doughboys now fighting within seven miles of Julich and twenty-eight miles from the Rhine.

Officers disclosed tonight that just before the attack yesterday more than 1,000 guns hurled one of the biggest artillery barrages of the war on the Germans in the First Army sector, smashing enemy positions with twenty tons of bursting steel a minute for one sixty-minute period.

On top of that saturation, Allied bombers laid down 10,000 tons of bombs in less than four hours in one narrow sector.

Germans Fight Doggedly.

But the Germans kept on fighting doggedly, sullenly and resourcefully and in contrast to the Ninth Army front, where many prisoners were taken, only 150 were caught in one of the hottest parts of the First Army front.

At one village captured in the attack the Germans fought from house to house through interconnecting trenches and breaches in the walls. Everywhere the enemy was making highly effective use of mines, mortars and artillery.

The First and Ninth were supported in their jump-off attack yesterday by the greatest air fleet ever to go into a single action in direct aid of ground forces. Nearly 6,000 bombers and fighters blasted at the gateway to the Rhine with 13,000 tons of explosives for five hours yesterday and infantrymen captured hundreds of German stunned by the onslaught.

On the Americans' left flank the British Second Army in Holland capped a twelve-mile advance in three days by capturing Wessem, on the Maas below Roermond in Holland, and Bugenum, three miles north of Roermond. The British virtually reached the Maas on a seven-mile front in this sector facing the German border from three to seven miles farther east.

Highlighting the ever-present danger of a fresh offensive sweep around the Germans' northern flank, Allied patrols slipped across the lower Maas between 's-Hertogenbosch and Moerdijk. German artillery reacted violently.

Pursued by British units mounted in kangeroos—armored vehicles converted into troop carriers—the Germans fell back so rapidly in the flat, canal-broken country near Roermond that the Tommies lost contact.

The Germans were reported withdrawing to their defense lines east of the Maas River.

A field dispatch from the Ninth Army sector said possibly a dozen German towns were captured yesterday in the first day of its attack near Geilenkirchen, while the First Army surged eastward from Aachen in gains that averaged up to two miles in the initial thrust.

The bombs and guns of nearly 6,000 Allied planes, plus a thundering artillery barrage, began the assault which massed the force of two entire armies on a front hardly fifteen miles wide.

Cologne 35 Miles Away.

Fighting on German soil and aimed at the heart of Germany's industrial Rhineland, with Cologne only thirty-five miles away, the two armies apparently caught the enemy off balance while German divisions were preparing an attack on the First Army at Aachen.

While the tank-led troops of the First Army pushed their breach of the Siegfried Line deeper, the Ninth rolled forward through the towns of Immendorf, Floverich, Euchen and Beggendorf, all east of Geilenkirchen, and representing advances of about a mile.

The onslaught of the First and Ninth armies into Germany was marked by a considerable increase in the German use of flying bombs, a front line dispatch said.

To the south, Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army closed in to within a mile and a half of Metz on the north, south and west, by-passing German forts, working into the suburbs and fighting into the hangars of an airfield a mile southwest of the city.

But the Germans apparently were placing their reliance there on a last ditch stand inside the city with its thick stone walls and narrow streets. A prisoner was quoted as saying the Germans were throwing up barricades and stringing the streets with wire, suggesting a stand such as at Aachen.

Deepens Bridgehead.

Above Metz the Third Army deepened its Thionville bridgehead to twelve miles, reaching the vicinity of Monneren, La Croix and Metzervisse, where they would cut the last German railway north out of Metz, and pushing into Ewendorff, four miles from the German border.

Gen. Patton's prisoners in his ten-day drive mounted to 8,396.

Below Metz in the Seventh Army sector, the Germans set afire St. Die, first town in the Vosges pass of Saales, and at least five other villages within an eight-to-ten-mile arc. They looted and ruined in a slow retreat. The Americans had punched to within a mile of St. Die.

The French First Army's armor and infantry slashed three miles off the road to Belport in the pass north of the Swiss frontier. They captured the town of Laire, only eight miles from Belfort, and occupied six other towns.

French Gain Six Miles.

The French had gained six or seven miles in two days in an offensive on a twenty-five-mile front on both sides of the Doubs River.

St. Die was under a gloomy smoke shroud as the Germans dynamited bridges and other installations to stall the push of Lieut.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch. The Americans could see the villages of Remancourt, La Voivre, Corcieux, Les Cours and La Pecherie aflame.

The new attack of the American First and Ninth armies hit the Germans in front of the Cologne Plain—the road to the Ruhr and Berlin.

The First Army, pouring its tanks and fighting men through wooded hill country southeast of Aachen, was edging ever closer to the Roer River, whose broad muddy valley is a major obstacle.

Paralyzing enemy supply and commmunications systems in preparation for the assault, heavy bombers, fighter bombers and medium bombers of the American and British air forces blasted the Duren-Eschweiler road with 5,000 tons of fragmentation bombs. They attacked fuel and ammunition dumps at Duren, Julich and Heinsberg with 5,000 tons of high explosive, hit gun positions, strafed and bombed trains, trucks and enemy troops.

With the launching of this aerial assault, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower threw his winter offensive into high gear, with six armies hammering for an opening to Berlin in a supreme bid to crush the military might of Germany this year.

For the Nazi High Command the six-army attack meant that the Allied winter offensive it had hoped to throttle by blocking and ruining the Atlantic supply ports was under way.

A dispatch from Supreme Headquarters said that the scant reserves available to the Nazi generals are believed insufficient to back up the long western front against simultaneous Allied assaults in sector after sector.

The Ninth Army pushed off to the north of Aachen on the right flank of the British Second Army, already making rapid strides in Holland toward the Maas River bend. The First Army lunged forward from its old stand east of Aachen, flanking the United States Third Army on the left.

Late reports placed the British within a mile of the Dutch frontier city of Roermond, two miles beyond which lies the German border. To the south the United States Third has virtually ringed Metz, the United States Seventh was fighting doggedly through the Vosges foothills, and the French First drove forward three more miles toward the Belfort Gap near Switzerland.

In what First Army Headquarters described officially as the greatest tactical air support of the war, more than 2,350 United States and R. A. F. heavy bombers from Britain smashed at the enemy with deadening blows directly in front of the attack.

The Ninth Army lashed out north of Aachen on a nine-mile arc between Geilenkirchen and Eschweiler. It swept ahead 2,000 yards to within four miles of the Roer River.

NOV 19 1944

Associated Press Correspondent Wes Gallagher, with the Ninth, said that German resistance was lighter than expected in the initial stages. Many prisoners appeared too stunned by the deluge of bombs and shells to fight.

Heaviest opposition came in the area of Setterich, about four miles east of Uebach, but many objectives were taken ahead of schedule. Towns that fell in the first few hours were Euchen, five miles northeast of Aachen, and Immendorf, Beggendorf and Floverich, all from two to three miles southeast of Gilenkirchen.

Front-line dispatches from the First Army sector said that first objectives were reached within two hours after the attack was launched. Gains averaging up to two miles were reported.

Of seven Allied armies identified as on the western front, only the Canadian First has not yet been named in action in the present offensive. It last was reported cleaning up the territory south of the Maas on Holland's coast.

30.24— 20449

Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army stood only one and one-half miles from Metz on the north and South. From positions on the southeast his troops could command the enemy's escape lane to the east, narrowed yesterday to seven miles.

North of the United States Ninth Army sector the British Second advanced at a pace suggesting the Germans were withdrawing behind the Maas. By yesterday the British were in Horn, a mile and a half west of Roermond, border gateway to the Ruhr.

Nijmegen Bridge Blown Up.

Berlin correspondents of Swedish newspapers reported last night that German suicide patrols had blown up the important Nijmegen railway bridge, apparently fearing a new northeastward thrust by the British Second Army around the northern end of the Siegfried Line.

An Associated Press field dispatch last night said that the French First Army advanced three miles yesterday along the north bank of the Doubs River, reaching the vicinity of Laire, eight miles southwest of the city of Belfort. Six other towns were captured—Gonvillars, Semondans, Raynans and St. Julien, north of the river, and Bourguignon and Roches-les-Blamont, to the south.

This dispatch said that the Germans had begun to burn French towns in the path of Lieut.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch's Seventh Army, including St. Die, a hub of the enemy's Meurthe River defense line in the Vosges Mountains. The Seventh occupied Rougiville, two and a half miles southwest of St. Die.

winter offensive.

It was formed chiefly from a part of the Ninth USAAF, with fighter-bomber groups drawn from the Ninth's other two tactical air commands. Although it has been flying as an independent command for weeks, its work had to remain anonymous until the whereabouts of the Ninth Army was revealed.

Tactical Air Lineup

Here is the tactical air lineup for the new phase of the war in the west:

Ninth Tactical Air Command, under Maj. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada, of Washington, D. C., supporting Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' First Army.

Nineteenth Tactical Air Command, under Brig. Gen. Otto P. Weyland, of Washington, D. C., supporting Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army.

Each A Complete Unit

Twenty-Ninth Tactical Air Command, under Brig. Gen. Richard A. Nugent, of Spruce Creek, Pa., supporting Lieut. Gen. William H. Simpson's Ninth Army.

Twelfth Tactical Air Command, under Brig. Gen. Gordon P. Saville, of Winter Park, Fla., supporting Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's Seventh Army.

Nugent was deputy chief of staff for operations in the Ninth Air Force until he took over the 29th TAC. He previously had been chief of operations for the Allied Expeditionary Air Force.

Twelfth TAC—most of which came from the Mediterranean-based Twelfth Air Force—operated under the control of the Ninth Air Force until it was absorbed recently into Maj. Gen. Ralph Royce's new provisional air force which was at the disposal of each general commanding an American army under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. Each tactical command is a complete unit, with its own fighter and reconnaissance groups.

Four Armies Have Own Air Units

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Paris, Nov. 17 (AP)—Each of four American armies driving toward Berlin on the Western Front has its own supporting air unit, it was announced officially today.

The newest of these is the 29th Tactical Air Command which flies in support of the Ninth Army, now participating in the Allies' all-out make public appearances. A few said they believed Hitler was ill or was in conflict with Himmler.

"Most of them were just as willing to fight for Himmler as for Hitler," declared Capt. Carl J. Wheeldryer of Pierre, S. D. "Many report, however, that Goering has been placed under surveillance by Hitler's agents because he tried to spread a peace movement."

The prisoners taken, for the most part, were warmly dressed. They reported that since retreating inside Germany they have been getting supplies regularly and in good quantity.

The German soldier has been sold on fighting to the last rather than agreeing to unconditional surrender. One of them told Lieut. H. Peter Hart, former assistant manager of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York, "We may have lost the battle in the field, but now we are fighting to get a just peace for Germany and for the Fuehrer."

Nazi Prisoners Declare Germany Bars Unconditional Surrender

With the United States Ninth Army, Germany, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—Streams of battle-shattered German prisoners of war dotted the roads leading to the rear of American lines today. Several hundred prisoners have been counted at Ninth Army cages already, and more keep pouring in.

The prisoners are a tough-looking lot. They were tough in action, too, but they were beaten down by the doughboys.

Prisoner after prisoner had carried out Hitler's no-retreat order to the bitter end. They stayed in their places until their posts were overrun.

Almost to a man they told their captors they believed Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler's report that Hitler was too busy to

Yanks Take Dismal Ruin That Once Was Town

NOV 18 1944

By DON WHITEHEAD.

Gressenich, Germany, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—This village, a stinking pile of rubble one mile north of Mausbach, was the first town captured by Lieut.-Gen. Courtney H. Hodges's First United States Army in this new attack. The town had been deserted completely by its civilian population, but dead Germans still lie in the streets, along with the carcasses of horses, all killed by artillery shells.

Doughboys who walk about hugging the walls of the houses for protection only make the scene more dismal. For two months this village has been hammered by our artillery. When the shells began to fall, the people abandoned the town.

The doughboys began their assault on Gressenich at 8 A. M. today and by 10:30 they had cleaned out the last enemy sniper.

The unit that captured the village was commanded by Major James Allgood of Dallas, Ore., and the officers under him included Capt. John J. O'Keefe of 1318 Schenectady avenue, Brooklyn, and Lieut. William Klauz of 326 East 78th street, New York.

When Major Allgood's men began the attack, after a mighty aerial and artillery bombardment, fifteen Germans in the trenches put up a white flag and surrendered. Then the house-to-house fighting began.

"We sent up a self-propelled 155mm. gun as a persuader," said Major Randall Bryant of Richmond, Va. "That gun just knocks buildings down when the Germans hole up in them."

The Germans had mortars as well as field guns with which to defend Gressenich. But they realized the doughboys were about to surround the town, so their officers ordered most of the defenders to withdraw during the night and get to Duren as best they could.

We reached the wrecked streets by driving over muddy, roundabout roads with Major William Lange of Greenwich, Conn., as a guide. Smoke was pouring from burning buildings as we entered. Down a dark stairway in a basement we found Major Allgood's command post.

Lieut. Lawrence Langland of Yorkville, Ind., picked up a telephone and spoke to some one. "Tell your boys to be careful," he said. "We've had two jeeps pile up on mines and one man killed. They've got to be careful on these roads."

Mighty Field Artillery Gun Hurls Shells 14 Miles at Nazis

NOV 18 1944

In an American Gun Pit in Germany, Nov. 16 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Big Attu, a thunder-mouthed giant of the American Field Artillery, hurled more than 50,000 pounds of shells into German positions today as the United States First Army opened its greatest attack since the fall of Aachen.

The 240mm. howitzer threw more tons of metal than any other single weapon.

With vast booms like the measured strokes of a tremendous gong it sent shell after shell on a fourteen-mile arc crashing into enemy artillery emplacements.

Standing behind "Attu" as it bellowed periodically in flame and white smoke clouds, one could see its 360-pound projectiles speed into the sullen skies and disappear—too speedy for the eye to follow for long.

Troops passing up to the front on a nearby road clapped hands to their heads in pain as the concussion from each explosion rang against their eardrums.

Shells Dripped Oil.

Heedless of the noise and blast, its grinning crew fed big oil-dripping shells into the jaw of the thirty-two-ton howitzer like eager and nerveless automatons. This was their day against Hitler. They were making the most of it, glad that every shell they fired landed at last in the country they came 4,000 miles to beat to its knees.

These are the men who kept "Attu" rumbling to a new firing record on this chill and muddy November day—and this is their story:

A group of shivering soldiers huddled in the gunpit an hour before noon, waiting expectantly. By that eletcric sense that preceeds all action, they knew something was impending.

In battalion headquarters their commander, Major A. N. Aldredge of Pensacola, Fla., and his executive officer, Major Bill C. Wainwright of Lawtey, Fla., a fourth cousin of Lieut.-Gen. Jonathan Wainwright of Philippines fame, looked up suddenly. They were ready. An order was given quietly.

The Order.

T/5 Arthur Leher of Brooklyn, N. Y., spoke slowly into his telephone:

"Fire mission."

In the gunpit of Attu at the other end of the phone, Private William O'Connor of 3210 Perry avenue, the Bronx, plucked a cigar out of his mouth and called out:

"Fire mission."

Men snapped to their posts as the battery commander, Lieut. Monroe W. Cadillac of Pontiac, Mich., watched from a hillock a few feet away. As each order came from battalion headquarters, Private John Hopkins, Charleston, W. Va., wrote it down to check against error, and Lieut. Walter K. Sherwood, Bloomfield, N. J., transmitted it to the gun crews.

"Fire mission. . . . Stand by. . . . Battery adjust. . . . Shell-high explosive. . . . Charge four! . . . Fuse-quick. . . . Base deflection—0 0 0. . . . One round at my command!"

Attu, shining with the oil bath given it by Gun Mechanic Sergt. Jack Fowler of Woodruff, S. C., was ready to blast the enemy.

Communications Perfect.

Her men were ready, too. Pvt. Michael Rizzo, 253 Himrod street, Brooklyn, N. Y., wireman and alternate phone operator, had just checked and found all communications perfect.

Muddy-booted soldiers leaped to carry out the firing commands, under the supervision of the chief of the section, Staff Sergt. Anthony J. Gentile, 1168 Wyatt street, the Bronx, New York city.

Gunner Corporal Edwin Reilly, a smiling little Irishman from 2 Gerard Court, Oceanside, L. I., quickly set the gunsight deflection.

Five men in the ammunition pit struggled up with a heavy shell and hoisted it on a carrying tray. They stumbled over to "Attu" and rolled it on a loading ramp. They were Ammunition Corporal Chester Keezer of Chelsea, Mich.; Private Anthony Galella, 2417 McLay avenue, the Bronx, New York city; Pfc. Frank Criscumlo, 2417 Fuller street, the Bronx; Private Edward Fagal of Schenectady, N. Y., and Private Simon Green of Holley River, W. Va.

FLEEING NAZIS DESTROY TOWNS

WIA NI

Continue Scorched Earth Policy as They Withdraw from France.

WITH THE U. S. SEVENTH ARMY, France, Nov. 17—(AP) The U. S. Seventh army smashed ahead for gains all along the front extending from north of Luneville to southeast of Bruyeres today, liberating eight towns.

The towns swept up in the operations were Remoncourt, Domevre, Ancerviller, St. Maurice, Thiaville, Taintrux, Chevry and La Nolle.

The Nazis continued their scorched earth policy, burning Le Paire, Hurbache, St. Marguerite, Saulcy-Sur-Meurthe and St. Leonard as they withdrew before the advancing Seventh.

The Americans drove into Remoncourt, six miles northwest of German-held Blamont, only after overcoming stubborn enemy resistance in this sector. Domevre is two miles southwest of Balmont. Ancerviller and St. Maurice are four and five miles to the south of Blamont, respectively.

Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's troops met light opposition in clearing the village of Thiaville, on the northwest outskirts of Raon

L'Etape.

Further south, the Seventh continued to clean up the area around the communications center of St. Die, seizing Taintrux, two and one-half miles to the southwest, and Chevry, four miles southwest of St. Die.

Gen. Giraud Confident Of Metz Liberation

Twentieth Corps Headquarters, Nov. 7 (AP)—Gen. Henri Giraud, former Governor of Metz, has expressed confidence the Americans now attacking the fortress city soon will accomplish its liberation.

In a letter which Maj. Gen. Walton H. Walker, 20th Corps commanding general, received today, Giraud said:

"I have learned that the battle of Metz is about to reach its decisive phase. Permit me to tell you of my entire confidence in its success, which I know will soon be yours, in the liberation of the town and country which I know and love. Once more America will have powerfully helped France."

Montbeliard Captured

WITH THE 6TH ARMY GROUP, France, Nov. 18 (Saturday) (AP).—The French 1st Army has captured Montbeliard, six miles from Belfort, in a steady drive toward the gateway to the southern Rhineland.

Montbeliard, a strategic city with a normal population of 14,000, was taken in a drive by infantry and armor which swept up half a dozen or more villages at the approaches to Belfort Gap.

EX-MINISTERS BACK PIERLOT

Allies Win Promise Of Support For Belgian Regime

London, Nov. 17 (AP)—The Brussels radio announced tonight that the Allied mission in Brussels had won a promise from three resigned Belgian Ministers that they would support Prime Minister Hubert Pierlot's Government in its effort to disarm the country's resistance groups and "do everything in their power to maintain order."

This development was interpreted as strengthening the hand of Pierlot's Government, embroiled in a grave crisis by its order to "White Army" members to surrender their arms by Saturday midnight, disband and join the regular army.

Promise Allied Officer

The three former Ministers—Communist Albert Marteaux, and Raymond Dispy and Ferdinand Demany representing the resistance—who had walked out of the Cabinet in opposition to its decision on the Maquis issue yesterday, gave their promise to Maj. Gen. G. W. E. J. Erskine, chief of the Allied mission to Belgium, after a conference this evening.

A communique broadcast after the conference said the former Ministers still opposed the decision, but that they were yielding now "to wishes of the Government and the Allied armies."

To Follow Wishes

"General Erskine asked the Ministers to do everything in their power to avoid acts which might provoke friction with the Allied forces," the communique said. "The Ministers took note of this and agreed to do everything in their power to respect the laws and maintain order. On the question of laying down arms the Ministers will do everything in their power to have this gesture made, in order to follow the wishes of the Government and the Allied armies."

Premier Pierlot's Government, setting a Saturday midnight deadline for 40,000 of the resistance "White Army" to surrender their arms, said today that if any major difficulty arose Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's Allied supreme command would take over.

Socialists Back Pierlot

The situation was tense as marchers shouted "resign" in front of Pierlot's home. Deputy Premier Henri Fayat told newsmen that it was "not yet proved" it would be impossible to disarm resistance groups without calling in Allied aid.

Aside from opposition to currency regulations initiated by Pierlot's Government, the resistance groups contend that pro-Axis collaborators still have not been smashed, and object to what they term an attempt to break up their own organizations.

Fayat declared emphatically that the Government "intends to make a thorough purge of collaborationists and has no intention of disbanding or separating patriots who fought bravely" but "the Government, on the other hand, cannot permit unauthorized persons to bear arms." He explained that the Government could not take the forces of the interior into the Belgian army as a solid group, "because then you would get a political army and a force for rebellion."

Disciplinary action already has been taken against Belgian police who failed to obey rigid instructions to prevent a mass meeting of resistance groups last night.

The executive committee of the Socialist party, second largest political organization in the country, is supporting Pierlot's stand.

Referring to tomorrow's midnight deadline, Fayat said that "from that moment it will be no longer a question of the Government's policy, but a question of enforcing the penal law."

BELGIUM PATRIOTS MUST GIVE UP ARMS

GREENE

BRUSSELS, Nov. 17 — (AP) Premier Hubert Pierlot's internally-assailed government, setting a Saturday midnight deadline for 40,000 of the resistance "White Army" to surrender their arms, said today that if any major difficulty arose Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's Allied Supreme command would take over.

The situation was tense as marchers shouted "resign" in front of Pierlot's home. Deputy Premier Henri Fayat told newsmen that it was "not yet proved" it would be impossible to disarm resistance groups without calling in Allied aid.

Two Communist ministers, Albert Marteaux and R. Disp, and the resistance minister, Fernand Demany, resigned yesterday over the government's announced intention of incorporating the resistance groups into the army, either individually or collectively.

Aside from opposition to currency regulations initiated by Pierlot's government, the resistance groups contend that pro-Axis collaborators still have not been smashed, and object to what they term an attempt to break up their own organizations.

Fayat declared emphatically that the government "intends to make a thorough purge of collaborationists and has no intention of disbanding or separating patriots who fought bravely" but "the government, on the other hand, cannot permit unauthorized persons to bear arms." He explained that the government could not take the forces of the interior into the Belgian army as a solid group, "because then you would get a political army and a force for rebellion."

Disciplinary action already has been taken against Belgian police who failed to obey rigid instructions to prevent a mass meeting of resistance groups last night.

The executive committee of the Socialist party, second largest political organization in the country, is supporting Pierlot's stand.

Referring to tomorrow's midnight deadline, Fayat said that "from that moment it will be no longer a question of the government's policy, but a question of enforcing the penal law."

EISENHOWER MAY ACT IN BELGIUM

Brussels, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—Deputy Premier Henri Fayat told reporters today that if any major difficulty should arise in Belgian governmental affairs the Allied Supreme Commander, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, "would take over because we are in the line of military communications."

Dissident groups have assailed the government of Premier Hubert Pierlot. Marchers shouted "resign" in front of the Premier's home.

"The Government has taken over the responsibility for civilian affairs, but this is still the military phase for Belgium," Fayat said.

The atmosphere remained tense in Brussels with little more than twenty-four hours to go before the expiration of the Government's deadline for the surrender of weapons held by various Belgian resistance groups, estimated officially to have approximately 40,000 members.

Disciplinary action has already been taken against the Belgian police who failed to obey instructions to prevent demonstrations yesterday and who failed to break up a meeting last night of a resistance group which had been favored by the Government.

Fayat said it was "not yet proved" it would be impossible to disarm members of the resistance groups without calling in Allied aid, but acknowledged some of them will try to hold on to their arms to the last.

Prince Charles accepted the resignation of two communist members of the Cabinet, Albert Marteux and R. Dispy, and the resistance Minister, F. Demany.

BELGIAN PATRIOTS ORDERED TO QUIT

London, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—Premier Hubert Pierlot of Belgium has ordered members of his country's resistance movements to disband and join the regular Belgian Army by tomorrow or "be prosecuted with the full vigor of the law."

His proclamation, issued yesterday, came in the midst of a turbulent situation marked by demonstrations of crowds near the Houses of Parliament. Two communist ministers, Albert Marteux and R. Dispy, and the resistance minister, F. Demany, resigned in protest to the Government decision to dissolve the "white army."

The proclamation was broadcast at the close of a four-hour Cabinet meeting. Later the Brussels radio said that Major-Gen. W. E. J. Erskine, head of the Allied Supreme Command's military mission in Belgium, had informed the Government that "Allied troops are at its disposal to maintain peace and order."

The Government also prohibited a rally of resistance groups in the capital last night at which Demany was to have spoken.

Resistance leaders have argued that disbanding of the "white army" is unwise now when it is obvious that very large numbers of traitors and collaborators are still abroad.

Anti-Nazi Activities

Bern, Nov. 17 (AP)—Stories of resentment in Germany against Nazi rule reached Switzerland today, but they indicated the ruthless hand of the Gestapo was capable of snuffing out any efforts of popular movements.

Industry was at a standstill in some areas of the Reich, partly because of lack of coal and partly because the Nazi authorities were no longer able to compel workers to remain at their jobs during air alarms, these reports said.

The Basler Arbeiter Zeitung said this was especially true in smashed Cologne, where ten people were publicly hanged on one day and 11 on another because they dared openly to question "why should millions of Germans die for Nazi leaders?"

Trouble is brewing elsewhere in the Reich, the paper reported. At Halle, in Westphalia, the Nazi authorities have established barricades around the town and have isolated it from the rest of Germany.

Indications that high feelings were increasing among students cropped up as the Arbeiter reported Nazi officials are preparing to begin the treason trial at Berlin for "persons" who participated in student demonstrations in Munich last year.

The newspaper quoted travelers from Germany as reporting that Hitler had submitted to a throat operation during the last week of October and has since been unable to speak. They said his condition was so serious that Heinrich Himmler read Hitler's proclamation Sunday, possibly to prepare the German people for a graver announcement.

NAZIS WRECK SPAN

By Associated Press.

The German High Command said today that a special command of six navy men had completed destruction of the Moerdijik Railway bridge, one of the most important crossings of the Maas River into northern Holland.

Earlier Berlin broadcasts indicated the destruction was carried out by "human minelayers"—swimmers clad in three-ply suits of wool, rubber and canvas who dragged explosives behind them and attached them to the bridge structure.

Several spans of the highway bridge at Moerdijik already had been destroyed by the Germans.

Wanted Clock For Bailing Out To See How Long It Took Him

RUTH COWAN

NOV 18 1944

With the United States First Army, Nov. 17 (AP)—Lieut. Vincent K. Kramer, of Annapolis, Md., had returned from a bombing mission over Germany and was circling his home base with his control rudder damaged.

Lieut. Col. Harold N. Holt, of Philadelphia, Pa., his commanding officer, ordered him to bail out.

"What are you doing?" Colonel Holt demanded over the radio.

"Trying to take the clock out of the instrument board," Kramer replied.

Several minutes later the colonel asked:

"What are you doing now?"

"Tying my flying boots on," came the reply.

Another 360-degree turn and the perspiring colonel exploded:

"Well, what are you doing now?"

"Can't get the clock out, so I'm bailing out."

Then He Landed

The pilot landed safely, one boot tied securely to one foot with a scarf and another to the other foot with a handkerchief.

"I didn't want my feet to get cold," he explained sheepishly.

"Why the clock?" asked the commanding officer.

"I wanted to find out how long it would take me to get down," the pilot said.

HUMAN MINELAYERS

London, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—The Nazi propaganda agency, Transocean, declared in a broadcast today that the German military forces are using "human minelayers"—swimmers who drag explosives behind them.

These swimmers, Transocean asserted, wear a protective three-layer suit of wool, rubber and canvas and a camouflage helmet that makes them almost invisible.

"Rubber fins, twenty inches long, are attached to their feet and an air bag carried on the chest aids breathing and keeps the swimmer afloat," the agency said.

HONOR HOSPITAL UNIT

With United States Forces in Holland, Nov. 15 (Delayed) (A. P.). — Twenty-eight bronze stars and certificates of merit were presented today to personnel of the Forty-first Evacuation Hospital, the first such unit to cross the Normandy Beachhead.

Braving German bombs, the hospital set up its tents at Lemolay, France, June 14, to attend invasion battle casualties. From there it followed close behind American troops advancing through France, Belgium and Holland.

Its surgeons, nurses and G. I. assistants worked long hours beyond regular duty to patch up Americans wounded in such history making battles as St. Lo, the Falaise Gap, the Albert Canal and Aachen. In addition, more than 600 German casualties passed through the hospital at one time.

Montgomery Led 1938 Invasion Practice

London, Nov. 17 (AP)—Six years ago, before the war, a small combined operation was carried out as a test by a brigade of infantry which embarked in Portsmouth harbor and went ashore at Stokes Bay.

The soldiers, wearing the "battle dress" of the day—Norfolk jackets, lace-up gaiters and deer stalkers' hats—were under command of a little-known officer, Brig. Bernard Montgomery.

"I like to think," said Lieut. Gen. W. D. Morgan, who told the story, "that Field Marshal Montgomery looks back on those days and derives considerable satisfaction in view of the succesful operation in France."

Minimum Price Set On Hitler Pictures

New York, Nov. 17 (AP)—A Berlin dispatch in the Swedish newspaper Tigningen declared that under a new decree pictures of Hitler "may not be sold for less than 45 reichsmark ($11 pre-war rate)."

The dispatch reported today to the Office of War Information, said the measure was taken since offers to sell Hitler pictures "have been particularly numerous during recent weeks."

Buck Private Gets Top Medal For Heroism on Norman Beach

Paris, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—Carlton W. Barrett, a modest buck private in the United States Army but a veteran of three invasions, received the Congressional Medal of Honor today at a quiet ceremony at Paris Army zone headquarters.

Private Barrett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Barrett, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., will be 25 years old November 24. He was awarded his country's highest military honor for his action on the Normandy beachhead at St. Laurent-sur-Mer.

His gallantry won the admiration of his comrades in the 18th Infantry Regiment of the First Division, with whom he landed near Oran, fought in Tunisia, landed again in Sicily and finally in Normandy.

Assigned to a headquarters company for intelligence reconnaissance, Private Barrett waded ashore in France with two others on H hour to direct units of the Eighteenth scheduled to hit the beaches three hours later. For more than five hours he helped the wounded, led infantrymen on their missions and ran dispatches up and down the shell-raked beach.

Received Four Wounds.

Just over 5 feet tall and weighing only 125 pounds, Private Barrett was hit in both hips and left leg, and took a piece of shrapnel in his left foot which fractured all the bones. He was sent to a hospital, where he suffered two attacks of malaria while recuperating from his injuries. He was not discharged until October 17.

The citation told how Private Barrett, disregarding personal danger from enemy fire, returned to the surf repeatedly to assist his comrades and save them from drowning. He helped carry wounded to evacuation boats and, despite the hit in his left leg, refused medical attention.

When a group hesitated in crossing an anti-tank ditch covered by enemy machine-gun fire he calmly walked across and the men followed him willingly. When his commanding officer was wounded Barrett bandaged his wounds and unofficially assumed the officer's duties by twice rallying men about to become hysterical.

Uplifted Comrades' Morale.

"His coolness and his dauntless, daring courage while constantly risking his life during a period of many hours had an inestimable effect on his comrades," the citation declared.

Lieut.-Gen. John C. H. Lee presented the medal after Chief of Staff Brig.-Gen. Royal Lord read the citation. Gen. Lee told Barrett he was being returned to Paris headquarters as an acting corporal, but Barrett was not overly impressed.

"I used to help Dad run a grocery store in Saratoga Springs and I'd like to get back there," he said.

He said he had a girl in New York city, but her name was "off the record."

French Journalists Face Check on 4-Year Activity

Licenses Hinge on Their Role During Nazi Occupation

PARIS, Nov. 17 (AP).—French journalists must account for all their activities between the day of the French-German armistice in 1940 and the day of liberation four years later in order to acquire licenses, it was disclosed officially today.

This was the principal requirement in a ruling of the Journalists' License Commission, and failure to meet it by any journalist will mean he must seek other means of livelihood.

The commission is composed of a chairman who is a prominent lawyer, three representatives of newspaper proprietors and three representatives of journalists.

For a regular license a journalist must have had three years' experience. Time passed on resistance publications during the occupation will count double. Those with less experience who are full-time journalists now will get provisional licenses.

A ruling of the commission in an individual case may be appealed to a three-member superior board, also composed of representatives of management and employees.

A Woman Speaks In Paris Assembly

Paris, Nov. 17 (AP)—A woman spoke in a Parliamentary tribunal today for the first time in French history, delivering before the new Consultative Assembly a ten-minute denunciation of one of her male colleagues. The member, Jacques Poitou-Duplessy, then was ousted from his seat by a 17-to-6 vote as being insufficiently resistance-minded.

The woman, one of ten in the Assembly, was Mme. Lucie Aubrac, Liberation party member from southern France and a heroine of underground work during the German occupation.

Her target was an old-time Rightist Deputy from Charente, whom she accused of having been among those who voted surrender of their authority to Marshal Petain at Vichy in July, 1940.

Poitou-Duplessy, who represented the Rightist "Republican Federation" group, was the first of the Assembly's members to be ousted.

Joseph Paul-Boncour Loses Out

Paris, Nov. 17 (AP)—Joseph Paul-Boncour, pre-war French Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs, today lost out to Vincent Auriol, who had served as a Socialist Deputy before the German occupation, in a contest for the chairmanship of the French Consulative Assembly's Foreign Affairs Committee.

RED ARMY TAKES KEY RAIL JUNCTION

Advancing Russians Capture Fuzesabony in Drive for Budapest.

LONDON, Saturday, Nov. 18. — (AP) Russian troops captured the key Hungarian rail junction of Fuzesabony yesterday, advancing up to four miles on a 65-mile front and hurling the enemy back into Matra and Bukk mountains northeast of besieged Budapest, a Moscow communique announced last night.

The fall of Fuzesabony, 60 miles northeast of the Hungarian capital, gave the Russians control of a 27-mile section of the Budapest-Miskolc trunk railway, which also has been cut 10 miles east of Hatvan, an important junction only 26 miles from the capital.

Hatvan Under Attack

Hatvan was reported under attack from three sides and Moscow announced the seizure of Czany, five miles southeast of Hatvan, and Szambok, nine miles southwest of the terminal of a line running over the mountains into central Slovakia, 38 miles beyond.

Strong Russian tank and infantry forces were fighting their way slowly along invasion paths to Austria and Czechoslovakia in a big flanking maneuver pivoting on Budapest's grimly-defended outskirts. No change was reported in the battle along the fringes of the capital, but Berlin said they were increasing in violence.

At the top end of the front the Russians climbed 1,000 feet up into the Bukk mountains near the Czecho-Slovakian border, seizing the village of Huta in a flanking movement on Miskolc, Hungary's fifty city.

By seizing Huta, five miles southwest of Miskolc, these Alpine units struck to within two miles of the enemy garrison's westward escape route out of Miskolc, which also is being attacked by a Soviet group five miles south of the city.

Southeast of Miskolc other Red army forces crossed the Tisza river at Tiszaluc, capturing the rail station on the west bank within 12 miles of Miskolc.

The Red army group which captured Fuzesabony after a two-day siege also rolled northward three miles through Baklar, only five miles south of the sizeable town of Eger. The latter lies in a valley between the Bukk and Matra mountains.

Cut Vital Railway

To the southwest the Russians fanned out swiftly from Vamosgyork, the point where they cut the Budapest-Miskolc railway anew on Thursday. Driving three miles north they captured Gyongyoshasz, less than two miles south of the seven-way road town of Gyongyos.

The Berlin radio military commentator, Col. Ernst Von Hammer, admitted "a major breach" in German lines was achieved by Russian units advancing on Hatvan, and Moscow disclosed that the important town also was being by-passed by the column which rolled through Zsambok.

This column was striking toward Aszod and Godollo, junction points, 17 and 10 miles northeast of Budapest, which control the routes leading to the Danube above the capital and along the river to Austria.

Capture of the town and rail station of Jaszfenyszaru also put the Russians only five miles southsoutheast of Hatvan.

In Northern Yugoslavia the Germans also reported that the Russians had carried out a number of thrusts from their bridgehead on the west bank of the Danube near Batina, 107 miles south of Budapest, and 33 miles southeast of Pecs, Hungary's eighth city. Moscow has never confirmed this crossing.

In southern Yugoslavia Marshal Tito's headquarters announced that Yugoslav troops driving north from liberated Skoplje had captured Gnjilane, 30 miles north, and Kacanik, 17 miles northwest, in their pursuit of German troops fleeing along a corridor east of the Albanian frontier.

Fifty-two miles above the northern Albanian frontier other Yugoslavia units seized Plevlje in Herzegovina and drove on toward Prijepolje, 15 miles to the east.

Reds Threaten 2 Rail Towns In Hungary

London, Nov. 17 (AP)—Russian troops have pierced the main German defense line ten miles east of Budapest, capturing the rail station of Gyomro, and in a pivot northeast of the besieged capital today threatened the key railway junctions of Godollo and Hatvan.

Far to the northeast other units of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukraine Army struck to within five miles of Miskolc, Hungary's fifth city, now exposed to Red army artillery fire.

Naval Activity In Baltic

Meanwhile, a midnight Soviet war bulletin indicated the Red air force had begun to track down the German fleet hiding in the Baltic. Since the RAF sinking of the Tirpitz the only surface warships left to the Germans are believed trapped there. Torpedo planes of the Red Banner Baltic fleet opened the attack by sinking a 6,000-ton transport in the big Nazi port of Danzig, the war bulletin said.

Move Toward Hatvan

Battling along the roads leading around Budapest to Austria, the Russians yesterday crossed the Budapest-Miskolc railway at Vamosgyork in a 12-mile advance from Jaszbereny and were moving toward Hatvan, Moscow announced last night. Hatvan is a junction of the Budapest-Miskolc line and terminal of the railway running north into central Slovakia, 38 miles beyond.

The threat to Godollo, less than ten miles northeast of Budapest, developed when powerful Soviet tank and infantry forces swept through Dany, less than 11 miles southeast. Godollo governs road and rail routes to Vienna and central Slovakia.

The capture of Vamosgyork, where several trains and ammunition stores were seized, also threatened the entrapment of German and Hungarian forces still clinging to the central section of the Budapest-Miskolc trunk line.

Gyomro Station Captured

In the frontal assault east of Budapest, the Gyomro rail station was captured in a bitterly contested three-mile advance. Gyomro village, a mile to the south and described by Berlin as the southeastern anchor of the Axis defense arc around Budapest, was under violent attack, Berlin reported.

The regular Soviet communique disclosed that Russiar troops, expanding their trans-Tisza river front northeast of Budapest to a 125-mile length, had crossed the upper section of the river at two new points, outflanking the famous wine center of Tokaj and advancing in from the east toward imperiled Miskolc.

Pushing along the Budapest railway south of Miskolc, the Russians took Malyi, five miles from the city.

PLANES ATTACK GERMAN CONVOY

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 17—(AP) A Norway-bound German convoy was attacked by Allied planes tonight outside Swedish territorial waters north of the Goteborg archipelago, a dispatch to the newspaper Dagensnyheter said.

Eyewitnesses said they saw a ship explode with a terrific crash and great flare of flames, leading them to believe that the vessel was loaded with ammunition.

One plane dropped into the sea. There was intense anti-aircraft fire.

Peasants Get Land in Poland

London, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—The Moscow radio said last night that 88 per cent of the land designated for distribution among the peasants in liberated Poland has been handed out.

"By the beginning of November more than 40,000 peasants and agricultural workers had obtained land," Moscow said in a broadcast recorded by the Soviet monitor.

WEATHER GROUNDS ALLIED BOMBERS

EUNSON

LONDON, Nov. 17—(AP) More than 50,000 tons of explosives already have cascaded on the Reich this month from the bomb racks of 16,000 Fortresses, Liberators, Lancasters and Halifaxes which await only a break in the weather to pass the 100,000-ton mark.

Britain-based bombers and fighters were grounded today, but American planes from Italy swarmed over southern Germany in a follow-up punch to yesterday's 6,000-plane onslaught.

Seven hundred 15th Air force heavy bombers raided oil plants and other targets in southeastern Germany, Austria, Hungary and Yugoslavia, doing most of the bombing by instrument in bad weather. They were escorted by 350 fighters. Flying Fortresses attacked rail yards at Salzburg, in former Austria, a junction of lines between Munich, Vienna and Italy.

Liberators visually attacked the Maribor railyards in northern Yugoslavia on the Vienna-Modena sector, and railway targets were raided in Italy north of placenza, west of Brescia and north and northwest of Bologna.

Yesterday's one-way show saw 3,000 heavy bombers carving paths for six armies heading into Germany with 10,000 tons of bombs landing in one area 15 miles long and 10 miles deep.

Fifty-one planes are missing from the Allied force of 6,050 that went into action yesterday. Flak was light to moderate and the German air force, grounded since Nov. 2, offered no opposition.

Breaks in the undercast over Duren, Eschweiler, Julich and Heinsberg enabled bombardiers to work visually, a great advantage because of the proximity of the targets to Allied ground troops.

Almost every building in these four key towns guarding Germany's front door had become a storehouse for munitions and gasoline or a Nazi billet. Most of the civilians have been evacuated.

MASTER BOMBER DIRECTS ATTACK

London, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—Royal Air Force bombers are being led on big attacks by master bombers whose job is to see that everything goes according to plan, is was disclosed today.

While not a new practice, the Air Ministry mentioned the master-bombers officially for the first time in describing yesterday's mass attack on German front line positions near Aachen.

They are manned by picked crews and their main responsibility is finding and marking the targets. They control the attack throughout. If the raiders get scattered and show signs of missing, the master-bombers round them up and "parade" them over the target again in order.

Finally, they drop the last big bombs themselves, then nose down and photograph the results.

SHIP ROBOTS MAY BLAST AMERICA

London, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—Reports that the Germans have been fitting up submarines with launching devices capable of directing flying bombs against American cities have been current in London and Stockholm for the last twenty-four hours.

Walter Farr, London Daily Mail correspondent in Stockholm, "broke" the story, but the same report was current in London many hours before it could be published. Mr. Farr said both surface and underwater vessels were being fitted along the Norwegian coast as robot bomb launchers. The London report mentioned only submarines.

Mr. Farr said that he was informed that both the U-boats and surface craft were fitted to fire robot bombs from their decks against such targets as New York, Philadelphia or towns farther inland in America."

8th Air Force Ace German Prisoner

London, Nov. 17 (AP)—Capt. John T. Godfrey, Woonsocket (R. I.) fighter pilot who once told a war bond rally in the United States that Americans wouldn't need motion-picture stars encouraging them to buy bonds if they could see soldiers dying, is now a prisoner of the Germans.

Godfrey has been missing in action for almost three months. He formerly flew as wingman to Capt. Don S. Gentile, the first Eighth Air Force pilot to destroy 30 planes. When he failed to return from a mission over Germany Godfrey had 36 planes to his credit, 18 in the air and 18 on the ground.

His score still remains the highest of any Eighth Air Force fighter pilot.

On Second Tour Of Duty

NOV 18 1944

Godfrey was making his second tour when he was reported missing in action.

"It has definitely been ascertained," an air force spokesman said today, "that Godfrey is a prisoner of war."

Godfrey was taking his outfit on a strafing spree over German airfields August 24 when he shot up four Junkers 88s on the ground. It was the last time his mates saw him.

Godfrey and Gentile, whose home is in Piqua, Ohio, had 57 planes between them when they returned to the States. The Rhode Island boy was 22 years old last May. He enlisted in the RCAF in August, 1941, and transferred after America entered the war.

His plane was always named "Reginald" in honor of his brother, an aircraft technician, lost at sea en route to England.

1,300 Hours Of Combat, Now Pilot Is Retiring

London, Nov. 17 (AP)—After four years of fighting the Luftwaffe, Col. Don J. M. Blakeslee is going to retire with 1,300 hours of combat—more than any other American fighter pilot in the European theater of operations.

The Eighth Air Force vacationer is not leaving willingly, however.

"How can they do this to me?" the Fairport Harbor (Ohio) group commander asks. "I just bought a new log book."

There are those who believe Blakeslee's forced retirement coming on the heels of the loss of Col. Hubert Zemke, his old friendly rival, isn't just a coincidence.

Zemke has been reported missing in action after chalking up almost as many combat hours as Blakeslee. The Missoula (Mont.) ace had 26 planes, however, to Blakeslee's 21.

But as a group commander Blakeslee had no peer. He led the Mustangs that escorted the first American bombers over Berlin. He led the fighters that escorted the first Eighth Air Force England-to-Russia shuttle bombing mission. His group was the first to destroy 500 German planes.

BRITISH AIR CHIEF MISSING IN PLANE

KASISCHKE

Sir Trofford Leigh-Mallory Lost Enroute to New Asia Command.

LONDON, Nov. 17 — (AP) Air Chief Marshal Sir Trafford Leigh-Mallory, the British tactician who provided the aerial umbrella for the Allied invasion of Western Europe and who was to direct the air strategy in a new stepped-up offensive against Japan, has been lost enroute by plane to his new southeast Asia command.

Missing with him is Lady Leigh-Mallory, who was traveling with her husband in a special plane.

The plane has not reached its destination, said an air ministry announcement tonight. It was disclosed that a wide-spread search has yielded no trace of it.

The Air ministry said further details would be announced when they are available, but it was known here that a search had already been conducted along the standard route taken by Leigh-Mallory's plane.

The craft had flown to the Mediterranean area and, after dismissing its escort, continued alone. It was flown by a veteran RAF crew picked personally by the air marshal to accompany him to his new command and work with him there.

The 52-year-old flying knight was enroute to take up under Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, supreme commander of the SEAC, a task which he had performed brilliantly under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower here. He was named Allied air commander-in-chief in Southeast Asia on Oct. 15.

Sturdy, full-faced Sir Trafford, who looked like a typical London "city" (Wall Street) man, was responsible for launching the unprecedented tactical air offensive which preceded, accompanied and followed the Western Front D-Day.

He was named air commander-in-chief of the Allied Expeditiona y Air forces when it was constituted at the end of 1943. In that command he controlled history's greatest assembly of air power. Previous to that he was air officer commanding-in-chief, RAF fighter command.

A veteran of World War One, Sir Trafford was in the RAF ever since. He rose to prominence in this war when he took command of one of the RAF's busiest fighter groups in the battle of Britain.

Several Killed As Robot Blows Up British Bus

London, Nov. 17 (AP)—Some soldiers and civilians were killed when a German V-bomb fell recently on the front of a building, blowing to pieces an approaching bus, it was disclosed today. Several bodies were recovered. Only pieces of the bus engine remained in the street.

Two women more than 90 years old were rescued from a nursing home which was hit. Only a few patients were injured.

NAZIS BUILD RAMPS FOR NEW WEAPONS

LONDON, Nov. 17.—(AP) Mysterious constructions, believed to be starting bases for a new German secret weapon, are being erected in the mountains of central Norway, it was reported today.

No details were disclosed, but Allied informants said the whole area had been restricted and that hundreds of foreign laborers were engaged on the work.

Norwegian sources reported that the heavy water plant at Rjukan, where scientists before the war were carrying on experiments with new, powerful explosives, is again being operated by the Germans. It was sabotaged by patriots last year.

These scientists, a Norwegian informant said, had made considerable progress before the war in an attempt to split atoms from heavy water. (Heavy water contains an extra molecule of hydrogen.) Most of them escaped when the Germans occupied the country.

He said that the Germans exported a considerable amount of heavy water to Germany with the object of discovering new explosives. The new blast explosive used in Hitler's V-1 and V-2 weapons, he added, may have been a result of these experiments.

Allied sources reported that despite the severe blockade measures which the Germans imposed in the Rjukan district, Norwegian saboteurs had blown up the cable railway leading to the heavy water plant, and also an ammunition dump.

CHURCHILL ASKS JEWS TO PURGE TERRORIST GANGS

SINGLETON

LONDON, Nov. 17—(AP) Prime Minister Churchill grimly warned the Jews of Palestine and the world today to purge terrorist gangs to protect the future of Zionism.

He denounced the assassination in Cairo of Lord Moyne, British minister resident in the middle east, which has been attributed officially to members of the notorious Jewish Stern gang.

"If our dreams for Zionism are to end in the smoke of the assassin's pistol," he told the House of Commons, "if our labors for the future are to produce a new set of gangsters worthy of Nazi Germany, then many like myself would have to reconsider the position we have maintained so consistently and so long.

"If there is to be any hope of a possible and successful future for Zionism, all these wicked activities must cease and those responsible for them must be destroyed, root and branch."

Describing himself as "a consistent friend of the Jews and a constant architect of their future, he said that, while primary responsibility for curbing terrorism rested with the Palestine authority under the British government, "full success depends on the wholehearted cooperation of the entire Jewish community."

Churchill quoted heads of the Jewish agency in Palestine as urging the Jewish community "to cast out the members of this destructive (Stern) band, to deprive them of all refuge and shelter, to resist their threats, and to render all necessary assistance . . . in the eradication of the terrorism organizations'."

"These are strong words, but we must wait for these words to be translated into deeds," he said as the house cheered. "We must wait to see that not only the leaders but every man, woman and child of the Jewish community does his or her best to bring this terrorism to a speedy end."

Palestine Stern Gang Ouster Asked By Churchill

London, Nov. 17 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill called upon the Jews of Palestine today to cast out and crush the terrorist Stern gang and warned that continuance of its activities would menace the future of Zionism.

Denouncing the assassination at Cairo of Lord Moyne, British Resident Minister for the Middle East, as a "shameful crime which has shocked the world," the Prime Minister told Commons:

"It has affected none more strongly than those like myself who in the past have been the consistent friends of the Jews and constant architects of their future.

future produce only a new set of gangsters worthy of Nazi Germany, many like myself will have to reconsider the position we have maintained so consistently and so long in the past."

Saying that the primary responsibility rested with the Palestine authorities, Churchill said the executive of the Jewish agency already had called upon the community to drive out the members of "this destructive band, to deprive them of all refuge and shelter and to resist their threats and to eradicate their terrorist organization."

"We must wait for those words to be translated into deeds," he said. "Every man, woman and child of the Jewish community must do his or her best to bring this terrorism to an end."

BRITISH SOLDIERS GET 4-WEEK LEAVES

LONDON, Nov. 17 — (AP) A chance of a four-week holiday at home for a small percentage of Britain's fighting men on far-distant battlefronts was held out today by Prime Minister Churchill as a compromise to demands for reduced periods of overseas service.

He disclosed in Commons a plan to grant four weeks of home leave to 80,000 men over a period of a year, bringing back in relays of 6,000 or more a month those who "have borne the main burden of battle in the fighting line, often in the most adverse climatic conditions."

The plan will be applied to those serving in Italy, North and East Africa, the Middle East, Persia-Irak, India and Southeast Asia, subject to the war needs in each theater, with the local commanders empowered to suspend it if necessary.

Churchill said the arrangement would not affect those serving on Europe's Western front, drawing from one member a prompt plea the government keep under review the position of the men and officers in that theater to prevent them from getting into a state of mind of "so near and yet so far."

"Indeed," responded the Prime Minister, "this campaign only opened on June 6 and, though it has been one of great severity, it has not reached a point where we can withdraw anyone from the front even for a short leave period, least of all now that the battle has become general all along the whole front."

He expressed hope, however, that a system could be worked out within a reasonable time to move those troops home for short leaves, depending "on how the great battles go."

More Leave For Tommies

London, Nov. 17 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill told Commons today approximately 6,000 fighting men would be brought home each month for visits of about four weeks. The plan does not include those on Europe's Western front. Churchill said that this campaign "has not reached a point where we can withdraw anyone from the front even for a short leave period."

The action appeared to be Churchill's response to pressure within Commons and in the press for reduction in the present period of overseas service in the army.

He declared that even the leave plan would be subject to war needs and could be suspended on the discretion of the commander in chief in each area.

Churchill promised that the problem would be reviewed again after German defeat.

What Moscow Hears

London, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—The Moscow radio joined in the speculation over Adolf Hitler's retirement from public activities with a statement today that a famous surgeon, a psychiatrist and a neuropathologist were attending him at Berchtesgaden.

The surgeon was identified as Prof. Sauerbruch, who has long been described as an anti-Nazi and would normally be called to attend Der Fuehrer only in the event of an operation requiring the highest available skill.

Mihailovic Flight In Underwear Told

London, Nov. 17 (AP) — Marshal Tito's Partisans caused Gen. Draja Mihailovic, the Chetnik leader, to flee in hi underwear in order to escape capture at Valjevo, a member of the Yugoslav Government in exile declares.

"Mihailovic apparently was so surprised when Tito's forces entered Valjevo that he didn't have time to put on his trousers," Dr. Troyan Gavrilovic, Yugoslav Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, said last night. "He dived out of a window in his underwear and fled into the night."

Ration Cheater Penalized

London, Nov. 17 (AP)—A 45-year-old London woman was sentenced to three months in prison for having drawn double rations since the start of the war, five years ago, under false pretenses. She obtained two identity cards, two ration cards and two sets of clothing coupons. She was found guilty of hundreds of offenses for every time she used a ration book she violated the law.

PAASIKIVI HEADS FINNISH CABINET

Pro-Russian Named Prime Minister To Succeed Castren

Stockholm, Nov. 17 (AP)—J. K. Paasikivi, a leading exponent of Finnish friendship with Russia, was named Prime Minister of Finland today in a cabinet shakeup which saw ten new Ministers named to President Carl Gustaf Mannerheim's cabinet.

The aging Paasikivi, who participated in the negotiations which led to the present armistice between Finland and Russia, succeeds Erhu Castren, who has served as First Minister since the armistice was signed. Paasikivi served as Premier once before, in 1918, and later was Minister to Moscow.

[Soviet organs recently have criticized the Castren regime for its handling of problems arising from the armistice.]

Communist Given Post

Among the ten new Ministers named to the 18-man cabinet at Helsinki was Y. Leino, a Communist, appointed to the assistant communications post.

C. J. A. Enckell remains as Foreign Minister.

Other new members of the Government are:

M. Pekkala, Social Democrat, minister without portfolio.

R. Svento, Social Democrat, Assistant Foreign Minister.

J. Helo (party unlisted), Finance Minister.

U. Kekkonen, Agrarian, Justice.

S. Tuomioja, Progressive, Assistant Finance.

A. Gartz, Swedish party, Trade.

K. Jutila, Agrarian, Supply.

R. Torngren, Swedish party, Social Minister.

PAASIKIVI FORMS FINNISH CABINET

A veteran peace envoy who participated in the negotiations that led to the Moscow-Helsinki armistice, Dr. Paasikivi succeeds Erhu Castren as Baron Mannerheim's, first minister. He had also served as Prime Minister before, in 1918, and another time was the Finnish Minister to Moscow.

Ten new ministers were appointed to the eighteen-man Cabinet, including one Communist, Y. Leino, who was made Assistant Minister of Communications. C. J. A. Enckell remains Foreign Minister.

In addition to Mr. Leino, the new members of the Government are M. Pekkala, Social Democrat, Minister-without-Portfolio; R. Svento, Social Democrat, Assistant Foreign Minister; J. NOV 18 1944

The Finnish radio announced last Saturday that Dr. Paasikivi had accepted the offer of the Premiership. The Castren regime had been criticized in Moscow for its handling of the Russo-Finnish armistice problems.

SWEDEN EXPELS NAZI TRAVEL CHIEF

Stockholm, Nov. 17 A. P.).—The Swedish Government announced today that Baron von Goessler, head of the German tourist bureau who was arrested two weeks ago as a spy suspect, had been expelled from Sweden.

Von Goessler left by plane for Germany.

The Government also ordered the expulsion of Henning Dalsgaard, Danish journalist who was interned two months ago when he came to Sweden as a "refugee." The Danish press service said Dalsgaard wrote pro-Nazi propaganda articles for Danish newspapers.

These announcements followed by a day the statement by DNB, official German news agency, that Dr. Hans Thomsen, German Minister to Stockholm, had been recalled to Berlin for a report. It is believed here that he will return to Stockholm in about a week.

ALLIED TROOPS CLOSE ON FAENZA BEFORE BOLOGNA

ROME, Nov. 17 — (AP) British and Indian troops, closing on the highway center of Faenza southeast of Bologna, occupied the road junction of Modigliana nine miles south of the city without a fight. They also gained up to a mile the past 24 hours along route 9 from Forli, it was announced tonight.

Alternate rain and hail storms and temperature in the low twenties virtually stalled other Allied forces on the Italian front, including American troops in the mountains south of Bologna.

Bowing to British-Indian pressure, the Germans withdrew from Modigliana secretly after having defended it fiercely for a week. Allied troops who burst into the town yesterday were surprised to find it deserted, with only mines and booby traps to dispute their advance.

British units which fought across the Montone river at Forli pushed about two and a half miles northwest of that city against light resistance from Nazi rearguards. Forli itself was under heavy fire from enemy field guns.

All along the Montone river north of Forli the Germans resisted bitterly. At the farthest point of advance in that area British patrols were reported just over a mile from San Pancrazio, on a crossing of the Montone nine miles north of Forli and six miles southwest of Ravenna.

In the mountains south of route 9 between Forli and Faenza, British troops crossed the Bolzanino river. After consolidating high ground north of Petrignone they advanced to within rifle shot of the village of Castiglione. There the Nazis appeared to be holding in considerable strength.

Below Ravenna the Germans, taking their usual advantage of all natural defenses, blew a hole in the bank of the Fiumi Uniti, a canalized stream formed by the junction of the Montone and Ronco rivers, and flooded a large area near the Adriatic coast.

The Mediterranean air forces flew about 2,400 sorties yesterday, including attacks by escorted heavy bombers on targets in Southern Germany and Austria. Twenty-nine Allied planes were missing, against 10 enemy craft destroyed in all operations.

Foe Quits Italy Road Junction

Rome, Nov. 17 (AP)—Fifth Army troops have occupied Modigliana, important road junction nine miles south of the Bologna-Rimini highway town of Faenza, in the wake of a surprise German withdrawal after a week-long vigorous defense, Allied headquarters announced today.

Several previous Allied assaults on the town had been thrown back.

When British and Indian troops moved in yesterday they found the Germans had left the town thoroughly mined and booby-trapped.

Coccolia Cleared

Six miles north of captured Forli, Eighth Army units, moving cautiously toward the Montone river, cleared Coccolia and reached a point within 2,000 yards of San Pancrazio.

Other troops pushed about two and a half miles west of Forli against comparatively light resistance from German rear guards.

In the Adriatic coastal sector the Germans blew a gap in the banks of the Fiumi Uniti, flooding large tracts of land east of Highway 16 and making maneuvers there virtually impossible.

Town Captured

British troops yesterday were reported within five miles of Faenza in the region of San Martino di Villafranca, north of the Bologna-Rimini road, while to the south they captured the town of Petrignone.

Intermittent rain and hail interfered with operations on the Fifth Army sector below Bologna in the area adjacent to the Bologna-Florence highway.

Brenner Pass Power Plant Pounded By Allies

Mediterranean Allied Air Force Headquarters, Rome, Nov. 17 (AP).

Bent on closing the Brenner Pass permanently to enemy supplies, a large formation of Mitchell bombers from the 321st group this week raided a huge transformer station at Ala and photographs showed today that every bomb hit the target area.

Ala is on the main north-south rail line, and reports indicated 60 per cent. of the traffic over the Brenner Pass was powered by electricity.

Destruction of the transformer station would reduce by more than half the amount of supplies the Germans could bring in.

The operation celebrated the 600th mission of the 321st group.

Col. Agan Heads Fighter Group

Rome, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—Col. Arthur C. Agan, of San Antonio, Tex., has been named commander of the First Fighter group, the United States Army Air Force's oldest fighter outfit.

Col. Agan, who has been overseas since April, 1942, when he went to England with the United States Eighth Air Force, succeeds Col. Robert Richard, who will take another assignment.

Col. Agan had been assistant operations officer of the Allied Mediterranean Air Force. He was a University of Texas student before entering the air force, in 1936. He was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for outstanding achievement in southern France during the invasion operations.

2 Cardinals Reported Prisoners Of Fascists

At the Italian Frontier, Nov. 17 (AP)—Cardinals Alfredo Ildefonso Schuster, of Milan, and Maurilio Fossati, of Turin, are reported to be house prisoners of the Fascists, who now are engaged in an anti-clerical campaign designed to divide Italians and turn them against the Allies.

Reliable information from Italy said that these two prelates have been closely guarded and although permitted to attend to their cathedral duties, are otherwise prisoners despite denials from the Fascist press.

WHEELER TAKES STILWELL'S POST IN SOUTHEAST ASIA

GRUMICH

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 17—(AP) Appointment of Lt. Gen. Raymond A. Wheeler to succeed Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell as deputy commander of the Allied Southeast Asia command was announced today along with completion of a new set of British commanders from European theaters to direct the Allied land, sea and air efforts.

Gen. Wheeler was principal administrative officer under the theater commander, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, and will continue to serve in that capacity. He heads the American section of this headquarters and, as senior American officer here, handles lend-lease to all Allies in this theater.

The new command has been completed with arrival of Lt. Gen. Sir Oliver Leese from the Eighth army in Italy to succeed Sir George Giffard as commander-in-chief of the old Eleventh army group, which he is reorganizing as the Allied land forces of Southeast Asia.

As commander-in-chief of the Allied land forces in Southeast Asia, Gen. Leese heads all Allied troops in India and Burma, including Americans and Chinese successfully pushing toward the Ledo road through the vicinity of Bhamo under Lt. Gen. Daniel I. Sultan, commander-in-chief of U. S. forces in the Burma-India theater.

The new air commander-in-chief under Mountbatten, Air Chief Marshal Sir Trafford Leigh-Mallory, arrived several weeks ago, succeeding Air Chief Marshal Sir Richard Peirse.

The Eastern fleet command was taken over last Summer by Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser of the British home fleet from Sir James Somerv...

Gen. Wheeler, of the class of 1911 at West Point, is 59. He served first in Panama, was with Capt. Douglas MacArthur at Vera Cruz in 1914 and commanded the fourth engineers of the Fourth division in the First World War. He left the United States in 1941 to push supplies to Russia and China by way or Iran and Iraq and India.

Stilwell Post To Wheeler

Colombo, Ceylon, Nov. 17 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Raymond A. Wheeler has been designated to succeed Gen. Joseph W. Stillwell as deputy commander of the Allied Southeast Asia Command and will continue as its principal administrative officer under Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, it was announced today.

As the general commanding the United States Army section of the Southeast Asia Command headquarters, and as the senior American officer in the command, he is in charge of lend-lease to all Allies in this theater.

CHINESE TROOPS ISOLATE BHAMO

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 17—(AP) Chinese troops of the 36th division isolated the Japanese stronghold and Burma road feeder junction of Bhamo and scored other gains in the North Burma offensive to clear a land route to China, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's command announced today.

Striking from east of Bhamo, the Chinese advanced southwestward across two main roads and reached the Irrawaddy river, "completely cutting off the last Japanese route to the south," the Allied daily bulletin announced. Other Chinese forces already had crossed the Irrawaddy in a drive to Shwegu from northwest of Bhamo, and thus the town was surrounded.

Other units of the 36th division advanced two miles westward after cutting the road from Bhamo to Nam Kham, 40 miles southeast of Bhamo and 20 miles short of the Burma road.

In a further general extension of control south of Bhamo, Chinese units, which two days ago cut a main road leading southwestward From Bhamo, extended patrol activity in three directions, the communique said.

On the extreme western flank of the Allied north Burma drive British troops of the 36th division made minor gains in the Pinwe area, in the Myitkyina-Mandalay railway corridor south of Mawlu and north of Uaba junction.

In northwestern Burma Fifth Indian division troops pushed on east of captured Kalemyo to Taungu, on the west bank of the Myttha river, in their drive on the Chindwin river town of Kalewa. East African forces which captured Kalemyo fought Japanese in a resistance pocket six miles northeast of the town.

JAPANESE FORCES TAKE ISHAN NEAR FALLEN LIUCHOW

MOOSA

CHUNGKING, Nov. 17 (AP)—Japanese forces captured the walled city of Ishan, 43 miles northwest of fallen Liuchow, and pushed up the Kwangsi-Kweichow railway in an apparent thrust toward Kweichow province and the provisional capital of Chungking, the Chinese High command announced today.

A military spokesman denied rumors that Chinese authorities had ordered evacuation of non-essential civilians from Kweiyang, capital of Kweichow province, some 140 miles northwest of Ishan.

Some observers expressed belief that the Japanese intended to invade Kweichow, while others held that the drive to Ishan was merely a feint and that the invaders actually planned to link with their forces in French Indo-China via Yungning (Nanning). Word that the Japanese were pushing on beyond Ishan was viewed with anxiety in both quarters.

By advancing on to Kweiyang and capturing that provincial capital the invaders would cut the Burma road at a point about 200 miles from Chungking.

Fighting was reported at a point less than 10 miles from Hsincheng, 40 miles southwest of Liuchow, while enemy forces driving northwestward from the former big American air base at Kweilin had advanced some 30 miles to within 10 miles of Lungsheng.

The Chinese spokesman observed that the Japanese were showing no great eagerness to close the gap between their forces which invaded Kwangsi province southward from Hunan and those which struck westward from the Canton area.

The gap extends from Liuchow to a point about 18 miles to the south. It's closing would give the Japanese a line bisecting China from Hong Kong to Manchuria.

The spokesman discounted rumors that Japanese forces in Indo-China had crossed the border into China.

JAPS SEIZE ISHAN; CHUNGKING IN PERIL

Chungking, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—The Japanese have captured Ishan, forty-three miles northwest of fallen Liuchow, the Chinese announced today, and have driven on northwestward in a menacing thrust toward Kweichow province and Chungking.

The enemy was said to be advancing toward Hyaiyuanchen, fifty miles up the Kwangsi-Kweichow railway from Liuchow. The drive would also protect the flank of a southward turn on the invasion toward Yungning (Nanning) and a linkup with Japanese forces in French Indo-China.

There was fighting also less than ten miles from Hsincheng, forty miles southwest of Liuchow. In the offensive northwest of fallen Kweilin, in northeastern Kwangsi, the Japanese drove to within ten miles of Lungsheng, forty miles northwest of Kweilin.

PHILIPPINE SEA BATTLE DECISIVE, NAVY ANNOUNCES

Communique Gives Detailed Picture of Tactics Used to Defeat Japs.

48 SHIPS BLASTED

Navy Identifies Six U. S. Vessels Lost During Furious Engagements.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—(AP) Auditing books on the battle of the Philippines, the Navy wrote down this credit balance today: Assured supply and reinforcement for General MacArthur: Fewer casualties for the future.

The recapitulation, in a communique of nearly 3,000 words, also gave the general strategic picture of how the Japanese were punched off balance by weeks of preliminary feints and strikes by task forces over thousands of miles of island-dotted ocean.

Gives Picture of Battle

It gave the most detailed picture yet of the tactics with which Admiral William F. Halsey of the Third fleet and Vice Admiral Thomas C. Kinkaid of the Seventh defeated three armadas, totaling more than 63 warships, which hit from three ways at once.

The confirmed count of Nipponese vessels sunk, probably sunk, or hit in damaging fashion was reported at 48 plus an "undetermined number" of destroyers. The tabulation did not take into account the victims of General MacArthur's land based bombers, which built the total up past 60.

The Navy identified six American ships lost in the series of furious engagements beginning October 23: The light carrier Princeton, named previously; two escort carriers—the Saint Lo and the Gambier Bay; two destroyers—the Johnston and Hoel; one destroyer Escort—the Samuel B. Roberts. Other losses were reported as "a few lesser craft."

No mention was made of personnel losses in the sinkings, or in the damaging of various other ships. Losses on the Princeton were reported as relatively light at the time she was named.

At least one submarine also was lost, the communique reported, but only after attacking, with a sister submarine, three heavy cruisers as a strong Jap force headed into Philippine waters from the South China sea. The two submarines sent four torpedoes into each of the cruisers, the Navy said, leaving two of them sinking and the third heavily damaged.

Submarine Destroyed

While pursuing other units of the enemy fleet, one of the submarines ran o. a reef and had to be destroyed after all of the crew was removed to safety.

On the score of damage to American vessels, the Navy had this to say:

"The Japanese are still wondering what hit them. It is impossible, therefore, to identify the composition of our naval forces or to describe the damage—other than losses—suffered by us.

"All damage, however, was remediable and some of the United States ships hurt in the fight are already back on duty."

The list of Japanese ships sunk, probably sunk or damaged by naval forces agreed substantially with earlier accounts:

Sunk—Two battleships, four carriers, six heavy cruisers, two light cruisers, an undetermined number of destroyers: Total 14 plus the destroyers.

So damaged that they may have sunk—One battleship, three heavy cruisers, two light cruisers, seven destroyers; total 13.

Damaged—Six battleships, four heavy cruisers, one light cruiser, 10 destroyers; total 21.

The communique indicated that the greater part of the damage to the American fleet came in a gallant battle against long odds when the middle prong of the Japanese force, badly battered but pushing determinedly on, came out through San Bernadino strait.

That force, of four battleships, seven cruisers and nine destroyers, pounced on an American force of escort carriers and destroyers protecting landings on Leyte.

Admiral Halsey's main force by that time was far north cleaning up the Japanese fleet that hit from that direction.

The American escort carriers, converted merchantmen, retired at their limited top speed.

"Japanese marksmanship was poor and American seamanship excellent," the communique said in reporting light early damage to the American ships.

And the light American force made the price high, with two heavy Japanese cruisers and one—perhaps two—destroyers sunk.

U. S. Carrier Sunk

But the greater speed and firepower of the attacking Japanese began to tell their story. One of the American carriers was sunk. Two destroyers and a destroyer escort "courageously charged the Japanese battleships and went down under the enemy's heavy shells."

The American remnant had been maneuvered into position for the kill, with the enemy's heavy guns working from practical point-blank range only 12,000 yards away, when the Japanese admiral suddenly hauled away, threw a final harmless spread of torpedoes, and retired.

Reconstructing the scene on the Japanese flagship, the Navy figured he must have learned of the destruction of the southern Japanese prong which tried Surigao Strait, and the rout of the northern force.

By that time Admiral Halsey had detached heavies from the pursuit in the north and they were bearing down. There also was a battleship force, Kincaid's Seventh, in Leyte gulf.

"He had to get back through San Bernadino Strait or face annihilation," the Navy said of the Japanese commander.

He lost heavily anyway, the resume reported, with one destroyer caught by Halsey's relief fleet, and carrier planes probably sinking two cruisers in the Sibuyan sea next morning.

Maintains Flow of Supplies

"The victory not only made possible," the Navy added, "the continuing supply of men and munitions to General Douglas MacArthur's successful invasion forces, but by its magnitude can conservatively be said to have greatly reduced future casualties in both men and water-borne equipment."

The United States forces protecting the landing of troops on Leyte were the target for three Japanese naval groups, totalling — without considering submarines — nine battleships, four carriers, thirteen heavy cruisers and seven light cruisers, together with more than 30 destroyers.

Despite the results achieved against this force, the Navy cautioned against over-optimism.

"We must not allow ourselves to feel that this victory effectively prevented any reinforcement of the Jap forces on Leyte and Samar, because he can still, by the very nature of the geography of the islands continue his reinforcements at an increasingly diminishing rate," the Navy said.

"He cannot, however, prevent our own reinforcement and supply of General MacArthur and his gallant troops."

2d Philippines Battle Cost U. S. Six Ships, Navy Reports

Washington, Nov. 17 (AP)—The navy reported today on the Philippines battle which cost the Japanese more than 60 warships and said that some damaged American craft already have returned to duty.

Summing up the October 22-27 battle in the longest naval communique of the war, the department identified six American ships lost in action, including the light carrier Princeton. This sinking had been announced previously.

The five other ships named were two escort carriers—the Saint Lo and Gambier Bay; two destroyers—the Johnston and Hoel; one destroyer escort—the Samuel B. Roberts.

"A fewer lesser craft" also were reported lost.

Jap Losses Listed

"Against this," the communique said, "the Japanese definitely lost two battleships, four carriers, six heavy cruisers, two light cruisers and an undetermined number of destroyers. These ships were seen to go down.

"So severely damaged that they may have sunk before reaching port, and in any event removed from action for from one to perhaps six months, were one Japanese battleship, three heavy cruisers, two light cruisers and seven destroyers. In addition, damaging hits were noted on six battleships, four heavy cruisers, one light cruiser and ten destroyers."

The text of the communique follows:

Based on reports—necessarily incomplete due to the necessity of radio silence for certain fleet units and the impossibility of having some officers in attendance at evaluation conferences because of continuing operations of fleet units—the following information is now available on the second battle of the Philippines:

I

A series of naval engagements and, in terms of victory, ones which may turn out to be among the decisive battles of modern times, were won by our forces against a three-pronged attack by the Japanese in an attempt to prevent our landings in the Philippine Islands.

The fact is known. Progress of the three-day battle which began October 23 was promptly reported to the American public as far as military security permitted.

Japs Still At a Loss

It is now possible to give a chronological and diagrammatic review of the second battle of the Philippines, which left the United States fleet in command of the eastern approaches to the Philippines, providing support for General MacArthur's invading forces and maintaining without interruption the seaborne supply lines pouring men and munitions into the combat area.

The Japanese are still wondering what hit them. It is impossible, therefore, to identify the composition of our naval forces or to describe the damage—other than losses—suffered by us in the three-day fight. All damage, however, was remediable and some of the United States ships hurt in the fight are already back on duty.

We lost one light carrier, the U. S. S. Princeton; two escort carriers, the U. S. S. Saint Lo and U. S. S. Gambier Bay; two destroyers, the U S. S. Johnston and U. S. S. Hoel, and one destroyer escort, the U. S. S. Samuel B. Roberts, and a few lesser craft.

Against this, the Japanese definitely lost two battleships, four carriers, six heavy cruisers, two light cruisers and an undetermined number of destroyers. These ships were seen to go down.

So severely damaged that they may have sunk before reaching port, and in any event removed from action for from one to perhaps six months, were one Japanese battleship, three heavy cruisers, two light cruisers and seven destroyers. In addition, damaging hits were noted on six battleships, four heavy cruisers, one light cruiser and ten destroyers.

Reduces Future Casualties

The victory not only made possible the continuing supply of men and munitions to Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur's successful invasion forces but by its magnitude can conservatively be said to have greatly reduced future casualties in both men and waterborne equipment.

Like all battles, this one did not just happen. The engagements, in one of which surface ships slugged it out against each other, and in which the far-ranging carrier-borne United States aircraft both intercepted and pursued enemy ships with conspicuous success, were preceded by a series of other actions which fall into a definite, strategic pattern when reviewed in order.

II

Preliminaries to the showdown battle can be said to have opened with the landings on Peleliu and Morotai, southwest of the Philippines, on September 15. These landings in themselves were preceded by a two-week series of feints and thrusts by Vice-Admiral Marc A. Mitscher's carrier task force of the Third Fleet, which kept the Japanese forces off balance while whittling down their aerial strength by some 900 planes.

These successes indicated the feasibility of advancing the date for the invasion of the Philippines, and the date of October 20 was set by General MacArthur in consultation with Admiral Nimitz and approved by the high command.

Enemy Kept Confused

However, a great deal of hard, tough work had to be accomplished first. As much damage as possible had to be inflicted upon the enemy over the widest available area guarding the Philippines. Additionally, by hitting the Japanese hard, and again and again, the enemy was to be confused, and kept confused, as to the utlimate objective of our far-ranging forces.

On October 9, surface forces bombarded Marcus Island, and on the following day a carrier task force struck at Okinawa, in the Nansei Shoto group, about 1,500 miles to the westward. The Japanese defenders were caught off base each time, losing 82 planes at Okinawa and 46 ships, not counting 11 probably destroyed.

Luzon Attacked

On October 11, while the enemy was still trying to figure out what had hit him to the northward, the airplanes of one carrier group swept over the northern part of Luzon, main island of the Philippine Commonwealth, while the other carrier forces were refueling.

That strike cost the Japanese ten to 15 airplanes destroyed on the ground. Enemy opposition was inconsequential.

Three times, in as many days, the United States forces had struck at three different and widely separated strongholds of the enemy. On the fourth day, October 12, a fleet appeared in the enemy's own back yard, off the island of Formosa, from which the aerial attack against the Philippines had been launched by the Japanese nearly three years before.

Our objectives were the 25 to 30 first-class military airfields on Formosa, the airplanes based there, and, of course, any other military establishments on shore and the enemy shipping in the harbors.

Mischief At Formosa

Our fleet maneuvered in the vicinity of Formosa for three days, October 12, 13 and 14. Fifty-five enemy vessels of all kinds were certainly destroyed and 32 were probably sunk, while approximately 396 airplanes were destroyed in the air or on the ground. On the last day, and on October 16, Formosa was additionally the target of United States Army B-29's, flying from China.

The effrontery of the attack on Formosa from the sea provoked the Japanese into immediate counteraction. Strong units of bomber and torpedo planes swept down from the islands of the Empire, to be met and broken up by fighters from our carriers.

Two Japanese planes which forced their way through found targets in a couple of United States medium-sized ships, which were damaged by torpedoes but which successfully retired to the eastward.

Jap Boldness Lies

Now comes one of the most fantastic chapters of the war. The Japanese aviators who managed to reach home reported an amazing victory, and Tokyo was quick to claim—for the fifth or sixth time—that the naval strength of the United States had been rendered puny. But this time the Japanese believed their own propaganda, that at least 15 carriers had been sunk and varying quantities of other warships.

A task force of the Japanese Navy was sighted leaving the Empire to give the American fleet its coup de grace, but when the astonished pilots of the enemy scouting force saw the size of the healthy opposition deploying to receive them, the Japanese expedition wheeled and ran back to the safer waters of the Empire.

Admiral Halsey ironically observed that his ships sunk by Jap radio announcement had been salvaged, and were "retiring at high speed toward the Japanese fleet."

Beginning At Luzon

On October 14, our carrier planes began working over the Philippine Island of Luzon, and the lesser islands of the archipelago to the south and east, in order to come into immediate support of the amphibious forces approaching for the invasion.

Only about 85 enemy planes were bagged in the sweeps over approximatley 100 airfields up to the time our carriers, both the large and fast ones and the smaller escort ships, converged in support of the landings of the United States amphibious forces on Leyte. The strategy had succeeded, and the landings were effected by General MacArthur's forces in complete surprise.

III

The invasion of the Philippines employed a grand-scale use of all arms of modern warfare; land and amphibious forces, surface and subsurface ships, and, of course, a tremendous air coverage.

A look at the chart will show the confusion of islands upon whose perimeter the initial assault was made. They form a maze of channels, of which the two providing the best egress to the Pacific are San Bernardino Strait in the north, between Luzon and Samar islands, and Surigao Strait in the south, between Leyte and Mindanao.

One of the precautions our forces took against a Japanese incursion from the westward was to post submarines on the opposite side of the archipelago. Early on the morning of October 23, before daylight, two of our submarines flashed the word to the invasion forces that a strong Japanese fleet was headed northeastward from the South China Sea into Philippine waters—and characteristically reported, also, that they were moving in to attack.

They sent four torpedoes in each of three heavy cruisers, two of which were reported to have been left sinking and the third heavily damaged. The enemy forces scattered, and in the pursuit one of our submarines ran on a reef in the middle of the restricted channel and had to be destroyed, after all of the crew was removed to safety.

Cruiser Damaged

Later that day other contacts with the enemy were reported in Mindoro Strait, south of Luzon, and off the mouth of Manila Bay, where the reporting submarine badly damaged another heavy cruiser, which managed, however, to limp into the bay.

Thus alerted, the carrier forces immediately extended their patrol searches westward over the Visayan Sea and the Sulu Sea. On Tuesday, October 24, two large enemy fleets were seen making their way eastward.

One, in the Sulu Sea, was obviously headed for Mindanao Sea and its exit into the Pacific, Surigao Strait. It consisted of two battleships, Fuso and Yamashiro; two heavy cruisers, two light cruisers and eight or ten destroyers.

Our carrier planes attacked and inflicted some damage on the battleships, one of the cruisers and two of the destroyers, but the enemy continued doggedly on the way to the strait, at whose mouth, where it debouched into Leyte Gulf, a surprise reception committee was being assembled.

5 Battle Wagons In One

The larger enemy force of the central prong of attack was initially composed of five battleships, the modern Yamato and Musashi, and the Nagato, Kongo and Haruna. In support were seven heavy cruisers, one light cruiser and from 13 to 15 destroyers. This task force was also engaged as it steamed through the Sibuyan Sea by the carrier force of the Third Fleet.

One of the Japanese battleships and two of the cruisers were heavily damaged and most of the other vessels in the group received hits. After engaging in a running battle, the Japanese turned back upon their course as if decided not to attempt to force San Bernardino Strait.

While these carrier strikes were being made against the two enemy fleets, our own ships and landing forces were being subjected to a very heavy air attack by hundreds of land-based planes darting out from the Philippines' 100 or more airfields. During these attacks the Princeton was hit and set on fire, and so damaged that the carrier had to be destroyed.

New Jap Forces Appear

Among the attacking Japanese planes was one group of carrier-based aircraft which flew in from the north, so search groups were dispatched from the Third Fleet to track them down.

At 3.40 in the afternoon of that same Tuesday, October 24, two enemy forces were detected coming down from the northern tip of Luzon to join battle.

They included two battleships, the Ise and Hyuga; four carriers, including one large ship of the Zuikaku class; a heavy cruiser, three light cruisers and six destroyers. The Third Fleet, upon receipt of this information, turned to meet the oncoming enemy.

IV

The United States forces aiding and protecting the landing on Leyte were now the target for three converging Japanese groups totaling, without estimating submarines, nine battleships, four carriers, 13 heavy cruisers and seven light cruisers, and 30-odd destroyers. The stage was set.

Shortly after midnight our PT boats off the southern approaches to Surigao Strait detected and reported the approach of the enemy's southern force, the one that had been battered but not deterred. The PTs reported that two of their torpedoes had probably struck as many ships, but still the enemy came on.

Three hours later United States destroyers on picket duty in the strait discovered the Japanese coming through in two columns, making about 20 knots.

The destroyers attacked, and almost simultaneously the battleships and cruisers stationed at the mouth of the strait opened fire. The enemy was caught in narrow waters, and caught in the fire, too, of five battleships he had accounted as lost in the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor—the West Virginia, Maryland, Tennessee, California and Pennsylvania—all modernized and more powerful than ever.

Navy Turn Back

The Japanese columns slowed indecisively to 12 knots and then, as shell after shell from the American vessels found their marks, the enemy tried to reverse course and escape. Of the two battleships, two heavy cruisers and two light, and ten destroyers, all were sunk except one battleship, one or two cruisers, and perhaps half the destroyers. The next day our aviators discovered the battleship and a fugitive cruiser, badly crippled, and finished them off.

Our losses in the entire action were one PT boat sunk and one destroyer damaged.

While the southern prong of the Japanese attack was being obliterated by surface action, the northernmost had been located from the air during the night—and it promptly swung from a southeasterly course to a northerly one. Hot pursuit resulted in a new contact early in the morning of the 25th.

Few Jap Planes On Deck

The Japanese carriers had few planes on their decks—they had sent their aircraft out against our ships the day before, and the planes apparently had to refuel on Luzon before returning to their mother ships. Indeed, the Japanese airplanes came in to rejoin their carriers while the United States bombers and torpedo planes were sending three of the four ships to the bottom and making the deck of the fourth no fit landing place for anything.

Twenty-one of the homing Japanese airplanes were intercepted and destroyed by the fighter-cover of the United States forces.

Not only did the aerial assault sink three of the four carriers and damage the fourth, but two of the Japanese destroyers were sent down. The enemy force turned and made their way toward Japan, with some of our ships crowding on all steam to catch them—the remainder of the Third Fleet units turned south at full speed for a reason about to be made clear.

Our cruisers and destroyers quickly overtook the surviving but crippled Japanese carrier and sent it down without effort. During the night, one of our submarines intercepted a damaged cruiser and finished it off with torpedoes.

Why Halsey Diverted Attack

What had caused Admiral Halsey to divert part of his force southward was the report that a group of our escort carriers operating in support of the landings on Leyte was being threatened by superior enemy forces. The anti-submarine patrol of this group of six escort carriers and seven destroyers and destroyer escorts had detected in Wednesday's dawn an approaching Japanese force of four battleships, seven cruisers and nine destroyers.

These were apparently the surviving elements of the enemy task force which had been attacked from the air in the Sibuyan Sea and forced to flee westward. During the night the group had traversed San Bernardino Strait.

The escort carriers, silhouetted against the dawn, came under heavy fire from the Japanese force which, in the western gloom and with the Philippine hills providing further concealment, possessed every advantage of position and firing power. The carriers, converted merchantmen, headed off to the eastward into the east wind at the top of their limited speed, launching aircraft to attack the enemy. But the enemy's superior speed and gun power swiftly told.

Japs Poor Shots

The Japanese continued to close in, hauling around to the northward and forcing this carrier group to head southward, under continuous fire from the enemy's 16-inch, 14-inch and 8-inch shells.

Japanese marksmanship was poor, and American seamanship excellent, however, and although frequently straddled, our ships were not heavily hit during the first part of the engagement.

By 9 o'clock, though, despite a sustained air attack on the enemy and the best efforts of the destroyer support with smoke screens and forays against the Japanese, the carriers began to take considerable punishment.

One of them was sunk. Two destroyers and a destroyer escort which courageously charged the Japanese battleships went down under the enemy's heavy shells. Nevertheless, the Japanese paid an exhorbitant price for their success, such as it was. Two of their heavy cruisers were sunk, and one — perhaps two — of their destroyers went down under the concentrated counterattack from surface and air.

Still the enemy pressed his advantage, and by 9.20 the carrier group had been jockeyed into a situation with the Japanese, only 12,000 yards distant, and in position for the kill.

Why Japs Withdrew

Then, suddenly, the enemy ships hauled away, gradually widening the distance, and to the astonishment of the battered American forces, broke off the battle with a final and harmless spread of torpedoes before steaming over the northern horizon at high speed, trailing oil from pierced hulls as they fled.

What happened can be reconstructed from the events already reviewed. The Japanese admiral, with a costly local victory in sight, received word of the destruction of the southern force in Surigao Strait and the utter rout of the northern force with the destruction of its carriers. He had to get back through San Bernardino Strait, or face annihilation.

Further, though the Jap may not have known it, we had a battleship and cruiser force—a part of the Seventh Fleet—in the Gulf for the purpose of protecting the transports and landing craft from any enemy force attempting to destroy them. This was the force which so completely defeated the Japanese southern force before daylight in the southern part of Leyte Gulf, almost annihilating it—and which was still available—almost unscathed—to prevent the entrance of the central force.

Jap Destroyer Caught

The vanguard of the returning Third Fleet units caught one straggling enemy destroyer before it reached the strait and sank it. Early the next day air groups from our carriers ranged over the Sibuyan Sea and continued attacks on the fugitives, probably sinking one heavy cruiser and a light cruiser.

Back at the scene of the attack on the carriers, the Japanese continued to harass the American ships with land-based planes, resulting in the sinking of a second of the CVE's, but the second battle of the Philippines was over and decisively won. The enemy fleet had sustained losses and damage which materially weakened their over-all naval and air strength against the final drive of the United States forces against the empire.

Can Still Reinforce Self

We must not, however, allow ourselves to feel that this victory effectively prevented any reinforcement of the Jap forces on Leyte and Samar, because he can still, by the very nature of the geography of the islands which afford protection and hiding places for short, fast transportation runs, continue his reinforcements at an increasingly diminishing rate.

He cannot, however, prevent our own reinforcement and supply of General MacArthur and his gallant troops. Our naval and air forces will continue to insure the control of these sea approaches to the Philippines and the effective support and supply of our troops.

The Third Fleet was under command of Admiral William F. Halsey, Jr., USN, during the operations, and the Seventh Fleet was under command of Vice-Admiral Thomas C. Kinkaid, USN.

JAP BATTLE LOSSES PUT AT OVER 60 SHIPS

Navy's Official Report on Philippine Clash Lists Six American Vessels Sunk by Foe.

NOV 18 1944

Washington, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—The Navy reported today on the Philippines battle which cost the Japanese more than sixty warships.

The communique said in part:

"The Japanese are still wondering what hit them. It is impossible, therefore, to identify the composition of our naval forces or to describe the damage —other than losses— suffered by us in the three-day fight. All damage, however, was remediable and some of the United States ships hurt in the fight are already back on duty.

"We lost one light cruiser, the U. S. S. Princeton, two escort carriers, the U. S. S. Saint Lo and U. S. S. Gambier Bay, two destroyers, the U. S. S. Johnston and U. S. S. Hoel, and one destroyer escort, the U. S. S. Samuel B. Roberts and a few lesser craft.

"Against this, the Japanese definitely lost two battleships, four carriers, six heavy cruisers, two light cruisers and an undetermined number of destroyers. These ships were seen to go down. So severely damaged that they may have sunk before reaching port, and in any event removed from action for from one to perhaps six months, were one Japanese battleship, three heavy cruisers, two light cruisers and seven destroyers. In addition, damaging hits were noted on six battleships, four heavy cruisers, one light cruiser and ten destroyers."

"The victory not only made possible the continuing supply of men and munitions to Gen. Douglas MacArthur's succesful invasion forces, but by its magnitude can conservatively be said to have greatly reduced future casualties in both men and water-borne equipment."

U. S. Ship Losses In Sea Battle

Washington, Nov. 17 (AP)—These are the ships reported by the navy as lost in the Philippines naval battle (nothing has been announced as to the fate of the skippers or other personnel):

LIGHT CARRIER PRINCETON—Converted from a 10,000-ton cruiser hull, built at the Camden (N. J.) yards of the New York Shipbuilding Company and commissioned in 1943. The name of the commander has not been announced.

Ship Toll At Manila Revised Upward

Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 17 (AP)—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, revising previous figures upward, announced that Third Fleet carrier planes sank a cruiser, four destroyers and 11 cargo vessels and oil tankers in their November 12 raid on Manila.

The light cruiser previously reported as damaged was known to have sunk, Nimitz said in a communique yesterday. Returning pilots also originally reported only two destroyers sunk and said the merchantmen were either destroyed or left blazing.

Drydock Torpedoed

Four torpedoes also were sent into a floating drydock, believed to be the 500-foot Admiral Dewey, which the Americans scuttled before Manila's fall. The Japanese evidently raised it.

The Pacific commander reported a series of aerial strikes from Haha and Iwo islands, in the Bonin and Volcano groups, to by-passed islands in the northern Palaus. A bomb hit was scored on a small cargo vessel at Iwo and a possible hit was made on a medium-sized merchantman at Haha. The latter island is some 650 miles south of Tokyo.

Ground installations in the Palaus were attacked heavily by land-based Liberators which also sank several barges and other small craft.

Grew Warns Of Any Jap Peace Bid

...et Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 17 (AP)—"Japanese militarism is a cancer," Joseph C. Grew, former United States Ambassador to Japan told a press conference here yesterday, and "our job is to cut out the cancer completely and permanently, no matter how tough or long the fight."

Grew came to Hawaii as a State Department representative to confer with Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific fleet commander.

Warns Of Offers

He told newsmen the United States may expect a compromise peace offer from the Japanese as soon as their leaders realize their position is hopeless. Of this he warned:

"If the bait is accepted we may be certain our sons and grandsons will be fighting this war over again."

Yanks Cut Ormoc Highway, Trap Japanese Regiment

NOV 18

GENERAL MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Saturday, Nov. 18—(AP) Rain-drenched doughboys straddled Ormoc highway with a strong road block a mile south of Limon today, trapping remnants of a Japanese regiment, as elements of the U. S. 32nd Division were thrown into the battle of Leyte for the first time.

A headquarters communique announced completion of a double envelopment movement by two units of the 24th Division, cutting the highway below Limon, four miles from Pinamopoan at the northern end of Ormoc corridor.

Supply Columns Blasted

Japanese supply columns attempting to break through to Limon were destroyed, the communique said. The inference was also that enemy forces caught in the gap were cut off from escape, except by small, scattered bands.

The 32nd Division, commanded by Maj. Gen. William H. Gill of Denver, Colo., sent units into the battle line north of Limon. Already they have driven a deep wedge into isolated enemy strong-points.

East of Ormoc road, action in mountain fighting around the Mt. Minoro-Badian area was limited to mopping up of enemy pockets by the dismounted First Cavalry and elements of the 24th Division.

Several suicide charges by enemy parties were wiped out, while American artillery continued to pound Japanese positions throughout the corridor.

The American 7th Division repulsed an enemy attack at Tabgas, 11 miles south of Ormoc, the final goal of the current Yank squeeze. This is the third assault smashed by the 7th on the coastal road leading to Ormoc, including the repulsion of a landing attempt.

Leyte-based fighter planes attacked enemy small craft on the west coast and bombed shore installations south of Ormoc.

Approximately 30 Japanese planes attacked American ground installations in the Dulag area, near the island's east coast. They were intercepted by Yank patrols and 15 were shot down in aerial combat, with three more falling to anti-aircraft fire.

"Our losses were negligible," the communique said.

YANKS CAPTURE CONTROL OF KEY RIDGE ON LEYTE

Sweep Down Breakneck Hill to Within 1000 Yards of Jap-held Limon.

BRIG.-GEN. EASLEY WOUNDED

Five Enemy Warships and Eleven Merchant Vessels Now Listed as Sunk in Raid on Manila.

Gen. MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 17 (A. P.).

30.24— 20457

—Stubbornly defended, shell-blasted Limon, key to the Ormoc road, was within grasp of weather-beaten units of the Twenty-fourth United States Division today as they took virtual control of dominating Breakneck Ridge. The American units coming down the slopes of the ridge from the west had advanced to within 1,000 yards of the Ormoc valley village, a frontline dispatch announced.

Other American units on the east were held up by Japanese strongly intrenched in ravines and gullies.

Another Twenty-fourth Division force is behind the Japanese on the Ormoc Road, two and a half miles south of Limon, but has not been able to cut the road entirely because of heavy Japanese concentrations on a hillside commanding the highway. The Japanese have not been able to use the road either, because the Americans are keeping it under continual motar and machine-gun fire.

Air Force Blasts Foe.

With American long-range artillery hammering all the twenty-six-mile corridor that remains to the Japanese, and American flyers ranging the skies overhead, enemy dead mounted steadily. The rains were slowing the action, though, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced. The artillery continued its havoc throughout the corridor, and Japanese aerial activity was negligible, the general added.

American fighter planes, bombing and strafing the Ormoc Japanese supply area, sank thirty barges lying with their ramps touching the shore, apparently unloaded. At Valencia, half way up the road from Ormoc to the Japanese forward elements along the horseshoe bend south of Limon, the airmen destroyed dozens of trucks in a motor pool.

Brig.-Gen. Easley Wounded.

A Japanese sniper, meanwhile, wounded Brig.-Gen. Claudius M. Easley, assistant commander of the Ninety-sixth Division. Gen. Easley, a colorful Texan, was tramping through frontline positions when he was struck. He was the first American general officer to be wounded in this campaign.

Gen. MacArthur announced the complete occupation of tiny Pegun Island in the Mapia group just northwest of New Guinea, thus eliminating a Japanese observation post from which the enemy had been able to observe operations along the American bombing route to the Philippines. Bras Island, also in the Mapia group, is being mopped up, Gen. MacArthur said.

ISLAND OF PEGUN CLEARED OF JAPS

Gen. MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—Occupation of Pegun Island in the Mapia group northwest of New Guinea, invaded by a small American force Wednesday, has been completed, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today.

The communique said that the Yanks were eliminating the remnants of a small Japanese garrison on Bras Island, also in the Mapia group, after going ashore there yesterday.

Invasion of the Mapia Islands, Gen. MacArthur said, is to eliminate Japanese coast watchers which have been able to keep a close watch on American aerial operations, especially from Biak on the northwest coast of New Guinea.

Filipino Girls Entertain GIs On Leyte

With 49th Fighter Group, Philippines, Nov. 16 (AP—Delayed)—Two talented Filipino girls today gave American combat forces in the Philippines their first professional-type camp show.

Marina Sablad, 20-year-old soprano, brought down the house with "Indian Summer." Next time, said Pianist Trinidad Laceras, the Yanks will hear "Shoo Shoo Baby" and "Milkman, Keep Those Bottles Quiet."

And, Mayor Paulo Jaro announced proudly, "Next week we're goin gto bring out a full chorus."

Patches Rushed To M'Arthur

Washington, Nov. 17 (AP)—The army can do things in a hurry.

General McArthur wanted shoulder patches for the Philippine army.

He cabled Washington October 26. The requisition was telephoned to the Philadelphia Quartermaster Depot October 27. Negotiations started at once with manufacturers.

The next night two New Jersey plants started work after removing other embroidery jobs from machines and rethreading. Several thousand yards of twill was required.

All day Sunday, October 29 the mills hummed, and on into the week. The first of the patches was trucked to the Newark airport November 1 and given No. 1 priority west. Three days later the entire order was cleared.

Australia Unopposed To Tribune Publication

Canberra, Australia, Nov. 17 (AP). Australia does not propose to cancel a permit granted the Chicago Tribune to publish a newspaper here for United States troops, although the Tribune had criticized the British Empire generally, and Australia particularly, for what it termed leaving the Philippines fighting to the Americans, the House of Representatives was told today.

Francis M. Forde, Acting Prime Minister, giving that reply to a questioner, added that when permission was granted recently for the Tribune to issue a newspaper here similar permits already had been granted several other United States publicaitons.

He said the matter was referred in September to General MacArthur, who had recommended approval of the Tribune's application, among others.

Venezuelan Plot Nipped

Caracas, Venezuela, Nov. 17 (AP). The Venezuelan Government said today that a military rebellion plot had been discovered in Caracas Sunday. A small group of non-commissioned officers was implicated in the plot, which was nipped in the bud, the Government said.

Mexicans To Greet Cuban Public Employes

Mexico City, Nov. 17 (AP)—Tomas Gamba and Eduardo Canas Abril, leaders of the Confederation of Public Employes of Cuba, will be given a royal reception when they arrive here Saturday as guests of the syndicate of employes of the local Administration and the federation of Government employes.

Ceremonies planned in their honor include musical selections, a parade of troops and a gathering of some 7,000 Government employes.

They will be lodged in one of Mexico's better hotels and will attend Monday's festivities celebrating the 34th anniversary of the Mexican Revolution.

24 LOST AS U-BOAT SINKS ICELANDIC SHIP

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Nov. 17 (AP)—Iceland's largest passenger ship, the 1,542-ton Godafoss, has been sunk by a German U-boat in Icelandic waters with loss of twenty-four lives, it was announced today.

Among the victims were Dr. and Mrs. Fridgeir Olason and their three children, ranging in age from five months to seven years. Dr. Alason did post-graduate work in the United States and Canada and received a degree from Harvard last spring.

Other victims were the wife and 3-year-old son of Capt. William G. Downey of New York. They were returning to the United States after Captain Downey's transfer to the European theatre following two years service here.

Leyte Governor Denies Collaboration With Japs

By Elmont Waite

NOV 18 1944

Commonwealth Capital, Leyte, Philippines, Nov. 17 (AP)—Bernardo Torres, Governor of Leyte province under Japanese rule, protested before a board of inquiry today that he was innocent of collaborating with the enemy.

Gesturing dramatically, he presented a letter purportedly written by the American commander at the time Japanese overran Leyte in 1942, advising Torres that "prompt obedience to the Japanese army and their orders is absolutely necessary."

"For Good Of People"

Torres said he remained Governor under enemy domination in an effort "to maintain a Government here that would guide our people, protect our people."

Torres cases was one of four heard today. Approximately 180 others accused of collaboration are awaiting trial and more are being jailed daily.

Maj. Gen. Basilio J. Valdes, chairman of the board, said it would recommend to President Sergio Osmena within 48 hours whether Torres and others investigated should be freed or detained for Cort trial.

The letter Torres presented was dated May 20, 1942. It was purportedly signed by Col. T. M. Cornell, then in command of American headquarters for Leyte and Samar.

Said To Avoid Conflict

The letter said "all conflict with Jap forces must be avoided." It suggested "that you exert every effort to insure peaceful occupation of your province."

It said the surrender had been ordered by the American commandant but "I assure you, I and all my fellow-American officers do not desire this result, but are acting ni good faith for what we believe to be the best interests of the Filipino people."

Roosevelt Rooter Forced to Flee

Mexico City, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—Senora Maria Lowcell, first woman to join the Central American "exile colony" in Mexico, said today that she had to leave El Salvador as the indirect result of a parade celebrating the re-election of President Roosevelt

The parade, which she organized on November 8, developed into a demonstration against the administration of Salvadorean President Osmin Aguirre Salinas, Senora Lowcell said. She sought refuge in the Mexican embassy in San Salvador to escape arrest.

Set For Heavy Air Attacks, Japs Say

San Francisco, Nov. 17 (AP)—Japan is preparing for "large-scale enemy air assaults," the Tokyo radio disclosed today.

A "liason council to cope with air-raid disasters" is to be established in the Japanese Home Ministry, the announcement said, to "solidify the defense structure within the homeland in view of the inevitability of large-scale enemy air assaults."

The broadcast to the Japanese people, recorded here, said the action was decided at a four-hour meeting of the Japanese Cabinet with Premier Kuniaki Koiso today.

Raids Prompt Action

Apparently heavy damage inflicted by American planes on Okinawa in the Ryukyu Islands, October 10 as a prelude to the Philippines invasion, prompted the Cabinet action as well as numerous reconnaissance flights over the main Japanese islands by B-29s.

None of the reconnaissance flights have ever been confirmed by American sources.

The same broadcast announced the Cabinet approved a report from Finance Minister Sotaro Ishiwata on a budget for the next fiscal year.

Attack Reported

Earlier, the Japanese reported an attack on a Japanese patrol ship by "three enemy vessels" west of the Bonin Islands and a raid by American bombers and fighters on the Labuan sector of northwestern Borneo.

The attack on the patrol ship, the radio said, took place Wednesday (Japanese time) and reports of "enemy activity" preceded the fight. The Bonins are 610 miles southeast of Tokyo.

Domei described the patrol ship as "a small craft of only 100 tons," but claimed it opposed the attacking vessels in three engagements over eight hours, inflicting "severe damage" on two of the enemy "before they fled."

Damaged, Japs Admit

The broadcast admitted the patrol ship emerged from the action "with a hole made by an enemy shell" and with several members of the crew killed or wounded.

In the Borneo raid, the Japanese radio claimed Japanese "units" had shot down eight of "about 40" American Liberators and P-38 planes. The raid took place yesterday morning (Borneo time).

In another broadcast Sadao Iguchi, spokesman for the Japanese Board of Information, was quoted as saying the Japanese Government on November 15 had decided to allow prisoners of war and civilian internees in Japan to send radiograms home.

(Only recently the Japanese Government agreed to receive messages for prisoners from their homes.)

FRENCH COUNT IN SPAIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(AP) The Count of Paris, pretender to the French throne reported arrested in France this week, is in Madrid, the Spanish radio said tonight in a broadcast reported by the FCC. The Count had been reported by the Paris radio to have been wounded and taken prisoner by French Partisans. The Paris broadcast the Spanish broadcast denied this.

'Great Turn' In War Forecast By Koiso

New York, Nov. 17 (AP)—Premier Kuniaki Koiso told a Japanese audience today, said the Tokyo radio, that the Axis could expect "a favorable development" and "a great turn" in the war, although at the same time admitting the war situation is "very serious."

The "favorable development" will result from the "brilliant victories" of Japanese forces and the "gallant fight" of the Germans, Koiso was quoted as saying in a Japanese Domei agency dispatch. The broadcast, beamed to Pacific areas, was recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

Koiso spoke at a feast tendered in Tokyo to the puppet Premier Ba Maw of Burma. He said:

"I wish to affirm at this time that Japan will share life and death together with Burma, and indeed all the countries of East Asia, in order to destroy the evil ambitions of Britain and the United States who are seeking to reenslave these countries and also in order to bring about a permanent peace between Japan and Burma and the various countries of greater East Asia."

Ba Maw responded, said Domei, by voicing his faith in eventual victory, "whether it takes a day or a year or a hundred years."

ARGENTINE PLAN REJECTED BY U. S.

Request to Hold Meeting of Western Hemisphere Nations Opposed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP) The United States has informed the other Latin American republics that it is opposed to Argentina's request to hold a foreign ministers meeting to thrash out that nation's diplomatic isolation.

The American views were expressed, it was learned today, in a note circulated to all the embassies of Western hemisphere nations in Washington, except Argentina.

The United States' document was in close agreement with a note distributed a few days ago by Mexico. The Mexican note recommended that the Argentine proposal to the Pan-American union be turned down and that foreign ministries in the hemisphere spend more time deciding how to deal with the ticklish Argentine problem.

As a result, Latin diplomats here expressed the opinion that it would be impossible to hold a meeting of foreign ministers on the Argentine question this year, and extremely unlikely that any conference can be called until 1945.

The United States, paralleling the Mexican views, held that United Nations problems and the war are far more important and must be considered before Argentina's case. The way was left open for a foreign ministers meeting on world security plans and the American document indicated that the Argentine situation could be discussed incidentally to such a conference.

However, it was made quite clear that this government does not believe that Argentina should be among those invited to participate on an equal status.

A third document, from Chile, has also been dispatched. The Chilean view tends to favor acceptance of the Argentine proposal but states that Chile would be ready to follow the decision of the rest of the American republics.

None of the other countries in the hemisphere have formally presented their opinions as yet.

'Neighbors' Divided On Argentina's Plea

Washington, Nov. 17 (AP)—A split in opinion appears to have developed among the Latin-American nations on Argentina's request for a conference of Foreign Ministers.

So far only Mexico has formally expressed its views in a memorandum to the other nations. It recommended that the Argentine proposal for discussion of that nation's political quarantine be turned down. Other Central American republics are known to lean toward Mexico's viewpoint.

Some Ask Early Session

Colombia, Venezuela and Ecuador spoke for a meeting the day the Argentine request was presented to their representatives at the Pan-American Union, however, and several of the South American countries feel that the conference should be held, and soon.

The fundamental difference in ideas is over how to hold a meeting without placing Argentina in a position to maneuver recognition from the nations which have refused diplomatic relations with the regime of President Edelmiro Farrell.

Impatience Growing

Also the feeling appears general that Argentina should not be allowed to participate in talks on world security which the other republics, all members of the United and Associated Nations, want to hold.

Impatience is developing among those American republics which favor a conference because of a series of Argentine moves apparently aimed at intimidating neighboring countries on the one hand, and, on the other, convincing the rest of the hemisphere that the Argentine Government intends to clean out Axis influence and restore constitutionality.

Examples Given

Argentina's sudden 50 per cent slash of wheat exports to Bolivia comes in the first category. In the second is the Government's decision to study revival of political parties and measures against Axis newspapers.

So far the only formula suggested on the technique of a meeting which might receive general agreement has been to hold a conference without Argentina on Dumoarton Oaks peace plans, then, during discussions of Western Hemisphere security, Argentina could be invited to present her case.

HURLEY SEEN NEW ENVOY TO CHINA

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 — (AP) Appointment of trouble shooter Patrick J. Hurley as American ambassador to China appeared a strong likelihood tonight.

Both Chinese and American diplomats expressed the opinion that Maj. Gen. Hurley might be able to unravel some of the gravely tangled lines of Chinese-American relations.

He has been handling many of the duties of ambassador in Chungking since last August as personal emissary of President Roosevelt.

The President said today that he had picked a successor to Ambassador Clarence E. Gauss, who resigned at the time General Joseph W. Stilwell was recalled.

The name will probably be sent to the Senate for confirmation as soon as Chungking goes through the formality of declaring the appointment persona grata.

Hurley is poppular both with Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek and with American army officers in China, many of whom have thus far found difficulties in establishing smooth relations with the Chinese.

Nazis Hold 200 Claiming To Be Citizens of U. S.

State Department Says They Are Being Denied Legal Rights

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (AP).—Some 200 persons claiming United States citizenship are being held in a German camp without recourse to their right to the protective interest of the Swiss government.

The State Department, disclosing this today, said an effort is being made to learn the names of the 200 and to arrange for their transfer to an internment camp where they would be accorded full rights under "existing international agreements and practices."

The camp in which they are held is at a place called Bergen Belsen, near Hanover, the department said. It added that the German government has not allowed either Swiss representatives or International Red Cross delegates to visit there.

"In order that the department may assemble as much information as possible in the matter," the department's announcement said "persons having information indicating that specific individuals with valid claims to American citizenship are detained at Bergen Belsen are requested to provide the department with such information as they may possess."

Man Races Bomber

Washington, Nov. 17 (AP)—From the Pacific comes a story by Marine Correspondent Theron Rice of a race between a man and a bomber.

Said Sergeant Theron, formerly of the Washington Evening Star:

"The bomber won by fractions of a second.

"It all began when Lieut. Chester Ruffin, of Moorhead, Miss., a former track star at Perkinston (Miss.) Junior College, declared he could beat a Ventura medium bomber in a race of no more than 100 yards. Lieut. Com. Elwyn L. Christman, of San Diego, Cal., accepted the challenge.

"Although Lieutenant Ruffin led most of the way, the momentum gained by the plane pushed it across the finish line 35 feet ahead. The bomber's time was 9.7 seconds, Lieutenant Ruffin's 9.95 seconds."

PRESIDENT PLANS PARIS VISIT LATER

Washington, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt made clear today that his projected meeting with Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin would take priority over his hope of visiting Paris.

He indicated also that the meeting might be at some point far removed from the French capital.

Mr. Roosevelt told his news conference he hoped some day to accept an invitation from Gen. Charles de Gaulle to visit Paris.

In answer to the question concerning his progress toward the meeting Mr. Roosevelt had said he had made no progress yet, although all three of the Allied leaders want to see each other.

The President was an hour and five minutes late to his conference. He explained his delay by saying he was keeping abreast of military developments in Europe. Asked for any news on the drive in western Europe, Mr. Roosevelt replied only that it was in progress.

At the State Department, a message from Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotov expressed the belief that continued cooperation between the United States and Russia would be a most important factor in creating a lasting peace, the message in response to congratulations on the recent anniversary of the founding of the Soviet Union.

Carlson Wins Promotion

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (AP).—Evans F. Carlson, marine officer of "Carlson's Raider" fame, has been promoted to colonel. Carlson, who led marines in a raid on the Japanese in Makin Island in December, 1942, has been decorated for that feat as well as for his services at Guadalcanal, Tarawa and Saipan. A lieutenant colonel at the time, Colonel Carlson was wounded in the Saipan campaign earlier this year.

FDR Urges Quick Action on Law For Military Training of Youth

NOV 18 1944

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 — (AP) President Roosevelt said today he hoped the new Congress will enact this winter legislation for compulsory, one-year government training for young Americans.

In a news conference discussion, he indicated he had in mind a more general program, however, than the year of peacetime military training which some are advocating to establish a trained army reserve.

Would Benefit Youth

Mr. Roosevelt said the degree of military training would be up to the legislators. But he went on to speak of the physical benefits derived by those who served in the Civilian Conservation corps, the desirability of teaching people to brush their teeth and keep clean, and asked, should we, for instance, teach girls cooking?

The question of peacetime military training seems certain to bring prolonged controversy in the new Congress which takes office in January.

Archbishops and bishops of the Catholic church in the United States voiced opposition at a meeting here Thursday to "immediate passage" of such a measure. They urged that action be withheld until the end of the war when the new law in the Army and Navy return and the post-war international situation can be seen in clearer focus.

The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America also has gone on record in favor of postponing the question until after the war. The American Federation of Teachers' Commission on Educational Reconstruction (AFL) recently adopted a resolution opposing "hasty or ill-considered action" on the question.

The question was raised at Mr. Roosevelt's conference by a reporter who asked whether he thought Congress should enact a compulsory training law.

The President said he hoped so, that he had been for it right along.

As the discussion went along, these were some of the President's observations:

It was appalling the number of men turned down in the draft because of physical defects.

It was important to teach men to live with other men.

As for the military aspects, cooking might be military and it might not, and so might carpentry.

Anyhow, there were lots of things boys could do for their country.

Youth Between 18 and 23

In general, he remarked, he thought that between the ages of 18 and 23 one year of service should be given to the government. By this age spread, he said, individual cases could be adjusted to family circumstances.

A reporter said there had been suggestions that establishing a military reserve might be handled through the National Guard with three months annual training spread over several years.

It won't work, Mr. Roosevelt replied flatly.

Asked whether the National Guard would continue if Congress enacted a peacetime universal training law, he said he did not know, that it would depend on Congress.

Universal peacetime military training has been endorsed by Secretary of the Navy Forrestal and by General George C. Marshall, army Chief of Staff, and already has the support of a sizeable group in Congress. Several measures to put it into effect are pending at the Capitol.

Senate May Delay Oil Hearing

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (AP).—Senator Tom Connally, Democrat, of Texas, chairman, said today that hearings by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on the Anglo-American oil agreement may be deferred until January. The agreement looks to establishment of an international petroleum commission for development of petroleum resources for international trade.

Inflation Fears Cause Delay in Reconversion

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 — (AP) Fear that the wholesale dropping of production controls might cause ruptures in the price ceiling structure after V-day in Europe is slowing preparations for the reconversion of industry.

This snag was disclosed by War Production board sources at the height of a new administration drive to fight what it terms public complacency by deemphasizing civilian activity.

If Germany collapsed tomorrow, it was stated, WPB probably could not revoke all the 350 orders which earlier were declared due for the scrap heap. Some of the controls have been found closely linked to price orders which will continue after Hitler's fall.

In any case, business is not likely to get WPB's detailed blueprint for reconversion until the German collapse is imminent and certain. Top officials now lean to the belief that too much talk about peacetime planning leads to letdowns in the war effort.

Tempering the upsurge of official concern over manpower and war production problems, a war manpower official asserted "there is definitely no manpower crisis."

Most of the arms and supply shortages which led Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes yesterday to threaten complete suspension of "the resumption of production of civilian supplies," are caused by increases in military demands and other factors, the WMC authority said.

"The manpower situation has not worsened in the last two months," he asserted. "We are having trouble, however, keeping up with the turnover of workers. We find that our manpower troubles grow out of our military successes."

Washington's difficulty with the home-front problem was attributed to "an atmosphere of necessary uncertainty" by William Y. Elliott, WPB vice chairman for civilian supply, in a speech in Boston today. It is complicated, he said, by the step-up in armament schedules required by the fact that the war in the Pacific "has gone ahead of schedule."

Inflationary fears entered the reconversion picture when WPB took its V-E day program to the Office of Price Administration and other government agencies for approval.

OPA pointed out that some WPB orders limit production to a handful of the types of a product made before the war. Price ceilings cover only the permitted types. If such an order were wiped out, a manufacturer could merely add a gadget to his product and have something technically new outside of price control.

Possible quality deterioration is feared by both WPB and OPA. Rayon hosiery for instance, is made to rigid WPB specifications. If these were lifted, officials fear some mills might be tempted to cut quality corners.

General agreement has developed that WPB must move with caution, and in the questionable cases should not act until some other safeguards can be erected.

Du Pont To Provide Navy Ordnance Plant

Washington, Nov. 17 (AP)—The navy has entered into an agreement with the du Pont Corporation, Wilmington, Del., for construction and operation of a $1,000,000 naval ordnance plant at Dresden, N. Y.

In making the announcement today, the Navy Department said that construction is to start immediately. The plant is expected to employ 100 people.

Washington, Nov. 17 (AP)—A call for Republicans to "carry the torch of leadership" for a strong international peace organization was sounded today by Senator Austin (R., Vt.).

The Republicans, as a party, Austin said, have evidence in their 1944 platform, in the campaign of their Presidential nominee, and in their vote on the Connally resolution, that they have "shed isolationism" as a policy.

GOP Urged To Help In Planning Peace

Resolution Cited

He referred to passage, 85 to 5, of a resolution putting the Senate on record as favoring United States participation in an organization of nations to preserve future peace.

"We ought to be able to contribute something constructive to the formulation of the peace organization that will grow out of the Dumbarton Oaks discussions," Austin said.

Meanwhile, Chairman Connally (D., Texas) said the Senate Foreign Relations Committee would meet Wednesday to discuss plans for hearings, probably in the spring, if the final shape of the organization has been determined.

Still Considered

Still under consideration and apparently up to President Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill to work out, is the question whether one of the four big powers should be entitled to vote in cases in which it might be accused of aggression.

The Soviet representative at Dumbarton Oaks reportedly opposed disqualification in such a case.

Austin believes the Republicans in the Senate would be freer than the Democrats to advance airtight control by the council.

Discusses Veto Power

"Some of us already believe that no state, however great, should be above the law," he said. "If the veto power remains in any one of the four permanent members of the council, an aggressor state could be placed above the law, if it could vote on a question raised by its aggression."

Should a Democrat speak out too freely in such a case, Austin believes it might leave the impression in foreign governments that the Administration "is fixed in its idea," and thus make negotiations more difficult.

Wallace Return To Cabinet Is Predicted

Washington, Nov. 17 (AP)—Associates sizing up the future of Vice-President Henry A. Wallace suggested today that he might want to backtrack into the Cabinet.

They are pretty well agreed that Wallace's political and Vice-Presidential careers won't terminate together next January 20 and that the former Agriculture Secretary will continue in public life instead of going back to his farm journal or Iowa cornfields.

What Of Plans For 1948?

But their opinions differ as to whether Wallace has an eye on 1948 and the political toga of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Some who have been closely identified with him say he may have hopes of growing into Presidential timber within the next four years. They reason that he might like to go back into the Cabinet or take some other high post that would give him an opportunity to keep his name before the public.

Senator Ellender (D., La.), who sometimes plays handball with Wallace, said he thought the retiring Vice-President is not setting his sights on '48.

Foresees His Retention

Ellender confessed, though, that "I was afraid to bring it up" during a "long talk with him yesterday." He added:

"My guess, and it's purely a guess, is that he is going to be retained for some high Government position.

"I doubt if he would go back to the Agriculture Department. Too many headaches. I doubt if he would like labor. He might consider commerce—he loves figures. Or while the war is on he might be some kind of roving ambassador for the President. He is shrewd, a good observer and has a hefty mind."

Although President Roosevelt gave Wallace a less-than-vigorous indorsement at the Democratic National Convention and he lost out for renomination, he campaigned vigorously for the Democratic team.

One Incident Recalled

On at least one occasion, speaking from the same platform as Truman in New York city, the Vice-President heard cries of "Wallace for '48."

Whether they put ideas in his head, he just isn't telling anybody on Capitol Hill. He has no Senatorial cronies to whom he might disclose his intentions with complete candor, but one man who knows him well predicted that "there are going to be plenty more Wallace speeches."

House Rules Are Being Copyrighted

Washington, Nov. 17 (A. P.).—For the fourth time since 1918 Chairman Cannon (D.-Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee is revising the House rules of procedure.

The new volume will carry a personal copyright—the first time Mr. Cannon believes, that a Government-printed document has done so. He says that the rule book saves many hours of debate on procedure.

BRETTON WOODS PLAN DEBATED AT BUSINESS PARLEY

RYE, N. Y., Nov. 17—(AP) The American delegation's attitude toward the monetary proposals adopted at Bretton Woods was represented as being an open question today as the international business conference received the report of its panel on currency relations.

The American viewpoint on the World Stabilization fund and the international reconstruction bank had been awaited by the conference delegates as giving some indication of how business in this country felt regarding these plans.

Henry F. Grady, San Francisco shipping executive and chairman of the American delegation, explained the delegation's failure to take a stand on Bretton Woods by telling the conference that "as a business group, we must take into consideration what may be the views of the important groups in the United States now studying this matter."

"As a matter of fact," he continued, "the American Bankers' association, the National Foreign Trade council and the New York State Bankers' association are all studying this matter. We feel it would be presumptuous for us to take a position without having the benefit of the studies of these groups."

He said that although the delegation did not declare itself "that does not mean we are against anything that happened at Bretton Woods."

Grady's statement was precipitated by the action of the conference in adopting unanimously a motion offered by the British which presented their view that the reconstruction bank "would be an encouragement to sound international investment in the postwar period by giving protection to both borrower and lender."

This was generally interpreted as lending conference approval to the British view, but the American delegation later explained it had voted for the motion merely to place the British viewpoint in the report of the conference, but not to endorse the stand.

The panel on currency relations reported that it was general feeling of the discussions that "the world should keep gold as a monetary metal and use it as a constituent part of the postwar monetary system.

"That system might depart in certain particulars from the older forms of the gold standard but should eventually be characterized by stable parities between currencies and by the freedom of international payments.

"It was fully recognized that a stable exchange relationship between the U. S. dollar and the pound sterling is an essential condition of international monetary stabilization," the report said. This was in reference to the "key currency" plan advocated by some American bankers in which the pound would be stabilized in relation to the dollar before an attempt would be made to fix other currency rates. It is far different from the Bretton Woods Stabilization plan in which all currencies would be fixed at one time.

The report of the panel on private investment was highlighted by a recommendation that "comprehensive tax treaties be concluded between friendly countries, equitably defining the taxing sphere of each, and implemented by clear and simple legislation in each country."

ELECTION OFFICIAL DENIES ROOSEVELT USED PROFANITY

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Nov. 17—(AP) A Democratic election official who said he stood only two feet away from President Roosevelt when he voted on election day denied today that the President used profane language when the voting machine jammed.

Four other polls workers—three Republicans and another Democrat—either said they heard no profanity or nothing at all.

They had been asked to comment on a news magazine's (Time) story, quoting the President as saying, "the goddamned thing won't work."

Officials of Time, Inc., in New York, said in a statement that "they had published a quotation on the President's profanity in the voting booth on the statement of their reporter who was about five feet away when the President was trying to manipulate the lever."

"At least five or six other reporters," the statement continued, "were a foot or two nearer and reported hearing the same remark as did several newsreel cameramen.

"As a group of reporters was leaving the hall behind the President a newsreel technician who had been standing just outside the booth about a foot away, inquired of them, 'did you hear tha. goodammit crack the President made when the machine wouldn't work?'

"The reporters agreed that they heard the remark upon which the five election officials do not now agree among themselves. In their stories that night from Poughkeepsie most of the reporters toned down the exact remark so that their copy read 'blankety-blank' or '——'."

Thomas L. Leonard, the Democratic election official who denied that the President used profane language said he was tending the voting machine and was from more than two feet away.

The President talked to him through the curtain, Leonard said, and he quoted him as saying, "Tom, what's the matter with this thing? It doesn't work. Oh, it's all right now."

"He did not use any profane language at any time," Leonard said, and added, "I doubt if the spectators who were further away could hear what he said to me."

Mrs. Reta Lasher, Republican gatekeeper, commented, "all he said was that the machine did not work."

Miss Mildred M. Todd, Democratic inspector, and Mrs. George Upright and Mrs. Douglas Crapser, Republican inspectors, all said they did not hear the President say anything.

The Glendale (Calif.) Ministerial Association announced last night that it had sent the President a letter asking him to apologize to his "constituents" for what it called "shocking profanity."

The letter said the ministers prayed that the President would "feel contrition and seek forgiveness."

NO SETTLEMENT SEEN IN BOSTON TRUCK STRIKE

BOSTON, Nov. 17—(AP) A work stoppage by members of local 25, of the AFL Teamsters union, appeared no nearer settlement tonight as "holidaying" members refused to go back to work.

Local President John M. Sullivan said that he was under summons to the National War Labor Board.

Spokesmen for the "holidaying" truck drivers said that they would not return to work until the union officers agreed to abide by the union constitution.

They charged in an open mass meeting that President Sullivan had announced he was "in for the duration" when they protested his failure to receive nominations of officers at a meeting last Sunday, which they said was the date set by the union constitution for opening of the triennial elections.

Later, the truckman said, they appointed a committee of 14 men to discuss the matter with Sullivan. As soon as these men called upon the union officers for action, the spokesman said, Patrick H. Jennings, international representative, suspended them from union membership.

Members of the union divided into two factions today, as several hundred working for a group of Cambridge Trucking companies, called for immediate cessation of the work stoppage, although they said they still wanted to have the officers forced to call an election and restore the suspended 14 to membership.

Sullivan's announcement that he was under summons to appear before the War Labor board came at the end of a meeting in the Gardner auditorium at the State house, at which Sullivan said he had told the "three or four hundred" men present that he would be glad to "sit down and settle this thing if they would arrange for a bigger meeting."

"I told these fellows that they represented only a small part of the membership," Sullivan added in a statement to reporters.

Meanwhile Gov. Saltonstall said that he could call out the state Guard to help transport food and other necessities if an "extreme emergency arose.

"I hope it will not be necessary," the Governor added in a statement he issued after conferring with military and civilian officials.

The "holidaying" truckmen denied that perishables or urgent military cargoes were being delayed by their stoppage.

Several, who declined to be quoted by name, told of having worked during the night loading trucks and driving them with urgent cargoes.

One said he and two other men "went immediately" to a truck terminal when they received a call that three trucks were ready to move with loads of ammunition for the army.

Leroy Lewis, one of the suspended drivers told newsmen: "We have nothing to hide. We want an election as the constitution of the union calls for. If the United States can hold an election with 130 million people, why can't the Local 25, with 6,000 or 7,000 members?"

Power of Big 3 Called Decisive In World Peace

Butler, British Minister, Says Only Large Nations Can Bar Future Wars

CINCINNATI, Nov. 17 (AP).—Harold B. Butler, British Minister to Washington, said today that war and peace depends ultimately on the large nations because they alone can wage war effectively and "they alone are capable of preventing others from waging war."

In an address prepared for a meeting of the Foreign Policy Association held in conjunction with "The Cincinnati Enquirer" and radio station WLW, Mr. Butler said that the League of Nations fell down because its "blueprint was never converted into a working model" and because it was based on the principle that all countries should have equal votes.

"But it is a great mistake to suppose that because all nations have equal rights they are therefore equally important and equally effective as factors for keeping the peace," he said. "They are not."

"Unless we face this fact squarely, unless we are realistic enough to admit that peace or war ultimately depends on the large powers, not the small powers, we shall again build our castle of peace in the clouds instead of on solid ground; and if we do that, it will some day vanish into thin air."

Agreement among the United States, the British Commonwealth, the Soviet Union and China, Mr. Butler asserted, is "absolutely vital, if any kind of organization for the maintenance of peace is to operate effectively." He said the Dumbarton Oaks conference was a good beginning.

Mr. Butler said that the governments of the American, British and Russian people must be the "senior partners in the new peace organization."

"It is the will of these three great peoples to work together which will decide whether the new organization gets going and keeps going," Mr. Butler continued. "That means, the will of the man in the street and the man on the farm, of the woman in the kitchen or the office or factory. If they make up their minds that there will be co-operation between them and their partners in the peace enterprise, then their governments will really work hard to bring that co-operation about."

MONTGOMERY'S BROTHER PAYS VISIT TO ATLANTA

NOV 18 1944

ATLANTA, Nov. 17—(AP) Chaplain Colin R. Montgomery, brother of Field Marshal Bernard L. Montgomery, came here today to thank a group of Atlanta Sunday school boys who prayed for the British commander during the battle of El Alamein.

Chaplain Montgomery flew here from Charleston in an army plane. He came to America on the first British hospital ship to bring American wounded to Charleston.

He said Marshal Montgomery wrote him that of all the thousands of letters he received after the El Alamein victory, the one that touched him most was the letter from Atlanta telling of prayers for victory and the safety of the Marshal by members of the Capital View Methodist church class.

The marshal prized the letter so highly he sent it to the chaplain for safekeeping.

$675 Of War Bonds Burned By Club Of 27 Plane Workers

Miami, Fla., Nov. 17 (AP)—The nation's debt to 27 war-bond owners went up in smoke today when members of the Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corporation's "Bond Fire Club" voluntarily tossed $675 worth of certificates into a blaze.

Pretty girls in slacks and their masculine war plant coworkers whooped merrily as the flames licked crisp new $675, E certificates from their fingers.

Red-headed Marge Ensley brushed the charred bits from her hands and nodded with satisfaction.

"It's a swell idea. I hope it catches fire all over the country," she said.

Hopes Idea Will Spread

The idea for the "Bond Fire Club" originated amid the clatter of rivet guns and drop hammers of the assembly line by "spontaneous combustion," said Edward Vines, civilian inspector for the navy.

"I thought maybe he'd think it crazy when I mentioned it to Harold Harrison, production foreman, but he liked the idea," Vines said. Then he added, "others did, too."

The result was the founding of the country's first "Bond Fire Club," which Vines hopes will have chapters in every part of the nation.

In Memory Of War Heroes

In dedicating their bonds to the fire "as a gift to the people of the United States" today, the 27 charter members made this pledge:

"By renouncing the potential future material luxuries represented by the value of the bond, a real gesture of appreciation can be made in remembrance of the many noble acts and heroic sacrifices of others who have thus dedicated themselves to the civilization of humanity."

Each member of the "Bond Fire Club" earns the right to consign a bond to the fire by purchasing a replacement of like value.

A Treasury Department spokesman said there was no legal prohibition against the burning of war bonds.

He indicated that the department would not formally encourage such eliminations.

Brazil To Be Big U. S. Market

Miami, Fla., Nov. 17 (AP)—Brazil will furnish the largest post-war market in Latin America for United States merchandise, said Cyril Winton Nave, vice-president and general manager of the Atlantic Refining Company of Philadelphia, who arrived from Rio de Janeiro last night.

HERO HAD CLOSE CALL

Miami Beach, Fla., Nov. 17 (A. P.). — Mississippi's one - man army, Lieut. Van T. Barfoot, is living on borrowed time, but he's enjoying every minute of it.

The tall, shy officer won the Congressional Medal of Honor, the nation's highest award, for capturing seventeen Germans, killing seven others, wiping out two machine gun nests and knocking out an enemy tank, single-handed. He admits he isn't anxious to get back into combat.

Today at the Miami Beach A. A. F. Redistribution Station, he disclosed other skirmishes in which he cheated death by a narrow margin.

At Anzio, Lieut. Barfoot, then a staff sergeant, was marching a Jerry prisoner ahead of him. "The moon was shining bright," he recalled. "But when I felt a pistol in my back and heard a Jerry bark at me, I began to give my heart to God."

He squeezed the trigger of his tommy gun, felling the German in front of him, then whirled around and got the enemy at his back.

"I first met Hitler in Munich," he said. "Later at the outdoor festivals at the Templehof Field in Germany, I was able to get the first talking picture ever made of him. I had the opportunity to talk with him several times after that. They were conversations in which I had no part at all. He talked constantly and always in exaggerated, demonstrative fashion.

"Later I met Mussolini and found that instead of ranting as Hitler did, he asked question after question. He seemed to have the greatest curiosity of any man I've ever met."

YANK DESCRIBES HITLER'S RANTING

Miami, Fla., Nov. 17 (A. P.).— The first news reel photographer ever to make a sound motion picture of Adolf Hitler said today that Der Fuehrer rants and raves but that Benito Mussolini asks questions.

John S. Connally, news reel director for the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, described his experiences as European director for an American news reel company.

reported, difficulty was being encountered in wording this agreement in formal language so that it will be expressed satisfactorily to all.

Knox declared that the final result would be an international aviation body with some regulation of the amount of flying which should be done, leaving wide latitude for initiative and development and a plan for avoiding cutthroat competition by putting a floor under rates and fares.

SURVIVAL OF PAC IS RECOMMENDED

CIO Board Votes For Continuing Its Political Unit

Chicago, Nov. 17 (AP)—The CIO Political Action Committee, which Chairman Sidney Hillman said would be able "to do a much more effective job" in the 1946 elections, won a recommendation of "full confidence" today from the CIO executive board, but its continued existence depends upon approval by the national convention next week.

The board recommended to the convention that the PAC be continued and that the present officers headed by Hillman be kept in their jobs.

"Combated Isolationism"

The board's action was announced at a joint press conference with Hillman and CIO President Philip Murray. The latter said the board action constituted a vote of "full confidence" in the PAC's work.

Hillman asserted his committee, in the recent national election, "had combated isolationism and other reactionary forces tied up with isolationism" and had made "a very great contribution to that defeat."

He said one of the PAC's major objectives would be to continue to emphasize registering and voting as a civic responsibility, and both Hillman and Murray asserted there had been "no mandatory assessments" on CIO members for support of the committee.

Funds Being Thawed Out

PAC funds totaling $225,000, frozen by election laws during the campaign, are being thawed out.

Air Delegates' Hope For Pact Remain High

Chicago, Nov. 17 (AP)—Hopes that three proposals for regulating future air traffic between nations could be merged for a successful conclusion to the International Civil Aviation Conference held firm today despite reports of new delays in drafting a document to reconcile British, Canadian and American views.

Although one official said that the initial presentation of the compromise—some conferees refer to it as an adjustment—would be made this week, another official in the same delegation took a less optimistic view and said it might not be possible to act so soon.

Quick Action Predicted

Others, however, felt that the drafting job could be finished and submitted to the 54-nation meeting at a hastily summoned plenary session before the day ends.

The job is one of writing in language acceptable to the three leading delegations a description of the middle course toward a world aviation authority on which the British, Canadians and Americans have agreed in principle.

The British and Canadians, determined to have some sort of economic controls—regulation of the business itself—faced a United States delegation convinced there should be no such controls at this time, and willing to grant a world agency powers only in the administration of technical standards and procedures.

General Agreement

Both views have been eased off toward a middle course, it is reported, and general agreement has been achieved on each of the problems. As the situation was last

Hillman reported, and will be used for educational activities.

Murray told reporters "PAC is not a third party, it is a thoroughly independent movement which will seek election of candidates for public offices who are fair and disposed to be friendly to the common people regardless of party."

The National Citizens Political Committee, Murray said, would decide for itself, at a Chicago meeting November 25, whether to continue operations. This group, active in the election, was set up independently of the CIO because the Smith-Connally Act bars direct contributions from labor organizations to campaign funds.

Army To Double B-29 Output, Says Knudsen

Fort Crook, Neb., Nov. 17 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. William S. Knudsen, director of the Air Technical Service Command with headquarters at Dayton, Ohio, said today the army is aiming "to double its production of B-29 bombers in the next three months."

Describing the Superfortress as "worth its weight in gold," General Knudsen said at a press conference at the Glenn L. Martin-Nebraska Company plant where the giant bomber is built that the production of B-29's must be intensified because "it is the quickest and best means to smash Japan."

General Knudsen, who in peacetime is a top executive of the General Motors Corporation, thumped the table with his fist when he said: "We need more B-29's than ever before. . . . Just as the B17's and the B-24's wrecked German production from the air, so must the B-29's wreck Japanese production."

Hometown's No. 1 Auto Tag Sent To Bradley

Moberly, Mo., Nov. 17 (AP)—City officials are sending city car license No. 1 for 1945 to Gen. Omar N. Bradley with the hope that before it is outdated it will go into Berlin on the general's jeep.

Dr. F. L. McCormick, Mayor, gave up his claim to the No. 1 sticker so it could be sent to the general, a native of Moberly.

Italian War Prisoners' Spaghetti Withheld

Omaha, Nov. 17 (AP)—There was no spaghetti today for several hundred Italian prisoners of war here who refused to work at army installations.

A restricted diet put into effect when the work stoppage continued does not include their favorite dish, the Seventh Service Command disclosed. Previously the Italians had been consuming "more than the usual amount" of spaghetti, the army said.

The restrictive diet is being carried out under supervision of army medical officers so that it does not constitute a threat to the health of the prisoners of war, the army said. The dispute began when Italians employed at Fort Crook, near here, objected to "certain working conditions" and thereafter spread to all army installations here at which they had been working, it was added.

Whole Blood Shipment

San Francisco, Nov. 17 (AP)—The first shipment of whole blood destined to save the lives of front-line fighters has left by plane for the Philippines.

Eighty pints packed in five boxes inaugurated the new whole blood service yesterday, made possible by fast transit and special refrigerating devices. Previously, less-potent plasma was the only transfusion material available to the central Pacific forces.

AFTER 200 HOURS WITH THE RAF THEY TRIED TO GROUND HIM FOR A REST, BUT BLAKESLEE REBELLED AND TOOK COMMAND OF ONE OF THE FAMOUS EAGLE SQUADRONS.

HE TRANSFERRED TO THE AMERICAN AIRFORCE IN SEPTEMBER, 1942, AND BECAME COMMANDER OF THE FOURTH FIGHTER GROUP IN JANUARY OF THIS YEAR.

NOV 18 1944

THE OUTFIT HAD ABOUT 100 PLANES AND HAD BEEN FLYING SPITFIRES AND THUNDERBOLTS WHEN BLAKESLEE TOOK OVER. HE ASKED FOR MUSTANGS AND GOT THEM FROM MAJ. GEN. WILLIAM E. KEPNER, CHIEF F EIGHTH FIGHTER COMMAND.

NOV 18 1944

IN TOPPLING FUZESABONY THE RUSSIANS KILLED 1,000 GERMANS AND HUNGARIS AND CAPTURED 500, MOSCOW'S MIDNIGHT SUPPLEMENTAL BULLETIN SAID, AND ALSO KNOCKED OUT 13 GERMAN TANKS AND MOBILE GUNS AND CAPTURED LARGE QUANTITIES OF EQUIPMENT.

RED AIR FORCE PLANES, TAKING TO THE AIR OVER HUNGARY IN IMPROVING WEATHER, BAGGED 36 PLANES DURING THE DAY, IT SAID. #

"GENERAL, I GIVE YOU MY WORD I'LL HAVE 'EM ON OPERATION IN 24 HOURS," SAID BLAKESLEE. HE DID.

DURING MARCH THE GROUP DESTROYED 158 ENEMY AIRCRAFT AND THE FIERY COLONEL SAID:

"I'M EITHER GOING TO HAVE THE BEST DAMN GROUP IN THE ETO OR THERE WON'T BE ANYBODY LEFT BUT ME. ON APRIL 30 WE'RE GOING TO HAVE A PARTY AND CELEBRATE THE DESTRUCTION OF OUR 500TH JERRY."

THEY HAD THE PARTY WITH SEVEN PLANES TO SPARE.

BLAKESLEE'S GROUP PRODUCED THREE OF THE GREATEST FIGHTER PILOTS OF THE WAR. THERE WAS MAJ. DON S. GENTILE FROM PIQUA, OHIO, THE FIRST MAN TO DESTROY 30 GERMAN PLANES. MAJ. DUANE W. BEESON OF BOISE, IDAHO, HAD 23 JERRIES WHEN HE WAS CAPTURED. CAPT. JOHN T. GODFREY OF WOONSOCKET, R.I., WAS IN THE GROUP AND HIS RECORD OF 36 PLANES STILL TOPS THIS THEATER, EVEN THOUGH GODFREY HAS BEEN A PRISONER SINCE AUGUST AND UNABLE TO DEFEND HIS LAURELS.

NOV 18 1944

BLAKESLEE WAS HOME FOR A SHORT VACATION DURING SEPTEMBER BUT RETURNED AHEAD OF SCHEDULE, FEARING SOMEONE MIGHT INVENT A NEW JOB THAT WOULD KEEP HIM FROM FLYING. HE FLEW A FEW MORE MISSIONS AND THEN GOT THE BAD NEWS.

ONCE GEN. DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER WAS ABOUT TO PIN A SECOND DSC ON BLAKESLEE TO GO WITH HIS TWO SILVER STARS, FOUR AIR MEDALS, ONE BRITISH AND SEVEN AMERICAN DISTINGUISHED FLYING CROSSES.

EISENHOWER WAS JUST DOING THE HONORS WHEN GEN. KEPNER REMARKED, "YOU KNOW DON LIVES IN CONSTANT FEAR THAT SOME SO AND SO IS GOING TO STOP HIM FLYING."

LONDON, NOV 17-(AP)-MORE THAN 3,500 BOMBERS, THE GREATEST AIR FLEET EVER TO GO INTO A SINGLE ACTION IN DIRECT SUPPORT OF AN ARMY, BLASTED THE APPROACHES TO THE RHINE FOR FIVE HOURS YESTERDAY IN OPENING GEN.DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER'S WINTER OFFENSIVE.

GERMAN WESTWALL TROOPS AND DEFENSES IN FRONT OF THREE ALLIED ARMIES WERE BOMBARDED WITH MORE THAN 13,000 TONS OF EXPLOSIVES AND FIELD DISPATCHES SAID THAT BEFORE NIGHTFALL HUNDREDS OF STUNNED NAZI PRISONERS HAD BEEN TAKEN.

WHILE THE WEATHER WAS NOT ALTOGETHER FAVORABLE, THE ATTACK WAS DESCRIBED AS MORE EFFECTIVE AND BETTER CONCENTRATED IN PLACES THAN AT EITHER CAEN OR SAINT LO, WHERE SIMILAR CARPET BOMBINGS TOUCHED OFF SPECTACULAR LAND OFFENSIVES.

TOGETHER THEY HAMMERED A HUGE ARC AROUND THE GEILENKIRCHEN SECTOR, RAIDING AT LEAST 12 GERMAN TOWNS, MILES OF HIGHWAYS ALONG WHICH ENEMY TROOPS WERE DUG IN, DOZENS OF GUN POSITIONS AND COMMUNICATIONS FACILITIES.

MOST OF THE BOMBERS DROPPED 260-POUND FRAGMENTATION BOMBS RATHER THAN MISSLES OF HEAVIER WEIGHTS SO AS NOT TO CRATER THE GROUND AND IMPEDE THE ADVANCE OF TROOPS.

SOME OF THE ESCORTING FIGHTERS STRAFED ENEMY TRANSPORT IN THE FRANKFURT AND GIESEN REGIONS, DESTROYING 20 LOCOMOTIVES, 92 RAILWAY CARS AND THREE TRUCKS.

THE MASSIVE ATTACKS WENT UNCHALLENGED BY THE GERMAN AIR FORCE. OUT OF ALL THE U.S. EIGHTH AND NINTH AIR FORCE PLANES PARTICIPATING, FIVE HEAVY BOMBERS AND 12 FIGHTERS WERE REPORTED MISSING. RAF LOSSES WERE NOT ANNOUNCED IMMEDIATELY.

U.S. 15TH AIR FORCE BOMBERS FROM ITALY, WHICH GAVE AN ASSIST TO THE WESTERN DRIVE YESTERDAY WITH AN ATTACK ON RAILWAY YARDS AT MUNICH, WERE REPORTED OVER THE LOWER DANUBE-REGION AGAIN TODAY.

LONDON, NOV 17-(AP)-THE JAPANESE SAVED THEIR OWN NATIONALS FROM A SINKING TRANSPORT OFF SINGAPORE IN SEPTEMBER BUT LEFT 1,300 BRITISH AND AUSTRALIAN PRISONERS OF WAR TO DIE IN THE SEA, WAR SECRETARY SIR JAMES GRIGG TOLD THE HOUSE OF COMMONS TODAY.

AMERICAN SUBMARINE CREWS WHICH TORPEDOED THE TRANSPORT RISKED THEIR LIVES TO SAVE THE PRISONERS, BUT A MAJORITY DROWNED, HE SAID. ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY SURVIVORS HAVE ARRIVED IN ENGLAND.

THE PRISONERS WERE THE SURVIVORS OF A JAPANESE RAILROAD BUILDING PROJECT IN SIAM AND BURMA, WHERE DISEASE AND LIVING CONDITIONS WERE REPORTED "TERRIBLE" AND AT LEAST ONE IN FIVE DIED.

"WE HAVE ASKED THE PROTECTING POWER (SWITZERLAND) TO MAKE THE STRONGEST POSSIBLE PROTEST," THE WAR SECRETARY SAID. "IT IS NECESSARY THAT THE JAPANESE SHOULD KNOW THAT WE KNOW HOW THEY HAVE BEEN BEHAVING AND THAT WE INTEND TO HOLD THEM RESPONSIBLE."

THE GERMAN REASONS FOR FIRING TOWNS HAS PUZZLED THE AMERICANS. THE GERMANS MAY HAVE HAD THE HOPE OF DELAYING THE SEVENTH ARMY BY DENYING THEM BUILDINGS AS WINTER QUARTERS.

IF THAT WAS THE REASON, THE SCORCHED EARTH POLICY FAILED BECAUSE THE AMERICANS WERE EQUIPPED TO CARRY ON THEIR OFFENSIVE WITHOUT USING BUILDINGS. BESIDES, THE YANKS HAVE NO INTENTION OF PAUSING LONG IN ANY FRENCH TOWNS ENROUTE TO GERMANY.

TO REACH THE VICINITY OF ST.DIE, WE PASSED THROUGH SEVERAL TOWNS FROM WHICH THE GERMANS WERE DRIVEN ONLY A FEW DAYS AGO. SOME WERE ALMOST COMPLETELY DESTROYED BY ARTILLERY AND BOMBS. WITH THE U.S. THIRD ARMY, NOV 17-(AP)-A CAPTURED GERMA[redacted]D TODAY THAT THE NAZI COMMANDER AT METZ WAS PREPARING THE FO[redacted]SS CITY FOR A LAST DITCH BATTLE AND GESTAPO GUNS WERE PREVENTING ITS EVACUATION.

TANK TRAPS ARE BEING DUG AND THE STREETS ARE STRUNG WITH WIRE AND BLOCKED WITH BARRIERS, THE PRISONER REPORTED, INDICATING THE POSSIBILITY OF ANOTHER BLOODY STAND SIMILAR TO THAT BY THE NAZI GARRISON AT BREST.

IF THE METZ COMMANDER CAN COMPEL ALL-OUT RESISTANCE THE FIGHT FOR THE CITY, WITH ITS FORMIDABLE DEFENSES, COULD BE PRO-LONGED FOR WEEKS. THIS WOULD MAKE NECESSARY THE WRECKING OF THE CITY TO ATTAIN ITS CAPTURE.

METZ AIRPORT, FRANCE, NOV. 17-(AP)-STREET FIGHTING WITHOUT STREETS IS SLOWLY CLEARING THE GERMANS FROM THE FRINGE OF BUILDINGS AROUND TH AIRPORT, BUT IT IS SLOW, DANGEROUS GOING AGAINST AN ENEMY WHO KNOWS HOW TO FIRE HIS WEAPONS EVEN THOUGH HE HAS LITTLE TASTE FOR IN-FIGHTING.

NOV 18 1944

"WHEN WE GET AT THEM THEY GIVE UP QUICKLY, BUT THEY GIVE UU HELL WHILE WE ARE TRYING TO CLOSE WITH THEM," SAID PFC GENE LAVELLE OF 953 AMHERST ST., BUFFALO, N.Y.

"THE FELLOWS WE'VE BEEN CAPTURING ARE MAINLY OLDER MEN WHO HAD BEEN RUSHED INTO THE LINE, BUT THEY'RE WELL EQUIPPED WITH WEAPONS, NEW UNIFORMS AND SUPPLIES AND THEY KEEP SHOOTING UNTIL WE GET CLOSE," AGREED PFC PAUL M.LEA OF 5803 UNION ST., CHICAGO.

ELEMENTS OF THE FIFTH DIVISION'S 11TH INFANTRY REGIMENT BEGAN A NORTHEASTWARD PUSH AGAINST THE ARC OF HANGARS AND AIRPORT BUILDINGS ALONG THE NORTHERN EDGE OF FRESCATY AIRFIELD EARLY TODAY FROM A FARM A MILE NORTHWEST OF AUGNY.

WHEN WE CAME UP TO A COMMAND POST IN A WRECKED BUILDING ABOUT 14 DOUGHBOYS HAD CLEARED HALF A DOZEN BIG BUILDINGS, PROGRESSING SOME 80(YARDS AND TAKING SEVERAL DOZEN PRISONERS.

THE FIRST THING THE AMERICANS RAN INTO AFTER LEAVING THE FARM AND STARTING ACROSS AN OPEN FIELD TOWARD THE WOODS FRINGING THE AIRFIELD WAS A BATTERY OF SIX DUG-IN 75 MM GUNS WHICH HELD THEM AT BAY WITH POINT BLANK FIRE UNTIL OUR ARTILLERY COULD BEAT THEM ENOUGH SO THE INFANTRYMEN COULD CLOSE IN.

THEN THEY SHOVED ON INTO THE WOODS AND FOUND THEMSELVES EXPOSED TO

FIRE FROM ACROSS THE NORTHERN END OF THE LANDING GROUND BY 20 MM CANNONS, 88S AND MACHINE GUNS. WHILE THIS CAME IN FROM THE RIGHT THERE WAS SMALL ARMS FIRE FROM THE GERMANS DIRECTLY AHEAD AND SNIPING FROM MORE ENEMY FORCES IN THE WOODS.

AGAIN THERE WAS WORK FOR MORTARS AND ARTILLERY AND "THOSE FELLOWS ON THOSE GUNS REALLY DID GREAT WORK AND GAVE US A CHANCE TO GET ALONG WITH THE JOB," SAID CAPT.ROBERT H.WILLIAMS, FORMER SCHOOL TEACHER FROM HENDERSON, KY., WHOSE UNIT L D OFF THE ATTACK.

SEEKING BATTALION COMMANDER MAJ.HERMAN SCHELL OF BATTLE CREEK, MICH., WE MOVED UP PAST SHELL-SCARRED GRAY BRICK HANGARS BUILT WITHIN THE LAST FEW YEARS AND CAME TO THE ADMINISTRATION BUILDING. ITS UPPER FLOORS WERE TORN TO PIECES AND PARTIALLY BURNED BY OUR SHELL FIRE, BUT THE COMMODIOUS BASEMENT WAS PACKED WITH CASES OF AMMUNITION.

THERE WE FOUND THAT THE MAJOR WAS A COUPLE OF HUNDRED YARDS FARTHE ON IN A FRONT LINE DUGOUT WITH CAPT.FORREST RALEY OF ANCHORAGE, KY., WHOSE "C" COMPANY HAD TAKEN OVER A SPEARHEAD POSITION.

RALEY'S RUNNER, CORP.CHARLES DOLCH OF LITTLE FALLS, N.Y., TOLD HOW "C" COMPANY CLEANED OUT THE BUILDING WE WERE IN AT 11 A.M., TAKING 16 PRISONERS WITHOUT HAVING TO KILL ONE DESPITE ALL THE TROUBLE IN GETTING THERE.

NOV 18 1944

"THEY WERE MOSTLY OLD AND WE HEARD THEY HAD BEEN ON MILITARY POLIC JOBS BEFORE BEING RUSHED INTO THE LINES," DOLCH SAID.

FROM THE COMMAND ROOM LT.HAROLD BRYANT OF 872 RIVER ST., TROY, N.Y., DIRECTED A HEAVY MORTAR PLATOON WHICH WAS PASTING THE NEXT BUILDING AHEAD OF THE DOUGHBOYS. LT.HAROLD J.TAYLOR OF GREEN BAY, WIS., A QUIET YOUNG FELLOW NOT LONG OUT OF ST.NORBERT COLLEGE, WAITED TO LEAD HIS "A" COMPANY.

A FEW WRECKED AND BURNED PLANES WERE SCATTERED ON THE OPEN LANDING GROUNDS, WHICH WERE A GREEN DESERTED NO MAN'S LAND ACROSS WHICH THE AMERICANS' 57 MM ANTI-TANK GUNS POURED POINT BLANK FIRE INTO THE HANGARS ON THE NORTHWESTERN EDGE OF THE FIELD.

MANY MORE PLANES--ABOUT 20--WERE IN THE WOODS AROUND THE EDGES OF THE FIELD, WHICH OBVIOUSLY WAS AN IMPORTANT ONE TO THE GERMANS.

THESE MEN UP HERE FIGHTING THE BATTLE OF METZ ARE DIRTY, UNSHAVEN AND TIRED AS ONLY FRONTLINE TROOPS CAN GET, BUT ALL SEEMED CONFIDENT THEY WOULD BE IN METZ BEFORE TOO LONG, ALTHOUGH NONE WAS UNDERESTIMATING THE OBSTACLES.

PARIS, NOV.17-(AP)-DISSENSION AMONG EXILED ANTI-FRANCO SPANIARDS AROSE TONIGHT WITH THE ANNOUNCEMENT FROM THE LEFT-WING SPANISH NATIONAL UNION THAT IT WOULD NOT PARTICIPATE IN ANY NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE PRESENT SPANISH REGIME AND THAT "VIOLENCE MUST BE ANSWERED BY VIOLENCE."

MIGUEL MAURA, CONSERVATIVE REPUBLICAN LEADER, OPENED CONVERSATIONS THIS WEEK WITH JOSE ANTONIO DE SAN GRONIZ, SPANISH AMBASSADOR TO ROME VISITING IN PARIS, ABOUT POSSIBLE NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE FRANCO REGIME IN ORDER TO EFFECT SOME COMPROMISE THAT WOULD AVERT A POSSIBLE RESUMPTION OF THE SPANISH CIVIL WAR. ROME, NOV. 17—(AP)— SGT. TOM MCRAE, OF THE ARMY NEWSPAP STARS AND STRIPES, A POLICE REPORTER FOR THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION IN CIVILIAN LIFE, HAS BEEN AWARDED THE BRONZE STAR BY THE 91ST DIVISION. BUT THE MAN TALKING LEAST ABOUT IT IS TOM MCRAE.

THE AWARD WAS MADE FOR "EXCELLENCY IN ACTION" SOME TIME AGO, BUT NOT EVEN THE STARS AND STRIPES WOULD HAVE KNOWN ABOUT IT X IF SGT. JACK FOISIE, A FRONTLINE REPORTER FROM SAN FRANCISCO, HAD NOT COME ACROSS THE CITATION AND WIRED HIS EDITOR, SGT. DAVE GOLDING OF NEW YORK.

EVEN THEN MCRAE, WHO WON THE AWARD ON HIS FIRST TRIP TO THE FRONT, REFUSED TO TELL WHAT IT WAS FOR. IT TURNS OUT HE HAD BEEN UNDE SHELLFIRE WITH THE INFANTRY FOR THREE STRAIGHT WEEKS DURING THE BREAK-THROUGH OF THE MIDDLE GOTHIC LINE IN SEPTEMBER TO GET A STORY FOR THE SOLDIER NEWSPAPER.

NOV 18 1944

HE DID NOT HAVE TO BE THERE, BUT [redacted] HE HAD ASKED FOR A FRONTLINE REPORTER'S ASSIGNMENT AFTER A YEAR AS NEWS EDITOR OF STARS AND STRIPES EDITIONS IN ALGIERS AND NAPLES, AND HE FIGURED THAT WAS THE BEST PLACE TO BE TO GET THE STORY.

ONE AMERICAN FORCE, ELEMENTS OF THE 24TH INFANTRY DIVISION, APPROACHED LIMON FROM THE WEST AND WAS WITHIN ABOUT HALF A MILE OF THE TOWN, REPORTED AP CORRESPONDENT FRED HAMPSON. HE IS WITH THE 24TH DIVISION.

OTHER UNITS ADVANCING ON THE EASTERN SIDE, HOWEVER, WERE HELD UP BY STUBBORNLY RESISTING JAPANESE ENTRENCHED IN RAVINES AND GULLIES.

APPARENTLY THE YANKS HAD VIRTUAL CONTROL OF BREAKNECK RIDGE, SCENE OF BITTER FIGHTING FOR MANY DAYS. LIMON LIES IN A VALLEY SOUTH OF THE RIDGE.

THE JAPANESE POSITION IN LIMON WAS FURTHER ENDANGERED BY A FLANKING MOVE WHICH PLACED AMERICAN TROOPS IN THEIR REAR, TWO AND A HALF MILES SOUTH OF LIMON. THIS FORCE HAD NOT BEEN ABLE TO CUT THE HIGHWAY, HAMPSON SAID, BECAUSE OF HEAVY ENEMY CONCENTRATIONS ON A COMMANDING HILLSIDE.

AMERICAN HEAVY ARTILLERY KEPT THE ORMOC ROAD AND CORRIDOR UNDER FIRE AND LIBERATION FORCES TO THE EAST AND SOUTH OF ORMOC CONTINUED TO TIGHTEN THEIR ENVELOPMENT OF THE ENEMY'S ESCAPE PORT. HEAVY TROPICAL RAINS RESTRICTED OPERATIONS.

OCCUPATION OF THE MAPIA ISLANDS, OFF THE COAST OF NORTHWEST NEW GUINEA, PROCEEDED SATISFACTORILY. GEN.DOUGLAS MACARTHUR ANNOUNCED THAT PEGUN, THE FIRST OF THE ISLAND GROUP TO BE INVADED WEDNESDAY, HAD BEEN COMPLETELY OCCUPIED. HIS FORCES THEN SPILLED OVER TO ADJOINING BRAS ISLAND, WHERE ENEMY REMNANTS WERE BEING ELIMINATED.

PURPOSE OF THE MAPIA INVASION IS TO REMOVE ENEMY OBSERVERS WHO HAVE KEPT A CLOSE WATCH ON ALLIED AERIAL OPERATIONS. THE ISLANDS ARE UNIMPORTANT EXCEPT AS OBSERVATION OUTPOSTS. NOV 181944

Patton Drives Into Germany, Fights in Metz; British Strike Nazis in ...orth a Surprise Blow

COMBINED FORCES RIP ENEMY LINES IN GREAT BATTLE

Allies Drive Deep Salient Toward Roer River Near Geilenkirchen.

SMASH INTO METZ

Fighters, Bombers Support Ground Troops in All-Out Offensive.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Sunday, Nov. 19.—(AP) One British and two American armies were smashing their way toward the heart of the Rhineland today in one of the greatest battles of the war against German resistance stiffened by desperation.

The American Ninth and British Second armies, in a collaboration so close that it was described here as "a blended operation," had driven a deep salient toward the river Roer between Geilenkirchen and Aachen.

On their right flank, southeast of Aachen, the American First army was making slow but steady progress against the grimmest sort of enemy opposition.

This three-army attack on a front some 30 miles wide developed into one of the war's biggest drives.

Farther south the American Third army also had invaded the Reich and had fought into the French fortress city of Metz. The American Seventh and French First armies recorded good gains in the Vosges and Belfort regions.

It was the great Rhineland drive, however, that held the spotlight.

The best weather since the start of the Western front offensive enabled both strategic and tactical air forces to give their strongest support yet to the ground forces. Ninth air force Lightnings and Thunderbolts attacked as close as 200 yards ahead of the troops in bitter fighting east of Aachen.

Fighterbombers intervened in at least one tank battle in that area, striking German armor at such close range that the pilots reported seeing the grass wilt before the muzzle-fire of the tank guns.

The Allied troops, wheeling into Germany after their descent from the north, spread over the Geilenkirchen area, cut the main road to the north, captured Niederheide, reached the outskirts of Prummern, two miles east of Geilenkirchen, and captured Puffendorf, 4 1-2 miles southeast of Geilenkirchen in what was described as "blended operations" by British and Americans.

Yanks Make New Gains

To the southeast of Aachen American First army forces made new gains up to a kilometer against heavy artillery and mortar fire in the Wurselen area and up to two kilometers around Stolberg, while in the Hurtgen forest other First army troops advanced slowly through minefields and barbed wire.

To the south, Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's U. S. Third army swept into the Reich in force and began house-to-house warfare inside the fortress city of Metz in France. The break across the border was made near Perl, near where the territories of France, Luxembourg and Germany meet and it carried Third army units a mile inside Germany. They are pointed toward the Saar basin.

Still farther south the French First army smashed deep into the Belfort Gap after taking the strong point of Montbeliard, where 7,000 Germans were captured, and enemy dispositions were upset along a 25-mile sector.

The French tonight were reported to have reached Delle, 10 miles southeast of Belfort on the Swiss frontier. They are less than five miles from Belfort southwest of that city.

The American Seventh army in gains up to 20 miles captured the Muerthe river town of Raon Le Tape, continued pressure at St. Die, and saw nine villages—Moyenmoutier, La Hollande, Etival, Marzelay, Tetedesan-Roche, Gratin, Rabache, Remenix, and La Planchette — go up in flames as the Germans applied the scorched earth policy before retiring.

While the drive through the Aachen gateway obviously was the biggest of the Allied pushes, the potential menace of the others is a problem to the hard-pressed Germans who can leave no part of the long front from the North Sea to the border of Switzerland unguarded against the avalanche of pressure.

Nazis Hit Back

The Germans lunged back with counterattacks against the Ninth and First armies and at other points, but all their efforts were beaten back.

It was on the Ninth army front that observers said the Nazis were evidently forcing a show-down fight. Up to the line protecting Germany's coal-mining center, the Nazis were bringing all the artillery, tanks and other equipment they could muster.

British troops in the Venlo sector sped up their advance toward the Maas as the Germans, now holding only a narrow strip along the river, apparently were pulling out. The Second tactical Air force bombed a bridge at Venlo and other escape spans from the area, and latest reports from the front said land forces were racing toward Helden, eight miles southwest of Venlo.

The Third army mechanized cavalry which crossed into Germany from the Thionville sector tonight had occupied Perl and Oberperl, and according to a front dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent Lewis Hawkins had pressed on to Sehndorf, a mile and a half inside Germany.

Yanks Enter Lamstroff

Other Third army forces driving squarely eastward from the Thionville region still were on French soil, but entered Lamstroff, a half-mile west of the border, also took Halstroff and Ritzing, and were attacking Waldweistroff tonight. According to Hawkins, this force pushed from two to three miles ahead along a 10-mile front.

Four hundred Mustangs and Thunderbolts of the Eighth Air force flew into southern Germany, attacking oil installations and other objectives in the Munich area, and elsewhere shot down 20 enemy planes in combat and destroyed or damaged 17 others, including jet planes, on the ground at Leipheim airfield.

The Ninth Air force flew 1,450 sorties, by far the greatest number of any day since the start of the offensive.

In one case Thunderbolts released American infantrymen pinned down by fire from mortars 200 yards away by attacking a German position. Fighter-bombers reported knocking out at least eight tanks, and the day's operations cost the Ninth Air force 16 planes.

French Push Deep Into the Belfort Gap

British Ring Bastion on Simpson's Left Flank, Seize Helden in Holland

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The British 2d Army jumped into the battle inside Germany today alongside the United States 1st and 9th Armies. Lieutenant General George S. Patton's 3d Army, in a new invasion of Germany, crossed the border in force while his tanks and infantry fought street by street into Metz.

In a day of whirlwind blows along 175 miles of the 400-mile front the French 1st Army smashed deep into the Belfort Gap, on the historic invasion highway to southwestern Germany, and the American 7th Army, just to the north, launched attacks on a thirty-mile front that drove two to three miles deeper into the Vosges Mountains, guarding the southern Rhineland.

British Seize Helden

From north to south, this was how General Dwight D. Eisenhower's winter offensive was bearing down with the greatest blows since Normandy on the hard-pressed German army:

1. The British 2d Army broke across the Zig Canal defenses and seized Helden, only seven and a half miles from the Germans' Maas River stronghold of Venlo, in southeastern Holland, threatening any enemy stand west of the river. Venlo is two miles from the German border.

2. Seventeen miles south of this front, the British 2d for the first time went over to the attack on the left flank of the American 9th Army, encircling Geilenkirchen in a surprise drive that swept around the city on both sides in gains up to about two miles. Geilenkirchen is a fortified German city twelve miles northwest of Aachen.

3. The United States 9th, just to the south, slugged a mile or two closer to the Roer River barrier to Cologne in a battle which a front dispatch said the Germans called a "war of survival," spending lives and tanks recklessly to prevent a break-through.

Three Towns Overrun

The 9th overran at least three towns—Puffendorf, nine miles inside Germany and six miles from the enemy Roer River base of Julich; Mariadorf, seven miles northeast of Aachen on the road to Julich, and Wurselen, two miles northeast of Aachen. It was estimated that thirty-five enemy tanks had been knocked out in two days' fighting.

4. The American 1st Army, pushing steadily into a maze of pillboxes, wire entanglements, mine fields and tank traps, hammered back a counter-attack near Stolberg, five miles east of Aachen.

5. The United States 3d Army drove a mile and a half into Germany, capturing the frontier town of Perl and Ober-Perl and reaching Sehndorf, near the junction of the German and Luxemburg borders. To the southeast, armored forces pushed along a ten-mile front to within one to three miles of the frontier of the Saar industrial basin, driving freely through the old Maginot line fortifications.

U.S. THIRD AND BRITISH PUSH ACROSS BORDER

Americans Battle Foe in Streets of Metz—Nazis Fight Fiercely in Aachen Zone—1,250,000 Men in Allied Drive.

London, Nov. 18 (A. P.).—British Second Army troops have struck the enemy flank in Germany thirteen miles above the American sector at Aachen, a front dispatch disclosed tonight, while to the south infantrymen of the American Third Army fought house-to-house inside Metz.

The British Second and the American Ninth and First armies, forming a solid assault arc, hammered out slow gains today against fanatical resistance on the broadening and lengthening Aachen sector.

Disclosure that troops under the British command were fighting in Germany was only one highlight in a series of sensational advances along a 400-mile western front turned into flaming battle by six Allied armies of 1,250,000 men.

Besides battling into Metz—never taken by frontal assault in modern history—the Third Army invaded Germany at a new point near Luxembourg and opened a fifteen-mile-broad attack toward the Reich's northern Saar.

Latest Third Army Gains.

Lewis Hawkins, an Associated Press correspondent with the Third Army, said that those Americans fought another mile into Germany today, closed the Metz escape gap with gunfire after storming into the city and pushed to within from two to three miles of the Saar border on a ten-mile front.

The French at the lower end of the front drove to within sight of Belfort and the strategic gap to southwestern Germany. North of the French sector, the American Seventh Army advanced from two to three miles toward Strasbourg along a thirty-mile front.

British Second Army troops in southeastern Holland scored two major crossings of the Zig Canal, last water barrier before the Maas (Meuse) River bend and the Venlo gateway to Germany.

The British attack in Germany, synchronized with the American offensive, virtually isolated Geilenkirchen, thirteen miles north of Aachen, by advances past the town on both the north and south. The British cut the road from Geilenkirchen to Heinsberg farther north. They also smashed forward nearly two miles in an advance south of the town toward Prummern, two miles east of Geilenkirchen. Three hundred prisoners were taken.

Ninth Advances Slowly.

The American Ninth Army, meanwhile, reported slow but steady gains today in the arc east of Aachen, and the First Army also drove forward against strongly-entrenched Germans.

The Germans were throwing tanks and troops into attempts, reckless to cost, to stem the American advance, fighting for every inch of ground. The greatest advance by the First Army in three days of fighting has been only two and one-half miles, a front dispatch said, but there are indications the Germans have been badly shaken by terrific artillery and air bombardment, and have suffered heavy losses.

Berlin pictured the assault in the Aachen sector as lengthening. The American wedge has been thrust now to within twenty-five miles of the Rhine.

Gen. Patton's army sent mechanized cavalry patrols over the German border near Perl, inside the German border near the junction of the Luxembourg and French frontiers and about five miles northeast of the Saar itself.

Infantry crossed the Moselle bridge into Metz from the north during the night, while other patrols from the south also penetrated the city, where the Germans have been preparing a stiff defense in the streets and the thick stone walls of the houses.

Tank-supported American infantry fought forward house to house inside Metz today, a front-line dispatch said. Streams of American infantrymen flowed around the ancient fortress still manned by motley German defenders stimulated by fanatical S. S. troops. The Yanks fought their way past the long-beleaguered Frescaty Airport and up Nescaty street well inside the inner circle of ancient fortresses.

Mechanized cavalry patrols drove across the German border near Perl, at the corner of the Luxembourg, French and German borders.

At the same time Gen. Patton's new push developed a thrust fifteen miles to the southeast toward the Saar border, and armor newly thrown into the offensive advanced four miles to near Bouzonville, twenty miles northwest of Saarbrucken, chief industrial center of the German valley.

Slightly to the north other armored forces pushed near Filstroff in a three-mile advance to a point but two miles from the German border and only nine miles west of Saarlouis.

On the extreme southern end of the Allied line tanks of the French First Army, smashing into Belfort Gap, overran the fortified town of Montbeliard and took Hericourt, five miles from the city of Belfort, in gains of three to four miles on a thirteen-mile front. Belfort was now within the range of artillery.

North of the French the American Seventh Army lunged forward in a general assault which gained two to three miles all along a thirty-mile front pointed at Strasbourg on the Rhine. The Seventh Army closed in on Blamont, Badonviller and St. Die. Blamont is forty miles due west of Strassbourg.

Fighter-bombers, supporting the ground operations on all sectors of the front, bombed and strafed the enemy from Duren in the Aachen area to Colmar and Mulhouse in the south, hitting fortified towns, gun positions, strong points and other defense positions, as well as front line troops, rail transportation targets and supply dumps.

The German high command said the American First and Ninth armies had attacked as many as 42 times in single sectors. The Nazi communique declared 122 American tanks were shot up in the first two days of the battle.

The Germans apparently were fighting most fiercely near Wurselen, northeast of Aachen. First Army men to the southeast knocked out 10 Nazis pillboxes and repulsed a counterattack near Stolberg.

Bombers Give Support

United States Lightnings and Thunderbolts struck German troops and gunposts in the closest support of the attack yet permitted by weather, and dropped fragmentation bombs on Germans still holding part of Stolberg.

French tanks overran the fortified town of Montbeliard and took Hericourt in gains of three to four miles on a 13-mile front.

The French troops then drove on within sight of Belfort in a series of heavy armored punches beyond Hericourt. The French Moroccan Goumier and FFI warriors met what a general described as only medium resistance. Germans were being captured in large numbers, ragged and hungry.

Another Push For Belfort

Beside pushing up on Belfort from the southwest beyond Hericourt, the French reached within five miles of the city from the south, beyond Montbeliard. On the right flank, other French units struck as far as Delle, near the Swiss frontier.

North of the French the American Seventh Army closed in on Blamont, Badonviller and St. Die. Blamont is 40 miles west of Strasbourg.

At the northern end of the Allied line the British Second Army in its sweep through the Maas river bulge captured Beringen, two and a half miles southeast of Meijel. The British were rapidly developing the threat to Venlo, nine miles to the east.

Farther south the British mopped up remaining pockets of enemy troops and completed their firm hold on the Maas front facing Roermond.

The spectacular advance in the mountains in the south gave the Allies control of the Blamont plateau and a possible entry into the Strasbourg plain.

Seventh Army Gains

In its drive along a front from north of Luneville to south of Bruyers, the United States Seventh Army captured Remoncourt, Domevre, Ancerviller, St. Maurice, Thiaville Taintrux, Chevry and La Nolle, Domevre is two mlies southwest of Blamont.

A front-line dispatch said the Nazis continued their scorched earth policy, burning Le Paire, Hurbache, St. Marguerite, Saulcy-sur-Meurthe and St. Leonard as they withdrew before the advancing Americans.

into the fortress of Metz from the south, patrols stabbed into the fortress from the north, most of its outer ring of forts were surrounded or threatened, and the route of escape east was narrowed to a mile, which was closed by artillery fire.

6. The American 7th Army, hard on the 3d's right flank, seized at least eight towns in its new push, which carried to within three to six miles of the Vosges passes which lead to the Rhine.

7. The French 1st Army, with tanks dealing heavy blows, fought to within sight of Belfort and swung sharply on its right flank in a six-mile gain at the Swiss frontier that sent the Germans into hurried retreat and left large forces surrounded.

The French general staff announced that the 1st Army Corps had captured thirteen towns in the Belfort Gap area. Approximately 7,000 Germans were taken prisoner during the twenty-four-hour period when the French captured Montbeliard.

The French made new crossings of the Doubs River at Audincourt and Abbevillers, upsetting the defense arrangements of German troops along that twenty-five-mile front. For the first time, air support of the French advance came exclusively from a French air force.

British Surprise Foe

The entry of Lieutenant General Miles C. Dempsey's 2d Army into the struggle on the edge of the Cologne plain apparently caught the enemy by surprise, because the British scored good gains despite the mud and an elaborate trench system.

One column was nearing Prummern, two miles east of Geilenkirchen and six miles inside Germany, going into battle under a heavy artillery barrage. Typhoons, blasting with rockets at enemy lines and gun positions, ranged ahead.

Another column cutting around north of Geilenkirchen severed the highway leading north of Heinsberg, taking 300 prisoners. Other British troops turned on Geilenkirchen itself in a one-mile drive which took them within striking distance of the city.

These attacks were closely synchronized with those of the United States 9th Army and the 1st which, despite the fury of the German defenses, drove new dents into the powerful fortifications east of Aachen guarding the way to the Rhine.

A front dispatch said the Germans were expending men and tanks so prodigiously that at the present rate their armies might be bled white and make the pres-ent battle the decisive one of the war.

Crater Hill Is Taken

A counter-attack was beaten back at Stolberg, and four miles northwest at Wurselen the 1st Army knocked out ten pillboxes. American infantry eight miles east of Aachen near Gressenich seized Crater Hill in a half-mile advance after the height had been hammered by artillery and dive-bombers.

The 3d Army sent tanks into Germany for the first time. They were operating around the frontier German village of Perl, above Koenigsmacher. Ten miles each of the Koenigsmacher bridgehead across the Moselle in the same general area, tanks were poking within a mile of the border in the Remeling sector and were ranging nearly ten miles south to near Bouzonville, three miles from the border.

The 7th Army broadened the assault lines southeast of Metz with attacks along a thirty-mile front, from Luneville, near the 3d Army lines, southward to beyond Bruyeres, well into the Vosges. Among the towns captured yesterday were Remoncourt, fifteen miles due east of Nancy, and Domevre and Ancerville, seven miles southeast of Remoncourt.

On the south, the forces of Lieutenant General Alexander M. Patch closed to within two and a half miles of St. Die on the southwest with the capture of Taintrux. St. Die controls one of the Vosges passes, but it lies on the east bank of the formidable Meurthe River.

[A front dispatch reported that St. Die had been burned and dynamited by the Germans.]

German commentators said the direction of this concerted drive was not Cologne at all, but had turned northward toward the lower reaches of the Rhine, the Ruhr Valley, and was threatening to cut behind the German positions facing the British in eastern Holland.

Air Arm Scourges Enemy

The first good break in the weather since the Americans went over to the attack turned loose swarms of fighters and fighter-bombers, which scourged troops and gun points.

Support was so close at times that once fighter-bombers snarled down and dropped fragmentation bombs on a corner of Stolberg, five miles east of Aachen, although the Americans actually hold two thirds of the town.

One counterattack was beaten back at Stolberg, and four miles northwest at Wurselen, the First knocked out ten pillboxes.

Ramming against defenses which the Germans had plenty of time to prepare, infantry, eight miles east of Aachen, near Gressenich, seized "Crater Hill" in a half-mile advance after the height had been hammered by artillery and dive bombers.

BITTER-END FIGHT PUT UP BY NAZIS

Enemy Sells Ground Dearly On Western Front

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Paris Nov. 18 (AP)—Eleven days of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's winter offensive showed today that, whether or not Hitler is at the helm in Germany, enemy soldiers resolutely are obeying his instructions to resist to the end.

In no case has the enemy given up an inch of territory without fighting to the last.

German opposition is fiercest in the battle area east of Aachen, where strongpoints guard the approaches to the plain of Cologne and the Rhine Valley.

At all other points along the long front from Holland to Switzerland, the Germans have clung stubbornly to their positions and Allied gains have been made only after the grimmest of fighting.

Germans Resigned To Losses

The German high command apparently is resigned to seeing unit after unit destroyed in the defense of German soil in the hope that the battle will prove so costly to the Allies that they never will reach Berlin, but themselves will reach the German level of exhaustion.

Uniformed combatants of the Volks militia have been incorporated in German formations, but battalions of "the people's army" have yet to appear in battle.

The Germans, however, apparently have pitted nearly all available regular army strength on the Western front in or just behind the front lines to form a solid human wall of defense.

No World's Record

While this battle may take weeks of the heaviest fighting of the war to decide, the lavish manner in which the enemy high command is expending troops and tanks may bleed him white and make this the decisive blow in the west.

In that event, the battle would be followed by a swift, decisive breakthrough.

A United States First Army front dispatch said the greatest advance made in three days of fighting there had been four kilometers (about 2½ miles) despite the heavy aerial and artillery barrage at the outset which shook the Germans badly.

Surveying the well-prepared positions, protected by barbed wire, pillboxes, antitank defenses and heavy minefields, that lay ahead, a United States First Army staff officer declared:

"There'll be no world records made getting through this stuff."

Bronx Lieutenant Wins Silver Star

With the Thirtieth Infantry Division on the Western Front, Nov. 7 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Lieut. Wallis G. Nash, of 2100 East Tremont avenue, New York, has been awarded the Silver Star for keeping vigil at a German minefield to warn fellow soldiers after a mine had blown off one of his feet.

With the Sixth Army Group in France, Nov. 18 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's troops rolled up gains totaling two miles and captured the key town of Raon-l'Etape on the Meurthe river today as French troops hammered within four miles of Belfort in a large-scale advance rapidly assuming the proportions of a breakthrough.

NAZIS STRIKE BACK AT NINTH

Use "Major Forces" To Halt Strong U. S. Attack

By J. W. GALLAGHER

With United States Ninth Army at Puffendorf, Germany, Nov. 18 (AP)—The Germans threw "major forces," including armored units, against the Ninth Army today in an effort to halt the grinding and bruising advance which gobbled up three more German towns after American artillery broke the back of German counterattacks with some of the greatest barrages of the war.

The whole front throbbed with the thunder of thousands of shells as the artillery took over the task of trying to force a major crack in the German defenses guarding the vital Ruhr.

In its gains of one to two miles, the Ninth captured Puffendorf, six miles west of the enemy rail center of Julich; Mariadorf, seven miles northeast of Aachen on the road to Julich, and Wurselen, two miles northeast of Aachen. The Ninth now is nine miles inside Germany east of Geilenkirchen.

Nazis Forcing Showodwn

Clearing weather allowed maximum air effort and during every moment of the day scores of fighters and bombers dove and twisted over the German lines through some of the heaviest flak seen on this front.

It now is apparent that the Germans are forcing a showdown battle in this coal-mining heart of the Reich. They sent in their crack Ninth Armored Division just northeast of Puffendorf and brought up great quantities of artillery and anti-aircraft guns. They have placed dugin Mark VI tanks along the line in Russian style.

A German counterattack was beaten off at Immendorf, 2½ miles east of Geilenkirchen, with American ground forces destroying nearly a score of tanks while planes hit 15 more today.

Lieut. Gen. William H. Simpson is meeting force with force and for every gun brought up on the German side, the Ninth Army brings up two an dthrows in hundreds of planes for good measure.

Brogan Digs Deep

Corporal Patrick Brogan, of Buffalo, N. Y., and I dug deep into a soggy slag heap from which we were watching the advance when the Germans cut loose on our perch with several 105 shells.

We saw one quick American barrage set fire to Apweiler, east of Geilenkirchen and leav its church steeple twisting drunkenly in the air. There is scarcely one church spire intact on either side of the line because both sides believe they are used as artillery observation posts.

On the mud-covered floor of what once was some German Frau's kitchen, Lieut. Col. Joseph G. Frocht, of Reading, Pa., air support omcer, had a radio phone in each hand, calling out targets to planes circling above and waiting a chance to go in.

"Melted Away"

One American infantry unit in operation for the first time took its objective right on schedule, gathering in nearly 300 German prisoners in a comparatively small action.

"It's our first day in action, but the boys are making it good," Lieut. Col. Charles Hoy, of Washington, D. C., said.

American GIs worked in perfect harmony with British tankers in taking the objective which has been expected to be one of the toughest. "We have been married to the British for just a few days, but it's going off perfectly," was the way Hoy put it.

The Germans counterattacked at dawn today near Immendorf, but almost before it started, the Nazi infantry was pinned down and virtually destroyed by an artillery barrage from the American side.

"They just sort of melted away," Major George Frazer, Bellemead Park, Nashville, Tenn., said.

5 SAD SACKS 'TAKE' METZ

Jeepload Of Wire-Stringers Get In And Live To Get Out

By KENNETH L. DIXON

On the outskirts of Metz, Nov. 18 (AP)—Quite a few people got to the outskirts of Metz today and some American infantrymen gradually are moving farther into the city in a house-to-house fight, but five guys actually got to the heart of Europe's most famous fortress city and got back to tell about it.

They did it by mistake.

Two jeeploads of the 11th Infantry Regiment's communications crew were trying to find the advance command post in order to string wire. The front jeep, driven by Pfc. Eugene S. Tyler, of Alton, Ill., also carried Staff Sergeant Frank Kotch, of Chester, Pa., the wire chief, and Corporal Paul Keown, of Louisville, Ky. Private Henry A. Cardese, of Rochester, Pa., was driving the second jeep, accompanied by Private Harold Bellomy, of War, W. Va.

They Missed The Left Turn

Because of artillery crossfire from the encircled but uncaptured fortresses outside Metz, they roared wide open down the main road leading to Metz. They were supposed to make a left turn at the city's edge, but somehow they missed it and went highballing right down to the main part of the city.

They passed the city limits sign which said "Metz," but Tyler grinningly admited later he thought maybe that was just over enthusiasm on the part of the erstwhile Metz Chamber of Commerce. They sped merrily on nearly two miles further, by-passing dumfounded German defenders who later in the day managed to halt whole infantry units.

Then The Nazis Wake Up

When mortar shells shoelaced the street, Tyler began to think "something must be wrong." Then the Germans realized these must be Yanks and began to let go with small arms fire.

"Well, what do you know," snorted Keown suddenly. "We're here all alone. What say we take the town ourselves?"

"The hell with that," Tyler barked, realizing their situation and turning around with rapidity unusual even for a jeep. The second vehicle followed him out of town.

"It's a nice-looking town," said Bellomy later as the shells crashed around the command post where they had taken refuge. "I'd like to see more of it."

"We will," said Tyler, "but not alone."

USE GLASS TUBE TO SAVE LIMBS

Army Doctors Reveal New War-time Surgery.

Somewhere in Belgium, Nov. 18 (A. P.).—A young Canadian doctor in a casualty clearing station near this front has announced the discovery of a new method of surgery expected to save the arms and legs of many wounded soldiers.

Working with Capt. Ken Wilson of Ottawa, Major W. T. Mustard of Toronto inserted glass tubing to bridge shattered arteries temporarily and maintain a blood supply in wounded limbs that normally would have to be amputated.

"The use of glass tubes to replace arteries has been demonstrated in animals," the Major said, "but as far as we know this is the first time it has been done in humans."

Dr. Mustard said the procedure already had saved the shell-shattered legs of a Canadian private and a British captain. The first operation was performed on a prisoner of war but the blood clotted in the tube and the leg had to be amputated. Heparin solved the problem of clotting.

"The operation placing a glass tube in the artery can be performed in half an hour," the major said.

"Men we get here close to the front line are the worst cases, nearly dead through loss of blood. The operation must be simple and easy."

The wounded captain was the first to have the operation successfully performed on him.

"He had lost so much blood," Major Mustard said, "his foot was cold and white. We put in the tubes and the blood started to flow. We left the tubes in until the captain was in condition to stand an operation. We removed the tubes, replaced the shattered piece of artery with a graft from a vein."

Belgian Compromise In Sight

Brussels, Nov. 18 (AP)—Possible grounds for a compromise between Belgian resistance organizations and the Pierlot Government in their dispute over the disarming of the resistance forces were presented today in orders issued by both sides.

The Government, instead of prohibiting public assemblies throughout the country as had been indicated previously, forbade displays of arms at such meetings and reminded demonstrators they must stay outside restricted zones as fixed by town and local officials.

Move Toward Conciliation

From the other side, the National Union of Resistance Groups orders its members to deliver their weapons to their superior officers to be handed over later to "Allied miliitary authorities."

Since some resistance elements had demanded that they retain their arms until all collaboration suspects had been jailed, the national union's decision represents a considerable move in the direction of conciliation.

Deadline Set By Pierlot

Premier Pierlot has set midnight tonight as the deadline for the patriot forces to turn in their arms and has warned that if the Government encounters any major difficulty in enforcing the order, Allied military forces would take over.

The Socialist party has scheduled a rally to protest the order for tomorrow.

In Liege yesterday 6,000 persons demonstrated against the order, and fights occurred between the police and the crowd.

Washington Watches Belgium

Washington, Nov. 18 (AP)—Authorities here believe that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will act with speed and power to maintain order in Belgium if threatening political disputes produce open violence.

The General's first responsibility as Allied commander in chief is to prevent any kind of outbreak from interfering with the storming of Germany's inner fortress. He has plenty of authority under agreements with the Belgian Government, though naturally he would prefer not to divert forces from the main job.

While the direct war aspects of the Belgian trouble command first attention here, there is intense diplomatic interest also in the power and purpose of Communist groups there and France as well.

As Clue To Russ Policy

It is considered possible that the experiences of liberated Belgium and France may furnish unmistakable evidence of the extent to which Western European Communists are playing a Moscow policy line, and also some indications of Russian policy toward the countries of Western Europe.

The question has come into focus in Belgium over a Government order to the resistance "White Army" to surrender its arms.

Two Communist Cabinet members and a representative of the resistance movement in the Cabinet resigned over the issue, which also involved incorporation of resistance groups into the regular army.

Contrasted With France

The situation differs from that which evolved in France in that all of Belgium is still a combat zone, with one whole wing of the Allied offensive into Germany dependent on getting supplies into Antwerp and through the country to the battle line. It also varies in that the Belgian Government, which is exercising civil authority under the supreme command of Eisenhower, has full international acceptance.

France largely is outside the combat area. The Government of Gen. Charles de Gaulle is recognized by the Allies only as a provisional regime.

There the issue arose over de Gaulle's order for resistance forces to give up their arms, and Communist demands for permission for Maurice Thorez, one of their leaders, to return from Moscow. Thorez had been barred from France as an army deserter. When de Gaulle pardoned him, opposition to the disarmament order melted.

Point Of Diplomatic Interest

A point of main diplomatic interest appears to be whether the Russians will accept without protest the creation of a Western European bloc under British domination and including initially France, Belgium and Holland, drawn together by their common interest in suppressing German aggression.

That move came into full swing during the recent visit of Prime Minister Churchill to France. The Moscow invitation for a visit by de Gaulle followed soon afterward and is being closely watched in that connection.

Thread Of Suspicion

Throughout the whole thing runs the thread of suspicion which is discernible in every phase of European diplomacy at present—the suspicion shared by Communist Russia and capitalist Britain that they cannot quite trust each other yet.

Much of Russia's diplomacy in Eastern Europe has been very clearly based on her uncertainties about western capitalism.

Pierlot Faces Defiance

Brussels, Nov. 18 (AP)—A Socialist party rally to protest a Government order to members of the Belgian resistance movement to turn in their arms is scheduled for tomorrow despite the announced intention of Premier Hubert Pierlot's regime to prohibit such demonstrations.

A decree prohibiting public assemblages was to be issued later today.

At Liege yesterday about 6,000 persons demonstrated against the order for disarming of members of the "White Army," and fist fights occurred between the police and the crowd.

Premier Pierlot has set midnight tonight as the deadline for patriots to turn in their arms and has warned that if the Government encounters any major difficulty in enforcing the order Allied military forces will take over.

AGREEMENT ON CAPTIVES

Russia to Take Over Nationals Seized on Western Front

PARIS, Nov. 18 (AP)—An agreement with the Russian Government providing that the Russian military delegation will assume charge of Russian citizens freed by the Allies' advance, many of them deserters from the German forces, was announced today by the French Provisional Government.

The Russian military delegation will decide ways and means of eventually repatriating the Russians, most of whom have been sent to a camp near Marseille.

12,000 French Children Moved To Switzerland

Paris, Nov. 18 (AP)—Approximately 12,000 children, who had been moved from western France to Lorraine for safety before the Allies' Normandy landings, have been moved again—to Switzerland—the French Ministry of Prisoners and Deportees reported today.

The transfer was made because the French First and American Seventh armies may overrun Lorraine.

NAZI SABOTEURS TROUBLE PARIS

40,000 Germans Reported Hiding in City.

London, Nov. 18 A. P.).—A Nazi resistance movement inside France, the core of which is made up of 40,000 Germans hiding out in Paris, was reported today by a reliable French source. Thousands of French collaborationists, still at large despite roundups by the French Forces of the Interior, were declared to be actively aiding the Germans in espionage and sabotage.

The French source, who cannot be identified by name, said the Germans had parachuted small arms and food in recent days to bands of German saboteurs based in forests.

Although the sabotage in the Paris area has been on a small scale, the thousands of Germans who have evaded capture and discarded their uniforms for civilian clothes offer a great threat to the Allies, he said.

Hispano Works Attacked.

"Most of the sabotage," he related, "has been confined to electric cables and pipelines. One band of Germans armed only with small arms attempted a raid recently on the Hispano works outside of Paris, but was driven off."

French secret service agents were reported to have discovered several German radio transmitters in France.

The German radio declared today that the automobile accident November 10 in which French Finance Minister Aime Lepercq was fatally injured was due to sabotage.

The broadcast said two persons had been attacked on the streets of Paris and two others had been shot in Thonon.

Berlin reported that Paris restaurants had been ordered to close at 8 P. M., and people were banned from the streets at 9 P. M.

REDS NEARING DANUBE-ROAD

Smash 4 Miles Through Lines In Move To Ring Budapest

London, Sunday, Nov. 19 (AP)—Russian tanks and infantry smashed four miles through German lines 15 miles northeast of Budapest yesterday, in a powerful encircling movement which swept to within 19 miles of the Vienna high road runinng along the Danube river north of the besieged Hungarian capital, Moscow announced last night.

Hatvan, German key to all Axis defenses east of Budapest, and the intermediate junctions of Aszod and Godollo on a 26-mile front between Hatvan and Budapest, were under Soviet artillery fire and threatened with imminent capture.

Three Miles From Hatvan

One Soviet column struck to within three miles northeast of Hatvan with the seizure of Hort as other Soviet groups attacked from the east and south.

A midnight supplement said these troops, in cutting the important highway between Hatvin and Gyongyos, 13 miles to the northeast, killed 800 Germans at Hort, an captured a supply column of war material, including three self-propelled guns and 22 field guns and 18 mortars.

Soviet units also encircled and wiped out 500 German tommy-gunners who had arrived in an armored train at the front, the supplement said.

Fives miles southwest of Hatvan another column rolled through Tura in a by-passing blow at Aszod, six miles beyond, and a third mechanized group overran the village of Valko, only 15 miles northeast of the capital and within seven miles of Godollo junction.

The third column threatened to break through to the Danube's banks just above the capital, a maneuver which would surround the eastern half of Budapest on the left bank of the Danube and at the same time put the Russians astride roads leading to Austria and Czechoslovakia.

Hatvan, one of the main junctions through which the Germans have been rushing reinforcements into Budapest, already was largely neutralized as a supply corridor by the Russians.

Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's units gained all along a 60-mile front extending from captured Valko near the capital to within three miles of Miskolc, Hungary's fifth city now imperilled by Red army troops attacking on three sides.

With jthe capture of Kistoka the Russians moving up the Sajo river valley were within three miles of Miskolc on the southeast, and with the seizure of Hernadnemeti they were seven miles on the east.

Berlin also said Red army troops had broken into Diosgyor, on a main highway three miles west of Miskolc, after climbing through the Bukk mountains, claiming these units were "wiped out in fierce fighting."

The German military commentator, Col. Alfred Von Olberg, said the Russian offensive between Miskolc and Budapest was "gaining in momentum hourly as the Russians attempt to storm Budapest, racing against time."

Steadily hurling the Germans back into the Bukk and Matra mountains between Miskolc and Hatvan the Russian communique disclosed that the Red army now has seized a 50-mile section of the Budapest-Miskolc trunk railway, and swept on northward toward the Czechoslovakian border.

Eger, a mountain town between the Matra and Bukk ranges, was threatened by a Soviet column that captured Andornak, two and one-half miles to the south, after moving up the road from fallen Fuzesabony, taken Friday.

To the southwest other Red army troops cleared the Germans from the 22-mile section of railway between Fuzesabony and Vomosgyork by seizing a number of villages, including Kerecsend, three miles northwest of Fuzesabony, Kapolna and Kal rail station, seven miles west of Fuzesabony, and Detk, eight miles southeast of Gyongyos.

FOE FALLS BACK NEAR BUDAPEST

Red Drive Puts Three Rail Centers in Danger.

Moscow, Nov. 18 (A. P.).—Nazi defenders on a battle line stretching northeast from besieged Budapest gave ground again today in the face of a sustained Russian flanking maneuver that pressed the enemy deeper into the Matra and Bukk mountains on the Slovakian frontier.

The Russian drive imperiled three important Hungarian rail towns — Eger, Miskolc and Hatvan.

The valley town of Eger is on a secondary communications route barely four miles from a Russian column that stormed through Maklar after the captu yesterday of Fuzesabony on t Budapest - Miskolc Railway. Th advance gave the Red Army c trol of a twenty-seven-mile se tion of that vital line.

A Sovient salient menacing Miskolc was widened with the capture of Tisza Luc, twelve miles tc the southeast.

Seizure of Karacsond, midway between Fuzesabony and Hatvan, put the Russians within five miles of Gyoengoes, another enemy base in the foothills of the Matra Mountains.

Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky claimed no decision yet in the fierce tank battle being waged for Hatvan, twenty-six miles northeast of the Hungarian capital. The gains during yesterday's fighting were mainly beyond the middle stretch of the Budapest-Mikolc trunk line.

Hatvan, terminal of a main line running north into Slovakia, was reported under attack from three sides. The Russians announced seizure of Csany, five miles southeast and Zsambok, nine miles southwest.

No Change Nearer Budapest

The Russians reported no change in the battle along the fringes of Budapest and likewise maintained silence about the Danube bridgehead south of the capital.

The Russian and German air forces yesterday fought stubbornly for control of the air over Hungary. Most of 46 German planes Moscow reported destroyed on the eastern front were shot down over the Hungarian battlegrounds.

The Russian communique said the Germans made counterattacks against the extreme western flank of Mallinovsky's Second Ukraine Army, but added that they were broken up by veteran Russian fighters.

De Gaulle Accepts Russ Bid

1,500 OTHER U. S. RAIDERS RANGE REICH

Luftwaffe Tries In Vain To Guard Rocket Bombs' Oil Depots

London, Nov. 18 (AP)—Eighty-six German planes were shot down or destroyed on the ground today by 400 hard-hitting American fighter pilots, who hung up the second largest strafing mission on record—1,200 air miles to Munich and back.

Fifteen hundred other American fighters attacked bridges, factories, roads and German infantrymen falling back before General Eisenhower's great offensive, while 1,000 Allied bombers pounded gasoline stores in western and southern Germany.

Raiders Return To Ruhr

Tonight RAF Lancasters went back to the Ruhr after other British bombers hit Munster during the day. The target for tonight was the important synthetic oil plant at Wanne-Eickel.

German pilots came up to fight today for the first time since November 2, in a vain effort to guard oil stores vital to Nazi rocket bomb attacks on England.

The Luftwaffe lost 25 planes shot down and another 61 on the ground.

30 Nazi Jet Planes Destroyed

Thirty of the planes destroyed were jet-propelled ME-262s. Most of the strafing was done from fence height at Lechfield airdrome, near Munich; at Leipheim, near Augsburg, and Mengen, north of Lake Constance.

Oil storage tanks and parked railway fuel cars were left burning at Langenseebold, near Hanau and Weissenhorn, near Ulm. South of Ludwigshafen, sure-shooting Yanks blew up 22 locomotives, 50 oil tank cars and 200 other railway cars.

Eleven of 16 American pilots who failed to return are believed to have landed in friendly territory.

Luftwaffe Rises To Attack

Over Frankfurt and Neustadt, south of Regensburg, a region rich with oil and gasoline stores, the Luftwaffe came up to attack in formations ranging from 10 to 30.

Near Frankfurt, a large formation of Focke-Wulf 190's swooped down on a Thunderbolt outfit, the 56th Fighter Group, led by Major Harold E. Comstock, of Fresno, California.

The two formations closed in on each other at 8,000 feet, whirling in an aerial circus of dog fighting over many miles before 13 Nazi pilots were shot down and the rest limped for home.

About 500 RAF Halifaxes, escorted by 200 Spitfires and Mustangs, attacked rail-and-water communications at Munster, in western Germany.

Targets In Vienna Area

Liberators and Fortresses of the United States 15th Air Force punched another hole in rocket bomb supplies when 650 Italian-based heavies raided oil targets near Vienna and their 300-plane fighter escort dropped down and strafed four German airfields in northeastern Italy.

Mustang-escorted Liberators hit at airfields at Udine, near-by Aviano at the head of the Adriatic, Villafranca, ten miles southwest of Verona, and Vicenza, 27 miles northeast of Verona. Crewmen reported only scattered anti-aircraft fire and no aerial defense of these fields, on which fighters were believed to have been based for attacks on American bombing formations flying to German targets.

Lightning-escorted Fortresses ran into thick anti-aircraft fire over the Vienna area, where clouds hid the results of the bombing attack.

Today's fighter sweep was the longest since 8th Air Force pilots strafed airfields east of Berlin last spring. Targets for today were mainly oil dumps and oil-bearing railroad cars.

Air Support On Battle Fronts

United States Ninth Air Force fighters with 200-pound fragmentation bombs tucked under their wings ripped in ahead of the American First Army, giving close support to tanks and infantry pushing toward the Rhine.

French and American soldiers only five miles from Belfort were supported by 350 fighter-bombers of the 12th Tactical Air Command, whose attacks sent shadows racing across the snowy Vosges range.

Thirty locomotives and four tanks were reported destroyed by 19th Tactical Air Command planes bombing enemy communications east of Metz.

Nugent Takes Over 29th TAC

Brig. Gen. Richard E. Nugent, of Garden City, N. Y., took over the newly formed 29th Tactical Air Command which will support the United States Ninth Army.

When the scores from today's sweep are tallied up, they will bring United States Strategi Air Forces fighter claims of va kinds to a total of nearly 50 for the past nine and a half mont

Heavy Flak Over Vienna

Italian-based American heavy bombers and fighters of the 15th Air Force attacked targets in the Vienna area through clouds. In addition the bombers attacked four enemy airfields in northeast Italy. Heavy flak was encountered over Vienna, returning pilots said.

Mustang-escorted Liberators of the 15th Air Force hit airfields at Udine and Aviano at the head of the Adriatic, Villa Franca, 10 miles southwest of Verona, and Vicenza 27 miles northeast of Verona. Crewmen encountered only scattered flak and no aerial opposition.

Bad weather grounded British based heavy bombers again yesterday and last night, but United States Ninth Air Force medium and fighter bombers based in France flew more than 500 sorties against fortified German cities and ground defenses along the American sectors of the western front.

Mustangs destroyed eighteen Nazi planes on the ground. Two Stuka dive bombers were shot down near Worms.

Ninth losses for all operations were eleven planes.

More than 700 bombers and 350 fighters of the United States Fifteenth Air Force in Italy attacked targets in Germany, Austria and Yugoslavia for the third straight day. Fifteen heavy bombers and ten fighters were lost.

PLAN REGENCY IN YUGOSLAVIA

Tito's Committee And London Group Reported In Accord

London, Nov. 18 (AP)—Marshal Tito's National Committee of Liberation and the exiled Yugoslav Government in London were reported tonight to have agreed to establish a regency in Yugoslavia in the near future, with a plebiscite to be held after the war to determine whether King Peter returns to his throne.

Marshal Tito himself was reported to have been chosen to be premier of a new Yugoslav Government of 28 members representing both the National Liberation movement and the exiled regime. Dr. Ivan Subasic, Premier of the London Government, is expected to be one of the three regents.

Minister For Each Province

According to this report, a minister of state will be named for each of the six Yugoslav provinces, somewhat corresponding to the pre-war governors. Apparently Tito and Subasic in their recent negotiations—which resulted in complete agreement on the future administrative machinery for Yugoslavia—considered it wise to provide for representatives of Serbia, Croatia, Hercegovina, Montenegro, Slovenia and Bosnia with high status.

Well-informed quarters say the new Yugoslav setup might be announced in two weeks.

Tito already is in Moscow, and Subasic is expected to arrive momentarily. It seemed likely that the announcement would come from Moscow after Tito and Subasic have talked with Premier Marshal Stalin.

Britain Backs King

The two years of crises which have dogged the exiled Yugoslav Government appeared to have reached an end. Since Subasic became Premier he has had many talks with Tito.

Both Britain and Russia played prominent roles in bringing about their agreement. Britain has made no bones about backing King Peter. And, likewise, Russia has backed Tito, but both saw the urgent need for bringing the two factions together so that a unified democratic government could be established.

It is noteworthy that Moscow has never attacked King Peter.

"If the people want me back they will say so," King Peter said recently. "If they don't want a king, then I will fill any capacity available that will be to the good interests of my country and my people. They come first."

Germans Admit Quitting Tirana

London, Nov. 18—German troops have abandoned Tirana, Albanian capital across the Adriatic sea from the heel of Italy, after a fierce street battle with Partisan units which temporarily encircled the Axis garrison, the Nazi news agency DNB announced tonight.

A Yugoslav communique broadcast by Marshal Tito's headquarters said the battle inside the capital lasted several days.

DNB referred to German "rearguards" which were said to have broken out of an encirclement, fleeing northward along the road to Scutari. Both the Berlin and Yugoslav versions of the Albanian front said the Germans still held the port of Durazzo, 20 miles west of Tiarana; Scutari, 55 miles on the north, and Kukes, 58 miles to the northeast.

The German retreat from Tirana is being harried constantly by the Partisan National Army of Liberation, the Yugoslav communique said.

Nazis Give Up Albanian Capital

London, Nov. 18 (A. P.).—DNB, the German official news agency, said tonight that the Germans had evacuated Tirana, the capital of Albania.

Earlier the Free Yugoslav Radio had reported fierce fighting inside Tirana between Patriots and Germans.

Norwegians Reported Forced From Homes

London, Nov. 18 (AP)—Thousands of Norwegian men, women and children, driven from their homes in the far north of Norway, are wandering over snowbound roads in a temperature of 20 degrees below freezing

A Norwegian Government spokesman said the forced exodus was supervised by the Germans in an effort to "concoct a story of a panic flight from the Bolsheviks."

"The evacuation," the spokesman said, "is being called voluntary, but all men workers were ordered to go with the German troops when they retreat before the Russians. Live stock is shot and food stocks are removed or destroyed."

BACK TO NORWAY

BRITISH DOWN FLYING BOMBS

Nazis Are Erecting New Bases in Norway.

London, Nov. 18 (A. P.).—Direct hits on several flying bombs before they got inland were scored by coastal anti-aircraft gunners as the Germans launched a small-scale attack from the North Sea during the night.

Allied informants said last night that the Germans are erecting mysterious structures in the mountains of central Norway, possibly as bases for a new secret weapon. The Germans were said to have restricted the entire district and put hundreds of foreign laborers to work on the projects.

Bloomfield School Plane Fells Nazi on First Mission

LONDON, Nov. 18 (AP).—High school students in Bloomfield, N. J., will be glad to know their P-51 Mustang, The Bengal Lance, licked a Nazi today on its first mission.

Flying his first trip over Germany and firing his first shot at the enemy, Lieutenant Frank W. Stilwell jr., of Prospect Plains, N. J., pilot of the Mustang that Bloomfield High School contributed to the war, shot down a Messerschmitt-109.

"I sure am happy for those kids that bought my plane," Stilwell said. "I tried hard to get that Jerry for them."

U-Boat Seized by British Now Sails as Foe of Nazis

Captured Intact, Is Scores Well in New Guise

LONDON, Nov. 18 (AP).—In case the Germans are still wondering what happened to their submarine U-570 back in August, 1941, they are not going to like this.

The sleek new vessel, fitted out with all the latest secret equipment, was captured by the British and sent out under the flag of the Royal Navy to hunt down more Nazi submarines.

It had several successful engagements, destroyed one sister U-boat and scored hits on several other ships, the Admiralty disclosed today.

The U-570, renamed the Graph, was captured after a depth charge attack by a Hudson aircraft of the Coastal Command patrolling from Iceland. The submarine surfaced and ran up a white flag, which subsequently was found to be the captain's shirt.

The vessel had suffered little damage and no essential alterations were necessary, but a picked British crew had to undergo special training to handle it.

HINT FOE DOWNED LEIGH-MALLORY

London, Nov. 18 (A. P.).—The R. A. F. plane carrying Air Chief Marshal Sir Trafford Leigh-Mallory and his party to India, reported missing last night, may have been the victim of an enemy long-range fighter, according to speculation here today. Sir Trafford was en route to take up his new post as Allied air commander in chief in southeast Asia.

An Air Ministry announcement said that a widespread search had yielded no trace of his unescorted plane. Missing with him is his wife, Lady Leigh-Mallory.

The 52-year old British tactician, who as air-commander in chief of the Allied Expeditionary Air Forces provided the aerial umbrella for the western Europe invasion, flew with an escort to the Mediterranean area. From there he continued alone in a plane flown by a veteran R. A. F. crew.

It was known in London that searching aircraft swept the normal route to Asia without success.

Sir Trafford, who had been in the R. A. F. ever since the first world war, was named on October 19 to the top air post in Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's southeast Asia command with headquarters at Kandy, Ceylon.

Britain To Let World Know Full Cost Of Her War Effort

London, Nov. 18 (AP)—Great Britain is going to shake off that traditional reserve and tell the world in figures how great its war effort has been.

Prime Minister Churchill promised it.

The disclosure should have a definite dollars and cents trade value to Britain and its industry, even if that may not be the motive.

Both newspapers and hard-hit manufacturers have been complaining more and more of late that Europe and the United States don't realize what sacrifices in money and loss of trade the British have suffered in their all-out war effort.

White Paper To Detail Facts

For a lot of Britons feel their own trumpets haven't been blown loudly enough.

Churchill implied that security reasons had held up publication of the war effort figures but said that a White Paper would detail them soon.

Certainly such a report would say Britain converted all the assets available in the United States to buy war material before lend-lease became operative, and that the British got out of the export trade markets in deference to lend-lease.

Would Cancel Lend-Lease Debt

Just as certainly that story will be used in a campaign to obtain cancellation of British lend-lease balances owed the United States when the war ends.

The seeds of that campaign have been germinating in a number of places recently, with Lord Keynes one of the most intensive and effective gardeners.

There can be anticipated, too, a corollary claim—not only did Great Britain suffer financially fighting, but she held a fort with flesh and blood and a toll of death until the United States could complete her armaments.

Developments on both sides of the Atlantic appeared to be shaping toward a favorable attitude on financial settlements, although British commentators acknowledged they expected some opposition in the American Middle West.

Finns To Observe Armistice: Paasikivi

Stockholm, Nov. 18 (AP)—Finnish Premier Juho K. Paasikivi said today the program of his newly-installed Government would be to observe the armistice terms with Russia "scrupulously and to effect better relations with the Soviet Union."

In an interview at Helsinki with a correspondent of the Stockholm newspaper Tidningen, Paasikivi added that "it would be better to wish me luck rather than to congratulate me."

Planes Blast German Convoy

Stockholm, Nov 18 (A. P.).—Allied planes attacked a northbound German convoy along Sweden's west coast last night, causing one ship to explode, the newspaper Dagens Nyheter reported today.

In a dispatch broadcast by the German radio and picked up by the Associated Press DNB, the German official news agency, said that the German hospital ship Tuebingen was sunk by four British fighter-bombers in the Adriatic Sea today.

POLES CAPTURE ITALIAN TOWN

Fight Off Two Counterattacks To Hold Mountain Hamlet

Rome, Nov. 18 (AP)—Polish troops of the British Eighth Army, battling forward more than a half mile through the snow in the mountains before the Po plain, have seized Monte Fortino, five miles south of the highway town of Faenza, a prime objective, Allied headquarters said today.

Monte Fortino fell only after a sharp struggle, and then the Poles were forced to fight off two German counterattacks to maintain their hold on the mountain hamlet.

Held Outside Faenza

Farther north but still south of the No. 9 highway leading from the Adriatic coast to Bologna, other forces were within four miles of Faenza, but they were held up by strong enemy resistance.

Slightly east of these forces, British tanks and infantry striking toward the highway from the village of Villagrappa ran into Germans strongly intrenched and supported by tanks and considerable artillery.

Tanks Clear Outpost

Along the Adriatic, where patrols were active in the flooded lowlands, tanks cleared the enemy from an outpost at Molinaccio, 3,000 yards west of the Ravenna airport and three and a half miles south of that town itself.

German planes dropped incendiaries on the captured Bologna highway town of Forli, but little military damage was reported.

Patrols ranged aggressively along the United States Fifth Army front to the west in the area south of Bologna, but communications were so paralyzed by the weather that some sectors still were being supplied by rubber boats.

TOWN IN ITALY TAKEN BY POLES

Rome, Nov. 18 (A. P.).—Monte Fortino, five miles south of Faenza, has been captured by Polish troops in the Eighth Army drive on that important communications center on the Bologna-Rimini road, Allied Headquarters announced today.

Allied troops took the town yesterday in a 1,000-yard advance against the bitterest German resistance and then threw back two heavy counter-attacks.

Other troops pushed to within four miles of Faenza, encountering stiff opposition.

British infantry and tanks moving northwest of the village of Villagrappa were heavily engaged by the Germans at a road fork 300 yards southeast of Fugna. The Germans in the area were strongly entrenched and backed up by tanks and artillery.

Troops on the Adriatic sector were active in patrol operations. Molinaccio, less than two miles west of the Ravenna Airport and three and a half miles south of Ravenna, was cleared by tanks and artillery. German planes bombed Forli by night, but little military damage was caused.

On the United States Fifth Army Front in Italy, Nov. 18 (AP)—Lieut. Col. Frank Fairfield, of Newton, Mass., tank battalion commander in the Fifth Army's First Armored Division, and Second Lieutenant Waneta Manley, of Claremont, N. H., of the 94th Evacuation Hospital, were married today at the Methodist Church in Florence.

Col. Lee Pierce, of White Plains, N. Y., commanding officer of the 94th, gave away the bride, who wore a strictly non-military white satin dress received from home earlier this week.

The ceremony was performed by Chaplain Captain James B. Ansley, of Kerens, Texas.

Lieutentant Colonel James S. Zimmerman, of Wytheville, Va., was best man. First Lieutenant Alvina Mickels, of Panama, Iowa, was maid of honor. All the bride's attendants, including First Lieutenant Alice Hestad, of Minneapolis, Minn., and Second Lieutenant Lucille Hellpap, of Milwaukee, Wis., are with the 94th Evacuation Hospital.

Persons Entering Athens Must Check Guns Outside

Patrols Set Up as Communists Mark 26th Birthday

ATHENS, Nov. 18 (AP)—Roads entering Athens were covered by patrols today and persons seeking entry into the city were required to check their weapons like hats at a theater as the Leftist E. A. M. prepared to celebrate tomorrow the twenty-sixth birthday of the Greek Communist party.

The tension which had been mounting all week, however, abated somewhat as Major General R. M. Scobie, British commander in Greece, agreed at the request of Premier George Papandreou, to provide assistance with British troops in curbing violence if necessary.

A recent Cabinet crisis was largely due to increased tension as the Dec. 10 deadline for surrender of illegal arms approaches and to reports that the E. A. M. intended to bring in large armed formations from the mountains and outlying suburbs.

Moroccan Journalists Protest Ban On Comment

Algiers, Nov. 18 (AP)—The Moroccan Journalists Union has made a vigorous protest against a Government ban on comment on disorders by a crowd of 15,000 which protested the food situation in Casablanca last Saturday.

A state of siege in Casablanca was proclaimed by the resident general of Morocco when crowds of women entered the municipal building.

All Moroccan newspapers joined the union in declaring the Government order a violation of freedom of the press and in agreeing to put the facts before the union of the National French Press, the Minister of Information and the French National Resistance Committee.

Chinese Extend Wedge In Burma

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Ceylon, Nov. 18 (AP)—Some of the Chinese troops who sealed off the Japanese garrison in Bhamo drove on southeastward toward Nam Kham and the Burma Road today in the Allied drive to clear a land route to China.

The Chinese both lengthened and widened the wedge driven into Japanese positions along the road to Nam Kham, the Allied communique said.

[A Chinese communique issued in Chungking said the Chinese had won control of all but three miles of the first 13 miles of the road to Nam Kham, which is 40 miles southeast of Bhamo. The Burma Road is 20 miles past Nam Kham.

[The Chinese consolidated their positions in the ring around Bhamo and prepared for a drive on the stronghold itself, Chungking said. The encircled Japanese were reported holding positions three miles long and two miles wide.]

In the center of the Allied three-pronged north Burma drive other Chinese troops expanded in three directions their holdings around Shwegu, on the south bank of the Irrawaddy.

Chinese Expand Wedge In Burma

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 18 (AP)—Chinese troops have expanded the wedge driven into Japanese positions along the Namhkam road southeast of Bhamo in the North Burma drive to clear a land route to China, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's command announced today.

Striking from east of Bhamo, the Chinese advanced southwestward across two main roads and reached the Irrawaddy river, cutting off the last Japanese routes to the south out of Bhamo.

On the Chindwin front Allied troops pushed southward from Kalemyo for more than 10 miles toward Mandalay.

BURMESE PATRIOTS LOOT JAP TRUCKS

MYITKYINA, Burma, Nov. 16—(Delayed)—(AP) Three powerful clans of Burmese Kachin and Shan tribesmen have been roving through north and central Burma for more than a year, looting and hi-jacking Japanese supply trucks and wiping out small Japanese garrisons for their arms and ammunition.

Persistent but mysterious reports of sabotage far behind the Japanese lines in north Burma for the past eight months now have been accredited to this colorful bandit force. These three armed and mobile columns of fierce mountain and jungle fighters are neither an Allied nor a pro-Japanese force, but an independent army fighting for the rights of its people in Japanese-occupied Burma.

One of the guerrilla bands which has been active in the area north of Mandalay has been identified as "Maung Chine and his 300 thieves." It has been operating in the fashion of the bandits of the old west in the United States, swooping down on isolated Japanese supply trucks, killing the drivers and guards and retiring to mountain hideouts with the loot.

The three bands were formed more than 18 months ago after the Japanese moved into northeastern Burma, strangled trade and demanded all the food in the neighborhood. Robbed and handicapped by Japanese restrictions, desperate Chinese living in Burma across the border from China joined forces with the Burmese mountain tribesmen and began picking off single Japanese with their rifles.

The bands became larger and stronger and they ambushed larger groups of Japanese and soon became well armed.

It is reported they enter Japanese-occupied villages disguised as farmers, stay several days, and, at a given signal, literally shoot up the settlements and slip away into the jungles with food and valuables and arms and ammunition for new recruits.

JAP PUSH AIMS AT BURMA ROAD

Advance Toward Kweichow Might Nullify Allied Plan

Chungking, Nov. 18 (AP)—The Japanese, led by a skilled general, struck nearly 13 miles closer today to Kweichow province in a drive believed designed to snap the Burma road at Kweiyang and nullify the land-supply route the Allies are fighting to reopen to China.

Competent quarters estimated that Gen. Shunroku Hata had assembled 250,000 troops in South China for this campaign, which threaten to bring the war to Chungking's front yard and wrest from the American air force its Superfortress bases in western China.

Drive Along Railway

The Chinese high command announced that the Japanese were within a few miles of Hwaiyuanchen, 13 miles west of Ishan—captured yesterday—on the railway leading northwest from fallen Liuchow into Kweichow and its capital, Kweiyang.

It is at Kweiyang that the Burma road, winding up out of the wilderness in Yunnan province, turns almost due northward to Chungking, 210 miles from Kweiyang.

Chinese quarters, taking for granted that the Japanese conquerors of Hankow had embarked on a long-delayed master plan to knock China out of the war, declared that China never was more in need of help than now.

Wedemeyer Offers Plan

Maj. Gen. A. C. Wedemeyer, commander of United States forces in China, revealed that he had made recommendations to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek for "simple, and I hope sound" dispositions to meet the moves of the enemy.

Wedemeyer said Hata, whom he styled a "very able commander," might push southward from Liuchow to join Japanese forces in French Indo-China, strike for Kweiyang or drive on Chengtu, in Szechwan province.

Although the Japanese threat and its potential effects on Chungking were the principal topics of conversation in all quarters, Wedemeyer told a press conference he felt "our problems are not insurmountable."

The prospective opening of the Burma-Ledo road, he said, would enable China to receive heavy guns and other equipment which cannot be freighted in by air.

Flyers Join In Battle

As the general spoke, his air forces were flying into the battle northwest of Liuchow, strafing and bombing supply lines and troop concentrations and inflicting heavy casualties, a communique reported.

In the advance on Hwaiyuanchen, the high command said, the Japanese reached the east bank of the Lung river which cuts through the outskirts of the railway town.

The war bulletin reported that the Japanese suffered heavy losses in a three-hour artillery duel, with the contending forces firing on each other across the river.

Report Advance Checked

Forty miles west-southwest of Liuchow, the Chinese said, the Japanese had been unable to advance on Hsincheng.

[The Japanese last were reported nine and a half miles south and 15 miles east of the town.]

The high command admitted the loss yesterday of Lungeheng, 40 miles northwest of Kweilin. The Japanese in that sector were moving to protect the north flank of their corridor leading into Kwangsi province from Hunan province.

Gen. Wedemeyer, Chiang Confer

Chungking, Nov. 18 (AP) — Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, commander of United States forces in the China theater, said today he had made recommendations to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek for dispositions—"simple and I hope sound"—to meet the enemy's capabilities in China.

He told a press conference possible enemy moves included a push from captured Liuchow in Kwangsi province southward for a link with Japanese forces in French Indo-China; a strike westward through the Liuchow corridor to Kweiyang, capital of Kweichow province, or a drive on Chengtu, which, with China's wartime capital, Chungking, is in adjoining Szechwan.

Calls Jap Chief Able

General Wedemeyer described Gen. Shunroku Hata, commander of Japanese forces in China, as "a very able commander."

"I've been here over two weeks, delving into various problems, and I still have the feeling our problems are not insurmountable," he said.

General Wedemeyer said that he had conferred several times with Chiang. He said he hoped the recent reference by Premier Stalin to Japan as an aggressive nation could be interpreted in a way "favorable to our situation here."

Mum On Report

Asked about a Chinese press report that the first Russian supplies since 1942 had arrived in Chungking, Wedemeyer commented that he had not seen it. A Chinese reporter interjected that this account referred to medicines, to which Wedemeyer replied that "medicines are war supplies—and very important, too."

Wedemeyer said the prospective opening of the Ledo road and the reopening of the Burma road would enable the Chinese to receive heavy equipment which could not be brought in by air.

"The Japanese situation in northern Burma is deteriorating," he said, "and when Bhamo falls it will be definitely precarious. I am very optimistic about operations in Burma, which will make a definite contribution to this theater, and to the whole position in the Far East."

Nelson, Chiang Discuss Chinese WPB Plans

Chungking, Nov. 18 (AP)—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek discussed today with Donald M. Nelson steps through which speedily tangible results might be obtained from the newly established Chinese War Production Board.

Nelson, accompanied by a group of American production men, returned to Chungking yesterday on his mission to set the wheels of China's war production in motion. He said today both he and the generalissimo were in full agreement on further measures to be taken.

Before seeing Chiang, Nelson had a long talk with Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, President Roosevelt's representative in Chungking. Later he said in a statement that he had brought with him "a number of practical American production men to work with the Chinese industrial managers in overcoming production difficulties, and they have already begun their work."

AMERICAN TROOPS TIGHTEN HOLD ON BATTERED LIMON

Japanese Repulsed in Effort to Reinforce Trapped Forces.

7 PLANES DOWNED

Big Battle Rages at Northern End of Ormoc Corridor on Leyte.

GENERAL MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Nov. 19—(AP) American infantrymen closed tighter today on the shell-battered fortress town of Limon, at the northern end of Leyte island's Ormoc corridor, against stubbornly resisting Japanese who were cut off from fresh supplies.

Yank fighters and antiaircraft guns, meanwhile, shot down their 500th Japanese plane of the Leyte campaign, bagging seven of 15 attackers on the east coast.

777 Jap Planes Destroyed

(A total of 777 Japanese planes have been destroyed by army and carrier-based planes and ack-ack in the Philippines thus far in November, an unofficial count shows.)

Elements of the 24th and 32nd divisions "further compressed" the Japanese forces at Limon, four miles by road from Carigara bay, today's communique said.

A road block, established south of the town by units of the 24th, was tightened, and "all enemy attempts to run supply trucks through to the trapped First division troops has failed."

Remnants of at least a Japanese regiment, it was estimated, are within the squeeze being contracted by American forces probing the town from the north and the road block. Some Japanese tanks reached the trapped forces before the block was tightened.

Several hundred Japanese forces were found entrenched in Limon by advance American units who first believed it had been abandoned. The enemy held strong positions in the mountain community, which they had transferred into a fortress aided by defensible terrain, despite persistent American artillery bombardment. Apparently, the Nipponese intended to hold out as long as possible, while forces farther south on Ormoc highway rushed defenses for future battles.

Through a breach in lowering storm clouds, American reconnaissance planes yesterday caught a fleeting glimpse of an enemy motorized column moving northward toward the Limon sector. For several days, they have seen little evidence that the Nipponese were attempting to move supplies from Ormoc to their advance forces.

Reports from the American front, however, did not mention any enemy attempt to organize a concentrated effort to break through Yank envelopment.

Elements of the 24th and 32nd division "further compressed" the Japanese forces at Limon, today's communique reported.

A road block south of the town, established by units of the 24th, has been strengthened.

"All enemy attempts to run supply trucks through to the trapped First division troops has failed."

Elements of the U. S. 96th division, pushing west of Dagami—in central Leyte valley—continue to eliminate Japanese positions in the foothills of Mt. Lobi.

Activity elsewhere was limited to patrolling, the communique said.

American heavy and medium bombers attacked enemy rear installations at Ormoc and the nearby northward town of Linao, causing explosions and fires.

Fighters, roaring in low-level attacks, strafed enemy shipping in Ormoc bay, destroying two small transports.

Seven of 15 Japanese planes were shot down during a raid by fighters and divebombers on Tacloban and Dayug airfields.

"We lost one fighter and sustained minor ground damage."

Anti-aircraft fire shot down the 500th Japanese pilot bagged since the landing on Leyte.

Yanks Enter Limon

Frontline reports said Americans probing into Limon, encountered strong Japanese forces dug in the artillery-battered town.

Tanks sent to reinforce the Japanese defenders braved a roadblock set up by enveloping 24th division troops two and one-half miles south of Limon. Some of them got through negotiating the road which snakes along ridges and valleys to Ormoc, enemy base 20 airline miles below Limon.

Fred Hampson, Associated Press correspondent on the 24th division front, said there was little doubt that the Japanese are fighting desperately to hold the Limon area at any cost while Gen. Tokoyuki Yamashita, enemy Philippine commander, prepares rearward positions to meet the full American might.

The enemy's major stand, Hampson said, probably will be in the rugged region where a road to port Palompon, on the west coast, branches off the Ormoc road.

[The Japanese-controlled Manila radio broadcast to Nipponese troops on Leyte the message they are "shouldering the destiny of the Japanese Empire," and reminded them of their "determination to annihilate the Americans by launching death-defying attacks."]

Aircraft Pound Islands

Meanwhile American aircraft struck at neighboring Philippine islands, Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported yesterday, dropping 62 tons of bombs on Bacolod airdrome on Negros and hitting Lahug Field on Cebu. Parked enemy planes were destroyed and at least six interceptors shot down.

Heavy bombers hammered three enemy airdromes at Davao, Mindanao Island, with 120 tons of explosives. The airfield at Zamboanga also was attacked.

Other Allied aircraft ranged over Celebes and several Dutch East Indies islands, wrecking Japanese airfield installations and sinking or damaging five coastal vessels off Boetong Island.

Japanese Tanks

Break Ormoc Road Block

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 18 (AP)—Japanese tanks, large and small, broke through an American road block to reinforce troops stubborning resisting the advance of the United States 24th Division against the important Ormoc road village of Limon, it was revealed today.

American patrols penetrating the outskirts of Limon near the northern terminus of the Ormoc highway believed the Japanese had withdrawn from the village after a terrific artillery barrage. When the main body of troops pressed against the city they met strong Japanese opposition.

Japanese Entrenched

Fred Hampson, Associated Press war correspondent with the 24th Division, said Limon is held by hundreds of well dug-in Nipponese soldiers with all types of weapons except heavy artillery.

Yesterday afternoon, he reported, a Japanese light tank ran a gantlet of American fire to get through a roadblock two-and-a-half miles south of Limon and into the village. Later six large tanks tried the same trick, but three were turned back.

Hampson's dispatch did not indicate what happened to the other three and it can be assumed they, too, got through.

Major Stand Expected

The correspondent added that the Japanese evidently intend to hold the vale below hotly-contested Breakneck Ridge overlooking Limon as long as possible and at any cost until the greater portion of their Ormoc forces can consolidate their positions for a major stand, possibly in a hilly region where the road branches from the Ormoc highway and runs to the west coast of Leyte peninsula.

On the north, east and south, American troops broke up the enemy's desperate moves without losing a foot of ground. In some cases they even advanced slowly in the face of the Japanese efforts.

The most important of these advances was the completion of an envelopment movement by units of the 24th Infantry south of [illegible] four miles from Pinamo[illegible]

Driving T[illegible]

Units o[illegible] the enem[illegible] reached [illegible] route th[illegible] were battered by driving tropical rains en route, made their way through seemingly bottomless mud and continued advancing in some cases when their food ran out.

The American forces near Limon received help from fresh troops, veterans of the "Red Arrow" 32d Division, who learned about jungle fighting at Buna and Aitape. General MacArthur's communique, mentioning the 32d for the first time, said it had driven a deep wedge into isolated Japanese strong points north of Limon.

In the Mount Minoro and Badian areas east of the Ormoc road, other units of the Twenty-fourth and of the First Cavalry were reported to have repulsed several suicidal counter-attacks. Terrain in this area is extremely rugged, but artillery brought to bear on the hilltop positions aided the painful advance of the infantry and cavalry.

Another enemy attack was repulsed by the veteran Seventh Division in the area south of Romoc on the coastal road. This fight surged around the village of Tabgas, eleven miles below Ormoc. The Seventh had previously repulsed two other counter-attacks, one an amphibious landing, in its advance up the highway.

Even in the air, the Japanese made more desperation moves. Some thirty enemy aircraft risked American anti-aircraft and fighter patrols to swoop over the Dulag area, on the east coast. Intercepting American fighters shot down fifteen, and anti-aircraft gunners destroyed three others.

American planes attacked small craft off the west coast of Leyte and bombed shore positions south of Ormoc, in the sector from which the counter-attacks against the Seventh have been coming.

Weather continued to hamper both aerial and land activities. Heavy rains bogged supply roads and interferred with aircraft.

Yanks Push Back Japs On Mapia

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 18 (AP)—Remnants of the Japanese defenders of Bras Island, in the Mapia group, 145 miles northeast of Biak, off New Guinea, are being driven into the northern part of the island, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today.

Americans are consolidating their positions on Pegun, first of the Mapia Islands taken in a move to eliminate Japanese aerial watchers, who have been observing operations of American bombers taking off from the important airdrome at Biak.

Destruction of six Japanese planes and probably th[illegible]e others out of a force of 13 which tried to intercept American planes operating in the Cebu-Negros Islands area of the Philippines, was also reported.

Two parked Japanese planes were destroyed and fires started at a Cebu airfield, while American heavy bombers dropped 120 tons of explosives on three airdromes at Davao, on Mindanao Island, in the Philippines. Runways were left unserviceable. Three Japanese planes made a feeble effort to intercept the Americans.

Manilans Starving, Filipino Student Says

By Alva N. Dopking

With the Seventh Division, Leyte, P. I., Oct. 28 (AP—Delayed)—Residents of Manila are starving, with 85 per cent of them subsisting on sweet potato leaves, a 24-year-old former Filipino college student said today.

The youth, who worked as a messenger for an American officer before the Japanese took Manila, cannot be identified for security reasons. This is how he pictured Manila as it is today:

The Japanese have tried to unite the Filipino churches by combining the Protestant, "Aglipayan" (Filipino sect which withdrew from the Catholic fold) and Orthodox Catholic Church in an effort to give the impression that religious groups are giving united backing to Nippon's greater East Asia program.

Naval Base Rebuilt

Most puppet Government officials are regarded by the Filipinos as pro-Americans doing Japan's bidding as a means of relieving the pressure on their countrymen. The Japanese have forced the Filipinos to recondition all American airfields on Luzon and have rebuilt the Cavite naval base which their bombs destroyed two-and-a-half years ago.

Newspapers and radio station have been taken over for propagandad purposes with Camito Osias as the "Dr. Goebbels" of the Philippines.

Forced To Work On Field

Before the former college student was released by the Japanese he was forced to work on Nichols Field, but when the Japanese found he was befriending American prisoners, they took him to another concentration camp.

Later he became ill and was released on condition he swear to fight for Japan if called upon.

He said the Japanese tried to sell the Filipinos on the idea of a puppet republic, but when an "independence celebration" was held a year ago the Japanese had to force the Filipinos to participate in a parade.

P-T'S DEFEAT

JAP MIDGETS

American Craft Victors In First Clash Off Leyte

An Advanced P-T Base, Leyte Nov. 17 (AP—Delayed)—American P-T boats at last have met their Japanese counterpart, and in a sea battle of the midgets have given the enemy a thrashing he never will forget.

The encounter took place last night between the island of Cebu and the town of Ormoc, Japanese port of entry on Leyte island, when three enemy P-T boats undertook to escort four supply-laden barges into Ormoc.

The action that followed was witnessed by Staff Sergeant Henry McLemore, former columnist and sports writer, of Daytona Beach, Fla., from an American P-T.

Saw Jap P-T Blow Up

"We were out shooting barges ourselves," he said. "In the distance we saw Little Joe, a P-T commanded by Lieut. (j.g.) Don McKillin, of Buffalo, N. Y., make a sweet starboard run on the enemy convoy.

"The first Jap P-T blew up almost in Little Joe's face. Two of the four barges burst into flames and sank. Then McKillin went after the other two Japanese P-T's, which left their escorts and lit out for Cebu as fast as they could run.

"The whole show didn't last more than 20 minutes. McKillin closed in to 60 yards, firing every gun he had. One of the Japs turned, apparently when he saw he couldn't get away, and tried to make a ramming run.

Aflame From End To End

"He came within 40 yards (of McKillin's boat) and then seemed to burst aflame from bow to fantail in one great whoosh. Then he sank. Little Joe got out of there fast. It was hot as hell."

Lieutenant McKillin was proud of his gunners. They kept shooting straight through it all, while the Japanese gunners were ducking.

McLemore said he could tell the Japanese gunners were dodging because their fire went up in the air like ack-ack when they bent low to escape bullets from the American P-T.

'Attack' Repelled; Yanks Bag Horse, 2 Chickens

Leyte, Philippines, Nov. 18 (AP)—The 96th Infantry Division was awaiting an almost certain Japanese counterattack. Wired flares were strung around the perimeter so that any intruder would illuminate the area and become a good target for grenade throwers.

Suddenly a flare went off. Two grenades hit the spot.

The bag—a dead horse and two chickens.

Philippine Raids

London, Nov. 18 (AP)—The German Transocean agency said in a Tokyo dispatch today that 20 American bombers attacked the port of Davao, in the Philippines, yesterday, while 25 others raided Legaspi, in the southern part of Luzon Island.

A Reuters dispatch from Leyte said unescorted American Liberators rained 120 tons of bombs on various airfields on the island of Mindanao, on which Davao is located. This dispatch did not give the time of the attack.

New Philippines Landings Soon Called Likely

By John M. Hightower

Washington, Nov. 18 (AP)—Powerful new seaborne invasions of the enemy-held Philippine islands appear probable in the near future.

The probability grows out of information disclosed in an official navy summary of the recent great victory over the Japanese fleet, "which may turn out to be among the decisive battles of modern times," the navy says.

The same communique indicates the possibility of American landings in islands north of the Philippines to sever the island-guarded route over which the enemy even yet is pouring reinforcements south in a desperate effort to check Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Leyte and Samar campaigns aimed at the eventual conquest of Luzon.

Key To Domination

Luzon is the key to domination of that area of the Pacific. Recapture of bases which MacArthur lost in the first weeks of the war under overwhelming enemy pressure will both slash the Japanese Empire in half and provided a starting point for whatever new drives west to China and north to Japan are in the making.

The navy communique, issued late yesterday to bring the October 23-27 battle of the Philippines up to date, still did not give an estimate of damage suffered by American ships because it said "the Japanese are still wondering what hit them."

On the other hand, the communique brought out that all the damage suffered by ships other than the six American combat vessels actually sunk was capable of repair.

30.24 — 20481

"Some of the United States ships hurt in the fight are already back on duty," the navy disclosed.

Total Japanese losses were put at 48 ships sunk or damaged, plus an "undetermined number of destroyers," which Admiral Chester W. Nimitz had previously fixed at 10 for a grand total of 58 enemy vessels either destroyed or in some degree injured in the attack. General MacArthur's land-based bombers accounted for some other, to boost the total past 60.

The American ships lost were identified as the light carrier Princeton, the escort carriers St. Lo and Gambier Bay, the destroyers Johnston and Hoel and the destroyer escort Samuel B. Roberts. A few small craft were also officially identified or counted as fleet casualties.

Two Conclusions

The navy drew two overall conclusions as to the effects of the battle on the Philippines campaign:

1. There is no prospect that the enemy can now "prevent our own reinforcement and supply of General MacArthur and his gallant troops."

2. The Japanese will continue to reinforce their units on Leyte and Samar despite the crippling of their fleet, because the location of the islands affords protection and hiding places for short, fast transportation runs. But the reinforcements must move in at an increasingly diminishing rate.

Baffled Tokyo Command

The full story of the battle showed a carefully worked out plan of attack preliminary to the Philippines action which gave MacArthur the benefit of great surprise in the landings on Leyte. These actions running back to October 9 cost the Japanese a total of 115 to 125 ships sunk, 56 probably sunk or heavily damaged, 21 damaged and almost 600 airplanes destroyed.

They also baffled the Tokyo command. The communique brought out it was suffering from the loss of 900 planes and other damage inflicted by Vice Admiral Marc A. Mitscher's carrier task force of the Third Fleet in the operations which led up to the landings on Peleliu and Moratai, southwest of the Philippines, on September 15.

Three-Pronged Assault Planned

The pattern of the great battle itself turned out simply. The Japanese planned a three-pronged assault to entrap the American forces guarding the operations at Leyte and then to smash the beachhead itself by devastating naval bombardment. Authorities concede that the strategical conception of the attack was good, but the communique makes clear that these points principally cost the enemy the victory:

They were outfought in the air and on the surface by American forces even when they outnumbered the American forces by terrific odds.

They were evidently outnumbered over the whole area, although the number of American ships participating was not given.

They proved inferior in the tactical execution of their plan and particularly in gunnery and seamanship.

'Unidentified' U. S. Planes Fired On

Fleet Headquarters, Honolulu, Nov. 18 (AP)—American planes which failed to identify themselves caused Oahu Island to have its second longest air-raid alert of the war and brought some of the island's anti-aircraft into action shortly before midnight last night. No planes were shot down.

Anti-aircraft batteries fired intermittently for nearly 30 minutes beginning shortly after sirens howled at 10.57 P. M. The all-clear was sounded at 12.36 A. M.

Guns Open Fire

Army officials said the approach of "unidentified planes which later proved to be friendly" set off the alarm.

The planes, when discovered several miles off the island, failed to identify themselves after several signals had been given. Anti-aircraft guns then opened defensive fire on the course of the planes flying in a heavy cover of clouds.

The longest previous air-raid alarm occurred in March, 1942, when a lone, unidentified plane dropped a bomb harmlessly in one of Honolulu's outlying districts. Oahu's last previous alert was caused September 30 by unidentified planes which later proved to be friendly.

Jap Force Trapped Itself, Tennessee's Skipper Says

United States Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 18 (AP). A skipper of one of the United States' elderly battleships blames the Japanese defeat in Surigao Straits—when eight enemy vessels came through and eight were sunk—on the incredible cooperation of the Japanese commander in bringing his ships exactly where the Americans thought he would bring them.

The American skipper, Capt. John B. Heffernan, of Washington, Ind., was in command of the old battleship Tennessee, one of the six which sank the enemy fleet, with the aid of smaller vessels, in only 15 minutes.

Trapped Itself, In Effect

The Japanese force, in effect, trapped itself, he said yesterday in an interview. "If we'd told them just what to do we couldn't have improved on their disposition. It was as easy as playing a game on a board."

For days, he said, the American fleet had been lying east of the straits which separate Leyte from the Mindanao and Dinagat islands. The Japanese must have known how big it was and where it was, because their observation planes had been over it almost constantly.

Nevertheless, the Japanese commander obligingly brought his fleet in from the Sulu Sea; put his two battleships in front as they entered the narrow waters of the strait.

All Ships In Firing Position

All the American battleships—the Tennessee, the West Virginia, the Maryland, the Mississippi, the California and the old fleet flagship, the Pennsylvania—were in firing position. Only the two Japanese battleships—none of the supporting cruisers and destroyers—were within range. They were bottled up in the straits behind each other—and the Americans were the cross of the T famous in naval strategy during the whole age of steam.

Thus almost all of the American guns could fire—many of them for the first time in their long history—against enemy naval vessels.

"Murder In First Degree"

"It was murder in the first degree," said Commander S. P. Smith, of Washington, D. C., who was the Tennessee's executive officer.

The Tennessee, Heffernan said, fired 13 salvos from its 14-inch guns and scored hits with 12 of them—a total of 69 shells from its forward batteries and three more salvoes from its afterguns as the battle line turned.

Other ships did as well or better. The West Virginia got 90 16-inch shells away.

Jap Ship Believed The Fuso

The Tennessee concentrated on the leading Japanese battle wagon, identified tentatively as the Fuso. Although not claiming exclusive credit for sinking her, the captain said his ship was able to send shells toward other Japanese battleships in the 15-minute battle.

"It was the most remarkable fireworks I ever saw," he said.

When dawn broke, Admiral Oldendorf took his cruisers in close, found all the Japanese ships apparently abandoned and finished sinking them—two battleships, two heavy cruisers and four destroyers.

Another Group Nearby

Captain Heffernan disclosed names of other commanders. Matching Admiral Oldendorf's cruiser force was another cruiser group, northeast of the main battle. This included an Australian cruiser (identified by Australian sources as the damaged Australia), commanded by Rear Admiral R. S. Berkey.

Rear Admiral G. L. Weyler was identified by Heflernan as being aboard the Mississippi; Rear Admiral T. D. Ruddock, aboard the West Virginia, and Rear Admiral T. E. Chandler, aboard the Tennessee.

Australian Drought 'National Disaster'

Sydney, Australia, Nov. 18 (AP)—William Scully, Minister of Commerce and Agriculture, said today that a current drought, especially severe in New South Wales, amounted to a "national disaster" which might cut Australian food exports to Britain.

Shipmasters said dust scum patches were sighted hundreds of miles at sea. A dust bowl was reported in the making as violent winds swept away thousands of acres of topsoil.

MILITARISTIC IDEA DENIED

Argentina Says 'Pre-Constription' Is For Health

Buenos Aires, Nov. 18 (AP)—Argentina's plan for "pre-conscription" military training beginning at the age of 12 for both boys and girls is aimed at improving youth health standards rather than the formation of "infantile battalions," a special communique said tonight.

The statement was issued by the Government Press and Propaganda Department because, it was said, some interpretations misrepresented the real objective of the measure announced yesterday.

"There is absolutely no intention to incorporate children in barracks, units, garrisons or other military groups at the age of 12," the statements said. "Neither is there any question of creating infantile battalions."

Explanation Given

The new plan, the department said, would merely permit unification of uncoordinated systems of physical education now in effect in private and public secondary schools, and provide a program "which takes into consideration the physical and moral welfare of the child, and offers appropriate physical exercise, including rifle practice of the same kind which students of public high school now conduct after the third year."

The new military statute probably will be put into effect early next year. As outlined by the Vice-President and War Minister, Col. Juan Peron, it is divided into three periods, per-conscription until the age of 20, conscription then for a minimum of one year and a maximum of two, after which all males would be subject to post-conscription duties until the age of 50.

Women To Serve

Organization of a women's auxiliary service, a radical innovation here, is planned for women who have been trained from the age of 12 to 20.

"We do not believe a State can function with such a lack of preparedness as would be represented by handing men their arms at the moment of going to war," Peron said.

Instead of having a conscription period of two, three or four years service, "as in other countries," Peron said the installation of the new plan might enable Argentina to proceed on the present limit of one year.

A separate air force will be set up, he said, and the promotion of youthful officers accelerated because "we seek to have generals of the same age as those of the fost advanced armies of the world."

Rank Of General Planned

The statute creates a peace-time rank of general of the army, equivalent to a United States lieutenant general, which formerly was held only in time of war. The commander in chief of the army will be accorded this rank.

New regulations will bring an exemption of the military service to one sector of the population—young husbands.

"Married youths in the army constitute a serious problem for themselves, for their families, and for the service," Peron said.

Argentina To Train Youths At 12

Buenos Aires, Nov. 18 (AP)—Argentina is preparing to put into effect a new armed forces statute requiring all citizens of both sexes to begin training for national defense at the age of 12.

The program for girls of 12 to 20 presumably will take the form of athletics and improvement of health standards, while organization of an army auxiliary service is contemplated to absorb women.

Reviewing efforts being made to modernize the Argentine army on the basis of wartime experience, Vice-President Juan Peron announced yesterday that the new statute divides citizens' military service into pre-conscription, beginning at 12, conscription at 20, with service for two years, and post-conscription membership in the organized reserve.

At a press conference, Peron also announced establishment of an independent air force, separate from army and navy command, and creation of the rank of general of the army.

War A "National Matter"

The Vice-President told newsmen that "war today is not a purely military activity," but a national matter.

"To contemplate preparation of the national defense around the army, therefore, is merely to solve part of the problem," he said. "Today it is not a question of preparing the army for war but preparing the nation for war. To proceed in any other manner would be to deceive ourselves."

Peron emphasized that the complexity of modern arms and combat methods made it difficult to train conscripts adequately during the one year of service now required. He said the pre-conscription program of training in such fundamentals as athletics was decided upon in preference to extending the service term to two, three or four years.

Argentine Recognition Is Proposed By Panama

Panama, Panama, Nov. 18 (AP)—Panama has proposed that the American nations recognize the present Government of Argentina prior to any conference of western hemisphere foreign ministers as suggested by Argentina, it was learned here tonight.

The Foreign Minister here declined to comment on the report and no details of the proposal were revealed. It is known, however, that the proposal has been transmitted already to the other American Governments.

It was regarded here as significant that a small nation such as Panama should tender a formal proposal on the Argentine question, and as indicating a continent-wide interest in the preservation of the Pan-American front.

V-2 Viewed As Forerunner Of Peace Uses For Rocket

New York, Nov. 18 (AP)—The V-2 vengeance weapon heralds the beginning of the rocket power age, say industrial designers and interplanetary experts.

For peace, engineers believe, the first benefit from V-2 will be the application of its principle, in the form and development of the thermal-jet engine, or turbo-jet, to power aircraft for long-range transportation.

Predicts 1,000-Mile Range

For war, A. N. Low, former president of the British Interplanetary Society, predicts eventual fighting at a range of 1,000 miles, with the course of rockets controlled by electrical instruments.

The British experimented with military rockets before the Germans developed the V-2, according to Low, and "it is most unfortunate that the rockets are not traveling in the other direction."

But going east or west, here is a picture of the V-2, as Martial and Scull, industrial designers, see it, and some glances at its predecessor, the V-1.

The V-2 is a "true rocket"—a projectile without wings; the V-1 robot bomb is a plane powered by a jet.

Cross-Section Described

A cross-section of the V-2, from all available information, shows a firing pin and detonator; a one-ton high explosive head; a nine-ton fuel compartment, divided into two tanks, one for fuel and the other for the oxidizer, possibly compressed nitrogen, or a pump, to force the fuel into the nozzle; a "servo-mechanism and gyro," to balance the projectile in flight; directional fins; a cooling device; the nozzle; the motor and the jet.

It weighs about 13½ tons and is 30 to 50 feet long.

There may be more than one detonator. This, or the possibility that the projectile may have also a time fuse, could account for the fact that none of the V-2's that have reached England have been duds.

The method of bringing the fuel fast enough into the burning chamber presents a problem, the engineers say. It could be accomplished by using compressed nitrogen to force the fuel into the nozzle, or a pump powered by compressed nitrogen or some other means.

The shape of the fins could vary and it is possible that no fin at all is used, though the experience with rockets in the United States has shown that fins are preferable.

The motor may consist of a single jet but Martial and Scull believe it quite possible that a multiple jet is used.

However, they say, the general design of the rocket will remain along these lines.

On land the rocket could be launched in two ways, from a stationary ramp or one mounted on railroad tracks. The launching apparatus would consist of an incline, about 45 degrees, depending on the distance the projectile is to travel, according to the industrial designers.

May Start From Barges

They point, however, to the possibility that the V-2's are being launched from barges along the German or Dutch coast. If they were launched from land the fire from the exhaust would scorch the earth in an area large enough to be easily detected by reconnaissance planes searching for the launching sites, unless they came from sunken pits. On a barge the fire could be shot into the water.

Reports that the Germans have been fitting up U-boats and surface craft to fire flying bombs with possible intentions against eastern American cities have just been received from Walter Farr, London Daily Mail correspondent in Stockholm.

The V-2 is reported to reach a velocity of 5,000 feet per second, or about 3,500 miles an hour, at the upper thin air level of its trajectory. It is estimated that it attains a height of 40 to 50 miles.

The friction of the air on the metal jacket produces such intense heat that at night the rocket resembles a ball of fire, or a comet with the exhaust gas appearing as the tail.

On its earthbound mission of indiscriminate destruction, the rocket gains more momentum. There is no noise, no warning, for it travels faster than sound. It plows into the earth to a depth of about 40 feet before it explodes, its speed being faster than the action of the detonator. There follows a double rumble sound, as of an earthquake.

Because of its deep crater, which reduces the blast, the V-2 is less effective than the V-1, a slower missile that "lands" instead of penetrating.

Germans Report Dane Nazi Assassinated

New York, Nov. 18 (AP)—Capt. Johan Stahl, identified as the "pacemaker of Danish national socialism," was shot and killed Friday afternoon by unknown assassins in Copenhagen, Danish capital, the German radio announced today.

"Pedestrians suddenly heard shots fired out of a streetcar and they saw a man dashing out of the streetcar," the broadcast said. "Then a younger man jumped out of the streetcar firing three to four shots against a man lying in the street. The assassin then jumped on a bicycle which probably had been held in readiness for him and disappeared."

U-Boat Warfare Return Promised

New York, Nov. 18 (AP)—Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz, supreme commander of the German navy, said today a German U-boat warfare would be revived.

A wireless dispatch of DNB, German news agency, recorded by the FCC said Doenitz, addressing armament workers in a German harbor town, declared that "if today the U-boat arm shows only occasional successes, the enemy may rest assured that one day this phase will end and the grip at his throat will be increased."

Koiso Cabinet Ready For 'Decisive Battle'

San Francisco, Nov. 18 (AP)—The Cabinet of Premier Gen. Kuniaki Koiso of Japan is now ready for the "decisive battle," the Tokyo radio, quoting the newspaper Asahi, said today.

The broadcast, beamed to Italy and recorded here, said that the Cabinet "from the time of its formation, has set out to adjust all its functions, and now its preparations to create a wartime government have been all completed, and there remains only the prompt carrying t of its policies."

Ozawa Named To Naval Staff, Japs Say

San Francisco, Nov. 18 (AP)—The Japanese Domei agency reported via Radio Tokyo today the appointment of Vice Admiral Jisaburo Ozawa as vice-chief of the Nippon naval general staff.

The broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, also reported the naming of Vice-Admiral Ryutaro Shibuya as chief of naval construction headquarters.

Ozawa was chief of staff of the combined fleet in 1937. He became commander in chief of a fleet in 1942, a year after he was named president of the naval war college.

Shibuya formerly served as chief of the Hiroshima and the Kure naval arsenals.

Japs Report Sinking Of Two U. S. Subs

The Tokyo radio today claimed that two American submarines were sunk by Japanese aerial and surface units. One of the submersibles was said to have been sunk from the air in the "Pacific area" while destruction of the second submarine was credited to Nipponese surface units.

The broadcast, recorded by the FCC was not confirmed by any United States source.

Canada's Parliament Meets Amid Conscription Debate

BY HARRY T. MONTGOMERY
Associated Press Foreign Staff

Canada's parliament, after five years of war and with victory in sight, meets this week amid great public debate over the effectiveness of the conscription policy under which her army has been built.

Prime Minister MacKenzie King has the situation under control for the present, at least, but the country remains split wide open and it is plainly up to him to prove his policy is right.

The Prime Minister, "in the public interest," advanced the meeting of parliament from Jan. 31 to Nov. 22 so that the problem could have an airing, and there is talk that a general election may be held.

Canada's overseas army is a volunteer army. Conscripts may not be sent abroad unless they wish it. Draftees who do not volunteer are put in a home defense army, which has averaged approximately 70,000 men.

Around these men, derisively called "Zombies" (in Haitian voodooism Zombies are reanimated corpses lacking souls) there has raged a bitter argument between English-speaking and French-speaking Canada. With the government on the French-speaking side.

King's policy was shaped with an eye to the French-speaking province of Quebec, comprising almost one-third of Canada's population, with an historic tradition of opposition to fighting in overseas wars. King believed that if the army could be raised on his compromise formula and French Canada could be kept happy, the country's over-all war effort would benefit. This was based on an acute awareness of French Canada's history and traditions, on her nationalistic outlook, and, in particular, on her deep-rooted opposition to conscription. The very word, in Quebec, has a special meaning bringing a reflex reaction, dating to the time when the French Canadians were the only Canadians.

Actually, French Canadians are proud of their war effort, and French Canadians have fought and died every bit as valorously as their English-speaking compatriots.

Cabinet Crisis

The lid was kept on this boiling pot with relative ease during the early years of the war. But with the invasion of France, the mounting casualties and the need of reinforcements, the issue developed into a full-blown cabinet crisis.

Defense Minister J. L. Ralston, after an extended trip among the Canadian forces abroad, reported a need for reinforcements and pronounced his steadfast conviction that the voluntary system is no longer sufficient. He found supporters in the cabinet, but a majority sided with King and Ralston resigned.

The astute Mr. King pulled a rabbit out of the hat and announced that Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, the man who had built the Canadian army and probably the most popular soldier in all Canada, would take Ralston's place.

King thus solved the cabinet crisis as such, but the issue remained. McNaughton declared himself in favor of the voluntary system and said reinforcement figures showed "that we can safely count on some short period yet before there is danger of the situation becoming acute." But still much dissatisfaction was expressed in English-speaking Canada.

Resentment In Army

Furthermore, dispatches from the Canadian forces at the front indicated a rising resentment. Reports, however, poorly founded, spread that the home army would be mustered out first.

In this situation King addressed the nation by radio.

Catholics See Peril to World Peace League

Bishops Say Guilty Nation Must Not Get Power to Veto Penalties on Itself

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Catholic bishops of the United States called today for an international peace organization founded on moral law and repudiating power politics.

They said in a statement that the security council planned at Dumbarton Oaks "must not be an instrument for imperialistic domination by a few powerful nations."

"It must not allow any nation to sit in judgment in its own case."

The Soviet Union has been insisting that major powers should sit and vote with the council, even if themselves accused of aggression. This would permit a major power to veto international collective action against itself since it is proposed that no action be taken without a unanimous decision by the major powers.

Without mentioning any nation by name, the bishops gave this expression on their views on membership in the international organization:

"We hold that if there is to be a genuine and lasting world peace the international organization should demand as a condition of membership that every nation guarantee in law and respect in fact the innate rights of men, families and minority groups in their civil and religious life."

The statement, adopted at the annual meeting of the American hierarchy, called, too, for a world court whose "authority should not be merely advisory but strictly judicial." It urged that the court have the right to "demand" execution of its judgments.

The statement, signed in the name of the Catholic bishops of this country by the administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference follows:

We have met the challenge of war. Shall we meet the challenge of peace?

This is the question uppermost in the minds of men everywhere who in suffering and hardship have stood out against ruthless aggression. The men of our armed forces, the masses of our citizens, our leaders, all want to be true to our heroes who have given so much, some even their lives, in this war for freedom. They want to be true, as well, to future generations on whom we have been forced to place a heavy burden as the price for their freedom. Honestly, earnestly we want to garner from the sacrifices, hardships and losses which have gone into this war, the full fruits of victory, in a good peace. The foremost problem in post-war planning is how to secure for ourselves and all the world a just and lasting peace.

Recently representatives of the United States, the United Kingdom, the Soviet Union and China at Dumbarton Oaks formulated and presented to their governments broad tentative proposals for an international organization for "the maintenance of peace and security and the creation of conditions which make for peace." These proposals have been given to the public for full study and discussion by peoples of all countries. Our own Secretary of State has expressed the hope that leaders of our national thought and opinion will discuss them in the spirit of constructive effort.

FREEDOM FROM HATRED, GREED

Public opinion in our country can exert a tremendous influence in making the peace and determining the manner of international collaboration for its maintenance. If public opinion is indifferent or uninformed, we shall run the risk of a bad peace and perhaps return to the tragedy of "power politics," which in the past divided nations and sowed the seeds of war. If public opinion is alert and informed, we can have a lasting peace and security. It is imperative that all our citizens recognize their responsibility in the making and maintenance of the peace. They must inform themselves on the issues and form their judgments in the light of sound reason and our Christian democratic traditions. They must free themselves from hatred, from distrust, from the spirit of mere expediency, from national greed and from indifference to right in the use of might, and they must form their judgments on the basis of stern objective realities.

This war came largely from bad education. It was not brought on by primitives or unlettered peoples. The contemporary philosophy which asserts the right of aggression is the creation of scholars. Discarding moral principles and crowding God out of human life, scholars produced the monstrous philosophies which, embodied in political and social systems, enslave human reason and destroy the consciousness of innate human rights and duties. In these systems the notion of the common good is utterly distorted; it is no longer conceived as the consequence of the common enjoyment of rights and the common discharge of duties, but the creation of the caprice of a dictator or a group or a party. The gilded dreams of a new era, which these systems heralded, have proved to be a hideous nightmare. If we are to have a just and lasting peace, it must be the creation of a sane realism, which has a clear vision of the moral law, a reverent acknowledgment of God, its author, and a recognition of the oneness of the human race underlying all national distinctions.

ATLANTIC CHARTER WITHOUT EQUIVOCATIONS

We have no confidence in a peace which does not carry into effect, without reservations or equivocations, the principles of the Atlantic Charter. We feel, too, that it should provide assistance for prostrate nations in reconstructing their economic, social and political institutions. If justice is compromised, if unreasonable concessions are made to might, grievances will rankle in the bosom of aggrieved nations to endanger the peace of the world. If prostrate nations are not assisted in giving to their peoples fair economic opportunities they will become the arena of civil strife and turmoil. No international organization will be able to maintain a peace which is unfair and unjust.

There is an international community of nations. God himself has made the nations interdependent for their full life and growth. It is not, therefore, a question of creating an international community but of organizing it. To do this we must repudiate absolutely the tragic fallacies of "power politics" with its balance of power, spheres of influence in a system of puppet governments and the resort to war as a means of settling international difficulties.

MIGHT MUST YIELD TO LAW

After the last world war an attempt was made to organize the international community. It failed, not because its objective was mistaken but because of inherent defects in its charter and, more especially, perhaps, because the nations were not disposed to recognize their duty to work together for the common good of the world. International law must govern international relations. Might must be subordinated to law. An international institution, based on the recognition of an objective moral obligation and not on the binding force of covenant alone, is needed for the preservation of a just peace and the promotion of international co-operation for the common good of the international community. The common good of every nation is inseparably connected with the common good of the international community.

The international institution must be universal. It must seek to include, with due regard to basic equality of all rights, all the nations, large and small, strong and weak. Its constitution must be democratic. While it is reasonable to set up a security council with limited membership, this council must not be an instrument for imperialistic domination by a few powerful nations. Before it every nation must stand on its rights and not on its power. It must not allow any nation to sit in judgment in its own case. Frankly, it must recognize that for nations as well as individuals life is not static. It must, therefore, provide in its charter for the revision of treaties in the interest of justice and the common good of the international community as well as for the recognition of a people's coming of age in the family of nations.

30. 24 — 20483

STRONG NATIONS MUST HELP WEAK

The function of the international organization must be the maintenance of international peace and security, the promotion of international co-operation and the adoption of common policies for the solution of common economic, social and other humanitarian problems. In the maintenance of peace it is reasonable that the organization have at its disposal resources for coercing outlaw nations even by military measures.

In fostering and promoting international co-operation it must seek to guarantee to the weak and poor nations economic opportunities which are necessary to give their peoples reasonable standards of living, and it must seek to prevent selfish monopolistic control of raw materials which are needed for the economic stability of other nations. Effective international co-operation lays definite duties on favored nations. No nation may view with unconcern conditions that permit millions of workers in any country to be without the opportunity to secure from their labor adequate family support. Nations rich in natural resources must remember that ownership of property never dispenses from the social obligations of stewardship. Nations gifted with inventive and productive genius are obligated to serve the reasonable needs of other nations. Nations should open, under effective guaranties, world lanes of commerce and world avenues of communication to all law-abiding countries. Protective national legislation for legitimate national economic interests must not impede the flow of international commerce and the right social function of international exchange.

TEETH FOR WORLD COURT

In the international organization there should be a world court to which justiciable disputes among nations must be submitted. Its authority should not be merely advisory but strictly judicial. A condition for the right functioning of this court is the proper development and codification of international law. Competent international authority must enact into positive law the principles of the moral law in their international references, and to these will be added positive treaty provisions and the charter and legislation of the international organization.

The world court should be empowered to render decisions in cases submitted to it either by any party in interest or by the international organization. It must have authority to refer its decisions to the international organization for execution. It would be useless to set up a world court and either deny it the right to demand the execution of its decisions or make the execution of them subject to the discretion of the international organization. Nations which refuse to submit their international disputes which constitute a threat to the peace of the common good of the international community should be treated by the international organization as outlaw nations. Moreover, obligatory arbitration of international disputes which threaten world peace would mark a signal advance in international relations.

INSIST ON INNATE RIGHTS OF MAN

The international organization must never violate the rightful sovereignty of nations. Sovereignty is a right which comes from the juridical personality of a nation and which the international organization must safeguard and defend. However, national sovereignty may not be interested as absolving a nation from its obligations in the international community. Moreover, even within the state, national sovereignty is limited by the innate rights of men and families. Since civil authority does not confer these God-given rights, it may not violate them.

The ideology of a nation in its internal life is a concern of the international community. To reject this principle is tantamount to maintaining that the violation of the innate rights of men in a country by its own government has no relation to world peace. Just at this moment, in the interest of world peace, our nation is exerting itself to root out some ideologies which violate human rights in the countries we are liberating. We hold that if there is to be a genuine and lasting world peace, the international organization should demand as a condition of membership that every nation guarantee in law and respect in fact the innate rights of men, families and minority groups in their civil and religious life. Surely our generation should know that tyranny in any nation menaces world peace. A nation which refuses to accord to its own people the full enjoyment of innate human rights cannot be relied upon to co-operate in the international community for the maintenance of a peace which is based on the recognition of national freedom. Such a nation will pursue its own selfish international policies, while paying lip service to international co-operation

FREE MEN, FREE NATIONS

We have it within our power to introduce a new era, the era for which peoples have been longing through the centuries, the era in which nations will live together in justice and charity. It is a Christian hope we want to realize, the hope of a world at peace, a world of sovereign states co-operating in assuring all men the full enjoyment of their rights, a world of free men and free nations with their freedom secured under law. War may come, but if our hope is realized it will be a war of punishment meted out to outlaw nations. Through all the sufferings and sacrifices of this war we have remembered and we recall today the words of our Chief Executive, written at its beginning: "We shall win this war and in victory we shall seek not vengeance but the establishment of an international order in which the spirit of Christ shall rule the hearts of men and of nations."

TORPEDOED WAR PRISONERS CITED

U. S. Veterans Who Escaped from Jap Prison Ship Honored.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18—(AP) Forty-five veterans of the early days of fighting in the Philippines, who escaped from a torpedoed Japanese prison ship, have been cited for heroism or awarded the Purple Heart.

The War department announced tonight that the officers and men, among 83 survivors who escaped when the Japanese ship sank and then were taken off the enemy-held Philippines by an American submarine, received their awards in a special ceremony here. The men were being shipped from the Davao prison camp when the torpedoing occurred.

They were among 750 American prisoners on the ship. The fate of the others is unknown.

The citations and the purple hearts were given Lt. Gen. Thomas [illegible] Handy, deputy chief of staff, who expressed the gratitude of the Army and the country to the men who fought the holding action on Bataan and in the southern Philippines when the Japanese were winning.

In addition to the 45 men, Colonel John H. McGee, an infantry officer from Minot, N. D., who had escaped from another Japanese prison ship, was awarded the Legion of Merit. McGee trekked through jungle to join with the other group. The citation said that "his indomitable courage was a major factor in the care of the survivors, and through his efforts, they were successfully evacuated to American control."

U. S. ALSO AGAINST ARGENTINA'S PLEA

Washington, Nov. 18 (A. P.)— Prospects for a Pan-A[illegible] conference this yea[illegible] explosive Argentine issue faded today with disclosure of the United States' position against such a move.

Mexico already had informed the remainder of the American republics on its view that the Argentine request for a foreign ministers' meeting to air its role in hemisphere affairs should not be accepted.

The United States followed with a document distributed to the other governments showing its agreement with the Mexican policy.

Both countries expressed their favor for a hemisphere conference on Dumbarton Oaks world security plans, but without inviting Argentina on an equal status with the other republics.

Most of the other countries have remained officially silent on Argentina's request for a conference.

Chile is understood to favor the Argentina proposal

ARMY CASUALTIES

Washington, Nov. 18 (A. P.)— The War Department announced today the names of 2,039 casualties in the United States Army. Included in the list are the following with their next of kin:

U. S. Shortens Black List Of Latin American Firms

160 Names Removed; 84 Added in Other Parts of World

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18 (AP).— The United States today took 160 names off the black list of Axis and Axis affiliated firms in Latin America, in apparent preparation for return to more normal commerce.

The list for Argentina was the only one which had more additions than deletion in the Western Hemisphere.

Eighty-four additional companies in the rest of the world were added to the group with which American business men cannot deal and sixty-two were removed.

The list tended to carry out the American policy of continuing restrictive measures against companies in neutral European countries and in Argentina, while loosening up on the other American republics in accordance with the progress of the war.

MacLeish Asks Vigilance To Keep Press Freedom

Library of Congress Exhibits Books Once Banned

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18 (AP).— Eternal vigilance is nowhere more necessary than in defense of freedom of the press, Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress, declared today.

"It must be fought for and won in every new generation against the new enemies which in every generation beset it," he said in a statement signalizing the opening of a "freedom of the press" exhibition at the library.

"American history has seen numerous attempts, recently as well as in the past, to force libraries and bookstores to remove certain publications from circulation. Such practices are fatal to a free library system, to a free circulation of knowledge and of ideas and, therefore, to a free culture."

The library put on display, as typical of books which have been subject to censorship in the United States, these works:

"The Merchant of Venice," once banned from Buffalo high schools.

"Candide," once barred by United States customs as obscene.

"Tom Sawyer," once excluded from the children's room in the Brooklyn Public Library.

"Aurora Leigh," composed, according to contemporary Boston opinion, the library said, of "the hysterical indecencies of a disordered mind."

Carl Vitz, president of the American Library Association, said other libraries in the country would hold similar exhibitions.

1,580 Women Marines To Go To Pacific Posts

Washington, Nov. 18 (AP)—Approximately 1,500 enlisted women marines and 80 marine officers will be assigned to units of the Fleet Marine Force on Oahu and the Marine Corps Air Station at Ewa, it was announced today.

The Marine Corps said it was completing its plans for assignment of women marines to Hawaii and that the first contingent of officers had been ordered there by air early next month.

These include Major Marion Wing, Brookline, Mass., and First Lieutenant Dorothy C. McGinnis, Chicago, Ill., commanding officer and adjutant, respectively, of a group to be stationed at Pearl Harbor; First Lieutenant Ruby V. Bishop, Boydton, Va., battalion quartermaster, and Second Lieutenant Pearl M. Martin, Oakland, Cal., recreation officer.

Roosevelt Says He Hopes To Visit Latin America

Washington, Nov 18 (AP)—President Roosevelt today told seven Latin-American women journalists that he hoped after the war to be able to visit Latin-American countries as far south of Chile.

The President received the journalists in his office before they had tea with Mrs. Roosevelt at the White Hose as the first Washington event of a tour of the mid-West and eastern part of the United States.

Overseas GI To Get 12 Christmas Parcels

Washington, Nov. 18 (AP)—Santa has an average of 12 Christmas packages for every GI Joe overseas.

More than 82,000,000 gift parcels have been cleared for shipment to army and navy men aboard or on the high seas, Postmaster General Walker said today.

SPAR Recruiting Ends Thursday

Washington, Nov. 18 (AP)—General recruitment of SPARs ends next Thursday simultaneously with the second anniversary of authorization for women reserves of the United States Coast Guard.

Only replacements or women for special needs will be taken into the service after Thanksgiving Day, the Coast Guard said today. There are nearly 10,000 SPARs now.

Palm Beach (Fla.) recruit training will end after the December 16 class finishes school of six weeks. Current courses will be completed.

After January 6 the United States Coast Guard training station at Manhattan Beach will train any new SPARs.

Early in 1945 about 200 SPARs will begin duty in Hawaii, where Lieut. Margaret Moon, of Muskegon, Mich., is making ready for them now. Later approximately 300 will go to Alaska.

'Whale of Fight' Forecast Over Youth Training

Gurney Fears Roosevelt's Plan Will 'Dilute' His Compulsory Service Bill

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18 (AP).—Congress provided a preview of heavy battling over compulsory military training today, with Senator Chan Gurney, Republican, of South Dakota, promising "a whale of a fight if they try to dilute it."

The real fight won't come off until after the first of the year. Then, when the new Congress meets, legislative committees will tackle the issue of whether to order a year's military training in peace-time for every physically fit American youth.

A new suggestion from President Roosevelt for compulsory "government" training touched off pro and con pyrotechnics in advance.

"He's figuring on vocational training," remarked Senator Gurney, author of a bill for a year's compulsory military service. "I'm going to have a lot to say on this subject. We've got to have the proper kind of training to keep the country strong.

"That's the purpose of my bill, and the onyl thing that would justify passage of legislation of that kind. There'll be a whale of a fight if they try to dilute it."

Mr. Roosevelt indicated at a news conference yesterday that he had in mind something broader than mere military instruction; that he might like to see it linked with physical and vocational education. In general, he said, young people somewhere between the ages of eighteen and twenty-three should give a year's service to the government.

One of those applauding Mr. Roosevelt's idea was Senator Edwin C. Johnson, Democrat, of Colorado. Like Mr. Gurney, a member of the Senate Military Committee, Mr. Johnson said:

"I'd fix it, if I had the say-so, so that we might give youth a year's training in high school or college, so that any military training would be co-ordinated with education. A reserve enlisted corps could be formed, along lines of the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

"I'd even put the age limit down to seventeen to get them in the reserves earlier, when they are more flexible."

"Future wars will be won," he said, "by marching science and marching resources, directed by skilled technicians, and ont by the number of marching men."

Morgenthau To Tell What It Costs For War

Washington, Nov. 18 (AP)—Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury, will tell the nation Monday night what it costs to finance a war.

The Treasury announced tonight that Morgenthau will reveal "startling" figures in an address over the Mutual network from 9 to 9.15 P. M., Eastern War Time.

The talk, to be delivered in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, will be a feature of the New York War Finance Committee's Sixth War Loan inaugural dinner.

Key's Banner Back on View

Flag Which Inspired the National Anthem Is Out of War Storage

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18 (AP).—The orginal Star-Spangled Banner, stored in secrecy away from Washington for many months as a wartime precaution, is again on view at the Smithsonian Institution.

The banner which flew over Fort McHenry, Baltimore, in 1814 and inspired Francis Scott Key to write the national anthem, was one of many historical objects which had been moved to safer places soon after the war broke out. Morse's original telegraph instrument also is again in exhibition.

1,708,238 War Houses

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18 (AP).—The National Housing Agency reported today that 22,154 war housing units were completed in September, bringing to 1,708,238 the number of accommodations completed since July, 1940. At the end of September 96,094 units were under construction and 66,432 more were scheduled to be started.

WPB To Create Dozen New Advisory Groups

Washington, Nov. 18 (AP)—The War Production Board today announced it would create 12 new labor advisory committees soon.

This will make a total of 31 such committees. Their principal purpose is to familiarize labor groups with WPB programs and to offer recommendations for increasing military production.

They also will be asked for suggestions to speed reconversion after the defeat of Germany.

The new committees will represent the following fields: building materials, construction machinery, electrical machinery, farm equipment, furniture, office machinery, plumbing and heating, rubber products, transportation equipment, general industrial equipment, general electrical appliances and nonerrous mining and mill products.

FDR Committee Discloses Big Rise in Living Costs

Labor Leaders Use 30 Per Cent Increase to Demand Pay Boosts.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18—(AP) President Roosevelt's special committee to investigate the wartime rise in living costs reported today that for the bulk of wage earners it amounts to 29 to 30 per cent.

Rejecting union labor claims that the rise is about 44 per cent, Chairman William H. Davis, with two industry members concurring "in the main," concluded that 3 1-2 to 4 1-2 percentage points should be added to the 25.5 per cent increase shown by the bureau of labor statistics index as of last Sept. 15.

Labor Seeks Wage Boosts

The two labor members, though not agreeing with Davis' conclusions, pointed to them, nevertheless, as support for AFL and CIO arguments that wage controls should be eased.

In a letter to the President, George Meany of the AFL proposed specifically that the "Little Steel" formula be relaxed to permit wage increases of 30 per cent above the January, 1941, level. The formula limits general wage increases to 15 per cent above that base date.

Davis' report emphasized that the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) index did not undertake to be all inclusive, but was aimed to measure the prices of supplies going to make up the family budget of big city dwellers with an average income of $1,524, based on a 1934-36 survey.

He expressed the opinion that for those with low incomes the increase in living costs had been higher than 30 per cent but praised the technical competence and care of those preparing the BLS.

"No substantial criticism of the BLS methods has survived the searching studies presented to this committee," he said.

It might be well, Davis concluded, to make periodic broader studies than are included in the BLS statistics but he said that was a matter for study by the budget bureau and others.

And he recommended that some name other than "cost of living" index be chosen for the BLS figure—a recommendation on which labor and industry members agreed.

The report is expected to weigh importantly in the President's consideration of labor's demands for a change in the Little Steel formula, but the major report on that issue is yet to come.

The War Labor board currently is working on a general report on wage policies growing out of demands by the CIO United Steel workers and other CIO unions for increases above the limits of the Little Steel policy. This will deal with wages in relation to living costs, maintenance of future purchasing power and other factors but will not make recommendations. It is expected to be several weeks at a minimum before it reaches the White House.

Davis Accepts Report

Davis accepted, in preparing his report, most of the findings by a technical committee headed by Dr. Wesley C. Mitchell, director of research of the National Bureau of Economic research.

Mitchell's group agreed that there was some substance to the labor argument that the BLS index failed to reflect quality deterioration, disappearance of cheaper consumption items, declines in special sales and increased under-reporting of prices actually charged.

It was on the basis of such "hidden increases" that Davis concluded 3 to 4 percentage points should be added to the BLS index. Saying there was evidence the increase had been greater in small cities than in large, he said another 1-2 percentage point should be added if the index was to reflect costs of workers in both small and large communities.

The special committee to study the wartime increase in living costs was appointed on Oct. 22, 1943. A day earlier, a group of labor leaders had taken to the White House a protest that the BLS index failed by far to show the true rise in living costs.

President Roosevelt asked Davis, who is chairman of the War Labor board, to head a committee "to look into the question and try to answer and make clear how the index figure is arrived at, whether any changes should be made in its component parts, or other improvements."

As finally formed, the committee included Davis, Horace B. Horton and George K. Batt as industry members, and Meany, secretary-treasurer of the AFL, and R. J. Thomas, president of the CIO United Automobile workers, as labor members.

The final result was three separate reports aggregating some 60,000 words.

Security Board Favors Wider Job Insurance

Would Cover Places With Only One Employee; Pay More for Longer Time

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18 (AP).—The Social Security Board recommended today the extension of unemployment insurance to employees in establishments having as few as one employee. The board also recommended lengthening benefits to twenty-six weeks and an increase to $25 in maximum weekly benefits.

Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, suggested that the various states study their laws with a view to providing "adequate protection during reconversion to workers who become unemployed." All state legislatures meet in 1945 except those of Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi and Virginia.

In twenty-four states, unemployment insurance coverage now is limited to establishments of eight or more employees. In fourteen states coverage is restricted to establishments with two or more employees. Only thirteen states cover single employees.

Mr. Altmeyer estimated that protection is denied to 3,000,000 workers because they work for small firms. Another 15,000,000 workers are not protected because their kinds of employment are not covered.

The present length of benefits now varies from fourteen to twenty weeks. Weekly maximum benefits range from $15 to $22. Minimums go down to $2.

In New York maximum benefits are $18 a week for twenty weeks. The state law covers establishments with four or more employees for at least fifteen days a year.

Agricultural and governmental workers and those engaged exclusively in charitable, educational, religious or scientific activities are not covered.

Mr. Altmeyer recommended that "every state which feels capable of doing so" amend its laws to include agricultural workers. He also favored the inclusion of state and local governmental employees.

When the 1945 state legislative sessions convene, Mr. Altmeyer reported, more than $6,000,000,000 will have accumulated in state unemployment funds.

"There seems general agreement," Mr. Altmeyer remarked, "that these funds are more than sufficient to withstand the reconversion period; that they are sufficient for a more adequate program in the immediate post-war period."

Mr. Altmeyer also recommended raising of the maximum on the amount of public assistance payable, especially for aid to dependent children. In many states, he said, the maximums are too low to provide the minimum essentials of living.

WOULD EXPAND PEPPER'S PLAN

A. F. L. Spokesman Favors Change in Controls.

Washington, Nov. 18 (A. P.).—An A. F. of L. spokesman today indorsed the Pepper 65-cent wage-floor resolution, but advocated a more "realistic" removal of controls from monthly incomes of $200 or less for family heads. Lewis G. Hines, legislative representative of the A. F. of L., told a Senate subcommittee studying the resolution that he was expressing the views of A. F. of L. President William Green.

Under his suggestion, employers would be permitted to raise salaries or wages to the $200 ($150 for unmarried persons) level without approval of the War Labor Board. The general 40-cents-an-hour wage minimum of the wage-hour act would be retained.

The pending resolution, introduced by Senator Pepper (D. Fla.), would inform the WLB that Congress considers straight time hourly wages of less than 65 cents an hour to be substandard.

"The adoption of this measure will tend to mitigate the gross inequalities together with their resultant hardships that the rigid application of the Little Steel formula has brought about," Mr. Hines said.

"The Little Steel formula, considered as a rationally just measure against inflation, is dead. Originally conceived to balance wages against the cost of living, it was doomed to failure from the start. And why? Simply because the price of food, clothing, rent, house furnishings, &c., had increased more than 15 per cent when the workers were informed by the President's hold-the-line order of April, 1942, that they could receive no more than a 15 per cent hourly increase."

Other Groups Indorse Plan.

The Pepper resolution was indorsed by Broaddus Mitchell of the A. F. of L. garment workers' union, Charles I. Stengle of the American Federation of Government employees and Donald Sands of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees.

Indorsing the resolution on behalf of the Commercial Telegraphers' union (A. F. of L.), Henry G. Steinbrenner, deputy international president, testified:

"The Western Union Telegraph Company, now virtually a monopoly in the telegraph field, in spite of excessive overtime, and with total wage increases of from 20 to 24½ per cent within the past four years is paying an approximate average of 67 cents per hour ($26.80 per week) to all employees, exclusive of walking and bicycle messengers.

"Exclusive of overtime, many of these employees receive around 50 cents per hour."

J. L. Lemtie, representing the Tobacco Workers' International union, said some workers in that industry receive as little as 50 cents an hour. He attributed the current cigarette shortage in part to a shortage of help.

WAR BOND DRIVE TO START MONDAY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18—(AP) What promises to be the most vigorous of all the war bond drives will start Monday with the theme that the war's not over and many bloody battles are ahead.

Treasury officials said six million volunteer workers have been lined up to fight "the complacency of many over-optimistic persons who conclude from our successes in Europe and the Pacific that our two wars are almost won."

Preparations for the Sixth War Loan have been the most elaborate yet. The goal is 14 billion dollars, of which 5 billion is the quota for individuals. The closing date is Dec. 16.

President Roosevelt will give the "go" signal in a talk over all radio networks Sunday night at 10 o'clock, Eastern War Time.

General Dwight D. Eisenhower has appealed to the American people "on behalf of your sons, brothers, husbands and friends" to oversubscribe the loan.

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau has said all groups cooperating in the job of salesmanship are showing "amazing enthusiasm" and that the volunteer workers understand the critical nature of this particular drive.

Morgenthau already has expressed the conviction that there will have to be a Seventh War loan after this one.

The slogan of the volunteers is: "My thinking, my money and my time will stay in this war to the finish."

Borrowing has been the chief means of financing the war. Federal Reserve authorities reported today that taxation has provided only a little more than one-third of the government's cash requirements in the last five years.

Reorganization Urged In Diplomatic Service

New York, Nov. 18 (AP)—Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Under Secretary of Commerce, today advocated reorganization of the United States diplomatic service to include economic counselors serving with the rank of minister.

Expressing the belief that after the war diplomatic and political considerations would be based on the United States' success in the economic field, he said:

"We can have the best policies which human intelligence can devise, but unless these policies are executed by well-equipped, fully staffed organizations, our intentions and our policies will be of minor value."

Taylor spoke at a conference of post-war planning of manufacturing sponsored by the New York chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management.

Cooper And Hancock To Address N. A. M.

New York, Nov. 18 (AP)—Kent Cooper, executive director and general manager of the Associated Press, and John M. Hancock, co-author of the Baruch-Hancock report, will be among the principal speakers at the 49th annual meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers here next month.

The conference, titled the War and Reconversion Congress of American Industry, will be held December 6 to 8.

The N. A. M. said that Cooper, long an advocate of world-news freedom, would discuss "A Free Press in a Free World" on December 8. Hancock, whose report is the basis for reconversion legislation, will speak December 6 on the topic "Guns to Butter" at the session devoted to "Industry's Vision of America."

Nomination Of Porter To FCC Is Protested

New York, Nov. 18 (AP)—The Socialist party national executive committee said today it had protested the nomination of Paul A. Porter, Democratic national committee publicity director, as a member of the Federal Communications Commission.

Porter's nomination to the FCC has been made by President Roosevelt and is before the Senate for approval.

In a telegram to Senator Burton K. Wheeler (D., Mont.), chairman of the Interstate Commerce committee, the Socialist party committee said the protest was based on the "manifest impropriety of elevation of the publicity manager in a bitter political campaign and also former counsel for a network to a commission controlling radio and other communications."

Took Part In Campaign; Quits NMU Post As Alien

New York, Nov. 18 (AP)—Ferdinand C. Smith has resigned as national secretary of the National Maritime Union (CIO) because he is an alien and held the office in violation of the union's constitution, Joseph Curran, NMU president, announced today.

Curran said that Smith, a Negro, had entered the country from the West Indies in 1918, and filed his intention to become a citizen but never received his final papers.

A statement, which Curran said was approved unanimously by the union's national council, declared that "reactionary newspapers had launched an attack on Smith's status as a citizen and a leader of his union" when the NMU sent him on a speaking tour during the recent election campaign.

Two Uses For Surplus Engines Are Suggested

New York, Nov. 18 (AP)—Representatives of 16 Diesel engine manufacturing concerns and of 26 engineering schools proposed today that part of an estimated billion dollars' worth expected to be surplus property at the end of the war be donated or sold to technical schools to advance studies of such power plants.

It was also suggested that the Surplus Property Administrator consider lend-leasing some of the engines, ranging from 75 to 6,000 horsepower, to Russia, China and other war-ravaged nations for use in rehabilitating electric plants. Many of the larger Diesels, built to power ships, are suitable for such purposes, it was explained.

11 Men Rescued By Coast Guard Near Cape Cod

Breeches Buoy Used After Storm Sinks Barge and Drives a Tug Aground

BOSTON, Nov. 18 (AP).—Coast Guardsmen rescued eleven men and a twelfth saved himself during a howling northeast storm off Sandwich, on Cape Cod, Friday, when a barge foundered and a tug, attempting a rescue, was driven hard aground.

The story of the rescues was made public today by Coast Guard headquarters.

The two-man barge crew was picked up by patrol boats. Nine of the ten men aboard the tug were saved by a breeches buoy, which was shot out by a beach crew from the Sandwich station. One man was plunged into the water when the breeches buoy line snapped, but was hauled out quickly. All were treated at the Sandwich station for immersion and exposure.

The barge went down despite an all-night fight by her crew to keep her afloat after she sprang a leak. She was filled with coal. Friday morning her skipper, Lawrence Kydd, of New Bedford, called for help and three patrol boats and the tug stood by to rescue. Ules Hines, of Matawan, N. J., "donkey man" on the barge, leaped overboard and was picked up. Kydd went down when a lifeboat overturned, but was saved after floundering in the water for a few minutes.

Meanwhile, the skipper of the tug, Oliver Givens, of Flushing, N. Y., discovered his wheel was not responding. Helpless before the wind, his craft was washed ashore and went firmly aground. The beach party went into action with the breeches buoy shooting a line across the tug.

Skipper Givens fell into the pounding surf when the hawser snapped as the tug lurched, but Coast Guardsman Donald H. Ward, of Portland, Me., plunged in and dragged him to the beach.

Others taken from the tug included chief engineer Robert Marnell, of Ozone Park, Queens, who carried the ship's mascot, a dog named Jock, ashore with him.

Medal-Winning Sgt. Kelly Has New Family Home

Mother Leaves Pittsburgh Alley for Modern Apartment

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 18 (AP).—Sergeant Charles E. Kelly, famed Congressional Medal of Honor winner, will not have to return to the cramped alley home in which he was reared, "Mom" Kelley has moved.

"Mom" moved into a five-room apartment in a three-story red brick building in north side's "Dutchtown," the same neighborhood in which she raised her seven service sons.

Here "Mom" has a separate kitchen and living room instead of the two-in-one she had in the old homestead—a large bright kitchen complete with all modern equipment.

The living room is freshly papered in pink and blue with sparkling new furniture to match.

Nazi War Captive Sentenced.

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 18 (A. P.).—Helmut Franz, a German prisoner of war at Fort du Pont stockade, was sentenced to three months in prison after a general court-martial on charges of manslaughter in the death of Anton Haecher on September 15. Haecher, also a prisoner of war, died following a quarrel with Franz.

TO DEBATE WORLD NEWS EXCHANGE

Morgantown, W. Va., Nov. 18 (A. P.).—The United States has decided to open discussions with other nations looking toward international agreements on world freedom of news exchange, it was disclosed today. Washington thus would make the first move by any government in history toward achieving a working basis for guaranteeing unhindered interchange of independent news in order to promote better understanding among all nations.

The disclosure was made by Paul Miller, assistant general manager of the Associated Press and chief of the Washington Bureau, in remarks prepared for a luncheon meeting of the West Virginia State Newspaper Council. He said the American Government's aim to undertake exploratory talks with other countries was outlined to him by Acting Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, who authorized making it public here today.

"I believe it is possible," Mr. Miller added, "that the subject of international news freedom will appear on the agenda of the United Nations conference which American officials hope will be held early in 1945.

"This is the conference projected to follow up the Dumbarton Oaks meetings where a plan of world organization was worked out by the representatives of the United States, Russia, Britain and China. However, if the subject isn't fitted into that agenda, it will be brought up for international discussions otherwise. The important thing is that the Government is planning steps, however tentative, that could start the world ball rolling."

Ford Proposes Seniority Plan For Veterans

Asks U.A.W. for Right to Hire Ex-Fighters at Any Time, Despite Other Lay-Offs

DETROIT, Nov. 18 (AP).—The Ford Motor Company would be permitted to hire honorably discharged war veterans "at any time even when there are other employees of the company who have been laid off," under a proposal submitted by the company today to the United Automobile Workers, an affiliate of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

The company also proposed that its contract with the union include a stipulation that "in case of either temporary or permanent layoffs, veterans of Word War II, either able or disabled, may in the discretion of the company, be by-passed without regard to the seniority rights of other employers."

Other proposals would grant to re-employed veterans who entered the armed services prior to Jan. 1, 1942, seniority dating from the day they were inducted into the services. Those who entered the armed services after Jan. 1, 1942 would be granted seniority dating from Jan. 1, 1942.

The stipulations would apply to a war veteran hired by the company within one year from the date of his discharge or within ninety days after recoving from a physical disability resulting from his military service, whichever period is longer.

The company announced today that a plan for bonus vacation allowances for reinstated veterans, suggested by Henry Ford 2d, executive vice-president of the company, had been approved by the regional War Labor Board.

It calls for payment to an estimated 2,500 veterans who already have returned to work at the Ford plants of approximately $80,000 in vacation pay immediately. When all veterans have returned the company estimates it will have paid them approximately $3,000,000 in vacation pay.

Under previous regulations returning veterans would have had to work at least a year before qualifying for vacation with pay.

PRODUCTION OFF, SAYS KING

Admiral And Morgenthau Speak At Exhibit

Chicago, Nov. 18 (AP)—Admiral Ernest J. King, navy commander in chief, said tonight the speed of our advance in both war theaters has created new production problems for the navy.

In an address at the opening of the navy's Sixth War Loan exhibit at the Navy Pier here, Admiral King said accelerated operations "are placing a heavy strain upon reserves of certain vital items and production of these items is falling behind the mounting requirements."

"For example," he added, "assault transports and supply vessels which traverse the wide expanses of the Pacific carrying battle troops and their battle equipment to enemy beachheads are not being produced rapidly enough to enable us to maintain our momentum."

Short On Rockets

"Rockets are a major item in which we are short. They have proved so effective, when launched either from ships or planes, that the production program has had to be expanded from $8,000,000 established in the first quarter of 1944 to $161,000,000 the third quarter of 1945.

"We are not getting enough high capacity ammunition—the kind that is used against shore installations. Experience has shown that extensive pre-invasion bombardment saves American lives, and the navy has therefore stepped up its production schedules to a 1945 peak that will exceed the recent production rate by about 50 per cent."

Admiral King said that while the war today "is well ahead" of last year's expectations "this should stimulate rather than sap our determination to carry on with every means we can muster."

Morgenthau Speaks

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who also spoke, set the costs of the Marianas campaign at $997,000,000.

"Let us look," hesaid, "at the costs of a single naval operation. Take for example, the Marianas campaign. Thenaval force which participated in this single operation represented an investment by the American people of well over $5,000,000,000.

"Of course, this investment in ships and planes will be used over and over again, and cannot be charged up as the costs of conquering Guam, Saipan, Tinian, and the other Marianas islands.

Cost $997,000,000

"But we did pay out almost a billion dollars—$977,000,000, as nearly as we can estimate it—for the Marianas operation alone."

He asserted "the costs will mount . . . there may be a hundred Aachens, a hundred Leytes between us and final victory. That is why there must be a Sixth War Loan Drive and a seventh and perhaps an eighth before this war is won."

Catholic Paper's Attack 'Astounding' to Bob Hope

Actor Defends Service Shows Critiziced by Boston 'Pilot'

CHICAGO, Nov. 18 (AP).—Bob Hope, comedian, says he is "astounded" and "amazed" by an editorial in "The Pilot," official publication of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston, which urged entertainers not to make "our men in uniform" laugh "at the wrong things."

"My record of entertaining service men and women speaks for itself," Mr. Hope said today after reading excerpts of the editorial—"An Open Letter to a Radio Star"—which said: "Does it mean nothing to Mr. Hope that some soldiers, because of "morale" building programs, may face their God unprepared for the reckoning?"

"I'm concerned about the editorial—but not worried," Mr. Hope said, adding that he had made four overseas trips and entertained at every Army and Navy camp in the country—"trying to cheer up more than six million of our service men—trying to give them a laugh."

"There's never been any criticism of my shows by military authorities, religious groups or from the service men themselves," he said, "on the contrary, I've won the congratulations and expressions of good will for my humble efforts from military officials and from chaplains of every faith. I feel very keenly about my responsibility to these service men and women and I consider it a privilege to have entertained them. The faith they have in me, as they have shown, I will not violate."

"The Pilot's" editorial, which offered to the radio star its "admiration and heart-felt thank you" for "his sacrifices in behalf of the men who have given their all for us," said there is another consideration, adding:

"His 'gags,' his puns, his sly leers at the decencies which keep the world from falling apart, pop with the mechanical staccato of corn jumping from the vendor's wire basket. . . . Some of the men who hear the comedian's artful filth, whose minds recur to it afterwards, who act out its innuendos, are going to die. The Church has no invocation against sudden death. But she does have an incessant and very earnest prayer against 'a sudden and unprovided death.'"

BRITISH DECISION AWAITED AT PARLEY

CHICAGO, Nov. 18—The International Civil Aviation conference all but completed work on technical standards and procedures for flying today while awaiting the British decision on a compromise proposal for an agency to oversee postwar airlines.

The technicians, who agreed on the necessity of adopting a convention in the operational field, have proceeded independently of the deliberations on economic and political issues with which many delegation leaders are concerned. These latter have been in a state of expectation since Friday, with the next important step—and even the date of the conference—resting on the reply from London, which is hoped for by Monday.

ZIONIST SEES BIG EXPENSES

$30,000,000 Asked For '45 To Send Jews To Palestine

Chicago, Nov. 18 (AP)—World Jewry must spend $30,000,000 during 1945 in preparation for a Palestinian immigration of 1,000,000 Jews, the opening session of the national conference for Palestine was told tonight.

Dr. James G. Heller, national chairman of the United Palestine Appeal, the conference's fund-raising organization, added in a prepared address that such a budget "would be far below the mark."

"Even this," he said, "is only a conjecture, only an attempt to plan for a period in which needs may at any moment leap far beyond expectations.

Masses Want To Go

"More and more of our people are escaping from central Europe. The masses of Jews still left in Rumania, in Bulgaria, in the liberated sections of Poland . . . will want to go to Palestine."

He predicted that with development of water ad power projects in the Jordan Valley along lines of the American TVA, the Holy Land would be able to support 4,000,000 additional Jews in the colonies.

Dr. Heller characterized the recent outbreaks of terrorism, including the assassination of Lord Moyne, British resident Minister, as "the aberration of men driven crazy by suffering, by the cruelties of our time, by their own festering conviction of injury.

England's Onus

"Certainly in our world it is not difficult to think that the powers-that-be pay attention to nothing but violence. To some extent England, with all its great virtues, with all its own heroism during the war, bears the responsibility for these men.

"The policy of the white paper, the exclusion and death of refugees fleeing for their lives, the men and women rotting in the fever forests of Mauritius . . . all these taken together have served to unhinge unbalanced minds and to throw them into histrionics."

The conferenme also heard a message from Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, terming the development of the Jewish colony in Palestine "a magnificent story."

50 Are Sentenced In Navy Mutiny

San Francisco, Nov. 18 (AP)—Initial sentences of imprisonment for 15 years were imposed on 50 navy enlisted men convicted on one specification of mutiny for refusing to load ammunition, 12th Naval District headquarters announced today.

Rear Admiral Carleton H. Wright, USN, commandant of the district, ruled, however, that mitigating circumstances in some cases justified reduction of the sentence to eight years.

All the men are Negroes. Their court-martial was held at Yerba Buena Island, San Francisco Bay, last month.

In addition to the initial sentence of 15 years' confinement, reduced in some instances, the conviction carried reduction to the rate of apprentice seaman, and dishonorable discharge upon completion of confinement.

Admiral Wright reviewed the court-martial findings, as the convening authority and ordered mitigation of sentences in the case of 40 of the 50 defendants, taking into account youth, previous clear record and short period of service.

3,500 Marines Return To U. S. From Pacific

Palau Island and Guadalcanal Veterans to Get Furloughs

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Nov. 18 (AP).—More than 3,500 veterans of the 1st Marine Division—the largest contingent of leathernecks to return from the Pacific warfare—arrived in San Diego today aboard a transport. The marines came from the Palau Islands campaign and from earlier operations at Guadalcanal and New Britain. Many had been overseas thirty-one months.

The first man to come down the gangplank, Private Elias Abbott, twenty-four years old, of West Newton, Pa., was greeted by Brigadier General Archie F. Howard, commanding general of the Marine Corps base. Many of the returning marines had served under the general on Guadalcanal and New Britain.

The 3,492 enlisted men and fifty-nine officers were taken to the west coast reclassification and redistribution center at the base to await thirty-day furloughs.

Private Le Roy Price jr., twenty, of 931 Hollywood Avenue, the Bronx, N. Y., said he wanted his girl in Australia to come to America to be married to him.

WITH THE U.S.NINTH ARMY AT PUFFENDORF, GERMANY, NOV.18-(AP)-SLOGGING FORWARD BEHIND TREMENDOUS ARTILLERY BARRAGES, AMERICAN NINTH ARMY INFANTRY TONIGHT PUSHED INTO SIERSDORF, 5-1/2 MILES SOUTHWEST OF THE IMPORTANT GERMAN ROAD JUNCTION OF JULICH.

THE NAZIS THREW IN "MAJOR FORCES" INCLUDING ARMORED UNITS IN AN EFFORT TO HALT THE GRINDING AND BRUISING ADVANCE THAT HAD EARLIER GOBBLED UP PUFFENDORF, SIX MILES WEST OF JULICH; MARIADORF, SEVEN MILES NORTHEAST OF AACHEN ON THE JULICH ROAD, AND WURSELEN, TWO MILES NORTHEAST OF AACHEN.

THE DOUGHBOYS, AFTER THE TWO MILE GAIN THAT BROUGHT THEM TO SIERSDORF, FOUND ONLY A SMOKING HULK OF WHAT USED TO BE A BUSY GERMAN TOWN.

THE WHOLE FRONT THROBBED WITH THE THUNDER OF THOUSANDS OF SHELLS AS TOWN AFTER TOWN WAS BEING WIPED OFF THE MAP BY WITHERING BARRAGES OF AMERICAN GUNS AND DIVE BOMB ATTACKS.

MEANWHILE, AMERICAN AND BRITISH TROOPS WORKING AS AN ALLIED TEAM ASSAULTED THE HEAVILY FORTIFIED GERMAN CITY OF GEILENKIRCHEN, NEAR THE DUTCH BORDER.

ALLIED BIG GUNS POUNDED THE CITY WHILE AMERICAN INFANTRY "MARRIED IN BATTLE" TO BRITISH TANKS OVERRAN EARLY OBJECTIVES WELL AHEAD OF SCHEDULE. SOME U.S. NINTH ARMY UNITS WERE NOW NINE MILES INSIDE GERMANY EAST OF GEILENKIRCHEN. ONE GROUP OF BRITISH AND AMERICANS TOOK 300 PRISONERS WITHIN A FEW HOURS.

"WE'VE BEEN MARRIED TO THE BRITISH JUST A FEW DAYS BUT IT IS GOING OFF PERFECT," DECLARED LT.COL.CHARLES HOY (1884 COLUMBIA RD.) WASHINGTON, D.C.

IT IS A BALD, UGLY AND TREMENDOUSLY SCARRED COFFIN-SHAPED KNOLL, BUT THE BITTER EFFORT REQUIRED TO TAKE IT PERFECTLY ILLUSTRATES WHAT HAS BEEN GOING ON ALL OVER THE FRONT.

IN THE 30 MINUTES THAT PRECEDED THE JUMPOFF OUR ARTILLERY AND

AIR ARMS PUT DOWN BARRAGES ALMOST COMPARABLE TO THE FIRST AIR-GUN BARRAGE LAID DOWN AT AACHEN AT THE EXPIRATION OF THE AMERICAN ULTIMATUM TO THE GERMAN COMMANDER IN THE CITY TO SURRENDER.

THE GERMANS IN THE OPEN AREA IN FRONT OF ITS FORWARD SLOPE WERE FLAILED INTO THE GROUND.

FIVE OF OUR TANKS CROSSED THE ROLLING FIELDS WITH THE FIRST WAVE OF INFANTRY AND NOW ONE IS BURNING OUT IN FRONT OF US. IT STRUCK A MINE. BUT THERE WAS NO GERMAN FIRE SHORT OF THE BASE OF THE HILL ITSELF; OUR BOMBARDMENT HAD SEEN TO THAT.

IN THIS SECTOR AT LEAST THE SKY ALL DAY HAS BEEN FULL OF OUR PLANES AND THE BLACK PUFFS OF GERMAN ACK-ACK. BUT IN SPITE OF THE SCOPE OF THE ENEMY'S ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE, WE HAVE SEEN ONLY ONE AMERICAN PLANE GO DOWN.

AT 2:30 P.M., CAPT.GEORGE MCNEILL OF HADDON FIELD, N.J., TURNED AND SAID CONVERSATIONALLY:

"THIRTY MINUTES FROM NOW IS H-HOUR (THE HOUR FIXED FOR THE INFANTRY ASSAULT)."

THE EARTH WAS SHAKING FROM THE AMERICAN BOMBARDMENT AND THE GERMANS' ANSWERING FIRE. TWO STONE HOUSES WHERE THE GERMANS HAD HOLED IN WERE KNOCKED APART BY OUR GUNS.

AT 2:55 P.M., THE U.S.GUNS WERE THROWING HEAVY SHELLS INTO THE FORWARD SLOPE OF "CRATER HILL" AND WHITE PHOSPHORUS SHELLS ON ITS REVERSE SLOPES AGAINST THE NAZIS WHO WERE CREEPING BACK THERE.

JUST AT 3 P.M., FROM THE WOODS AHEAD OF US OUR INFANTRY CAME OUT ON THE RUN IN SUDDEN ABSOLUTE QUIET.

WITH U.S. NINTH ARMY IN GERMANY NOV 17-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THE GERMANS HAVE SOWN EXTENSIVE LAND MINES IN THIS SECTOR AND WHEN THE DOUGHBOYS MOVE AT NIGHT CASUALTIES ARE APT TO BE HEAVY.

THAT WAS THE CASE LAST NIGHT. TWENTY OR 30 GI'S WOUNDED BY ANTI-PERSONNEL MINES LAY IN THE OPEN IN SUB-FREEZING COLD WHILE THEIR COMRADES TRIED IN VAIN TO REACH THEM.

"OUR COMPANY FIRST RAN INTO THE FIELD WHILE ADVANCING IN YESTERDAYS ATTACK," SAID PVT. JOHN BORKENHAGEN, 3040 AGATE ST., PHILADELPHIA. "A LITTLE FURTHER ON WE HAD TO DIG IN FOR THE NIGHT.

ENEMY MORTARS FIRE FINALLY GOT SO HOT THAT WE TRIED TO GET BACK THROUGH THE MINE FIELD."

(AP)--THE SEVENTH ARMY'S ATTACK AROUND BLAMONT, APPROXIMATELY 40 MILES WEST OF STRASBOURG, GAINED IMPETUS TODAY WITH AMERICAN DIVE-BOMBERS PLASTERING THE AREA IN NEAR-PERFECT WEATHER REMINISCENT OF SATURDAY AFTERNOON FOOTBALL GAMES.

THE FALL OF BLAMONT AND OTHER TOWNS IN THE IMMEDIATE VICINITY APPEARED IMMINENT, DOVE-TAILING WITH THE OTHER GAINS ALONG THE SEVENTH'S WINDING, 50-MILE FRONT. SINCE MONDAY, THE SEVENTH HAS ADVANCED UP TO TEN MILES, SCORING ITS GREATEST GAINS AGAINST WEAKENING

OPPOSITION IN THE NORTHERN AREA EAST OF LUNEVILLE.

SOGGY, AND FREQUENTLY WATER-COVERED FIELDS, PRECLUDE THE USE OF THE SEVENTH'S ARMOR AND MOTORIZED VEHICLES SO THE STABS EASTWARD AND NORTHEASTWARD GENERALLY ARE ALONG PAVED ROADS. BLAMONT, FOR EXAMPLE, IS ON A FINE, TWO-LANE PAVEMENT STRETCHING FROM LUNEVILLE TO SARRESBOURG TO STRASBOURG. ST. DIE, ABOUT 20 AIR-LINE MILES SOUTHEAST OF BLAMONT, IS ON ANOTHER EXCELLENT ROAD SNAKING ABOUT 35 MILES NORTHEASTWARD TO STRASBOURG ON THE FRENCH BANK OF THE RHINE.

THE RAIN HAD CEASED ON THIS FRONT BUT TRENCHES AND FOXHOLES REMAINED WATER-FILLED AND USELESS. THE AMERICAN DRIVE WAS HINDERED AIDED GREATLY BY ARTILLERY, OF WHICH THE GERMANS SEEMED TO HAVE LITTLE. BUT LT. COL. A. C. DOHRMAN, OF LINCOLN, NEB., OF THE VETERAN 79TH DIVISION WARNED THAT, ALTHOUGH THE GERMANS WERE WEAKENING "THEY HAVE NOT FALLEN APART YET."

WITH U.S.THIRD ARMY, NOV 18-(AP)-THIRD ARMY UNITS DROVE ANOTHER MILE INTO GERMANY TODAY, CLOSING WITH GUNFIRE THE LAST ESCAPE ROUTE FOR THE NAZI FORCES LOCKED IN METZ IN A FIERCE STRUGGLE WITH THE AMERICANS.

TROOPS OF THE U.S. 95TH DIVISION CROSSED A CANAL ONTO A SMALL ISLAND WITHIN METZ. (CORRECT).

NORTHEAST OF METZ UNITS OF THE 90TH DIVISION JUMPED AHEAD AS MUCH AS NINE MILES IN A SOUTHEASTWARD THRUST.

THIRTY MILES NORTHEAST OF NANCY THE 35TH DIVISION MOVED FIVE MILES NORTHEASTWARD TOWARD THE MAGINOT LINE.

AT THE SAME TIME THE 26TH DIVISION ADVANCED A HALF-MILE EASTWARD WHILE CAVALRY UNITS SWEPT NINE MILES TO DIEUZE.

INFANTRY OF THE 95TH DIVISION ALSO OVERRAN FORT SAINT JULIEN, A MILE NORTHEAST OF METZ AND HELPED CUT THE NAZIS ESCAPE ROUTE TO ONE MILE WHICH WAS COVERED BY HEAVY ARTILLERY FIRE.

IT WAS THE 377TH REGIMENT OF THE 95TH DIVISION, COMMANDED BY COL. FRED E.GALLARD OF SEWANEE, TENN., WHICH TOOK FORT ST. JULIEN AND PUSHED ON TO WITHIN A MILE OF THE FIFTH DIVISION'S 10TH AND SECOND REGIMENTS COMING FROM THE SOUTH IN A THRUST THAT HAS CARRIED THEM IO OR ACROSS THE LAST RAIL LINE OUT OF THE CITY.

THUNDERBOLTS OF THE 19TH TACTICAL AIRFORCE STRAFED AND BOMBED THICKLY PACKED COLUMNS ALONG THE TWO HIGHWAYS REMAINING IN GERMAN HANDS, BUT BEST INDICATIONS WERE THAT THESE COLUMNS WERE NOT EVACUATIONS OF FIGHTING MEN, BUT MERELY NON-ESSENTIAL PERSONNEL REMOVING RECORDS AND OTHER UNNEEDED MATERIALS.

OTHER UNITS OF THE 377TH REGIMENT ALSO SURROUNDED AND BY-PASSED FORT JEANNE D'ARC, THREE MILES WEST OF METZ AND FORT FLAPPEVILLE, TWO MILES NORTHWEST, AS WELL AS SENDING SOLDIERS INTO THE CITY. REPORTS ON THESE PENETRATIONS WERE INCOMPLETE TONIGHT, BUT APPARENTLY THEY HAD CROSSED A CANAL BRIDGE ON TO A SMALL ISLAND OCCUPIED MAINLY BY BARRACKS, CHURCHES AND PARADE GROUNDS.

THE THIRD FOR REVENGE ROSE HIGHER AS THE FRENCH SOLDIERS HEARD THAT THE GERMANS HAD SET FIRE TO 10 MORE FRENCH VILLAGES IN THE PATH OF THE U.S. SEVENTH ARMY IN THE SECTOR FARTHER NORTH.

ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF METZ, NOV 18-(AP -THE FORTRESS CITY OF METZ BECAME A BATTLEFIELD TODAY.

AS AMERICAN INFANTRY PUSHED INTO THE CITY WITH THE SUPPORT OF TANKS THIS MORNING IT WAS CLEAR THAT THE GERMAN DEFENDERS HAD DECIDED ON A BATTLE TO THE DEATH IN THE STREETS AND HOUSES OF METZ.

I SAW STREAMS OF AMERICAN FOOT SOLDIERS FLOWING AROUND THE FORTRESSES WHICH GUARD THE CITY AND WHICH ARE STILL MANNED BY A MOTLEY GROUP OF GERMAN DRAFTEES AND SS GUARD FANATICS WHO SPUR THEM ON.

I SAW THE DOUGHBOYS FIGHTING THEIR WAY UNDER A TERRIFIC ARTILLERY CROSSFIRE FROM THOSE FORTS AND ADVANCE BEYOND THE FRESCATY AIRPORT AND UP NASCATY STREETS. CASUALTIES ARE HEAVY BECAUSE THE GERMANS ARE DOING MORE THAN SIMPLY HOLDING OUT IN THEIR FORTS. THEY ARE FIGHTING WELL AND SHOOTING WITH DEADLY ACCURACY. BUT THE VERDUN GROUP OF FORTS AND FORT ST.PRIVAT SOUTHWEST OF THE CITY ARE SURROUNDED BY THE 11TH REGIMENT OF THE FIFTH DIVISION.

EVEN AFTER THEY PASSED THE CROSSFIRE FROM THE FORTRESSES THE FOOT SOLDIERS WERE TAKING CASUALTIES. ALONG NANZIGER STREET, WHICH PARALLELS FRESCATY STREET STRETCHING TOWARD THE HEART OF METZ, THEIR INCHING PROGRESS FINALLY WAS HALTED BY MACHINEGUN AND MORTAR FIRE FROM HOUSES.

"THAT'S WHY WE SENT TANKS IN," SAID LT. COL. HOMER C. (DOC) LEDBETTER, REGIMENTAL EXECUTIVE OFFICER AND A FORMER FOOTBALL COACH AT HOBBS, N.M.

"THE ONLY WAY WE CAN GET THEM OUT OF THE HOUSES IS TO BLOW THEM OUT, SO WE'RE DOING THAT," LT. COL. PHILLIP MERRILL OF GREENBAY, WIS., SAID.

I WATCHED THEM BLOWING OUT THE NAZIS ALONG NANZIGER STREET NEAR THE RAILROAD MARSHALLING YARDS. THE TANKS RUMBLED BY US, SOME OF THEM FALLING BY THE ROADSIDE AS ARTILLERY SHELLS FROM THE FORTRESSES SCORED. BUT THE COLUMN KEPT GOING. THEY REACHED THE CONTESTED HOUSES AND BLASTED THEM. PLUMES OF SMOKE TRICKLED SKYWARD AND THE DOUGHBOYS INCHED AHEAD.

TECHNICALLY, THE 10TH INFANTRY OF THE FIFTH DIVISION REPORTED ITS ENTRANCE INTO METZ AT 9 A.M. TODAY, WITH THE 11TH FOLLOWING AN HOUR LATER ON THE 10TH'S FLANK. HOWEVER, AS LATE AS 3 P.M., THE SOUTHERN ATTACK ON THE CITY, WHICH NEVER HAS BEEN TAKEN BY A DIRECT ASSAULT, STILL WAS FAR FROM THE CENTER OF THE METROPOLIS.

MAJ. CORNELIUS W.COGHILL, JR., OF ROCKY MOUNT, N.C., SAID THERE WAS LITTLE DOUBT THAT THE GERMANS INTEND TO TURN THE METZ BATTLE INTO A HOUSE-TO-HOUSE SIEGE. HE SAID THE NEED TO USE TANKS WAS OBVIOUS FROM THE MOMENT THE 10TH REGIMENT HIT THE CITY'S OUTSKIRTS.

AS THE 10TH REACHED THE EDGE OF THE CITY, AMERICAN ARTILLERY TRIED TO NEUTRALIZE THE FORTRESSES WHICH WERE HARRYING THE DOUGHBOYS AND ARMORED UNITS.

CAMPT.WILLIAM SCHAIBLEY OF DETROIT, MICH., ARTILLERY LIAISON OFFICER AT THIS COMMAND POST, NOW IS BUSY CALLING FOR INCREASING FIRE ON FORT ST.PRIVATE IN ORDER TO MAKE THE INNER DEFENDERS SEEK COVER AND HALT THEIR ATTACK ON OUR FOOT SOLDIERS.

INSIDE THE CITY, LT.WALTER E.GERDING, ALSO OF DETROIT, HAS A PLATOON OF TANK DESTROYERS STANDING BY ON CALL FOR THE FIRST SIGN OF ENEMY ARMOR.

FROM HERE I CAN SEE THE FIRE AS THE FIGHT PROGRESSES AROUND THE MARSHALLING YARDS. THE LOCATION OF THE DUG-IN DEFENDERS IS REVEALED BY THEIR GUN FLASHES AND NOW AND THEN A BIGGER SHELL AIMED FROM ONE OF THE FORST FALLS IN THAT AREA.

TECH SGT.WELDON WOODWARD OF STAFFORD, VA., BATTALION SERGEANT MAJOR, SAYS THE 11TH ALSO IS CATCHING ARTILLERY FROM FORT DRIANT WHICH IT UNSUCCESSFULY TRIED TO TAKE IN A 10-DAY SIEGE EARLY IN OCTOBER.

CPL.PAUL F.TODT OF ELVERSON, PA., BATTALION DRIVER WHO HAS BEEN RUNNING THE CROSSFIRE FROM THE FORTRESSES FOR THE PAST TWO DAYS AS THE INFANTRY FLOWED PAST, SAID THIS ARTILLERY FIRE WAS RESPONSIBLE FOR MOST OF THE REGIMENT'S CASUALTIES.

SGT.HAROLD L.MASKARON OF DETROIT, A MEDICAL AID WORKER, AGREED THAT MOST OF THE BATTLE CASUALTIES WERE DUE TO ARTILLERY AND MORTARS, ALTHOUGH THEY STILL WERE GETTING SOME FIRE FROM SMALL ARMS.

"WE TOOK ONE PRISONER WITH A GLASS EYE AND ANOTHER WITH A WOODEN LEG," HE SAID. "ANOTHER HAD AN ARTIFICAL ARM AND CARRIED A SPARE IN CASE THE ONE HE WAS WEARING GOT BROKEN OR SHOT OFF."

THE RAIN HAS CEASED ON THIS FRONT, BUT TRENCHES AND FOX HOLES REMAIN WATER FILLED AND USELESS.

SARMIENTO SAID ONE ANNOYED GERMAN COMPANY COMMANDER WHO WAS CAPTURED COMPLAINED OF HIS SUPERIORS, "THEY SENT ME FORWARD WITHOUT BRIEFING, WITHOUT MAPS AND WITH MEN TRAINED ONLY TWO WEEKS, AND WITHOUT EVEN TELLING ME WHERE THE FRONT WAS. THEN THEY ORDERED ME TO FIGHT TO THE DEATH."

THE AMERICAN DRIVE WAS GREATLY AIDED BY ARTILLERY, OF WHICH THE GERMANS SEEMED TO HAVE LITTLE.

SGT. ARTHUR MYGLAND OF RUBY, N.D., CAME TO THE RESCUE WHEN THE ARTILLERY HAD TROUBLE KNOCKING OUT A NEEDLE-LIKE STONE STEEPLE WHICH THE GERMANS WERE USING FOR ON OBSERVATION POST ON THE 15TH CORPS' FRONT.

MYGLAND, COMMANDER OF A TANK DESTROYER, AIMED AT THE STEEPLE FROM 3,000 YARDS AND ORDERED FIVE ROUNDS. HIS GUNNER, T/5 EARL TOWNE OF SOUTHGATE, CALIF., SCORED FIVE HITS.

CAPT. WARREN HONEY OF GALVESTON, TEXAS, WON THE SILVER STAR FOR BURSTING OPEN THE DOOR OF A GERMAN-HELD HOUSE WITH A CLUB AND KAYOING THE GERMANS INSIDE WHO WERE PREVENTING THE AMERICANS FROM REACHING A GUN EMPLACEMENT HOLDING UP THE ADVANCE INTO A VILLAGE. HE ALREADY WEARS THE BRONZE STAR.

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, PHILIPPINES, SUNDAY, NOV.19 (AP)-AMERICAN HEAVY BOMBERS SCORED FIVE DIRECT HITS ON A JAPANESE BATTLESHIP AND FOUR ON A HEAVY CRUISER, LEAVING BOTH IN FLAMES AFTER EXPLOSIONS. GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS REPORTED TODAY

THE ESCORTED HEAVY BOMBERS FLEW MORE THAN 800 MILES TO ATTACK THE JAPANESE NAVAL BASE AT BRUNEI BAY ON THE NORTHWEST COAST OF BORNEO, DROPPING 112 TONS OF EXPLOSIVES ON SHIPPING IN THE HARBOR.

ENEMY PLANES ATTEMPTING INTERCEPTION WERE FOUGHT OFF BY ESCORTING FIGHTERS WHICH PROBABLY DESTROYED ONE OF THEM.

ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE SHOT DOWN THREE OF OUR BOMBERS...

MEANWHILE OUR AIR PATROLS HIT MERCHANT SHIPPING OFF SANDAKAN AND TARAKAN IN THE SAME GENERAL AREA SINKING TWO FREIGHTERS OF ONE AND THREE THOUSAND TONS AND SETTING TWO OTHER CARGO SHIPS AFIRE, THE COMMUNIQUE SAID. TWELVE BARGES WERE DAMAGED. A PATROL OFF THE SOUTH COAST OF LUZON LEFT A FREIGHTER-TRANSPORT IN FLAMES.

OFF MAKASSAR IN THE CELEBES AIR PATROLS DESTROYED A THOUSAND TON FREIGHTER AND DAMAGED TWO OTHER CARGO VESSELS AND TWO BARGES.

ABOARD LIGHT CARRIER WITH THEIR FLEET OFF PHILIPPINES, NOV.2-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THERE WAS A TIME THE OTHER DAY WHEN EVERYBODY ON THIS CARRIER SAID OR THOUGHT TO HIMSELF:

"I WISH WE HAD OUR OLDFIGHTER SQUADRON BACK--JUST FOR RIGHT NOW."

IT WAS THE TIGHTEST SITUATION THIS SHIP HAD BEEN IN SINCE COMING OUT TO THE PACIFIC MONTHS AGO. SIXTY OR SEVENTY JAPANESE PLANES WERE COMING IN TO ATTACK THE TASK FORCE. NOBODY ON THE CARRIER DOUBTED BUT THAT THE OLD FIGHTER SQUADRON COULD HAVE MET AND DEFEATED THE JAPANESE. BUT THESE FLIERS WERE BRAND NEW--ON BOARD ONLY A WEEK.

THE OLD AIR GROUP INCLUDED ONE OF THE BEST FIGHTER SQUADRONS IN THE PACIFIC. THE FIGHTER SQUADRON IS THE FLYING UNIT THAT MOSTLY INTERESTS THE SHIP'S COMPANY. FIGHTERS DEFEND THE CARRIER FROM ATTACK. IF THEY ARE REALLY HOT, THE SHIP'S CHANCES OF BEING REACHED BY ENEMY BOMBERS ARE GREATLY LESSENED.

THE SHIP'S COMPANY KNEW THAT LT.WILLARD E.EDER OF BUFFALO, WYO., HEAD OF THE NEW FIGHTER SQUADRON, HAD AN EXCELLENT RECORD OF COMBAT FLYING IN THE AFRICAN INVASION. THEY KNEW ALSO THAT SOME OF HIS PILOTS--LIKE LT.BRUCE D.JAQUES, OF HOLLYWOOD, CALIF., WHO SHOT DOWN A FRENCH BOMBER IN THE AFRICAN LANDING--WERE SOLID AND EXPERIENCED. BUT FOR THE MAJORITY OF THE PILOTS, COMBAT EXPERIENCE WAS YET TO COME.

THE STORY OF WHAT THE NEW FLIERS DID TO THE ENEMY ALREADY HAS BEEN RELATED. EIGHT AMERICAN PLANES ROUTED THE ATTACKERS, SHOOTING DOWN 26 OF THEM IN A BATTLE OFF FORMOSA. ALL THE AMERICAN PILOTS GOT BACK. NOW EVERYBODY ON THE CARRIER SEES THAT ALL OF THE FLIERS IN THE NEW AIR GROUP ALWAYS WERE STRICTLY OKAY.

THIS IS A LIGHT, FAST CARRIER, OF THE CLASS ANNOUNCED BY THE NAVY DEPARTMENT SEVERAL MONTHS AGO AS A CVL. THE BUILDERS PUT A FLIGHT DECK ON THE LONG, NARROW HULL DESIGNED FOR LIGHT CRUISERS.

WHEN FLIERS GET ACCUSTOMED TO LANDING ON THE NARROW FLIGHT DECK THEY GET TO FEELING RATHER SUPERIOR TO THOSE WHO HAVE THE GREAT DECK OF A BIG FLATTOP TO COME DOWN ON. THIS SHIP LIKES TO TELL THE STORY OF ONE OF ITS FLIERS ORDERED TO LAND ON ONE OF THE BIG CARRIERS. HE CIRCLED OFF ITS STERN UNTIL THE CARRIER RADIOED HIM TO LAND.

"OKAY," ANSWERED THE PILOT OVER HIS RADIO, "BUT WHICH RUNWAY?"

PINAMOPOAN AREA, LEYTE, P.I., NOV.18-(AP)-JAPANESE TROOPS, REINFORCED BY TANKS, LARGE AND SMALL, AND FIGHTING REGARDLESS OF COST, ARE BITTERLY OPPOSING AMERICAN OF THE WEARY 24TH DIVISION AT LIMON. CORE OF ENEMY OPPOSITION AT THE NORTHERN TERMINUS OF THE ORMOC ROAD.

THERE SEEMS LITTLE DOUBT THAT THE JAPANESE INTEND TO HOLD THE VALE BELOW BREAKNECK RIDGE--THE LIMON AREA--AS LONG AS POSSIBLE UNTIL THE MAIN BODY OF THEIR ORMOC FORCES CAN CONSOLIDATE THEIR POSITIONS FOR A MAJOR STAND. THIS PROBABLY WILL COME AROUND THE HILLY REGION WHERE THE ROAD BRANCHES OFF FROM THE ORMOC HIGHWAY AND RUNS TO THE WEST COAST OF LEYTE PENINSULA.

THEY COULD USE THIS ROAD AS AN ESCAPE ROUTE SHOULD THE ORMOC ROAD BE CUT FARTHER SOUTH BY OTHER ELEMENTS OF THE AMERICAN 6TH ARMY. A BRIDGE AT A JUNCTION OF THE TWO ROADS HAS BEEN DESTROYED BY AMERICAN ARTILLERY, BUT THE JAPANESE ARE FEVERISHLY TRYING TO REBUILD IT.

THERE ARE HUNDREDS OF JAPANESE IN LIMON ITSELF, WELL DUG IN AND WITH WEAPONS OF ALL TYPES EXCEPT HEAVY ARTILLERY. AMERICAN PATROLS PENETRATING THE OUTSKIRTS OF THE TOWN AFTER A BLISTERING AMERICAN ARTILLERY ASSAULT BELIEVED THE JAPS HAD WITHDRAWN. WHEN THE MAIN BODY OF YANKS MOVED UP TO THE ATTACK, THEY RAN INTO STIFF OPPOSITION.

THE JAPANESE ARE STILL MANAGING TO MAKE OCCASIONAL RUNS THROUGH AN AMERICAN ROADBLOCK TWO-AND-A-HALF MILES SOUTH OF LIMON. YESTERDAY AFTERNOON A JAPANESE LIGHT TANK BROKE THROUGH TO JOIN THE LIMON GARRISON. LATER SIX LARGE TANKS ATTEMPTED TO PENETRATE THE BLOCK, BUT THREE OF THEM WERE TURNED BACK BY AMERICAN FIRE.

FURTHER INDICATION THAT THE NIPPONESE, DESPITE ARTILLERY FIRE AND AERIAL ATTACKS, ARE MAKING EVERY EFFORT TO REINFORCE LIMON WAS SEEN IN THE MOVEMENT OF BETWEEN 150 AND 200 TRUCKS WHICH WERE SIGHTED MOVING NORTH FROM ORMOC.

EFFORTS OF TWO AMERICAN ROADBLOCKING UNITS BELOW LIMON TO COMPLETE JUNCTION IS STILL BEING THWARTED BY FIERCE JAPANESE ATTACKS. THE YANKS, HOWEVER, ARE STILL KEEPING THE ROAD UNDER FIRE.

MOST JAPANESE REINFORCEMENTS HAVE REACHED LIMON BY CIRCLING THE AMERICAN ROADBLOCK. THE JAPANESE STILL HAVE SOME 75MM GUNS IN THE AREA WHICH ARE PERIODICALLY SHELLING AMERICAN POSITIONS AS FAR BACK AS PINAMOPOAN ON THE COAST. THE SHELLING IS NOT SEVERE.

(ADVANCE-PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS,PEARL HARBOR,NOV 18 (AP)-THE DAY STARTED VERY QUIETLY ABORD LT.(JG) ROBERT C.ASHCRAFT'S ESCORT CARRIER OFF SAMAR ISLAND IN THE PHILIPPINES. BEFORE IT ENDED, ASHCRAFT HAD BEEN UNDER SHELLFIRE ABOARD HIS CARRIER--SOMETHING VERY, VERY UNUSUAL; HAD DOWNED TWO JAPANESE PLANES AND HIMSELF BEEN SHOT DOWN.

SHORTLY AFTER ASHCRAFT, FROM 4618 VARBLE AVE., LOUISVILLE, KY., AROSE ON OCT.25 HIS SHIP'S LOUDSPEAKERS REPORTED A JAPANESE BATTLESHIP FORCE WAS ONLY 40 MILES AWAY.

"THIRTY MINUTES LATER WE HEARD A WHISTLING AROUND THE SHIP. THAT WAS 16-INCH SHELLS FALLING NEAR US. THERE WERE MORE PILOTS THAN AIRPLANES ON THE SHIP AND I WASN'T ORDERED OUT.

"THE PILOTS (FROM SEVERAL CVES) TURNED BACK THE JAPS."

ASHCRAFT DID GET ACTION IN LATER AFTERNOON, HOWEVER, WITH THREE OTHER PILOTS. ONLY 8 MINUTES OUT FROM THE SHIP, THEY SAW 18 TO 20 JAPANESE FIGHTERS, OVERHEAD.

"THERE WERE ZEKES BELOW US, ABOVE US AND ALL AROUND US. MY TANKS WOULDN'T RELEASE, SO I COULDN'T CLIMB FAST. DAVE (LT.GEORGE DAVIDSON, JACKSONVILLE, FLA.) BURNED ONE JAP ON THE WAY UP. MY WINGMAN (ENS.BERNARD HARRIS OF NEW YORK CITY, ADDRESS UNAVAILABLE) SMOTHERED ANOTHER, NEARLY CHOPPING HIS TAIL OFF.

"I RODE IN BEHIND A ZEKE AND GOT HIM. BUT ANOTHER ZEKE HIT MY WING AND MY PLANE STARTED TO SMOKE.

"I BEGAN TO SCREAM FOR SOMEONE TO COME WITH ME (FOR PROTECTION) AND STARTED FOR HOME. ANOTHER ZEKE HIT ME IN THE TAIL WITH 20 MM. MY OIL PRESSURE WAS GONE AND MY ENGINE WAS SMOKING. I GUESS I GOT TO EAGER TO LAND (ON THE WATER.) I WAS THROWN FROM THE PLANE.

A TBF (TORPEDO PLANE) DROPPED ME A LIFERAFT. I COULDN'T GET MY THOUGHTS STRAIGHT. I DON'T REMEMBER CFLATING THE BOAT.

"IN THE MORNING A FM (GENERAL MOTORS FIGHTER) AND A TBF PASSED 2,000 FEET OVERHEAD BUT DIDN'T SEE ME. THAT'S WHEN YOUR HEART GOES RIGHT OUT THROUGH YOUR SHOES.

"ABOUT 9:30 I SAW A PLANE COMING AND PUT OUT MY DYE MARKER. IT WAS A JAP BUT I TRIED TO HIDE BESIDE THE RAFT AND HE WENT RIGHT ON BY.

"I SAW TWO SHARKS BUT THEY DIDN'T BOTHER ME. YOU LOOK AT THEM AND THEY LOOK AT YOU AND YOU WONDER WHO'S GOING TO EAT WO FIRST!"

"ABOUT) O'CLOCK ADM.(WILLIAM F.) HALSEY'S FORCE WAS COMING DOWN. IT WAS JUST LUCK THAT A DESTROYER PICKED ME UP."

ASHCRAFT HAD SHOT DOWN A JAP PLANE IN A FIGHT OCT.24.

ASHCRAFT ALSO TOLD HOW LT.CMDR.P.W.JACKSON SHOT DOWN A JAPANESE AIRPLANE, SANK A SUBMARINE AND BOMBED A BATTLESHIP--ALL WITHIN 10 MINUTES, IN THE OCT.25 FIGHT.

JACKSON, FROM NEW YORK CITY (ADDRESS UNAVAILABLE) SIGHTED AND, SAID ASHCRAFT, SANK AN ENEMY SUBMARINE AS HE FLEW TO STRIKE AT THE ENEMY SURFACE FORCE. HE NEXT SHOT DOWN AN ENEMY PLANE, THEN WENT ON TO BOMB A BATTLESHIP.

WASHINGTON,NOV. 17-(AP)-THE ARGENTINE MILITARY GOVERNMENT TODAY APPEARED TO BE ABANDONING ITS PRESENT CAMPAIGN TO WIN DIPLOMATIC RECOGNITION AND TO BE CONTINUING ITS MILITARY DEFENSE PROGRAM MORE PUBLICLY NOW THAN HERETOFORE.

THIS WAS THE INTERPRETATION PLACED BY DIPLOMATIC SOURCES ON THE ARGENTINE ANNOUNCEMENT YESTERDAY THAT ALL MALE AND FEMALE CITIZENS FROM THE AGES OF 12 TO 50 WILL BE SUBJECT TO CONSCRIPTION.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT ITSELF DECLINED TO COMMENT ONE WAY OR THE OTHER ON ARGENTINA'S LATEST MILITARY MOVE WHICH DIPLOMATS HERE CONSIDERED A FURTHER IMPLEMENTATION OF THE FARRELL REGIME'S TOTAL MOBILIZATION PROGRAM.

THE NEW CONSCRIPTION PROGRAM, IT WAS SAID, WAS FORESHADOWED IN THE SPEECH BY VICE-PRESIDENT JUAN DOMINGO PERON LAST SUMMER WHEN HE WARNED ARGENTINA THAT IT MUST BE PREPARED "SHOULD THE CLARION CALL OF WAR BE SOUNDED ON THE RIO DE LA PLATA."

IT WAS ALSO CONSIDERED IN LINE WITH ARGENTINA'S HUGE MILITARY

BUDGET OF 1,300,000,000 PESOS, THE LARGEST OF ANY LATIN AMERICAN COUNTRY.

A SPOKESMAN FOR THE ARGENTINE EMBASSY DECLARED THAT THE CONSCRIPTION ORDER, MERELY WIDENED THE EXISTING PROGRAM WHICH ALREADY CALLS FOR A YEAR'S MILITARY TRAINING OF ALL ABLE-BODIED MALE YOUTHS.

IT WAS VIEWED AS SIGNIFICANT THAT COL.PERON CHOSE TO MAKE HIS ANNOUNCEMENT ABOUT A WEEK AFTER PRESIDENT VARGAS OF BRAZIL HAD REVEALED THAT THE BRAZILIAN ARMY WOULD BE CONTINUED IN STRENGTH AFTER THE WAR AND ALMOST AT THE SAME TIME PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT OFFERED HIS PROPOSALS FOR PEACE-TIME CONSCRIPTION IN THIS COUNTRY.

BY FLORA LEWIS

WASHINGTON, NOV. 18-(AP)-VENEZUELA, IN A STATEMENT DESIGNED TO CLARIFY ITS VIEW OF THE DUMBARTON OAKS WORLD SECURITY PLAN, EMPHASIZED ITS BASIC AGREEMENT TODAY.

SUGGESTIONS ADVANCED BY VENEZUELA, THE EMBASSY SAID IN A STATEMENT, WERE "MADE IN A SPIRIT OF FRIENDLY COOPERATION" AND "TEND ONLY TO THE IMPROVEMENT OF THE STRUCTURE OF THE INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATION THAT IT IS INTENDED TO ESTABLISH."

WITH THE STATEMENT, A PATTERN OF LATIN-AMERICAN REACTION WAS SHAPING UP IN WHICH THE TENDENCY APPEARS TO BE TO SUPPORT THE OBJECTIVES OF THE DUMBARTON OAKS OUTLINES WHILE CALLING FOR A WEIGHTIER VOICE FOR SMALLER NATIONS.

BRAZIL, VENEZUELA AND URUGUAY HAVE PREPARED OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS ON A WORLD PEACE ORGANIZATION AND OTHER NATIONS HAVE EXPRESSED THEIR VIEWS INFORMALLY WHILE THEY ARE DRAWING UP DECLARATIONS.

ON THE POINT OF A GREATER VOICE FOR THE SMALLER NATIONS, VENEZUELA PROPOSED ADDING TO THE POWERS OF THE ASSEMBLY OF UNITED NATIONS. URUGUAY'S IDEA WAS THAT THE ELEVEN-MEMBER EXECUTIVE COUNCIL BE ENLARGED.

THE VENEZUELAN PLAN FAVORED ELIMINATING A DUMBARTON OAKS CLAUSE WHICH WOULD PREVENT THE ASSEMBLY FROM TAKING UP A RESOLUTION ON A DISPUTE ACTUALLY BEFORE THE COUNCIL. THUS IT WOULD ADD TO THE ASSEMBLY'S POWER OF INITIATIVE.

SEVERAL LATIN-AMERICAN NATIONS HAVE SHOWN A DESIRE TO INCREASE THE POWERS OF AN INTERNATIONAL COURT SO THAT IT WOULD HAVE COMPULSORY JURISDICTION OVER ALL DISPUTES ON LEGAL QUESTIONS, AT THE LEAST, AND THE RIGHT TO MAKE SOME DECISIONS RELATING TO POLITICAL ARGUMENTS.

THE TEXT OF TODAY'S VENEZUELAN STATEMENT:

"INASMUCH AS SOME PUBLICATIONS APPEARING IN THE PRESS OF THE UNITED STATES MIGHT CREATE CONFUSION AS TO THE POSITION OF VENEZUELA IN CONNECTION WITH THE DUMBARTON OAKS PROJECT, THE VENEZUELAN EMBASSY WISHES TO MAKE CLEAR THAT THE GOVERNMENT OF VENEZUELA, IN ANSWERING THE CONSULTATION RECEIVED FROM THE STATE DEPARTMENT, HAS EXPRESSED ITS BASIC AGREEMENT WITH THE GENERAL LINES OF THE PLAN AND THAT THE SUGGESTIONS ADVANCED, MADE IN A SPIRIT OF FRIENDLY COOPERATION, TEND ONLY TO THE IMPROVEMENT OF THE STRUCTURE OF THE INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATION THAT IT IS INTENDED TO ESTABLISH."

UNDATED JAPANESE INTERPRETIVE (PMS, NOV.18)
BY RUSSELL BRINES
ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR EDITOR

NOV 19 1944

THE JAPANESE DON'T INTEND TO DOUBLECROSS THEMSELVES MILITARILY, BUT THEIR PREOCCUPATION WITH SAVING "FACE" CAN RAISE HAVOC WITH THEIR MILITARY STRATEGY, AS DISCLOSED BY THE U.S. NAVY'S REPORT YESTERDAY (FRI.) ON PHILIPPINE SEA BATTLES.

THE REPORT REVEALS, AMONG OTHER THINGS, THAT THIS PSYCHOLOGICAL FACTOR WAS INSTRUMENTAL IN THE "FALSE ALARM" FORAY OF JAPANESE FLEET INITS AGAINST AMERICAN CARRIER FORCES POUNDING FORMOSA IN EARLY OCTOBER.

JAPANESE SHIPS STEAMED TOWARD FORMOSA, AS THE TOKYO RADIO REPORTED AT THE TIME, BUT WITHDREW WITHOUT GIVING BATTLE.

THE REPORT CALLS THIS "ONE OF THE MOST FANTASTIC CHAPTERS OF THE WAR." AFTER THE FIRST ONSLAUGHTS OF LAND-BASED PLANES IN THE FORMOSA ENGAGEMENT, THE REPORT SAYS:

"THE JAPANESE AVIATORS WHO MANAGED TO REACH HOME REPORTED AN AMAZING VICTORY, AND TOKYO WAS QUICK TO CLAIM -- FOR THE FIFTH OR SIXTH TIME -- THAT THE NAVAL STRENGTH OF THE UNITED STATES HAD BEEN RENDERED PUNY."

ON THE BASIS OF THESE REPORTS, AN IMPERIAL TASK FORCE STARTED OUT, THE REPORT ADDS, "BUT WHEN THE ASTONISHED PILOTS OF THE ENEMY SCOUTING FORCE SAW THE SIZE OF THE HEALTHY OPPOSITION DEPLOYING TO RECEIVE THEM, THE JAPANESE EXPEDITION WHEELED AND RAN BACK TO THE SAFER WATERS OF THE EMPIRE."

THE FUNDAMENTAL REASON FOR THE ORIGINAL MISTAKE WAS "FACE." PILOTS OF THE LAND-BASED PLANES, CHARGED WITH KNOCKING OUT THE ATTACKING AMERICAN SHIPS, SAVED PRESTIGE BY REPORTING SUCCESS WHEN THEY HAD FAILED.

IF, AS LIKELY, THEY WERE ARMY FLIERS, THEIR INDIVIDUAL REPORTS MIGHT HAVE BEEN EMBELLISHED BY SUPERIOR OFFICERS, ANXIOUS TO GAIN "FACE" FOR THEIR SERVICE IN THE PERENNIAL CLASH OF PERSONALITIES WITH THE NAVY.

PRESERVING HONOR IS SO INGRAINED AND INDIVIDUALLY IMPORTANT THAT, EVEN AFTER THE FORMOSA BLUNDER, IT SEEMS TO HAVE ENTERED THE CONFLICT. AMERICAN FLAGSHIP CORRESPONDENTS REPORTED THAT THE JAPANESE FORCE IN THE BATTLE OFF SAMAR ISLAND SEEMED TO BE SURPRISED BY THE SIZE OF THE STILL SURVIVING AMERICAN FLEET UNITS. YET THEIR RECONNAISSANCE PLANES HAD BEEN ACTIVE.

SEVERAL YEARS AGO, I WAS A CORRESPONDENT WITH THE JAPANESE ARMY DURING A BORDER CLASH WITH RUSSIAN FORCES. THE JAPA ESE REPORTED THEY SHOT DOWN SUCH FANTASTIC TOTALS OF SOVIET PLANES THAT EVEN THE TOKYO MINISTRIES REFUSED TO BELIEVE THEM.

TOKYO INVESTIGATED. EVERY PILOT REPEATED HIS ORIGINAL CLAIM WITHOUT BATTING AN EYE.

WASHINGTON, NOV 18-(AP)-DESPITE AMERICA'S FABULOUS BURIED TREASURE AT FORT KNOX, FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS NOW OWN MORE GOLD THAN EVER BEFORE, THE FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD SAID TODAY.

AND THIS, COUPLED WITH THE RAPID EXPANSION IN FOREIGN HOLDINGS OF AMERICAN DOLLARS, IS A PROMISING SIGN FOR POSTWAR TRADE, THE BOARD SAID IN ITS NOVEMBER BULLETIN.

THIS COUNTRY'S VOLUME OF EXPORTS AFTER THE WAR DEPENDS ON MANY THINGS, THE BOARD EMPHASIZED. BUT THIS ABUNDANCE OF FOREIGN RESERVES IF COUPLED WITH OTHER FAVORABLE FACTORS, WAS SAID TO PROMISE "MORE ORDERLY FINANCIAL RELATIONSHIPS IN THE POSTWAR WORLD."

FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS NOW HAVE 17 BILLION DOLLARS IN GOLD AND DOLLAR RESERVES. EVEN IN 1928 BEFORE THE WORLD FINANCIAL CRISIS BROKE, THE TOTAL WAS ONLY SEVEN OR EIGHT BILLION.

THE UNITED STATES STILL HAS MORE GOLD THAN THE REST OF THE WORLD PUT TOGETHER. WE HAVE 20.8 BILLION DOLLARS WORTH. FOREIGNERS HAVE 14 BILLION. BUT SEE HOW THE PICTURE HAS CHANGED. SINCE THE BEGINNING OF 1941:

AT THAT TIME, WE HAD OVER 22 BILLION. THE OTHER NATIONS HAD LESS THAN NINE BILLION.

IN THOSE FOUR YEARS, FOREIGNERS ACQUIRED OVER FIVE BILLION DOLLARS WORTH OF GOLD WHILE WE LOST MORE THAN A BILLION.

HOW WAS THE TREND REVERSED? FEDERAL RESERVE EXPLAINED IT AS FOLLOWS:

"AFTER LEND-LEASE WENT INTO OPERATION IN MARCH, 1941, THE FOREIGN WORLD AS A WHOLE CEASED TO LOSE GOLD. THE MOUNTING TIDE OF AMERICAN EXPORTS WAS HANDLED BY BOOK ENTRIES.

"BY THE END OF 1942 THE BALANCE OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE OUTSIDE LEND-LEASE OPERATIONS HAD TURNED ADVERSE TO THIS COUNTRY."

BUILDING UP STOCKPILES, WE IMPORTED HEAVILY FROM CANADA, LATIN AMERICA, AFRICA, INDIA, AND OTHER AREAS, AND PAID FOR THE GOODS IN CASH.

FEDERAL RESERVE EXPLAINED TWO MAJOR FORCES HAVE CAUSED THE INCREASE IN WORLD GOLD HOLDINGS.

ONE WAS GOLD MINING, WHICH EXPANDED AT A PHENOMENAL RATE UNTIL SLOWED BY WARTIME SHORTAGES OF MANPOWER AND EQUIPMENT.

THE OTHER MAIN FORCE WAS "REVALUATION." THAT MEANS, NATIONS MADE THEIR CURRENCY LESS VALUABLE IN TERMS OF GOLD: AND THIS AUTOMATICALLY MADE GOLD MORE VALUABLE IN TERMS OF CURRENCY. FOR EXAMPLE, WHEN THE UNITED STATES REDUCED THE GOLD VALUE OF THE DOLLAR ON JAN. 31, 1934, HE DOLLAR VALUE OF THE WORLD'S GOLD RESERVES TOOK A SUDDEN RISE OF 8.7 BILLION DOLLARS.

ALLIES WIN PIVOT OF NAZI LINE ABOVE AACHEN; METZ ENCIRCLED, FOE RETREATS TOWARD SAAR; FRENCH TROOPS SMASH THROUGH BELFORT GAP

NOV 20 1944

6 ALLIED ARMIES HURL NAZIS BACK ON ENTIRE FRONT

French Forces Smash into Alsace in Powerful New Offensive.

DRIVE ON BELFORT

U. S. First Gains Four Miles, Penetrates Outskirts of Eschweiler.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Nov. 19.—(AP) Six attacking Allied armies rolled the Germans back everywhere from Holland to the Swiss frontier today, capturing the German city of Geilenkirchen, pushing into crumbling Metz, and battling into Alsace against enemy defenses which rapidly were reaching the breaking point.

Geilenkirchen, a key northern bastion of the Siegfried Line, fell to American Ninth army infantry and British armor which also captured Suggerath to the northeast in their drive into the Rhineland.

The American First army on the right flank of this force surged four miles deeper into Germany and crossed the Adolf Hitler highway, penetrating the outskirts of Eschweiler, in its most spectacular advance since it joined the great Autum push toward Berlin.

Nazi Resistance Crumbles

The once-fierce German resistance in the First army's path appeared to be crumbling under terrific pressure from the ground and air forces, which again loosed their full fury against the enemy today.

Front-line correspondents said the Germans appeared also to be withdrawing rapidly from the American Third army front.

Metz, great Eastern France fortress which had not been taken by assault since the time of Attila the Hun 1,500 years ago, was falling to Lt. Gen. George Patton's Third army men, who had reached the center of the city, according to latest dispatches from correspondents. More than one-third of the once-powerful citadel city already was in American hands.

The French First army farther east stabbed four miles beyond Delle, southeast of Belfort, and pushed into Alsace for the first time. The French already were less than four miles from Belfort itself. (The Swiss radio said the French had actually entered Belfort and speared to the Swiss border 18 miles eastward, taking Altkirch).

The Paris radio said the French advance into Alsace was nine miles deep.

An Associated Press correspondent on that front said a violent battle was in progress around Fort Du Mont Vaudois, four miles from Belfort.

Gain in Vosges Mountains

The American Seventh army, teamed with the French as the Sixth army group, maintained its pace in the Vosges mountains, capturing the important road center of Blamont, 40 miles from Strasbourg, and captured villages in that area wrecked by the German scorched-earth policy.

Çashing in on good weather for the second day, the U. S. Ninth Air force flew more than 1,300 fighter-bomber sorties.

It was disclosed that the A-26 Invaders, fastest bombers made in the United States, now were operating in this theater. Today they joined Marauders and Havocs in a 200-plane assault against the heavily-defended town of Merzig in the Siegfried Line area, 32 miles northeast of Metz, ahead of Third-army tanks which have crossed into Germany. Results were described as excellent, including a munitions dump explosion.

Medium and fighter-bombers of the Second Tactical Air force flew well over 1,000 sorties over the British sector of the front.

From north to south, these were the high points in this fourth day of the concerted six-army offensive which Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has hurled at the Nazis:

The British, west of the Maas river on the Netherlands front, established another bridgehead over the Durne canal and sent patrols out from the Meijel-Helden road.

An American and British team of infantry and armor seized Geilenkirchen in a lightning mid-day assault and then took Suggerath, two miles to the northeast.

Nazi Attack Repulsed

Ninth army troops also repulsed a German counter-attack near Prummern, east of Geilenkirchen, destroyed 20 to 30 enemy tanks and pushed on through reinforced German positions, capturing Setterich, Warden and Weiden in advances on a 15-mile-wide front.

The First army's four-mile thrust wiped out a German salient and carried into the edges of Eschweiler, nine miles west of Duren; and captured Hamich, 10 miles due east of Aachen, and the important Hamich ridge beyond.

The Third army, besides several new penetrations of Germany—some with armor—registered sizable gains both northeast and southeast of Metz and thrust into the city.

The Third's mechanized cavalry entered Buschdorf, a thousand yards across the German frontier four miles due east of the German-French-Luxembourg border junction, while elements of the Tenth armored division crossed the border near Launstroff, three miles southeast of Buschdorf. Other tenth division armor slugged into Scheurwald, north of Launstroff and penetrated Waldwisse on the frontier two miles south. Others pushed through Schwerdorff and farther south were advancing on Freisdorff.

The Third army's 90th division swept four and one-half miles in a southeasterly direction to a point 12 miles northeast of Metz.

Gains southeast of Metz carried the 26th division into the outskirts of Dieuze and the 35th division as far as Gros-Tenquin.

The American Seventh army took and passed through Blamont, with the Germans retreating toward Strasbourg. The Seventh's gains in the northern sector of its front thus passed 15 miles since the offensive began, with substantial but shorter gains all along the Vosges front.

French Flank Belfort

The French First army, flanking Belfort to the southeast, pushed on and took Courtelevant in Alsace 14 miles southeast of Belfort and Dannemarie, 12 miles east of Belfort and a dozen miles below the great border bastion of Mulhouse.

The French overran Fort Du Mont Vaudois, four miles southwest of Belfort and sent patrols on within three miles of the city, and front dispatches referred to their exploitation of a "break-through."

Ninth Air force planes concentrated on German strong points and troop concentrations on the First and Ninth army fronts in close support of the ground operations, while ahead of the Third army they went after retreating Germans on the roads. The Second Tactical Air force operated on railway lines and general traffic in the Utrecht, Zwolle, Arnhem, Roermoond and Munster areas.

Incomplete claims for Ninth Air force fighter-bombers included 15 German planes destroyed in the air, 270 vehicles and 46 locomotives wrecked, and more than 300 railway cars and 28 gun positions knocked out.

The Ninth also dumped fragmentation bombs on numerous German troop concentrations in the Duren-Eschweiler area and dive-bombed houses used by the Germans as artillery positions east of Eschweiler. Fourteen American planes were missing.

Yank-British Teamwork Cited In Capture Of Geilenkirchen

NOV 20 1944

By J. W. GALLAGHER

Geilenkirchen, Germany, Nov. 19 (AP)—American and British troops combined to complete one of those rareties of warfare, "a perfect military operation," in capturing this city of 30,000 shortly before noon today.

American troops in battle for the first time were the first to actually enter the city, but the fall of this key bastion of the Siegfried Line and the heavy industrial area of the Wurm Valley, which fell with it, was due to the combined operations of the British and Americans fighting like a well-trained football team.

Opposition Bewildered

The troops swept through the town in less than an hour and pushed on up the Wurm river against bewildered opposition. Cleanup squads went from house to house, digging out Germans, a half dozen at a time.

A small group led by Sergt. Alfred Stuck, of Buckeye, Ariz., captured 25 bedraggled soldiers, mostly Austrians, in one hour.

"We just went down the street tossing hand grenades in the cellars, and out they came," he said.

Yesterday morning American troops riding on British tanks attacked high ground dominating the city from the east and south and took it on schedule.

The Germans tried to flee to the northwest, only to meet British infantry advancing under a joint American-British artillery barrage that drove them back into the city. The Germans at nightfall yesterday were trapped between two forces less than 1,000 yards apart.

This morning the British and Americans closed the escape route and then the American infantry with British flame-throwing tanks attacked down the Wurm Valley while British and American forces held both sides and the north end of the narrow pocket.

Several hundred prisoners were taken in the house-to-house clean-up.

The Ninth Army's bag of prisoners has passed the 2,500 mark since this offensive started three days ago.

Breach Another Defense

The capture of Geilenkirchen was matched a few miles south where an American attack took the strong point of Setterich and doughboys and American tanks breached one of Hitler's highly advertised "community defenses." The latter was an anti-tank ditch ten miles long, 15 feet wide and 15 feet deep.

Hardly a building in this city has not been hit by shell or bombs in the great artillery barrages hurled against the German defenses.

Germans Turn Western Front Into 'Stand or Die' Struggle

Gallagher

WITH THE U. S. NINTH ARMY IN GERMANY, Nov. 19—(AP) The war on the Western front has become strictly a stand and die matter for the Germans and therein lies the answer to when this great conflict will end.

In simplest terms the war apparently will not end until the German nation has been bled so white by battle losses that it will be physically impossible to put enough men, boys or old men into the field to carry on an effective fight.

The Western front struggle greatest and bloodiest of the war for Britain and the United States, has ceased to be one of high strategy in the textbook sense where battles are waged for strategic ports, forts or cities.

Thanks to Adolf Hitler's idea of strategy-which seems to begin and end with a series of fight to the death orders to his troops and a willingness of those troops to carry them out no matter how stupid the situation may be—the war has become simply one of survival.

When Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's offensive began there was some doubt as to what tactics the German army would pursue.

It was not known whether trained officers would fight a stubborn, well-planned rearguard action to key points and then make strongholds of them, or whether they would pursue the familiar Hitler strategy of fighting for every inch of ground and never retreating.

The answer has become apparent. The Germans are doing exactly what they did in Normandy. They are trying to hold every inch of ground and fighting to the last bullet. When the line gives way they commit their reserves and patch the breach immediately, instead of withdrawing to better strategic positions.

Over nearly all the front they are holding tenaciously to strategically useless bits of ground and expending lives in futile counter-attacks designed to regain other strips.

As long as they have the manpower to plug sagging sectors of this 400-mile line, Allied progress is going to be small and costly.

Eisenhower's answer to these tactics has been to put on the pressure along the whole front from Switzerland to Holland, meeting the German force with more and greater Allied force.

The situation might be likened to that of a Holland dike holding back the sea. As long as the dike is kept in repair it performs its task, but when repairs become impossible it gives way and it is all over. In this case the German dike is made of men.

Just where that break in the dike will come it is doubtful even if the high commands of the Germans or Allies know.

Prisoners taken in the offensive that began last week have revealed that wherever they are fighting within the Reich they are getting adequate ammunition and guns. This does not mean they have as much as the Allies, but they have enough to fight effectively.

Almost to a man the prisoners appear to be sold on the idea that they must fight. Some believe Goebbels' propaganda that secret weapons might win the war. The smarter ones believe Germany must make the fight so costly that the Allies will settle for an easier peace for Germany.

One of the most surprising features has been the willigness expressed on the part of many professional soldiers to fight under Heinrich Himmler as well as under Hitler.

Even the very small minority who express disapproval of Hitler admit that opposition to the Nazis in Germany is so minute and ineffective that there is no chance for a change in regimes.

One of the biggest advantages the Germans have had in the present fighting has been the weather.

Almost continuous bad weather, with little prospect of improvement for months, largely has robbed the Allies of their greatest weapon—air superiority. The result has been that on clear days with Allied planes in the air the attack progresses. When the weather is cloudy and rainy, the attack stalls.

The defense of every inch of ground has resulted in parts of the Reich now being fought over becoming the most war-devastated areas of Europe. Town after town is being destroyed in the terrific daily barrage of shells and bombs.

It also has become apparent that the Western front is presently No. 1 on Hitler's priority list. Some crack divisions which have fought as long as three years in Russia have turned up recently in the west.

If anyone knows how long Hitler can rob one front to feed another or scrape up another class of 16-year-olds inside Germany, he has the answer to how long the war will last.

One guess is as good as another, and probably no two generals on the front would give the same answer.

TWO PLATOONS TAKE BLAMONT

Yelling Yanks Drive 400 Germans From Town

NIGHT

BY THOBURN WIANT

With the United States Seventh Army at Blamont, France, Nov. 19 (AP)—Two platoons of noisy Americans yelling like hogcallers and firing their weapons as fast as they could pull the triggers chased more than 400 Germans from Blamont, a town on the main highway 40 miles west of Strasbourg, before daybreak today.

I entered the town a little before 3 P. M. and shortly afterward interviewed Lieut. Col. A. Van Bibber, of Bel Air, Md., commander of those platoons, who said terrific air and artillery bombardments and a fierce battle atop a ridge overlooking the town had softened the Germans.

Civilians Stay In Cellars

Despite the bombardments, which ruined a good quarter of the town, civilians remained in cellars and shelters until the Americans came.

Military Police Private William Hall, of San Francisco, reported that 40 new babies, including one Sengalese, were found in the cellar of one badly damaged building.

The gains east of Luneville and beyond Blamont, where German resistance seems to be crumbling, are the biggest the Yanks have scored along the Seventh's front. The terrain northeast of Blamont encourages swift movement.

Since the kickoff the Seventh has advanced more than 15 miles in spots on the northern sector and now is farther east than the United States Third Army on its northern flank.

'Invisible Ditch' In New Nazi Line

New York, Nov. 19 (AP)—A propaganda broadcast from Berlin declared today that the Germans had completed a new fortified line behind the Western front which is a "masterpiece of improvisation and organization" and "far more dangerous for the Allies" than the Atlantic Wall.

Asserting that "time is working for the Germans," Berlin said "every week new camouflaged lines are growing into the depth of the Reich."

"Invisible Ditches" A Feature

By this account "invisible ditches" are a feature of the new line as well as camouflaged pillboxes adapted to the terrain and studding the countryside in large numbers.

It quoted a colonel of engineers as saying the fortifications had been built in accordance with "experiences in the East and West."

Berlin said Adolf Hitler ordered construction of "a coherent fortified line of positions along the then existing front" when Allied forces at the beginning of September "got dangerously nearer to the frontiers of the Reich."

The program was accomplished in four weeks, the radio said, whereupon a second four-week building program was ordered to extend the defenses.

2 Attacks on Nazi Town Fail, But Third Takes It

Warden, 9 Miles Northeast of Aachen, Falls to Americans

Bonner

WARDEN, Germany, Nov. 19 (AP).—Knocked back twice by barrages from German self-propelled guns and tanks, American troops called for tank support and charged into Warden yesterday on the third try.

FIGHT

Warden is a small town nine miles northeast of Aachen and is close by to Mariadorf, which the Americans had taken. Mariadorf is a valuable prize.

When two frontal attacks failed, Lieutenant Colonel Robert Frankland, of Jackson, Tenn., batallion commander, ordered six extra tanks to tackle Warden on the flank simultaneously with another smash from the front.

American losses were light in the final assault, which netted 145 prisoners and three German tanks.

Nazi Underground Active On Border

London, Nov. 19 (AP)—The Moscow radio reported tonight that the Nazis had started an underground organization in invaded and invasion-threatened German frontier areas and that in the interior of Germany they were establishing secret arms caches.

Attributing its information to a German source, the radio thus described the underground setup:

"Special trusted emissaries of the Hitlerite leadership break off open contact with Nazi party organizations, take up faked identification papers and settle as private citizens in designated frontier towns to form an underground.

"In every frontier district a special organizer has been appointed to maintain contact with the leaders. The organizers likewise maintain no open contact with the party."

A portion of German armament production now is consigned to secret caches, the broadcast said, adding:

"Hidden subterranean stores have been built on German territory for these armaments."

Women Man Guns In Europe

New York, Nov. 19 (AP)—British women, for the first time in history are fighting in Europe, manning anti-aircraft guns, a BBC broadcast said today. Previously, the women had manned the guns in England.

1,250 U. S. HEAVIES HIT SOUTH EUROPE

Bombers From Italy Raid German Supply Bases

London, Nov. 19 (AP)—A United States bomber force from Italy—1,250 strong—pounded Germany's southern supply bases today in rounding out a week end which saw nearly 5,000 Allied warplanes loose a tornado of destruction on enemy front positions and rear areas.

It was the second successive day that the 15th Air Force hurled two big task forces, each numbering more than 600 heavy bombers, at the sources of supply for German troops facing the Americans charging on the Saar and the Russians pushing through Hungary.

The Fortresses and Liberators struck at oil targets in the Vienna area and at Linz, 95 miles farther west, while Mustangs flying to the support of the Russians strafed traffic between Vienna and Budapest.

Germany's Last Oil Supply

Despite the thick overcast, the bombs fell true, and smoke visible for 150 miles rolled up from the ground. The Vienna basin is the last great source of natural oil left to the enemy.

The lines of retreating Germans falling back from Metz were under attack by fighter-bombers.

A recount of yesterday's strike by 400 Eighth Air Force fighters on a 1,200-mile round-trip flight that saw them shoot up oil depots showed they destroyed 91 enemy planes—27 in the air and 64 on the ground. This was five more than first reported.

Ruhr Area Heavily Hit

An RAF spokesman declared "there has never been anything like" the double punch which 900 Lancasters and Halifaxes threw at Munster and the Ruhr yesterday.

Railways and waterways at Munster were hit by a force of about 500 Halifaxes in the afternoon. Then at night Lancasters attacked a synthetic oil plant at Wanne Eickel and reported "many explosions and the glow of large fires" over the Ruhr.

Only bad weather kept the Eighth Air Force from following up these assaults today.

Many locomotives and motor vehicles were destroyed by the Mustangs sweeping over the Danube Valley above Budapest.

Toll Of Raid Listed

A communique tonight said yesterday's Eighth Air Force fighter strike, the second longest on record, also destroyed or damaged 41 locomotives, 314 railway cars, 57 oil cars, 13 anti-aircraft-gun positions, 6 radio towers, 4 trucks, 7 buildings, a hangar, water tower, switchhouse, factory and power house.

Eight aircraft are missing instead of the 16 reported last night. Eight landed in France.

One jet plane was shot down and 30 others were destroyed by straffing aground.

Frenchmen in Spitfires hurled bombs into Dunkerque's beseiged garrison, RAF Typhoons smashed one large bridge and several small ones in Holland, United States fighter-bombers raked the paths ahead of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's six driving armies, and RAF heavies from Italy plastered railway yards at Sarajevo, Yugoslavia.

RUSSIANS NEAR OLD SLOVAKIA

Swing Around Budapest To Capture Gyongyos

Hoffer

London, Monday, Nov. 20 (AP)—Russian troops, swinging around Budapest toward Czechoslovakia, yesterday captured the seven-way road junction of Gyongyos, only 23 miles south of the old Slovakian frontier, and also drove to within two miles of Miskolc, Hungary's fifth city.

Simultaneously, other Russian tank and artillery forces brought the 25-mile Budapest-Hatvan railway under fire, a midnight bulletin said, after capturing the village of Galgaheviz, 19 miles northeast of the besieged Hungarian capital.

The Budapest-Hatvan railway is the last enemy defense line protecting the northeastern gates of Budapest, and also controls invasion routes into Czechoslovakia and Austria.

400,000 Russ Troops Used

Berlin said the battle for Budapest had entered a new phase with the Russians bringing up 35 infantry divisions and seven motorized corps, possibly 400,000 men, on a siege arc east of the city. Heavy fighting was reported by Berlin at Gyomro, ten miles east-southeast of Budapest.

30. 24 — 20505

The capture of Gyongyos, in the foothills of the Matra Mountains 40 miles northeast of Budapest, occurred after a violent street fight in which the Russians wiped out two enemy battalions of 1,600 men, Moscow said.

Seizure of Gyongyos gave the Russians access to a hard-surfaced road winding northwestward to Lucenec, hub of Slovak-Hungarian frontier communications.

At the upper end of the front moving on southern Slovakia, Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukraine Army units captured Goromboly, less than two miles south of Miskolc, 85 miles northeast of Budapest. Seizure of Hernadkak, six miles east of Miskolc, put another Russian group in the broad Hernad river valley leading into Slovakia.

Near Budapest the Russians drove two miles west of Tura, taken Saturday, seized Galgaheviz, and put the Hatvan railway under fire.

Battle For Baltic Island

In the Baltic, off the west Estonian coast, the Russians were reported by Berlin to have thrown three divisions of 30,000 men and strong tank forces against narrow Sworbe peninsula, the southwestern tip of Saare Island dominating the entrance to the Gulf of Riga.

The guns of Russian warships shelled German lines in support of the land strike which breached German defenses to an undisclosed depth, Berlin disclosed. An attempted Soviet landing from the sea behind the German lines failed, the enemy said.

Saare, a 1,010-square-mile island, was invaded late in September by Marshal Leonid A. Govorov's Leningrad Army forces who also overran the neighboring islands of Vormsi, Ristna and Muhu. All of Saare except the Sworbe peninsula has been conquered. The spit of land is only 16 miles across the Righ gulf mouth from Latvia and 90 miles northwest of fallen Riga, Latvian capital and port.

The Russians need to wrest Sworbe from the enemy to free completely the Gulf of Riga for possible amphibious assaults against the German Baltic Sea flank.

Winter Offensive Due

Although only reconnaissance activities were reported in East Prussia and across Poland, Moscow dispatches quoted Red army military men as saying the lull along most of the Eastern front would be broken shortly by another great winter offensive.

Freezing cold has descended from the Baltic down to the Hungarian front, hardening the soil for military operations on a large scale, and Berlin for days has told of the massing of Soviet infantry, tanks and artillery in Poland and East Prussia for a coming offensive to match the Allied onslaught on the Western front.

On the northern Slovakian front two Soviet divisions made a breach in German lines in the Dukla Pass area near the southern Polish frontier, Berlin said.

Pristina Falls To Allies

In southern Yugoslavia the Allied pursuit of the Germans fleeing the lower Balkans swept through Pristina, 50 miles north of fallen Skoplje, a Bulgarian communique announced.

Pristina was taken in a pincers move from east and south, the bulletin said, and German counterattacks were beaten down west of that town as the Bulgarians pushed on toward Mitrovica, 20 miles to the northwest.

EISENHOWER PLEA CITES AACHEN PINCH

Siege Prolonged by Shortage of Shells, He Says in Appeal for Maximum Output

105'S SHOT 300,000 ROUNDS

Needs Stepped Up by Drive Months Ahead of Schedule— Foe's Losses Top 1,000,000

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, Nov. 19 (AP)—The reduction of the German fortress city of Aachen was delayed by a shortage of ammunition, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower said today.

The Allied Supreme Commander made the disclosure in an appeal to workers in America to turn out ammunition, especially artillery shells, at top speed. In an address on the Army Hour program broadcast in the United States, General Eisenhower emphasized the enormous drain on ammunition resulting from the stepped-up tempo of the war.

"Today we are firing ammunition that we would not have used until next February or March if we had been content with slower advance, with less crushing victories, or if we had been ready to sacrifice soldiers to save materials," he said.

In the capture of Aachen, he reported, the First Army used 300,000 rounds of 105-mm ammunition in two weeks, "and even so, the reduction of that place was delayed because of shortage of ammunition."

"Now we are hammering at the massive crust of armor surrounding the German fortress," General Eisenhower added. "Appalling conditions of rain, fog, snow and mud make difficult the employment of our air forces and the maneuver of our tanks, even of our foot soldiers. But wretched weather cannot stop artillery shells. More than ever before, we need ammunition."

Expenditure of ammunition has "raced ahead of our receipts from home, but I know that you do not want us to give the enemy one second's rest," he said.

The Allied commander also urged increased production of signal equipment, winter clothing, engineering materials and medical instruments."

He declared that 5,000 pounds of ammunition were being poured into German defenses every minute. Six million rounds of artillery fire and 2,000,000 rounds of mortar fire are being hurled at the Germans each month.

U. S. Guns Play March For Wedding In Germany

Kornelimunster, Germany, Nov. 17 (AP — Delayed) — The first American wedding in occupied Germany took place here today to the accompaniment of the bellowing guns of one of the greatest artillery actions of this war.

The bride was Lieut. Pauline Ferris, an army nurse from New Smyrna Beach, Fla., and the bridegroom, Chief Warrant Officer Charles M. Baker, of Aurora, Col.

The lieutenant was just saying "I do," in response to the officiating chaplain, Capt. George W. Zinz, of Erie, Pa., when a battery of heavy United States guns let loose an earth-shaking salvo.

79 AMERICANS EXCHANGED

Combat Officers And Men Swapped For German Prisoner

By GEORGE TURNER

Le Magour, France, Nov. 16 (AP — Delayed) — Seventy-nine American combat officers and enlisted men held by the Germans were exchanged for American-held Nazis today during a six-hour armistice in this drab little fishing village within the German lines on the mud flats of the Etel river.

The exchange was the result of days of negotiations by a United States colonel and Andrew Gero Hodges, an American Red Cross representative of Birmingham, Ala., who served as a liaison officer between the American army and the German commander of the Lorient sector.

On Rank-For-Rank Basis

The exchange was on a rank-for-rank, age-for-age and condition-for-condition basis, with the further stipulation that all German prisoners figuring in the exchange had to do so on a voluntary basis.

The armistice began at 9 A. M., as the Americans arrived at the town of Etel.

At 9.30 A. M. Hodges crossed the river alone to ascertain if the American prisoners were there. He returned a few minutes later accompanied by a German colonel named Borst and three other officers.

Hodges reported all American prisoners were ready to be exchanged. He said the first thing the Americans yelled at him was "who won the World Series?"

Germans Had To Volunteer

The Germans then requested permission to see their own men who were to be exchanged. A German doctor questioned each man as to physical condition. The Germans still count on making a fight of it, as evidenced by their refusal to accept any prisoners who did not volunteer to be exchanged and whose physical condition did not warrant active duty.

The American party, which included Lieut. Col. William H. Patterson, Erie, Pa.; Capt. Scott Ashton, Kansas City, Kan.; Lieut. Col. Clarence Brown, a Tupelo (Miss.) doctor, and this correspondent, together with the German delegation then crossed the river to where the American soldiers were waiting.

They stood at ease in a narrow alley near the fishing wharves. When they saw us they broke into a cheer. Some were bearded.

Chicago Lieutenant In Charge

A second lieutenant from Chicago was in charge of the Americans and he grinned broadly as he saluted and introduced himself. He said he was captured 45 days ago.

The men began to yell questions and slap each other on the back. A private wanted to know if it was true the American army was halfway to Berlin. A sergeant captured three months ago while fighting with the Sixth Armored Division cried, "Who won the election?"

There were five stretcher cases among the Americans, but they were convalescing and in good condition to travel, Dr. Brown said.

Exchanged 15 At Time

The prisoners were exchanged 15 at a time, since that was all the tiny motorboat would hold. While the exchange progressed the American colonel and Colonel Borst sat in a little empty room that had once been a cafe. Finally the last GI climbed into the boat and all of the Americans shoved off for the opposite shore. The colonel was the last to get on the little vessel.

As each load of Americans landed on the Etel wharf a corresponding number of Germans boarded the boat and returned to the German side. Each German had it made plain to him that he was returning to fight as an infantryman, regardless of his branch of the service. Toward the end of the exchange eight Germans decided they wanted to remain as prisoners of the Americans and nothing would induce them to get in the boat.

Dinner For Freed Americans

Other prisoners quickly volunteered in their stead.

As each boatload of Americans landed, they were greeted by their comrades and hustled away to a rest camp where they were deloused, provided with fresh garments and given an elaborate dinner and entertainment.

Because of War Department regulations that the families of the men exchanged must await official notification of their release through regular channels, I am unable to include their names in this story.

15,000 PARADE IN BRUSSELS

Belgian Police Patrol Streets After Anti-Pierlot Protest

Brussels, Nov. 19 (AP)—Steel-helmeted Belgian police with rifles slung over their shoulders patrolled the streets of this capital tonight in the wake of a tumultuos demonstration by an estimated 15,000 marchers shouting for resignation of the Pierlot Government and singing "The International."

Embittered by the Government's demand for surrender of all firearms and an acute shortage of food, a mile-long column paraded through the heart of the city with swelling cries of "a bas Pierlot" (Down with Pierlot).

Hammer And Sickle Carried

Hammer and sickle insigne of Soviet Russia and Communist red flags were predominant on banners and brassards displayed by demonstrators.

About half the marchers were women and there was a considerable number of men in Belgian army uniforms. No guns were in evidence, but beneath tunics, blouses and coats there were bulges which indicated revolvers and even occasional ill-concealed rifles.

One hysterical shot, it was evident, could easily have meant blood in the gutters of Brussels, but police were patient and reported "no incidents."

Allied Troops In Readiness

In streets off the line of march Allied troops and armored cars were held in readiness with equipment for street barricades.

One of the major complaints seemed to be Government reluctance to seize and try political and business bigwigs who allegedly have been sympathizers or supporters of the Germans and who now are in high Government posts and running the nation's business.

Tonight there was talk of Premier Pierlot calling on Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower to set up a temporary "protective government" until the situation eases.

Surrendered Arms To Allies

Supreme Allied Headquarters has agreed to receive the weapons that the Government has ordered the resistance forces to surrender, said a communique today from the Allied mission to Belgium headed by Maj. Gen. George W. E. J. Erskine.

Regardless of the success of this move, the Government's "resistance problem" would remain only half solved. Resistance elements are demanding "employment instead of idleness" and progress in meeting this demand is slow.

DEGAULLE SAYS FRANCE PLANS TO RAISE ARMY

PARIS, Nov. 19—(AP) Within eight months France will show Europe "a grand army worthy of her" and by Spring it will be getting voluminous imports of raw materials from abroad with which to revive industry, Gen. Charles le Gaulle said today.

In his second radio "fireside chat," the French leader gave the people an accounting of progress since liberation—countering a murmur of criticism which is starting to rise because of the continued dislocations three months after the start of the Paris Liberation campaign—and urged public support of the new "liberation" bond issue to strengthen France's position before the world.

Paris, Nov. 19 (AP)—Two soldiers convicted by court-martial of rape were hanged yesterday at Fort du Roule, in Cherbourg, the United States Army announced today. Their names were not immediately made available.

Eighth Army In Italy Runs Into New Nazi Line

Rome, Nov. 19 (AP)—The British Eighth Army, battling into the southeastern tip of the Po valley across innumerable rivers and canals, after breaking through the Gothic Line, has run up against a new delaying line along the Adriatic coast sector, Allied headquarters said today.

The line, the communique said, runs along the Montone river southwest from Ravenna on the coast, across Highway 9 between captured Forli and Faenza and into the hills in the Monte Fortino area where Polish troops were reported engaged in bitter fighting with the enemy.

Yanks In Bitter Battle

In central Italy, on the stalemated Bologna sector, American Fifth Army patrols made deep penetrations of German positions, the communique said, with the Yanks engaging in bitter fighting.

British troops on the east flank of the Poles captured the small hamlet of Golfara, about 1,000 yards east of Monte Fortino. The Germans in this area were fighting fiercely and were well supported by artillery.

Brazilian troops, which have been fighting along the west coast, have been shifted inland in an area 20 miles southwest of Bologna, the communique disclosed.

BRITISH FIGHTING IN MONTENEGRO

Troops Which Invaded Greece Also Are In Hercegovina

Rome, Nov. 19 (AP) — British troops of the land forces of the Adriatic—the same outfit which began the Allied invasion of Greece last September—now are fighting alongside Marshal Tito's Yugoslav army in Montenegro and Hercegovina and are in contact with the enemy, Allied headquarters announced today.

The communique also reported that British paratroops have landed and are aiding Albanian forces in harassing retreating Germans between the Adriatic coast and Lake Ohrid on the Yugoslav-east Albanian border and just north of the Greek frontier.

Enemy Defenses Shelled

Strong enemy fortifications at Risan, located at the head of the bay of Kolorska in southwestern Yugoslavia were heavily shelled by British artillery.

The British operations in the Balkans are being strongly supported by Allied aircraft with heavy and medium bombers attacking enemy troop concentrations, gun emplacements and communications in Yugoslavia and Albania.

Tirana In Patriots' Hands

The Germans have announced the abandonment of Tirana, Albanian capital, to Albanian Patriots, and now hold only the northern part of the country around Scutari and Kukes and the port of Durazzo, west of Tirana.

Invasion of Montenegro and Hercegovina, Yugoslavia provinces along the Adriatic just north of Albania, threatens to cut off the retreat of those Germans attempting to hold the line in northern Albania.

Hungary Quisling 'Missing'

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 19 (AP).—The newspaper "Dagens Nyheter" reported another mysterious "Fuehrer disappearance" today, that of Ferenc Szalasi, quisling leader of Hungary. The newspaper said that after a great fanfare when he became premier and acting regent, Szalasi dropped from sight and for the last fourteen days has not been mentioned nor pictured in Hungarian newspapers. Nor has he made his usual radio appeals.

Swedish Envoy To U. S. Reaches Retirement Age

Stockholm, Nov. 19 (AP)—The Swedish press began speculating today on a successor to Wollmar Filip Bostroem as Minister to the United States. Bostroem has reached the retirement age.

Stockholm's Tidningen said P. V. G. Assarsson, former Minister to Moscow, was headed for the assignment, and the Morgontidnigen asserted that Rolf von Heidenstam, Swedish businessman, already had been selected.

A foreign office spokesman said, however, that no choice had been made and that Bostroem's assignment had been extended to July.

Moscow Still Is Eyed As Big 3 Parley Site

Moscow, Nov. 19 (AP)—Moscow was rumored today as being still in the running as the possible site of the next meeting place of President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin.

Stalin's future list of visitors presently is topped by Gen. Charles de Gaulle, and Dr. Ivan Subasic, Prime Minister of King Peter's Royal Yugoslav Government, was believed coming here.

Allied diplomatic sources for security reasons declined all comment.

Pravda Attacks Spain, Argentina, Switzerland

Moscow, Nov. 19 (AP)—The newspaper Pravda sharply underlined today Soviet Russia's hostile attitude toward Spain, Argentina and Switzerland.

Repeating previous charges that German capital had been transferred to these three countries, the Communist party organ asserted that "German Fascists have built their snakes' nests among so-called neutrals."

The newspaper said it was doubtful whether Francisco Franco's regime in Spain would "survive the period before the end of the war." Pravda referred to criticism in the British magazine Economist to Soviet rejection of Switzerland's offer to resume diplomatic relations, said the magazine "agrees that Swiss policy abounds with anti-Soviet tendencies."

"Pravda" Attacks Disarming

MOSCOW, Nov. 19 (AP).—Government attempts in France and Belgium to disarm veterans of the resistance movement were attacked today by "Pravda," Communist party newspaper.

"Europe is winning release from nightmare," the newspaper said. "Is it not obvious that the most important question facing a liberated country is complete elimination of any remnants of Fascist influence?"

The newspaper concluded that disarming of the Patriot guard in France "may encourage Vichyites whose activity has considerably increased recently."

Palestine Terrorism Denounced

Jerusalem, Nov. 19 (AP)—Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the World Zionist Organization, today denounced terrorism in his first speech since he arrived in Palestine last week.

"I suffered a grievous personal tragedy in this war, when my son, a flying officer in the RAF, was lost in operations, but it was with a deeper sense of shock and grief that I heard from the Colonial Office about the murder of Lord Moyne," hes aid.

Dr. Weizmann, speaking at a meeting of the Inner Zionist General Council, said the most imperative task of Palestine Jewry and the Zionist movement was to find concerted ways and means of extirpating terrorism once and for all, otherwise it threatened to undermine all that Jewish effort had achieved in Palestine in the last 60 years.

Allies Asked To Aid Jews In Resettling Palestine

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP)—Delegates to the National Conference for Palestine today called on the major United Nations powers to aid financially in the resettlement of Jews in Palestine.

In a resolution adopted at the close of a two-day session, the group asked that the Allied powers consider at their next conference the creation of a large fund "to be used exclusively for the resettlement of Jews who will need or want to go to Palestine and to speed the establishment of Palestine as a Jewish commonwealth in which all residents will be equal under the law."

The resolution also asked:

Abandonment of the British White Paper of 1939, which the group said "stultifies every effort to build the Jewish homeland on stable foundations."

Unrestricted Jewish immigration into Palestine.

Asks U. S. For Shipping

The right of Jews to purchase land in Palestine on the same basis as all other residents of the country.

That President Roosevelt and the United States Government make the necessary shipping available to transport to Palestine "the thousands of Jews, particularly orphan children" who can now emigrate from Europe; and

The raising by American Jews of $30,000,000 in 1945 for basic development in Palestine.

The conference action came after James G. McDonald, chairman of President Roosevelt's Advisory Committee on Political Refugees, asserted that "millions of refugees" have been sacrificed "because most Government leaders would not recognize in time the realities of the international situation and would not act with sufficient vigor to prevent their slaughter or exile."

PIPELINE TO CHINA NEAR COMPLETION

Allied Oil Line from Calcutta Already in Use in Burma.

NEW DELHI, India, Nov. 19—(AP) A two-year blanket of secrecy was lifted today with disclosure by American Army headquarters here that the main portion of a fuel pipeline which ultimately will reach from Calcutta to China across Burma had been completed.

Already the longest military operational pipeline in the world, its construction was one of the war's most remarkable engineering feats.

Crosses 3 Rivers

When completed it will at least have double the capacity of the Ledo road, which it was built to supplement. So far it has crossed three rivers and when finished it will cross several more. Allied forces in north Burma already are being supplied gasoline by it.

Along railroads, highways and streams it follows the main arteries of travel northward from Calcutta into northeast India where it swings over into Burma toward China. The exact course the pipeline takes after leaving the beginning of the Ledo road in Assam cannot be disclosed for military reasons.

(A dispatch from Chungking said the line runs from Calcutta through the Brahmaputra valley to Assam and then across the Patkai range and is constructed of four and six inch pipes).

One part of the system is used to fill the gigantic tanks of Superfortresses in India and one of its major tasks is to feed gasoline into the planes ferrying fuel to Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's U. S. 14th Air force in China.

The effect of the pipeline in China will be to free much of the air transport and Ledo road tonnage for carrying guns and other war essentials to the Chinese and to the 14th air force. It will mean Gen. Chennault will have gasoline for a vastly increased air force while motor transport can fuel as it travels instead of being required to carry its own fuel.

The pipelines can carry a variety of fuel or oil by spacing it along the pipes separated by colored liquid or other methods.

Heavy bombers, which at times have had to help haul gasoline over the hump in order to continue raids from China may be used full time for combat duty when the line is completed.

Pipes Brought From U. S.

Brig. Gen. Thomas Farrell, formerly of New York state, who is the chief engineer on the job, said so far an equivalent of more than two liberty shiploads of pipe already had been used on the line and much more will be necessary before the job is finished. The pipe, brought from the United States, is laid by Chinese, Indian and American crews directed by U. S. pipeline experts.

Col. William C. Kinsolving of Beaumont, Tex., had the job of building northward from the receiving port at Calcutta where ocean-going tankers come in. Lt. Col. Birney K. Morse of Swarthmore, Pa., handled the job on the swing into Burma. The line often was built in two directions at once.

Frequently pipeline crews were on the heels of combat units which had to clear the Japanese out of some areas the same way a route was cleared for the Ledo road. The road is almost complete now and trucks are expected to roll over it soon.

Some sections of the line were built across rivers by simply letting it lie on the bottom of the river like a cable. It also has been pushed up over a 5,000-foot pass in the Naga hills on the India-Burma frontier. Before it is finished it must cross the deep gorge of the Salween river near the Burma-China frontier.

American engineers and construction crews often worked on 24-hour schedules, in drenching rains of the monsoon and in 130-degree heat. They have had to endure malaria, irregular meals, dysentry, leeches and skin diseases. They have had to struggle through waist deep swamps and across boiling mountain streams.

At his headquarters in Myitkyina in northern Burma Lt. Gen. Daniel I. Sultan, American commander in the India-Burma theater said the pipeline would be of "great importance from a logistical standpoint."

MENACE GROWS TO BURMA ROAD

Japanese Now Less Than 40 Miles From Kweichow Border

Chungking, Nov. 19 (AP) — The Japanese drive toward Kweichow province is continuing, the Chinese high command acknowledged tonight, with the invaders approaching Hwaiyunchen, 50 miles west of fallen Liuchow and less than 40 miles from the Kwangsi-Kweichow border.

The high command also announced the fall November 17 of Hsincheng, 40 miles west-southwest of Liuchow, on the left flank of the advancing Japanese forces.

Japs Also Approach Paoching

A potentially fresh threat to Kweichow has developed with further Japanese advances west to Paoching, 63 miles west of Hengyang. The communique said Japanese troops hammering westward had reached a point 18 miles west of Paoching two days ago and were being engaged by Chinese troops.

Competent sources in Chungking estimate that Gen. Shunroku Hata has thrown some 250,000 veteran troops into his South China campaign which is believed designed to cut the Burma road at Kweiyang, capital of Kweichow province, and thus nullify the Allied Burma drive to clean out a land supply route from India to China.

It also poses a threat to United States Superfortress bases in West China.

Chinese At Bhamo Foil Jap Counterattacks

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 19 (AP)—Japanese troops in northern Burma counterattacked with tanks from Bhamo in an effort to break a Chinese encirclement of the city and advanced 400 yards before being checked, an Allied communique said today.

Troops of the Chinese 38th Division knocked out two enemy tanks before the Japanese drive was halted from the town which the Allies seek to make a station on the projected Ledo-Burma road route to China.

Other Chinese units cleaned out the last pocket of enemy resistance in the Momauk area, clearing the road from Bhamo to Mothit, 20 miles northeast of Bhamo.

Chinese troops cleared the Bhamo Namkham road from Bhamo almost to Mansi, ten miles southeast of Bhamo. This is a spur of the Burma road.

In the Chindwin valley of western Burma British Imperials advanced close to Paluzawa, 16 miles north of Kalewa, about 140 miles northwest of Mandalay.

JAPANESE HIT IN BURMA

Sultan Says Enemy Is Short of Troops and Equipment

AMERICAN HEADQUARTERS, Myitkyina, Burma, Nov. 18 (Delayed) (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Daniel I. Sultan, American commander in the India-Burma theatre, said today that "the Japanese in northern Burma are in a pretty bad fix in regards to supplies and men."
